"Now," said Nellie, "let's have a temperance procession. They don't have temperance processions on the Fourth of July, do they, Jack?"

"No, I guess that's the day people get drunk, for for I saw lots of drunken men down the street," said Jack.

"Then they ought to have temperance processions, so they wouldn't get drunk. What is the Fourth of July for, anyway?" asked Nellie.

"Why," said Jack, "it's for setting off firecrackers, hanging out flags: hollering, and—and what is it for, Fred?"

"Why," said Fred, "it's the day to read the Declaration of Independence. I thought everybody knew that, and— and— Oh! I forget the rest."

"Right about face! Forward! March!" cried Jack. "We will go and ask the president."

"What! the President of the United States?" asked Nellie.

"No," answered Jack, "I mean mamma. She is president of the Temperance Club, and she knows everything."

So, in marched the army and mamma was surprised, surrounded, and taken prisoner.

"Now, mamma," said the drum-corps, "we want you to tell us what the Fourth of July is for."

"Why," said mamma, "it is the day the Declaration of Independence was signed. This country once belonged to Great Britain, and we did not think we were well governed, and we did think old King George was a tyrant, so we wanted to govern ourselves. Great Britain said we shouldn't, and then we said we would. So then we fought and gained our independence and were free, and that's why we keep the Fourth of July."

"And was Pa and Hero in that war?" asked the general.

"Oh! no," said mamma. "When I said 'we' I meant our forefathers. It was a long time before your father was born. It was the Great Rebellion in which your father fought, and that was a more dreadful war than the first, for it was among our own people."

"What was it about?" asked Fred.

"Well," said mamma, "when we gained our own freedom we forgot to set our own slaves free. So slavery and freedom grew side by side, both became powerful and great, and each struggled for the mastery, and that brought about a fearful war. But freedom was once more victorious."

"Oh! don't I wish I had been there," cried Fred.

"Me too!" said Jack.

"Oh? no," cried mamma. You should be thankful that you were not born and were spared the misery of those dreadful times. And yet I want each one of you to be a soldier and fight in a more glorious cause and against a more terrible foe than was either King George or slavery."

"I know," said Nellie—"rum!"

"Yes," said mamma; "old Alcohol has killed more people, ruined more homes, taken more prisoners, starved more children, wasted more treasures, broken more hearts, and ruined more souls than ever did old King George or slavery either."

"Form line! Eyes front! Stand at ease! This is now a temperance army," cried the general.

"You can play in the house," said mamma, "for I can stand any amount of noise from a teetotal army." And mamma looked as if she felt as proud of the army as the general did himself.—E. Carswell in Y. T. Banner.

CHILDREN, REMEMBER:

That the saloon takes a boy of beauty and promise, teaches him to carouse with gay associates, and makes him a bloated, loathsome, worthless man.

That it takes a young girl, loved and lovable, and manufactures her into a miserable, bloated woman, at whom passersby point with finger of scorn.

That it wrecks lives that might but for it be grand; hearts, that might otherwise be happy; homes, that in its absence might blossom into Edens.

That it fills our prisons with criminals, who without it might be useful members of society.

That it fills our poorhouses with paupers, that in its absence might dwell in homes of luxury.

That it fills our asylums with lunatics and idiots—complete specimens of its handiwork.

That it is the source from whence springs 80 per cent of all the crime committed in our land.

That it increases the taxes of our state 50 per cent.

That it fills our streets with hungry, ragged children, that without it would be well clothed and fed.

That it drives men from their homes and families, and sends them tramping over the country in search of bread, when they should be adding to the wealth of our state by their industry.

That it fills the pure air of heaven with profanity and filth.

That it drives man down from the high position in which his Maker placed him, and makes him a fit associate of only the lowest brutes.

That it robs the mother of all the joys and comforts of life, and makes them suffer for the wickedness of others.

That it deprives the children of nearly all the enjoyments and beauties of childhood,and drives them out from the home to labor with their little hands to feed a drunken father's appetite.

That it fills the earth with the bones of murdered men.

That it defrauds heaven by crowding hell with the souls of men.

That no boy who desires to become a happy, prosperous, useful and respected member of society, should be seen standing in the vicinity of a saloon. —Modesto Herald.

DRIVEN AWAY.

A gentleman recently told me of a neighbor who left Anaheim and bought same kind of land at Riverside at either double or treble the price because his little boy could not go to Sunday School in the former town without dread of drunken men whom he met on his way, as they came from saloons in full blast on that day. Thus drink drives or keeps away good families and their capital from many otherwise desirable places. J. W. W.

BROTHER GARDNER ON INTEMPERANCE.

A young man finds hisself in good health, has a cl'ar eye and an honest face, and his prospects fur de fucher are full o' promise. He is de hope of his fader—comfort of his mudder—de pride of his friends. Everybody wishes him well, every hand is stretched out to give him a start in life. I have seen dat young man when he started on his race of life, and I felt proud over him. I have seen him when dat race was finished—cut short by thirty years. De eye had become bleared and dim; de face had de look of a beast; de strong limbs trembled; all de sunshine of the past had been drowned out by bitter tears—all de hopes of a thousand friends blasted by disappointment. Drink was de cause—wine, beer, whisky and de gutter. De young man who puts a glass of liquor to his lips is unloosin' a snake which is sartin to bite him—unchainin' a tiger which will devour him. Drink is a fiend which laughs and smiles and sings until its teeth are fastened into its victim. It is a dry rot dat eats to the heart. It is a debil which wont be content wip one victim, but it drags families and friends down to destrucshun.

Show me a man who is always putting liquor to his lips and I'll show you a man who will sooner or later become a wreck. Show me a youth who drinks and I'll write the word, "Destroyed!" after his name. I am only a poor old black man, ignorant and uneducated, but poor and lowly as I am, I would not trade places with the rich white man who has a fondness for drink. I simply want to be put on record as one that seventy years of life have taut that of all the cold and clammy snakes which man kin take to his arms to paralyze his mind, benumb his brain, break the hearts of friends and at last make him the victim of a grave never visited except wid wails of sorrow, dat sarpint called Drink is the wust.—Detroit Free Press.

AN AMERICAN IDEAL.

A common-place young girl;
A decidedly rare young girl;
  Stay at home night,
  Do what is right,
Help-her-old-mother young girl.

A hard-to-find young girl;
A reader-of-fact young girl;
  An extra-poetical,
  Anti-æsthetical,
Care-nothing-for-novels young girl.

A minus-her-bangs young girl;
A show-all-her-brains young girl;
  With an unpowdered face;
  One that don't lace,
A dress-for-her-health young girl.

An up-in-the-morning young girl;
A help-in-the-wash young girl;
  One that can rub,
  Not afraid of the tub,
A roll-up-her-sleeves young girl.

A quiet-and-modest young girl;
A sweet-and-pure young girl;
  An upright, ambitious,
  Lovely, delicious,
A pride-of-the-home young girl.

A remarkably-scarce young girl;

BOYS AND GIRLS' TEMPERANCE TEXT-BOOK.

This is the title of a new book, edited by Rev. H. L. Reade, and just published by the National Temperance Society, prepared expressly for public schools and will be found admirably adapted for the purpose. It consists of short chapters on alcohol, and the human body; its relation to the pocket, and its effects on the family, in busines and in personal estate, character and destiny. It takes the form of question and answer, and presents the important facts about the use and effects of alcohol in simple terms adapted to the child's mind.

It will be found suitable for private schools, juvenile temperance organizations, and families, 12mo, 64 pages. Price in boards, 20 cents single copies. Introduction price for a dozen copies or more, 15 cents each.

Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, N. Y.

THESE thots, from the Sunday-School Times, may impress some Sunday-school teacher with the importance and power of a good example: "A good teacher's best work is by example quite as much as by precept; and a work begun by an impressive example goes on when the teacher has ceased to speak, and when the scholars are no longer face to face with their teacher. Indeed it may be questioned whether a teacher's best work does not grow better, in its impressive influence, long years after the teacher's voice has been hushed in death. Death does not end all to a good teacher's example; it rather revives and re-impresses its best lessons of the long ago."

A HALF-FINISHED WEDDING.—The young people of Cincinnati are excited over a promised wedding that didn't take place. The young man and young woman had known each other from childhood, and were prominent in society circles. The wedding guests were assembled, and the loving couple were on the floor. The minister propounded the usual question to the bride as to whether she would take the man for her husband, etc., when, much to the surprise of all present, she answered, "No." Thinking he misunderstood her, the minister asked the question again, and again she answered "No." This stopped the ceremony, and the story came out. The young man addicted to the use of intoxicating liquors, had promised reform if the lady would consent to marry him, and had signed the pledge. He had been on trial for months, but, as the bride turned to him as they stood side by side before the minister, she caught the odor of whisky on his breath and detected signs of incipient intoxication. She closed the extraordinary scene by stating that she could not trust her future to a man who had broken a promise so solemnly made. Expostulations and entreaties were all in vain. The wedding did not take place.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"BROOKLYN, Feb. 9, 1878.—We have in the City of New York, beer factories, where, in fifteen minutes, they will turn any one out as much ale or beer as you please to call for, and there is not a particle of malt or hops in it. Nothing but a concoction of poisonous drugs and chemicals, which, when it gets the air and is poured upon the flags or pavement, turns as black as ink in a few minutes, and can not be rubbed off, except by hot water and soap or sand, well scrubbed. This I am willing to swear to. I know whereof I speak: a seven years' experience in the trade, and three years' experience of visitations in these dens of iniquity and in enforcing the law in our state, has given me the knowledge and ability of becoming an expert. Your Brother in Christ, OLIVER COTTER."

FLAMING FIGURES.—The entire productive industry of this country in the census year amounted to $7,000,000,000, of which more than one-fifth 1,483,000,000, went into the liquor traffic. The laboring classes received that year $1,100,000,000. It cost $398,000,000 to clothe the American people, about one quarter as much as the drink bill; an average of $65 to a family for clothes, more than $200 for liquor: The public schools cost $100,000,000. Thirty times as much was expended in the liquor business as by the churches. For each of our 80,000 churches there are four grog-shops, and for every one of the 90,000 ministers there are six bartenders!—Ex.

LOOL OUT, YOUNG MAN.—When it is said of a youth that "He drinks," and it can be proven, what store wants him for a clerk? What church wants him for a member? Who will trust him? What dying man will appoint him as his executor? Letters of recommendation, the backing of business firms, a brilliant ancestry cannot save him. The world shies him off. Why? It is whispered all through the crmmunity, "He drinks! he drinks?" That blasts him. When a young man loses his reputation for sobriety he might as well be at the bottom of the sea.

ACCORDING to a German economist, the income of the world is $13,520,000,000; debt, $10,926,000,000; taxes, $2,002,000,000; capital, $85,612,000,000. Sweden has the smallest debt, or $50,000,000; France the largest, or $4,140,000,000. The United States has the largest income, and England the most capital. Italy is the heaviest taxed, paying 35 per cent of its income for taxes to the average 15 per cent of other nations.

ONE GOOD WOMAN can do a great deal in a community when she makes up her mind to try. Right in a wine making community Mrs. Josephine Doan determined to open war on the kingdom of whisky. She enlisted 3 or 4 helpers and in a short time had a company of 76 pledged and actively interested blue ribboners. And it will not be long till that community will be entirely proselytized and educated in the right.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

Last week there was no time to make any remarks as to the convention called by the Ex. Com. of the Prohibition Reform Party. There were quite as many delegates as were expected and many from a great distance. It was notable that the most radical prohibition sentiment was popular in the convention while at the same time the policy of going very slow and getting as little at a time as possible and not too often, had some few representatives.

It was a matter of surprise to some few individuals on the floor that the call had been made for anything but a Sunday law congress, and some of the delegates counseled dropping everything but the Sunday law consideration, lest by any chance that feature should be overlooked.

It may be that some were there who were more anxious for the success of the Republican party than for prohibition and it may be that the suspicion only existed on the part of some who had been generally opposed to that party in the past, that in leaving their old associations they might be led into an ambush no better than that from which they had escaped.

There were some very racy speeches made, notably by W. G. Swan of Healdsburg and D. J. Outram of Alameda. The former was in favor of a Sunday law, while not believing Sunday was properly the rest day; but because one day of rest was necessary and Sunday had been made the legal rest day and further was preferred by the majority of the American people from religious motives. He did not believe that the religious sentiments of the people of this nation should be trampled under foot at the bidding of an anti-religious sect of strangers who are not good citizens or engaged in lawful pursuits. He said when whisky got out of him Democracy went with it.

Mr. Outram declared he had been an earnest Democrat till the recent convention when the endorsment of the platform called for the renunciation of patriotism and good citizenship. He had tried to prevent the adoption of the obnoxious plank but being unable, he is now going to divert as many votes as possible from the ticket. Others were there who uttered similar sentiments and similar resolves.

The main object of the call was effected, viz, to notify existing parties that none of these Democrats who have been compelled to leave their party for conscience sake, and none of the prohibitionists have been suddenly converted to the Republican party. It would be a sad mistake for the leaders of that party to think that anybody has determined to vote that ticket blind, or has been converted to an affection for the party because of any temperance or other record it has had to show so far.

It will be a great mistake for any party opposed to the Democrats to expect to get the beer dive vote and the temperance vote too. The Democrats have bot the former and will get it. The party that bids now for the temperance vote will never get it, if it bids for the outlaw and drunkard maker's vote on the same platform; and the great bulk of the temperance voters of the State are so much in earnest for pure and undefiled prohibition, that if the beer dive and whisky den are going to elect, they will rather see the Democrats win, openly showing their colors, than see the Republicans gain the same end, by adding duplicity and treachery to the sale of their patriotism.

One speaker hoped nothing would be attempted but the Sunday law, any temperance legislation asked for might imperil that. The leag of Free Crime could have supplied no counsel more favorable to their interests than this. Those who care all for Sunday and little for temperance, or who believe that a Sunday law or any other law will ever be worth a straw as long as devil-schools are open six days in the week, may as well give up the fight here and go home.

When the grogshops are shut up in a State or county, a Sunday law can be enforced and criminals convicted; where the grogshop is open week days it will be open on Sunday, and you can't convict or punish anybody, because the grogshop will provide the jury and the counsel and in many cases the judge, and in all cases it can put one man on the jury to prevent its agreement and make the trial a farce. But when the grogshop is shut up it can't pack a jury; when the rum-seller has no rum to supply he has friends no more to commit perjury in his behalf. It may as well be understood that no tomfoolery will be endorsed or accepted by the prohibitionists of the State from any political party or from any agency that shall seek to control or direct their votes; and the prohibitionists mean at least nine tenths of the Good Templar vote and as large a proportion of the temperance voters who are not Good Templars. That patient class have gone thru a full apprenticeship of waiting for prohibition to rain down upon us from the clouds, and have had enough of it.

DRUNKARD-MAKERS vs. OUR HOMES.

DRUNKARD-MAKERS SIDE.

There has been a most gratifying list of assaults and fights and drunks at the saloons during the past week. A large number of decent businesses have been driven out of their old stands in the city and thief-dens established in their places, with a box of evergreens set out in front and a "Ye Beer, artistically painted on it. A great many stores and rooms on Montgomery and Washington and various other streets that were formerly wasted on such miserable occupations as shoe shops, book stands, restaurants, clothing stores, millineries etc., have had their former occupants starved out, and are now restored to the legitimate commerce of the city, being occupied as beer dives and Chinese resorts. Lively hopes are now being entertained by the leag of F. that all that part of the city bounded by Montgomery and Market streets and the water front will soon be entirely occupied by beer dives, Chinamen, sailor-drunkeries and other groggeries, and trade will then be much improved in the police office, the city prison, the criminal courts, house of correction, the asylums and penitentiaries. This will furnish a numerous deserving class of our community with employment as additions to the force of policemen, jailors, lawyers, barkeepers, witnesses, doctors, jurors, etc., besides giving a boon to the brewers, undertakers, grave diggers etc. There are already 17 drunkeries and deadfalls on Washington street between Montgomery and Sansome (1 block apart) and a little colony of them at all the corners of the two streets named making 25 all huddled in that little space.

HOME SIDE.

Home protection associations have been formed by Col. Babcock during the week at Salinas, Santa Cruz and Watsonville of the very best class of citizens; and three others of which no particulars have been advised. At Salinas and Watsonville there were two public meetings in each place and both Democrats and Republicans were largely represented. The opinion prevails extensively that the M. E. Church, South, in this State cannot be buldosed into a declaration of war against Sunday and temperance and law, but on the contrary desires to be properly counted among the virtuous and patriotic classes as of old.

A home protection meeting was held in the Childrens Hall, Silver Star House, on Sunday evening; Col. Babcock was the principal speaker, his subject "Sunday as a civil institution." It was well received and, as in all California audiences from Siskiyou to San Diego, the most radically truthful and most truly radical utterances were the most generally and energetically applauded. Mrs. Richardson and Mr. Elliott each sang a solo. These meetings are becoming popular, the audience increasing weekly. The Hon. W. Oliver of San Jose will speak there next Sunday evening, 23rd, and Mrs. Stevens on the 30th. Everybody should turn out and hear them.

The Examiner laments that Col. Babcock had nothing to say about the charges which the leag of drunkard makers and the Examiner tried to fix upon him. But the journal knows the charges were infamous and false, and utterly without foundation and were fully answered long ago.

HELPLESS CHURCHES.

At a ratification of the Democratic nominations at Stockton, a wholesale liquor-dealer and owner of two or three saloons in commending the "Free rum and no Sunday" plank, said, among other spicy things: "My contempt for the drunkard is only equalled by my pity for him. But I fail to see how the Legislature can raise the drunkard to the level of decency. As well might we pass an act of the Legislature to send people to heaven or to hell. I am sorry for the weakness of Churches which cannot produce reforms without the assistance of the strong arm of the law."

Every humane reader must sympathize with this benign and philanthropic drunkard-maker and penitentiary-broker. He pities the drunkard whom he sends to jail and suicide and the gallows and his pity is exactly balanced by his contempt for his ruined victims. But he has no such consolation in his grief over the churches, which are so weak that they want a law to help them reform people. In that particular, his sorrow must be a constant menace to his peace and health. It is indeed a sad thing to think of the inferiority of the churches to the saloons in the matter of strength. Any one of this gentle mourner's saloons in Stockton can take charge of a healthy, sound, honest, capable, educated young man of 20 years, with talent and nobility of character sufficient to make him one day President of the United States, and in the short space of two or three years, without invoking the aid of any law, can "produce such a reform" on him that he will be in striped clothes at San Quentin working out a life sentence, a convicted murderer and desperado; another of equal promise will be induced by the whisky of this benevolent corruptor of youth to put a bullet thru his own head and a third will be found in the bay and carried to the Morgue.

No, the good anti-Sunday law patriot wants no help from the law as the effete churches do. He can, with no assistance but his beer kegs and demijohns, make an entry into a happy home, where domestic peace and health and love and happiness have reigned for joyous years, undisturbed by storm or strife or shadow of evil present or to come—and in a few short years that home can, without any help of law, be blasted from garret to cellar. The dear, good patriot's whisky has "reformed" the kind, considerate husband and father into an idle worthless tramp; the home and its properties have been traded off to the patriot home destroyer's grogshop. The wife and mother is worse than widowed and the children of much former promise are waifs upon the street to grow up under the shadow of the thief and crime schools, to recruit their grand army of criminals and paupers.

Truly the churches are weak as compared with the temples of the whisky Baal—whom all men are now commanded to worship on Sunday.

CANDIDATES.

It is quite unnecessary to bring any accusation against the character or standing of any of the candidates of the Democratic Convention at San José. Let us take it for granted that their record in the past has been immaculate, that they are sincere in their professions and intentions and are not bot up by the railroad company, etc. And then there is not one of them who has not declared himself an enemy to the best interests of the country and a sympathizer and accomplice of law-breakers and traitors and of the worst and vilest criminals that ever cursed the world.

Do we expect one of them to be a friend to the working men, when they are all pledged to rob the workers of their Sabbath, and let loose the bloodhounds of rum to plunder and starve them and their families?

Do we expect them to restrain monopolies and tyrants, when they have sold themselves body and soul to do the bidding of the most grinding, pauperizing, murderous monopoly of rum and crime that ever existed?

Do we expect one of them to preserve or value American liberties or American institutions when they have pledged themselves to destroy all the safeguards which now protect them, and to turn over the country bound hand and foot to the tender mercies of the rabble of the dregs of our foreign immigration?

Do we want a Governor of this state to be personally a drunkard-maker, and largely interested in promoting drunkenness, vice and crime; the produce of his large estates being every year perverted into an instrumentality which has no other end than to deprave, corrupt, pauperize and demoralize manhood, to conspire against female virtue, to curse our homes and drive their occupants to crime, madness, sucide and shameful death?

Do we want a Governor who has cast his lot with the enemies of temperance and virtue; whose favor and patronage and example must be given to them and entirely withheld from sober probity?

Do we want a Governor who surrenders all the cherished traditions of this great Republic to be trampled and spit upon by a handful of outlaws from foreign lands, whose respectable and honest countrymen are ashamed of them?

The prohibitionists had no war against Democrats until they declared war against us. Whatever other party, if any, follows their example will be equally our enemy. And to be neutral is to be in leag with our enemies.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD'S DOCTORS.

Mr. Blackburn of Ky. in the House debate on paying the expenses of President Garfield's sickness, claimed that the design of the amendment was to pay exorbitant fees to doctors who had shown no extraordinary skill in the treatment. "With such treatment, the wound need not have been mortal to have produced death. Medical science had never furnished so bad an illustration of blind blundering as in this case." He denounced the claims of those doctors as frauds, etc.

Mr. Springer of Illinois said, it appeared, " a pus cavity was treated for 79 days which was itself the result of malpractice—and the chief physician was a volunteer who crowded out other physicians and now asks $25,000 for that malpractice."

It seems a most monstrous impertinence to claim such an unusual fee for preventing the recovery of the President and using such atrocious quackery as would have pretty surely slain a man in perfect health without any wound. If Dr. Bliss had performed some masterly and critical operation which had restored Mr. Garfield to the nation, a magnificent reward of $10,000 by the nation would have been in order, but to make a claim of $25,000 for killing the patient by persistent starving and poisoning with rotten and filthy drinks is too absurd. To pay such a bill would be a criminal precedent; worse than paying the whisky bill of the congressional drunken frolic at the Garfield funeral.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA.

(FROM THE HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION SEC'Y.)

The work of organizing Home Protection Auxiliary Associations is progressing rapidly. Last week five were instituted of which three were the result of the labors of Col. Geo. Babcock, State Superintendent, at Salinas, Watsonville and Santa Cruz. Some twenty-five branches have already been established throughout the State in the following places: San Francisco, Woodland, Marysville, San Jose, Sacramento, Brentwood, Black's Station, San Bernardino, Elmira, Benicia, Davisville, Kingsburg, Riverside, Orange, Ferndale, Gilroy, Selma, Cacheville, Newville, Salinas, Watsonville, Santa Paula, Oakland, Santa Cruz, Santa Clara. Good Templars and temperance people generally and all persons in favor of the maintenance of law are earnestly requested to give the organization their influence and support. It is in no respect a rival of, or antagonistic to the Good Templars. On the contrary the two organizations can be made to assist each other and both can be made to work harmoniously together for the elevation and alleviation of mankind from the curse of drink.

THE "ARGONAUT"

Has come out squarely last week against the Leag of Fiendom (it is generally called the Leag of Freedom but it is a leag of slavers and slavery). After properly stating that it is an organization of liquor dealers, corner grocers, brewers and lager beer venders, Mr. Pixley says that no good citizen can dout that the "leag is wrong and the temperance people are right on the Sunday law question; the party that dares not avow itself as the advocate of law, that dares not denounce as un-American all organisations of law-breakers, had better be in the minority than the majority." He thinks it "a mistake to suppose the respectable German vote will go to the Democracy on this question; those who have property to tax and wealth to protect, who desire one day's rest in seven and have not subrogated all the traditions of Christian civilization to the beer mug, will vote as usual with the Republican party." After quoting high legal authorities in favor of the Sunday law he arraigned the Democratic party as having made a fatal mistake and invokes upon the truth of the assertion the verdict of all honest men who toil.

There is an excellent opportunity now for Mr. Pixley to earn the gratitude of the better class of his fellow citizens by the employment of his powers and talents in an earnest effort to cast out this devil of ginmill domination and damnation, whose farreaching evil influences no one can better describe than he has often done.

JOHN B. FINCH.

The renegade C. C. Burnett who left his Church and accepted a thousand pieces of silver to lecture for the devil against prohibition in Iowa and in favor of the continuance of the dramshop and bagnio and gambling den there, made some infamous charges against the character of John B. Finch and caused their publication as a help to the devil's side which he was hired with the blood-money of the rumsellers to advocate.

Several of the temperance papers have published copious refutations of the wretched scandal showing it to be utterly baseless and malicious. The RESCUE has not defended Mr. Finch in this matter because a charge made against a noble character like his by an abject traitor hireling like C. C. Burnett is like mud thrown at the moon, not worth notice or mention. It is an old trick to try and injure the cause of temperance by inventing malicious lies against its advocates.

CALIFORNIA PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

ED. RESCUE:—In the RESCUE of yesterday, I see you have not put in the last part of the 3rd Resolution passed by amendment at the Prohibition Convention on the 11th. The part omitted is as follows and is very important: "But should no party take the proper steps to protect an efficient Sunday Law, and favor the plan of referring the question of License to sell intoxicants, to the people, then we will meet and take such steps as shall give the voters of our State an opportunity to express their views on these two important questions."

REV. GEORGE MORRIS, COR. SEC'.Y

West End, Cal., July 14, 1882.

LEAG OF FREE-RUM.

This benevolent society will hold abont 10,000 open meetings all day next Sunday July 23, thruout the State. The most accomplished swearers, the dirtiest storytellers, the hardest smelling old soakers, the raggedest audiences, the reddest noses, the blearest beeriest eyes, the bloatedest faces and the most comprehensively dirty crowd generally will be on hand in all the saloons, dives, deadfals, cellars, beer gardens and beer halls everywhere. Big time next Sunday; program 140 fights; 6 stabs; 3 murders; 4 suicides; 500 arrests; 15,000 strait out drunks; 35,000 moderate drunks; 1000 wife beating drunks.

TULARE CO.

Mr. M. McWhorter of the Hanford Journal will address the people of Selma on Monday July 24 upon the whisky and Sunday law question by invitation of the Home Protection Association of that place and will probably canvas the county. Every body of all parties should go and hear him. The question is of the very highest importance.

IOWA.

Altho almost entirely ignored by the political papers of this coast, yet on the 27th of June was fought in Iowa, the young giant of the west, one of the grandest moral battles the country has ever seen since the Emancipation proclamation fell from Lincoln's pen; the passage, by the people, of an amendment to their state constitution prohibiting the manufacture, and sale of everything that can intoxicate.

The amendment as submitted was disconnected from every other issue, so as not to make it a party question.

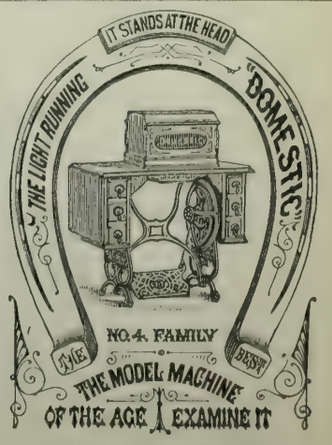
The day chosen for casting the final vote was one of the most favorable for that agricultural state, just between corn working and grain and hay harvest.

The campane was thoroly organized by the temperance and religious societies of the state. The churches, with very few exceptions, put forth their combined influence. This was especially true of the M. E. Church, which has some 600 ministers, and 80,000 members; nearly every one of whom is temperance to the core. Nearly two thirds of the secular press favored the amendment, while some papers published outside the state, especially the Northwestern Ch. Advocate, published in Chicago poured in hot shot at long range. The state was flooded with temperance literature. The best lecturers flocked to the scene of action. Not only the pulpits, but nearly every school house rang with PROHIBITION; one writer says that on the week before the election, more than three thousand temperance lectures were delivered.

The morning of the 27th of June dawned upon Iowa. Providence favored the people with a propitious day. At early dawn in many places the church bells rang to call the people to prayers for success. In some places the bells rang every hour during the day, and people, especially wives, and mothers were there praying.

Preachers, and temperance workers were at the polls early, and remained till dark, in many cases not going home to dinner. Wives and mothers were there to throw their whole influence in favor of the sacredness of home, and the right to keep the demon rum, from corrupting husband or son. In some places children were at the polls in long processions with flags, banners and appropriate mottos, many of whom were pleading with the voters to save their fathers from a drunkards grave, by removing the temptation.

The result is 30,000 majority for the amendment, and as the news came in from the different precincts giving their majorities, such a shout of praise went up from Christian people as Iowa had never heard before.



All hail! noble temperance workers of the prairie State, the sound of your victory has reached west of our snow clad Sierras, and is reaching thru our fertile valleys, cheering our hearts to nobler deeds.

But one thing, I think, is clearly demonstrated by this victory, and by the more recent action of the Republican convention in Illinois, that is, unless the Republican party changes front it cannot be relied upon to carry on this great reform.

While thousands of Democrats in Iowa voted for the amendment, yet the majority in its favor fell below the usual Republican majority in that state. No dout but the majority of temperance men are found in the ranks of the Republican party, but if in Iowa by some political movement all Democrats had been forced to vote with their party against the amendment, the majority would have been much less.

We have seen by the action of the late San Jose Convention the attitude of the Democratic party on this coast to the temperance question. Now unless the Republican party on this coast places itself square upon this question it will drive the temperance vote from its ranks into a new party. This question will not down, and there are thousands who will not vote with a party that ties itself to the tail of the liquor interest. Take warning in time. B. F. TAYLOR.

LODGES, ETC.

El Dorado Lodge, No. 462, I. O. G. T. was organized August 10, 1881, with a membership of ten, by Bro. Hugh R. Hughes, at a very unfavorable time of the year. The Lodge had no hall and was for a time compelled to meet in the church. For weeks five or six of the members met there without a quorum to do business, often they sat on the steps and talked, there not being enough present to pay to light the house. The Lodge did not spring up like a mushroom without foundation and liable to disappear as suddenly, but like the sturdy oak it was rooted firmly in the bed rock, and the storms that beat against it will only strengthen it. El Dorado Lodge has come to stay. Finally a hall or as a member expressed it a "bat coop" was procured and the Lodge met and with the aid of a visitor had barely a quorum There was a candidate initiated. The hall was a large room about 20x40 feet with a small anteroom, the walls had been papered at one time. Over head were the naked rafters, to which clung the domicils of the mud daubers. Under foot was a tin floor instead of a carpet. A few long benches and an old book case completed the furniture. Time rolled on, and occasionally the lodge received a proposition. The members dived into their pockets and came forward and procured furniture and fixtures. At last they conceived the idea of repairing the hall. So after their days work was ended those faithful members, would go to their Lodge room and work till 9 or 10 o'clock at night and willing hands soon converted the "bat coop" into a respectable hall, nicely papered, lined and white-washed. The hall cost the Lodge $2,00 per month rent, so the trustees concluded to purchase the entire building and save the rent and did so. A large brick building 40x50 feet, one story, with a frame story above which served as a Lodge room. ElDorado Lodge was incorporated April, 1, 1882, and is one of the strongest lodges in the county, not in members but in pluck and back bone. Its membership 36 in number comprises some of the very best people in the community, one-third of them are voters, and their votes will count for the right. The aim of the Lodge has been to get such membership as would stand and reflect credit; as well as strength on the Lodge rather than to pick up every old drunk that came around. We have expelled no members. To-day the Lodge is in a flourishing condition and ready to sign a petition to the Legislature, requesting the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment forever prohibiting the manufacture of intoxicating liquors in California. Lodge meets Friday evening. John E. Asken, W. C. T. James H. Gilmore, W. S.

El Dorado Lodge, No. 462. I. O. G. T. On Friday evening June 9, El Dorado Lodge No. 462. I. O. G. T. of ElDorado Cal., was visited by a large delegation from Placerville Lodge, No. 456, and from Bear Nountain Lodge, No. 343, and one from Valley Rose Lodge, No.—— The Lodge was opened and adjourned to the church where there was a meeting for the purpose of organizing a Home Protection Association. After addresses by Messrs. C. D. Brooks and M. S. Robinson, Mr. Brooks canvassed the audience for names for an Association. We obtained thirteen. The Lodge together with those present repared to "Lower Hall" where the members had prepared a royal feast to which all present were invited free. They did justice to the occasion and all seemed to enjoy it. After supper we went to the Lodge room, where the rest of the evening was spent in charades etc. It was a late hour, and the farewells were said, and all went home feeling it was good to be there. G.

Drunken passengers have become a terrible nuisance on the trains in this State. A lady in Sonoma county writes that next time she goes to campmeeting it will be in her own conveyance and adds "the railroad company has no right to put innocent travelers and ladies into a car full of howling, swearing, quarreling drunkards. At the time of the Temperance campmeeting there were various excursions and saloon instituted picnics. Some of the railroad employees remarked that our parties gave them no trouble in the least, but the other picnic trains required extra police care and extra train hands to guard against accident and damage and then they expected damage and uproar and much annoyance. To which a temperance man replied, it is strange then that you carry the Sunday drunks every week a dollar cheaper than you do the temperance parties to campmeeting— over the same route—and when we cost you less and give you no trouble.

Jollification.—The news that the Prohibitionists had carried their constitutional amendment in Iowa by a claimed majority of sixty thousand, was received by the temperance people of this city with manifest delight. A number of them had a jollification over the intelligence last evening at Good Templars Hall. Bombs were fired, and cheers long and loud were given for the signal triumph achieved in the Hawkeye State. During the bomb racket, one of the missiles burst upon the porch of a saloon on the opposite side of the street, but no damage was done. This record is made that the readers of the Herald in Iowa may learn that the right hand of fellowship is extended to them in imagination—or words to that effect—by many firm adherents of the temperance cause in Stockton.—Herald.

Stockton.—A renewed interest in the attendance upon the meetings of the temperance societies of this city has followed fast upon the great step they gained when they succeeded in carrying out their plans to obtain a hall and home of their own. This was fully shown in the regular meeting of Stockton Lodge No. 182 Tuesday evening, when that lodge not only initiated seven new members, but elected eleven and had six more proposed for election at their next meeting. There was a full attendance of the members of the lodge numbering over one hundred, likewise visiting members from San Francisco, Sacramento, Santa Barbara, Kernville, Lodi, Murphy's and other places as well as from Mount Vernon No. 254 of this city.—Herald.

Chico.—Bro. Thorp writes, to ask why news has been delayed of the Iowa election in the Rescue and all other papers. The reason is it was a great victory for the people and the man-entrappers and the woman-entrappers and all the legions of darkness are beaten and ashamed. Had drunkenness and rottenness prevailed we should have had full accounts, but no news can reach us beyond the three line telegraph dispatch of the 29 until the temperance papers come thru the mail.

Watchword.—Rev. B. F. Taylor says the watchword of the California Democracy is "The Chinese must go" and of the Kansas and Iowa Republicans is "The drunkard makers must go." If the people of California will adopt the latter and give our white labor a chance to be sober every Chinaman will go except the few whose labor can be utilized with advantage till a better substitute can be found to take their places.

Lodges.—There are about 60 of our Lodges in California that want a complete new outfit of seats and furniture at Geo H. Fullers 19 New Montgomery St. Better send soon, make your Lodge room so attractive that people will weep to get in, and make a race to be the banner Lodge. Look at the Ad., in this number and call and see.

The Lodi Sentinel reports a successful trial of a Babcock Extinguisher recently made there. But the experiment made in San Francisco by the wifebeaters cooperative association to extinguish Babcock was an entire fizzle.

Sunday law at Salinas.—A grand mass meeting in favor of this wholesome law that is so hated by the liquor sellers and "Grand Lecturer-of-the Masonic Fraternity" Schafer was held in Salinas.

IN OTHER STATES.

North Iowa Germans.—Two hundred and thirty Germans in the north tier of townships in Clayton county signified their intention of voting for the Amendment. The conference of German ministers, just closed at Girard, unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, The continually increasing traffic in intoxicating liquors; as it manifests itself in the saloon scheme of our day, is a social evil which is haunting humanity as an appalling curse, is causing more poverty, disease, misery and crime, and is ruining more men physically and mentally, than any other curse; and

Whereas, We see in the Constitutional Amendment now before the people of Iowa for adoption; a perfectly legitimate and only safe remedy; therefore be it

Resolved, By the preachers of the Northwest German Conference, that we welcome with joy the said Constitutional Amendment, and recognize in the fact of its being placed before the people by ballot that God is hearing the prayers the tears, the groans and lamentations of the innumerable victims of this hellish monster, the liquor traffic.

Resolved, That we use all our power and influence in favor of the adoption of the Amendment, and at the same time we pray to the just God that he may grant us a victory in this most just cause; and

Resolved, That these resolutions be published, and that they be read in all our pulpits next Sunday.—Iowa Register.

The above is commended to our good citizen Germans of California. Americans, English and most other people are opposed to total abstinence until they have studied the question. When the Germans have heard and read and studied as much about it as the average American of Iowa and Kansas and Maine they will vote in as large majorities for prohibition every time.

Tennessee.—The Good Templar tells us that on March 20, 1879 the 4 mile liquor law came into force, which prohibits the sale of any intoxicating liquor within 4 miles of any chartered educational institution. At the time the law passed there were 5 chartered schools in the State. In about 20 months there were 104 and in January 1881 they had increased to 367. It is reckoned that one-fourth of the area of the State is now quietly under effective prohibition and from the growing popularity of the law it is hoped that the whole state may be covered inside of 4 years. It is claimed that this is the best local option law ever tried as there are no elections necessary; all that is required is an incorporated school house every 4 miles.

Dakota.—The Citizens Constitutional Convention Association, in mass convention assembled June 21, resolved upon a State constitution prohibiting the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors.

Anti—Rev. C. C. Burnett, Rev. J. C. Adams, Rev. J. A. Belknap and 4 men with the burlesq of Hon. before their name stumped Iowa against temperance. Faithful servants of Satan to the last.

HE HAD A GOOD TIME.

"Well, Bill, where have you been?"

"I've been down to Jake's saloon, and I tell you I had a splendid time. Had the best time I ever had in my life." "What did you do?" "Well there was a lot of fellows there and we got to drinking and cutting up, and after awhile we started a game and sir, we just kept it up for three days." "Did you lose anything?" ',O yes, I lost $250, but I tell you we had a splendid time. It was the most interesting game I ever saw."

This is no fancy sketch, but occurred in one of the coast counties. The young man who lost $250, in that interesting game, worked in the woods cutting logs and cordwood for $40 per month. And he went back to work and save more money to spend in the saloon the first opportunity. S.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1,00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank, S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

DONT WAIT.

Our readers need not wait till they have $1,000 to spare, or even $100, to send for goods to H. A. Smith's Cash Grocery, advertised in another colum of this paper, but send for what you need or can spare the money for, if only $10 or less, and it will surely pay you, and that you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have knocked at least one pin from under the whisky fabric which is struggling and striving for supremacy over every thing that is good or that opposes its rule in this beautiful land.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

A Radical Cure for Intemperance!

PARKER'S
SALVATION POWDERS!

HOPE FOR THE INEBRIATE.

ALL CAN BE SAVED FROM THE TERRIBLE APPETITE FOR INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Now is the time! Hear it! wives, mothers and daughters, who are trying to reclaim a loved one. Hear it! young man, in whom an appetite for alcoholic stimulants is beginning its ravaging power. Hear it! moderate drinker, rushing headlong to moral and social degradation. Hear it! wretched fallen man, enslaved, lost in your love for strong drink. Hear it! you who would save your fellow-man from filling a drunkard's grave. Let it be known through the length and breadth of our land that a safe, sure, and radical cure for drunkenness and the love or desire for intoxicating liquors has been discovered, perfectly effective in its action, and of so harmless a nature that a very frail person or a child can take it with impunity. Alcohol is a powerful poison! Its action on the mucus membrane, or coating of the stomach, is similar to that of the most virulent poisons known to the Medical Science; such as Strychnine, Arsenic, Prussic Acid, etc. The same unhealthy change results from the use of Alcoholic stimulants, as when those posions are introduced into the system. An unnatural gnawing, or hankering, an insatiable desire, an unsatisfied thirst is produced, which this remedy counteracts and removes, changing the stomach from a diseased to a healthy, natural condition, and at the same time rendering alcoholic drinks unpalatable and positively loathsome to the most inveterate drinker.

This remedy was discovered over twenty-five years ago, by a well-known Physician of New York, and has been prescribed by him in his private practice in thousands of cases with unparalleled success. Parker's Salvation Powders are inodorous, tasteless, and colorless, consequently can be given without the knowledge of the patient, in coffee, tea, beer, or any other beverage, while they invariably produce in him a distaste and loathing for Alcoholic stimulants, and thus work a complete destruction of all desire for intoxicating liquors. It is sometimes advisable to give two of Dr. Parker's Indian Liver Pills, at bed time, to clean out the system. Perseverance in giving these Powders will surely emancipate the enslaved victim of diseased appetite. Many have testified to their astonishing efficacy in rescuing themselves or their friends from the horrible bondage which has dragged them down to the very verge of despair. To give general publicity to their names, would be an obvious breach of that honorable confidence which the physician owes to his patient.

SUICIDE

OF THE PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY IN CALIFORNIA.

ED. RESCUE:—The so-called Prohibition Convention is over. Let us note some of the results while the action of those famous prohibitionists is fresh in the minds of the people. The Convention was called by the State Central Committee of the Prohibition Reform party, and one of the mistakes they made was in not admitting delegates from all Republican clubs in the State. In fact if the Republican State Central Committee had been notified by the Prohibitionists they might have issued a call for primary elections to elect delegates to the Prohibition Convention with instructions to do just as the prohibitionists desired. But no. They would be more likely to decide (as the result proved) that they would have delegates enough at the Prohibition Convention without any trouble on their part. It must have been amusing to see men turn out at the call of the Prohibition Reform Party that have been doing everything possible in opposition to Independent political action. What did they go to the Convention for? Was it to build up the party whose call they attended? No. It was to pass such resolutions as these:

"Resolved, That we will vigilantly await the platform and nominations of existing parties, in the hope that we may find ourselves able to vote like honest and loyal men, without the necessity of separating ourselves from the parties that now divide the State." Thus ignoring the party whose call they attended. But this was not sufficient without being suplimented by a resolution permitting members of the Convention "or party" to vote for the candidates that were favorable to the temperance cause irrespective of party. Has this been the doctrine of the Prohibition party? By no means. It has been the position taken by those who have opposed the organization of the Prohibition Reform Party from the first. What do Bros. Winchester, Morris and John Woods think of their Prohibition Reform Party Convention? How long will temperance men continue to play into the hands of the old political parties? Intelligent, well-informed prohibitionists know full well that it is impossible for either of the old parties as they are constituted, to take up and carry out the demands of the prohibitionists because they are divided among themselves on those questions. The leading Republican papers in the East boldly assert that prohibition in the Republican party must be prohibited. Republicans have repealed perhaps four times as many temperance laws since they came into power as they have enacted. Yet temperance men will allow themselves to be used as tools of the Republican party. Temperance Republicans must be extremely silly if they think they can hand over the Prohibition party, and all the temperance men in the State to the Republican party, simply because the Democrats have had the courage to boldly announce their principles in their platform. Dare the Republicans so announce their principles? No, they dare not and will not. When they meet in Convention their object will be to either ignore the temperance question entirely, or they will treat the public to some resolutions that mean nothing, or have a double meaning so that their speakers and wire-pullers can say to the whiskeyites during the canvass, Don't be alarmed, those resolutions as you should know from our record are only molasses to catch flies. Your liberties and interests will be protected by the great party of universal freedom. And to their temperance associates, those milk and water temperance men, who at one moment are ready to be offered up as a sacrifice on the altar of temperance and Prohibition, and the next are ready to lie down before the old Republican party and let them walk into office over their bodies and principles. They will say, go now and tell your co-workers in the temperance cause that they are about to gain all they could possibly wish for in the line of temperance legislation. And they will come together and sing, "John Brown's body lies a mouldering in the grave," "Marching on to victory," "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," etc., etc., until they wake up in a year or so to find that they have been duped once more by the grand old Republican party, assisted by professed temperance men.

Shame! Shame! Shame! on the prohibitionists who assisted or consented to make a farce of the Prohibition party in this State.

JOHN ROBINSON.

Guerneville, July 14, 1882.

SIR WILFRID LAWSON was to introduce another resolution into Parliament on the 18th July, declaring that the local option question should without further delay be placed in the hands of a Committee to prepare a mode of putting it in practice. It has been affirmed for two years by the parliament that the people of any district should by right be enabled to stop the drink dens when a majority so desires, but the Government or Mr. Gladstone don't want to do anything about it. People who drink are very poor hands to entrust with making or enforcing laws that restrict crime.

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,
Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,
AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

W. S. READ, D. S. C. J. COVILLAUD, D. S.

THE CONTROVERSY will be continued next week.

THE Sunday Chronicle surpasses all its contemporaries in enterprise and liberality. It gives gratuitously 52 chromos of Mrs. Pinkham to every yearly subscriber.

THIS WEEK 4,440 ccpies (9¼ reams) of the RESCUE are printed to meet the increased demand.

Bro. WEBB has received a fine Sciopticon of which his notice will appear next week.

EVE'S DAUGHTERS, is a most appropriate book for the times. It is an admirable work written expressly for the enlightenment of the wives, mothers, daughters of America. Every woman should read it. Dewing & Co, 420 Bush St. San Francisco. See Ad. Agents wanted.

EX-JUDGE W. J Groo of New York sends out a circular which is a copy of his letter to Senator Logan on his infamous whisky Tax Bill. It is an able protest against marrying the grogshop to the school house.

MISS WILLARD'S VISIT.—Letters received from the G. W. C. T. of Oregon and the G. W. S. of W. T. and B. Columbia warmly second the invitation to Miss F. E. Willard and Miss Anna Gordon to the Pacific coast and doubtless there is no voice of dissent anywhere—audible or inaudible.

AN AFRICAN M. E. Church conference passed a vote of thanks to John F. Slater of Norwich, Conn., for donating a million dollars for the education of the Freedmen. So says the Christian Recorder. Now there is a chance for some of our California millionaires to put a million a piece to some good purpose. Don't all speak at once.

DISTRICT LODGES at their meetings should not forget to provide for securing Bands of Hope in connection with all their Lodges. Every one of the children should be saved from the grog-shop and tobacco poisoners of youth. And wherever there is a lodge outside of the large cities a properly concerted and persevering course of active work should succeed in securing all the children for the temperance army.

SILVER STAR HOUSE.—The meetings in Childrens Hall are becoming more and more interesting and better attended. Mr. Oliver last Sunday evening gave a very able and pertinent address. MRS. E. P. STEVENS will give an address there next Sunday evening 30th on "Our homes are in danger." Everybody is expected. Mrs. M. E. Richardson will sing. Corner Pacific and Sansome Streets.

"The total vote cast in Iowa in the recent amendment election is as follows: Total vote cast, 280,284; for amendment, 154,861; against amendment, 125,423; majority for amendment, 29,438." That is from the Disseminator (Oregon) July 15th, and is the first statement seen in this office which seems to be official and conclusive.

THE doctrine that the rum traffic is a necessary evil is an insult to the intelligence of the American people. The doctrine that the best way to curtail this traffic is to license its existence, savors of the trickery and deceit of the devil. The fact that there are men and women in the world who openly advocate this doctrine proves conclusively to us that Satan still reigns supreme in the hearts of some at least —Sel.

THE BEST place for politicians to get information and advice as to their course of action, is at the public drunkeries, PERHAPS. These institutions dispense whisky and beer and beggary and death to their customers, and go down to perdition in the same boat themselves. Therefore they must be good and reliable counselors and advisers. Their advice and assistance sends 280 people to slanter every day in this best country of the world, and the Republicans, many of them, want their help to prescribe a dose for their party that will send it to the morg along with the other customers of rum.

THE N. Y. Tribune alluding to the prohibition victory in Iowa says: "This significant result ought to encourage the Republicans of Ohio in their efforts to defeat the Democratic struggle for "Free Whiskey, and no Sunday." In every State the masses of the people, outside the cities, are in favor of a peaceful Sunday and against the unlimited flow of intoxicating liquor, and on a direct issue they can be depended upon to roll up a sure majority. We believe that this will be the result in Ohio." People must be very blind who cannot see that the struggle for Free Whisky and No Sunday will slauter any party Democratic or Republican that helps it.

THE HANFORD Journal complains that tho land is cheap and water plenty in Mussel Slough, people will not go to live there and Hanford don't progress as it should. "Is there no way," it asks, "to get the hundreds of men who are destitute of homes elsewhere, to settle on our plains and help to make Hanford a city indeed?" Yes, there is a way, and a very simple, easy, best of ways; clean out the villainous thief dens and tollgates to hell that lie in wait in strong force in Hanford, to ruin the boys and curse the homes of everybody who lives there or who might come to live there. The best of settlers go to Riverside and similar colonies in Cal., and pay double and treble price for homes where there is not a general conspiracy to rob and pauperize and corrupt and destroy every boy and girl of these homes, as there is in Hanford and in almost every other town in this State. There is no other inducement needed to fill up any settlement in this State with the most excellent citizens, but the removal of the grogshop leprosy, which is filling the land with perjury and harlotry and violence. All the desirable emigrants or movers from the East will now go to Kansas and Iowa, where, thank Heaven, it is not now the chief end of the commonwealth to sow disease and moral leprosy and death among the people as it is in California.

In the North American Review for August, the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher writes of "Progress in Religious Thought," pointing out the many influences, social, educational and scientific, which are by degrees transforming the whole structure of dogmatic belief and teaching. T. V. Powderly, the official head of the Knights of Labor, the strongest union of workingmen in the United States, contributes a temperate article on "The Organization of Labor." The well-known British military correspondent, Archibald Forbes, writes of "The United States Army," dwelling more particularly on those features of our army management which appear to him to be most worthy of imitation by the military governments of Europe. "Woman's Work and Woman's Wages," by Charles W. Elliot, is a forcible statement of one of the most urgent problems of our time. The author sees no advantage to be derived from the employment of woman in man's work whether of brain or of hand: such employment, he insists, only reduces man's wages, and does not really add to the total resources of the whole class of workers. In a highly interesting essay on "The Ethics of Gambling," O. B. Frothingham analyzes the passion for play with rare ingenuity. "The Remuneration of Public Servants," by Frank D. Y. Carpenter, gives matter for serious consideration, both to the civil service reformers and their opponents. Finally, there is a paper on "Artesian Wells upon the Great Plains," by Dr. C. A. White, of the Smithsonian Institution. The Review is sold by booksellers generally.

A COMING DAY.

"But now the cry of men oppressed went up
Before the Lord, and to remembrance came
The tears of all his saints; their tears and groans.
Wise men had read the number of the name:
The prophet years had rolled; the time, and times,
And half a time, were now fulfilled complete;
The seven fierce vials of the wrath of god,
Poured by seven angels strong, were shed abroad
Upon the earth, and emptied to the dregs;
The prophecy for confirmation stood;
And all was ready for the sword of God.

"The righteous saw, and fled without delay
Into the chambers of Omnipotence;
The wicked mocked, and sought for erring cause
To satisfy the dismal state of things;
The public credit gone; the fear in time
Of peace; the starving want in time of wealth;
The insurrection muttering in the streets;
And palid consternation spreading wide;
And leagues, though holy termed, first ratified
In hell, on purpose made to under-prop
Iniquity, and crush the sacred truth.

"Meantime, a mighty angel stood in heaven,
And cried aloud, 'Associate now yourselves,
Ye princes, potentates, and men of war,
And mitred heads! associate now yourselves,
And be dispersed! embattle, and be broken!
Gird on your armor, and be dashed to dust!
Take counsel, and it shall be brought to naught!
Speak, and it shall not stand!'—And suddenly
The armies of the saints, imbannered, stood
On Zion hill and with them angels stood,
In squadron bright, and chariots of fire;
And with them stood the Lord, clad like a man
Of war, and, to the sound of thunder, led
The battle on. Earth shook; the kingdoms shook;
The Beast, the lying Seer, dominions, fell;
Thrones, tyrants fell, confounded in the dust,
Scattered and driven before the breath of God,
As chaff of summer threshing-floor before
The wind. Three days the battle wasting slew.
The sword was full, the arrow drunk with blood;
And to the supper of Almighty God,
Spread in Hamonah's vale, the fowls of heaven,
And every beast, invited came; and fed
On captains' flesh, and drank the blood of kings."

SPEECH BY SIR WILFRID LAWSON.

(Concluded.)

And then I think it was the chairman who adverted to having been at an insurance office. That is a very strange fact—one of the best facts which we have, I think. You find in these insurance offices that the lives of the total abstainers are far better lives than the lives of those who are what are called moderate drinkers, and that is a fact which goes with me as much as a whole bushel of theories. I judge in this way in the same way as I do about a Government. When I hear the Goverument of a country run down and said to be very wicked, and destroying the welfare of the country and also her influence, etc., I say, "What are the funds?" and if the funds keep up, I say, "the Government is not doing much harm." And so when I find the lives of those men insured in these offices better lives than the others, I say all the nonsense about teetotalism injuring people's health is done away with in a moment by that one fact. Oh yes, the truth was spread, and we found that people were altogether superior without this drink. It was natural they should be. The strongest man that ever lived was a teetotaler. Adam was the first teetotaler, but Samson was stronger than Adam. We find that strength and skill go with total abstinence now. Who was the man who won the Queen's Prize in the rifle shooting twice over? Why he was a total abstainer. You have heard of Dr. Carver, a man who shoots pigeons and all sorts of things with the greatest accuracy; he takes no alcoholic stimulants of any kind. And you have heard of that man who has astonished us all by coming from the colonies and beating everybody in rowing on the Tyne and the Thames—Hanlan—he also is a total abstainer. But the friends of alcohol were not easily beaten. They said that men who worked a great deal out of doors, they may probably manage without alcohol; bnt a man who leads a sedentary life and has a great deal of brain work finds a little stimulant absolutely necessary to keep up "the tone" of his stomach. That is all proved to be nonsense now. You have heard of many illustrious abstainers. Look there (pointing to Mr. Bowly in the chair), there's a man for you (80 years of age). He does not work out in the field; he works in a sedentary manner, and works in crowded rooms like these without ventilation, and there he is as strong and hearty as any of us. Mr. Bright is a brain-worker, and does not take drink. Sir Charles Dilke, one of the most rising men in the House of Commons, and I see a picture opposite me of our good friend, Mr. Samuel Morley—they all can do without drink, and they are a very good lot from the common herd of humanity. The fact is some people won't try long enough. They say I gave it up because, after a fortnight, I felt such a sinking. They want a little perseverance. They are like a friend of mine who heard about Dr. Tanner fasting for forty days. Filled with emulation, he thought he would try. He set to work, but he broke down in three hours. It is all want of determination and perseverance. Now they are driven to the last ditch, and thus we come really to the valuable part of our meeting to-night. They said, "Oh, well, perhaps people may do without it, but it is a most valuable medicine." It is an extraordinary thing how many people want this medicine. Those who are fighting the great temperance reformation saw clearly that this was a great evil which had to be met, because when people begin to take it as a medicine they very soon get into the habit of taking it as a pleasure. It is like the old lines which say—

Vice is a monster of such hideous mien,
As, to be hated, needs but to be seen;
But, seen too oft, familiar with its face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

So it was with drink. The doctors used to order it for people as a medicine, and the people took it when they were quite well as a pleasure, leading them on to much drunkenness and evil. I am not here to dogmatise. I am not a medical man. I have told you how highly I think of them in the former part of my speech, but I am not here to say with any amount of dogmatism that alcohol is or is not a useful medicine. My case is complete and ample, even though it should be a medicine. You know I spend my time in going against the common sale, because I believe with Mr. Bright that it is the source of crime, disorder, and madness, and, as a politician, I do not think I can do anything during the short time I have to live better than fighting against this crime, disorder, and madness. But while I say that, it is not necessary to my case that alcohol should be proved to be a medicine, I will say that I think I shall have a stronger case if it is proved not to be a medicine; and our friends who started this hospital have set themselves to prove that point—not what was already proved, that it is undesirable in health—but that it is not a medicine. When they started that, they were ridiculed and opposed; but that is the case with everybody who tries to do any good. I consider that ridicule and opposition are the tests of truth, and year by year our friends are getting over that opposition. They are bringing the facts before the public, and year by year alcohol is losing its hold upon the public even as a medicine. That being the case, and our friends having done so much, we are entitled to rank them as no mean contingent in the great temperance army; and I believe that hereafter their labors will be looked back to with gratitude as those who have contributed greatly by their energy and their exertions to bring about what we shall yet see some day I feel convinced—a free and sober and a happy country.

STOUT BEER-DRINKERS.

We do not refer to those who drink stout, nor to those who drink stoutly, nor to "strong men" who drink beer, but to men who have drank beer till they are what the English call "stout" and what the Yankees call "fat." The German thinks this a good thing and that it shows health. We think it shows beer. The healthy American is rather lean. If you wish to know what the Englishman thinks of it look at his pictures of "John Bull." Decidedly stout! It is true that many an Englishman is built after that pattern. He may think it looks well and feels comfortable. Tastes differ. We notice that many English total abstainers of long standing have less obesity to carry around, and we like their looks better.

But what about health? If you were to ask a doctor he might talk learnedly about adipose and apoplexy, but his idea would be that John Bull's red face and fat body showed that he was not a healthy subject, that he might die at any moment. But what does this fat really mean? A healthy young person should be plump. The tissues are soft because there is a plentiful supply of blood bringing the food to nourish all the parts and make them grow. But when the body is mature and the muscles settle down to constant work without the growth, the plumpness gradually disappears. It is natural for the healthful adult to be more lean than the growing child. But if thru a mistaken idea beer is drank to make the adult fat or stout, what happens? The drains and sewers of the wonderful house in which we live get out of order, so that they do not carry away the refuse matter, the litter which all the organs make inside in doing their work. This remains in the body in the shape of fat in the corners between the muscles and in the caul, which (often in addition to a diseased liver) goes to make up the immense rotundity of the beer-drinker. Isn't this a pretty load for a person to be carrying about in broad daylight and in decent society? Refuse matter that ot to have been got rid of months and months ago and left the body clean, lithe and active! For a man to boast of this fat as healthy is just as reasonable as if a man turned all the drains into his soft-water cistern and then boasted of the abundant water supply. The quantity might be large, but the quality would be quite another thing.

We should specially notice that this fat does not add to strength, it does not increase ability to work. It is like suet. There is no muscle about it. Dr. N. S. Davis, of Chicago, says: "This is abundantly illustrated by the thousands of beer and wine drinkers who, from twenty to twenty-five years of age, were muscular, active, capable of any reasonable endurance, with a weight of one hundred and fifty pounds, but who, after moderately retarding atomic changes and retaining old atoms by the daily use of wine or beer, have acquired a weight of two hundred pounds or more, and have lost their muscular activity and endurance to such an extent that an active exercise of twenty minutes would make them puff like a 'heavey horse.'"

If we would have the best health and know how to get the most work out of ourselves with the greatest degree of comfort, we must understand more about these bodies of ours and what is going on inside of them, or else we can not know the right things to put into them. And as it is our business to feed ourselves, I take it we should know how to do it properly. We should learn the simple truths of phisiology at school, or have our children learn them, while we that are older can read about them in various ways and really get a great deal of help from them, especially on this great drink question.

PROHIBITION.

INTERVIEW WITH JOSHUA L. BAILY.

THE CHAIRMAN OF THE STATE COMMITTEE GIVES HIS VIEWS ON THE GREAT TEMPERANCE VICTORY IN IOWA.

"What do I think of the result in Iowa?" said Mr. Joshua L. Baily, chairman of the State Temperance Committee of Pennsylvania, when interviewed by an INQUIRER yesterday respecting the Prohibitionist's great victory in that State "I have this to say: It was expected that the prohibitory amendment would be adopted, but the majority exceeds the most sanguine estimates. It has been a most active canvass, but in my opinion the victory has been on the side of truth, intelligence and the public welfare. The liquor interest insisted upon it that prohibition was a failure in Kansas, but at the same time they expended tens of thousands of dollars to defeat its adoption in Iowa. In this their action contradicted their pretensions.

"The fact is prohibition has been no failure in Kansas. None know it better than the liquor dealers. It has annihilated their traffic in nearly three-fourths of the State, and in driving out the saloon-keepers the State has got rid of a class of people who added nothing to the general wealth or prosperity, but were everywhere a pauperizing element. Since the adoption of the amendment in Kansas there has been a stream of emigration into that State—the industrious, thrifty and sober—without parallel. The amendment, as you will remember, was adopted in Kansas, by only about eight thousand majority, but Governor St. John wrote to me the other day that, in his opinion, any proposition to return to the old system of dram-shops would be defeated by a majority of fifty thousand.

"The people of the neighboring State of Iowa have seen and known all this, and the significance of the verdict they have just rendered is that, in all the particulars that go to build up a great and prosperous State, they don't mean to be excelled by Kansas."

To the question what effect the action of Iowa would have on other States, Mr. Baily said:

"I think the effect will be to stimulate the movement for prohibition all over the country. There can hardly be any doubt of its speedy adoption by several of the States immediately adjacent to Iowa and Kansas. They are ripe for it now; but even were they not ripe for it, they would be driven to prohibition in self-defense against the rum-traffickers, who, driven from Kansas and Iowa, would overrun the border States with far greater demoralizing and pauperizing effect than the much dreaded grasshoppers. In my judgment Indiana and Ohio will not be far in the rear. Maryland and Georgia are far on the road to it."

"What about Pennsylvania?" asked the reporter.

"The prospects here," said Mr. Baily, "are very encouraging. We have now three candidates for Governor, each of whom is a pronounced temperance man, as are a majority of the nominees for the other State offices. The Independent Republican Convention, which met here May 24, passed a resolution approving of the submission to the people of the proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors for drinking purposes. This last is more than was ever done before by either of the great parties in this State, and is an encouraging indication of our advanced sentiment.

"The temperance voters of Pennsylvania are now organizing in counties and legislative districts for the purpose of securing representatives in the Legislature favorable to a submission of the amendment to a vote of the people. The nominees of all parties will be interrogated, and only those will be supported who are in favor of the submission of the amendment. When no candidate is found reliable in this respect independent nominations will be made.

"There will be an active and vigorous campaign this fall throughout the State from a temperance standpoint, with every expectation of carrying the legislation for constitutional prohibition."—Pa. Inquirer.

THERE were 141 arrests for drunkenness in St. Paul, Minn., during February. Of these 55 were Irish. The Chronicle says "one cause of this is that many young Irishmen take lodging in boarding houses to which saloons are attached. An effort is to be made soon to remove this blot from the record of Irishmen in this city. It is proposed to brand with infamy the men who bring discredit on the Irish name. At the total abstinence league meetings hereafter a list of Irish arrests will be read, together with the offence, and, if possible, the names of those who are accessory to the crime by selling the liquor to the culprit."—I. O. U. B. Journal.

A MICHIGAN paper hoists the name of Chester A. Arthur for President in 1884, subject to the decision of the National Republican convention.—Ex. It is to be hoped it will be hoisted very high long before that convention meets.

CAL. W. C. T. UNION.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

President, Mrs. D. P. Browne, Blake House, Oakland.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Mrs. G. S. Abbott, Oakland; Mrs. John McNear, Petaluma; Mrs. M. A. Nash, Santa Rosa; Mrs. W. R. Spencer, Grass Valley; Miss W. Bell, San Jose; Miss Sarah P. Morrison, San Jose; Mrs. J. B. Hill, Alameda.

Secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Congdon, 314 Sutter St. S. F.

Assistant Secretary, Miss M. J. Havens, Blake House, Oakland.

Treasurer, Mrs. J. G. Wickersham, Petaluma.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

MASSACHUSETTS.

The Women's Christian Prohibitory Leag of Mass. at its regular monthly meeting in May unanimously adopted the following:

WHEREAS, We, the Massachusetts Women's Christian Prohibitory Leag, without exception, recognize the fundamental principle of the Republican party in its inception, namely, the conviction of a great wrong perpetrated upon a portion of the citizens, by holding them as chattels and worse, and legalized by the consent of the majority; together with the sublime purpose to overthrow this iniquity that men of renown had sought to weave and interweave into the very fabric of our national life; and

WHEREAS. We remember with gratitude the God-like courage and self-sacrifice involved, which was rewarded with the wiping out of the abhorrent sin; therefore

Resolved, That we do more deeply deplore the entire refusal of this party, born in the hour of our nation's peril, to array its gigantic strength against a hydra-headed wrong that has fastened its poisoned fangs upon almost every home in our beloved land, and cast its bewildering influence over our churches, thus undermining the very foundation of our government. So, to-day, we look in vain for men in high places, whose hearts are fully set God-ward! "Loyal to party" is the watchword.

Resolved, That we will continue to expose the wickedness of the dominant party, and daily beseach the Most High to speedily bring to naught this host, who have gone out after the "spoils of the ungodly."

Resolved, That we, Christian Temperance women, most deeply deplore the failure of Speaker Noyes to stand for Prohibition in the hour of its direst need. We were pained that self-interest should have swayed the Speaker, and betrayed the cause into the hands of the enemy for another year. Truly temperance has been betrayed in the house of its professed friends, from whom we looked for better things.

Resolved, That henceforth we will not trust the Prohibitory professions of any men who can be elected by the Republican party.

Resolved, That we will go forward, though darkness be round about us, because the Lord of hosts is our leader, and by and by the legalizing of the liquor traffic will be regarded with equal abhorrence, as would be the legalizing of wholesale murder. Substantially it is one and the same thing.

It is a pity that the temperance organizations of the great rich State of Mass, can only afford to publish one 4 page monthly paper. Cheap John the great Ahithopel of Satan has done valiant service for the rum interest by seducing our best men and with foolish counsel beggaring their treasuries and laying them out powerless for any effective war.

WOMAN'S BALLOT.

The Chicago Signal objects to a "Slur" implied by a temperance journal upon Miss Willard for influencing the Michigan W. C. T. U. to vote in favor of woman suffrage. The committee declare that Miss W. had no lot or part in it, but those who voted for it had no need of any influence in that direction. It is presumed Miss Willard is conscienciously and deeply impressed with the idea that women are truly and justly entitled, to the same extent that men are, to the ballot and that it would be a blessing to the cause of temperance and to every good interest of humanity if that equal right was accorded to them.

If she so believes it is not at all discreditable to her if she had endeavored to induce by fair argument a hundred conventions of women to believe as she does. Such a course should no more be the subject of a "slur" than the act of trying to persuade a drunken man to become an abstainer and do justice to his starving family. It is a thing to be deplored and lamented in sackcloth and a bath of some kind, that one advocate of temperance can ever find room in his heart for an emotion that could prompt an expression in the least unkindly or depreciating toward any other helpers in the field—and especially so when an invidious arrow is pointed at one of the most grandly useful and noble apostles that have ever labored in this field.

INTOXICATION.

My pity was enlisted not long since for a lady who seemed to be losing her reason; the vacant stare and abstracted mind was enough to touch the sympathy of all who had known her in the past years of intellectual effort and success. Had she over-worked? I tried to seek the cause and offer assistance. What was my surprise when a mutual friend informed me that she was using opium! How could an intelligent person deliberately throw away her reason—her bright individual self?

Here was a mystery as strange as intoxication by liquors; and I am told it is quite common. How can such indulgence supersede the higher pleasures of life?

I knew a beautiul woman who grew untimely old through the use of opium. She was placed under the charge of a physician who prescribed whisky, then wine, and so on, until now she relies only on beer! The gradation of sin.

I hear that camphor and cologne are frequently drank by ladies; also the smelling of perfumes, to intoxicate just as liquor and tobacco is used by men And those who do not like the fumes are constantly annoyed by this selfish indulgence by others. Evil is disagreably diffusive and they who would be pure can hardly escape. BETH.

OUR OBJECT LESSON.

Again the Hayes commission comes before you with this subject. The pictures, for which subscriptions have been received, have been sent out, and surely there was never so large an expression of delight from every one; there has scarcely been known one shadow of a disappointment. "Well worth waiting for," "much finer than we anticipated," "lovely," "beautiful," etc., etc., have been the words written. To-day comes a voice from Spain, "We are much pleased with it, and hope that its influence may be for good among the girls of our school, so that it may spread thru the land." John B. Gough, Mrs. Garfield, Dr. Merrick, Mrs. Senator Blair, and hundreds of others, have expressed their gratification with the picture, and the hope it may fill a glorious mission. This it will do when placed in every school-room in the land. If, in each city and town, one energetic, earnest woman will tell the children of this beautiful memorial, and tell them how easily they can raise money for it for their school-room, it will be done, and this lovely object lesson in total abstinence will ever give its monitions. In many places one child has taken it in hand and speedily and easily raised the money. Collection cards for securing the money in small sums, will be furnished on application to the Treasurer, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York City. All subscriptions should be addressed to her, and she is prepared now to send the picture by return mail. We hope thousands will be called for, and that no school-room nor Sabbath-school, no W. C. T. U. room, nor Good Templar lodge will be considered furnished till this charming testimonial looks from its walls.—Our Union.

A WOMAN found lying drunk at the threshold of a poor home in Chicago made a gentleman who saw it become a prohibitionist.

IN the annual message of Governor Hoyt, he says one of the results of woman suffrage in that Territory is they "have better laws, better officers, better morals, and a higher social condition of things than could otherwise exist."

TO OUR LOCAL UNIONS.—DEAR SISTERS.—Please do not neglect the systematic reading in our local Unions of Miss Colman's Beer series and circulation of the same to local beer-drinkers throught the post office. This work is practically easy and will yield a blessed harvest.—FRANCES E. WILLARD.

W. C. T. U. JOURNALS.—The Signal, of Chicago, and Our Union should be in the household of all the good women in this State. The Signal is weekly, same size as RESCUE and is $1.75 a year. Our Union is monthly and is only 75 cts. a year. Signal and RESCUE, $2.50, and Our Union and RESCUE $1.60 a year.

GLORY AGAIN.—Two breweries, two wholesale liquor houses, and a big distillery have already closed in one Iowa county and are transferring their pauper and jail-bird factories to Illinois. Now there will be a boom of immigration of good, valuable citizens into Iowa. Kansas and Iowa will now get tens of thousands of worthy people who would gladly come to California were it not for the universally pauperizing and destroying drunkeries that infest this state and are worse obstacles to its progress than one million of the meanest Chinese could be.

ILLINOIS.—Following close on the Iowa victory the Republican convention of Illinois kicked out a resolution which favored the submission of a prohibitory constitutional amendment to the people—lost by a vote of 623 to 133; and now the temperance people and the W. C. T. U. will sing "To your tents, Oh, Israel."

A LADY on the Atlantic shore who lost two fine sons thru drink, after having suffered years of agony over their evil courses, always ridiculed the fanaticism of her remaining son who had been narrowly reclaimed and saved from a similar fate by the S. of T. and lamented his weakness in refusing to take a simple glass of wine when she and other people did. That was in a family well known to the writer.

THE little nine year old daughtor of one of our temperance workers wanted some indulgence, some time ago, which her mother did not think it best to grant. "No," said the latter; "Dr. Jones says that is injurious. and is what makes you sick." Dr. Jones!" exclaimed the child indignantly. "What does he know? He told you to take whisky when you were sick." No moral necessary.—Signal.

WOMEN TO THE FRONT.—In many towns of Illinois the W. C. T. U. held Fourth of July celebrations this year, At Lacon they had entire charge of the county celebration. A young lady read the declaration and it was a grand success. In Boston the W. C. T. U. celebrated on the Common and probably next year there will be a good deal more of that kind of Fourth to take the place of the pagan orgies so frequent.

DON'T ANTAGONIZE.—At the recent convention of the Illinois W. C. T. U. a lady moved that the war be carried on against one thing at a time and that tobacco be let alone, lest men who use it should be antagonized. Several others were captured by the don't antagonize idea, but on discussion it was decided by large majority to warn the people against tobacco, as the failure to do so would be a failure of duty.

A Christian Temperance man, speaking of the Law and Order party says: "Your principles and candidates are all right, but I shall vote the Republican ticket." This he said before the Republicans had nominated their ticket. If this is not fanaticism and heathen worship of party, we are no judges. Such infatuation was suitable for the dark ages. Do you wonder that crime rules our land when such stupidity and blind ignorance pervades the minds of our people?

THE W. C. T U. of Ohio passed the following unanimously and with enthusiasm, at their recent annual convention. Resolved, That the W. C. T. U. of the crusade State desire the ballot on the temperance question, as one of the most effective instrumentalities in their work, and that, in compliance with the National W. C. T. U., we will hereby provide for a department of franchise, the duty of which shall be to carry this, our desire, into execution to such extent and in such manner as they deem wise.

Gov. ST. JOHN was present when Ex. Gov. Robinson, the rum-champion of Kansas was making a speech and asserting that he had been a temperance man long ago in Massachusetts. Getting excited here the whisky orator said, "where was your Gov. St. John then?" The answer was immediate, "I was a boy then, but thank God a sober boy, but suppose I had been a whisky man then, I would rather have been a monkey 30 years ago and be a consistent temperance man to-day than to have been a man 30 years ago and stand here a monkey to-day." Robinson did not ask him any more questions that day.

MAINE.—The Republican Convention in Maine ot to know something about prohibition; this is what they proclaimed a few days ago: "We refer with confidence and pride to the general record of the Republican party in support of the policy of the prohibition of traffic in intoxicating liquors, the wisdom and efficiency of which legislation in promoting the moral and material interest of Maine has been demonstrated through the annihilation of that traffic in a large portion of the state; and we favor such legislation and such enforcement of the law as will secure to every portion of our territory freedom from that traffic. We further recommend the submission to the people of a constitutional prohibitory amendment."

DEGREE TEMPLARS.

Jno Thompson, for No. 140 Santa Barbara

CERTIFICATE OF MEMBERSHIP.—For many years a demand has existed for an appropriate and neatly-executed Certificate of Membership. The G. W. S, has endeavored to supply the demand by securing the various designs used in Great Britain and elsewhere, but these did not come up to the California standard of excellence and neatness. Finally a design was prepared, submitted to the R. W. G. S., approved, adopted, and the certificates published by the R. W. G. L. The first one hundred copies of the new certificates have just been received and are now on sale at the G. W. S. office. The new certificate is an elegant piece of workmanship, being 15 x 24 inches in size, printed in six colors: scarlet, blue, gold, black, green and orange, and executed in the best style of the chromo lithographic art by the Forbes Company, of Boston, who stand unrivalled in their line. The design is in monumental form, the face of the monument bearing the certificate of membership, which is flanked on either side by a Templar guard of the olden time. At the base of the monument is a very correct representation of what the title announces to be the GOOD TEMPLARS HOME FOR ORPHANS, VALLEJO, CALIFORNIA. The upper part of the monument bears the virgin clinging to the cross, surmounted by a star and halo, typical of Faith, supported on either hand by representations of Hope and Charity. Within the triangle of the three graces is a circle bearing the cross, heart and anchor, surrounded by the words, "Independent Order of Good Templars 1852", these being surrounded by an endless chain, typical of the strength and unity of our Order. The whole being neatly festooned with flowers in bright colors. The sketch is surmounted by an "all-seeing eye" looking out of the sky, across which is written the legend, "A Templars vow is registered in heaven." As a whole, the plate is one of the neatest and best executed society certificates extant and must be seen to be appreciated. A copy should adorn the sitting room or parlor of every Good Templar home. The certificate is sold at one dollar only per copy. Cash must accompany the order which must be addressed to the G. W. S. office.

THE LAST.—Bro. I. T. Holland, of Sonora, the fourth representative to the R. W. G. L. from Cal., and the last to return, dropped in to the G. W. Secretary's office on Wednesday of last week en route to his home. Bro. Holland was in Iowa on the 27th of June when the prohibition vote was being taken which resulted in the emancipation of that great state. He visited the State of Missouri, and in the two counties visited by him, where resides his relatives, prohibition now prevails, no liquors being allowed sold in either county. He believes the popular sentiment is such in Missouri now that if an immediate vote could be taken, it would rival Iowa in its majority for law, order, decency and "no license to pave the dark pathway to hell." Like all the other representatives, though seeing much to admire, please and instruct, yet he was glad to once more breathe the pure atmosphere of "this glorious climate of California."

FORT BIDWELL.—Bro. Frank Criss, one of the "boys in blue," and overseer of the post school at Fort Bidwell, Modoc Co., sends an interesting account of the celebration of the anniversary of the Order at that place, by Mt. Bidwell Lodge. The occasion was in the nature of an open-air picnic, in which the Sabbath school united and in the evening an open lodge was held when an interesting programme of literary exercises was held, including songs, recitations, an address on "Temperance," an essay on the "Good of the Order," etc. The lodge is reported as steadily advancing, and doing a good work. Bro. Criss proposes to commence the circulation of temperance literature soon throughout the valley, and it is hoped he will meet with encouragement and success in this laudable undertaking.

ELECTIONS.—Next week will be election week and new officers will be chosen in every lodge. Each lodge should have a pride in having the work of the Order well rendered, and the duties of the several officers ably discharged. Therefore they should be careful to select the best material at their command, as their "representative members," for such are the officers of a lodge. The whole Order rests upon the Subordinate lodges for a foundation. Elevate and intensify the work of the Subordinate lodge and the good effect is felt all through the Order, and as a natural sequence the reverse of this will have an opposite effect. The reports to the Grand Lodge are based upon the returns submitted for the term ending July 31st. Lodge Deputies should see to it at once that the recording officers of their lodges have their books written up and posted ready for a prompt closing at the end of the term in order to enable them to make immediate Quarterly Returns to the Grand Lodge at once upon the close of the quarter.

PASS-WORD CIRCULARS.—During last week the official quarterly circular was forwarded to every Lodge Deputy within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of California. To such as were entitled to receive it, was appended the quarterly pass-word for the incoming quarter commencing August 1st, also the annual traveling pass-word for the year commencing upon the same date. Lodge Deputies of lodges whose returns for the term ending April 30th have not been filed, not being entitled to receive the password by reason of said delinquency, will find the pass-word coupon removed from the circular, only to be restored upon a compliance with the law requiring the proper filing of quarterly returns. Upon the back of the official circular is endorsed a statement of the account of each lodge indebted to the Grand Lodge. It is hoped the statement will be carefully scrutinized, and if found correct that the amount of balance will be promptly forwarded with the amount of Grand Lodge tax.

ANNUAL REPORTS.—Blank forms for annual reports from Lodge Deputies to the G. W. S. were mailed to all Lodge Deputies last week, as were also blank forms of Credentials of Representatives to be elected to the Grand Lodge; and a blank form of recommendation of Lodge Deputy for each lodge for the next fiscal year. The election of Representatives to the Grand Lodge should take place during the second week in August, and the recommendation of Lodge Deputy should be made at the same time. The result should be promptly certified to the G. W. S. upon the blanks furnished for that purpose. The annual report to the G. W. S. should be returned at the earliest moment possible after the close of the term, July 31st. It was intended to have forwarded the blank form for the annual report to the G. W. C. T. in the same envelope with the blanks forwarded by the G. W. S. and it was so announced in the general circular of the G. W. S., but an unforseen delay occuring in the receipt of the G. W. C. T.'s "copy" it was omitted, but will be forwarded directly to all his deputies by the G. W. C. T.

TO LODGE DEPUTIES.—There was mailed from the G. W. S. office during the past week to the address of each Lodge Deputy, seven circulars and printed forms as follows: 1, The Quarterly Pass-Word Circular; 2, A circular to be read in open lodge; 3, Blank forms for Quarterly Returns for the term ending July 31st; 4, Blank form for the reccomendation of a Lodge Deputy for the ensuing year; 5, Blank form for the annual report of the Lodge Deputy to the G. W. S.; 6 and 7, Duplicate copy of blank forms for Credentials of Representatives elect to the Grand Lodge, together with an addressed envelope for the return of the same. These were all mailed in two envelopes and should now be in the posession of each Lodge Deputy. If for any reason they have not reached their destination, upon being notified of the fact duplicate sets will at once be forwarded from the G. W. S. office.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:
Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

In Nevada City we found a legal bar of very intelligent attorneys, who from the Superior Judge down were nearly all Good Templars, and their number is not small, either. Bro. J. M. Walling, the Lodge Deputy, is a rapidly rising lawyer who is making a mark socially and politically, yet does not fear, even in the court, to utter his cherished sentiments on the temperance question. Bro. Niles Searls was attending Democratic State Convention in San Jose hence we saw him only after our work was ended, but he was the same interesting, jolly Judge Searls as we see in Grand Lodge. This reminds me that in Nevada City on the Fourth, a glorious time is on hand, but I see that Bro. Searls is president of the day, and nearly all the vice presidents and other officers are Good Templars, who will be proud of their connection on that day with the great orator, Chas. H. Litchman, of Marblehead, Mass., Great Incohone of the I. O. R. M., and organizer of the Knights of Labor.

From Nevada City, we proceeded by buggy to Indian Springs at an expense of $8 but returned to Nevada without a meeting.

At the special request of M. W. Church, father-in-law of Bro. Myron H. Savage, formerly Supt. of the Home for Orphans, we lectured at Spenceville for the Council of the Champions of Honor, who with only 3 hours notice had a very good audience for so small a town.

Thence to Rough and Ready, where seeing no posters, we began to "feel blue," but soon discovered that the Lodge had notified the people several miles around, and had not trusted to the mere tacking up of a poster or two. A good meeting was held, and preparation made for a grander meeting next evening.

Los Tablos gave us full houses on two nights and the best of attention. They have a Band of Hope with D. C. Cook's Quarterly Lesson Books, etc. They accepted our badges and rituals and will henceforth work in connection with our Order. The Good Samaritans do not maintain their organization and I hope to see a Good Templar Lodge there before long. Revs. S. P. Sitton and Dodson, Good Templars and Prohibitionists, (by the way,according to our Platform, should not these terms be synonymous?) are active workers here. No saloons but strong temperance sentiment. Called on my way at school of Miss A. M. Parsons and found most attentive and intelligent scholars; she is a faithful temperance worker and had been anxious to start a Band of Hope but did not know how to proceed till a member of the San Luis Obispo Band, a gallant young gentleman, volunteered to write Sister Richardson for requisite badges and rituals. They had just come. Gave a long talk on the triple evils, showed our good Sister the Rescue and she remarked that it was an old friend and at once subscribed for it. Took dinner with Bro. and Sister J. T. Walker and had a glorious rest in that wonderfully comfortable and easy hammock chair that he sells. Every Good Templar should get one for his wife out of his savings thru not drinking. "But if he has not a wife?" Well, get the chair and the chances of getting the good wife will be immediately enhanced.

Estrella is an extensive plain with a good many people. Very good meetings. Started them seriously to think about a lodge; afterward rode all night to go there and speak again and confer with those interested, but owing to some mistake no one met me at Paso Robles to take me over. Am much indebted to Mr. A. N. Rude and family for kind entertainment and to Revs. J. M. Leihy and H. E. Adams for help and sympathy. At Paso Robles Springs the Hotel parlor was specially lighted and seated for the lecture and the room well filled, largely by fashionable people. Mrs. James, wife of one of the proprietors told me her husband had touched nothing intoxicating for 2 years, her children had promised to be abstainers and she was firmly resolved not to keep liquor or wine on her table or in the house.

San Miguel is notably one of the wildest, roughest and most drunken of places in Cal., nevertheless, as I was doing missionary work, I decided not to pass it and had the little school house full. But afterward young men, middle-aged and gray-heads were at the saloon (Sunday afternoon) indulging in the most insane and rowdy drinking and the coarsest and most obscene language. For all San Miguel country I would not be compelled to bring up my family under such influences with no church, Sunday-school or Lodge. This finishes my work in San Luis Obispo County, tho I omitted to say I went back to Arroyo Grande and had another good meeting, minus the San Luis Obispo delegation.

C. N. GOULDING.

I lectured Sunday and Monday evenings 16th and 17th in Ukiah Tuesday and Wednesday evenings 18th and 19th in Little Lake and again in Ukiah on the 20th, had large audiences in both places, but am sorry to report that there is no very decided feeling for temperance. An apathy exists that is hard to account for, it is to be hoped that they may experience a change of heart soon.

I was obliged to give up the Covelo appointment, since July first the stage has been "hauled off" and the expense of a trip there by private conveyance was rather more than I dare incur.

Came here by stage Friday ready for business as announced in the Rescue, will report as opportunity occurs. Hopeland and Cloverdale will be visited some time in August.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

Northern D L meets in I O G T Hall, Arcata, Humboldt Co., July 29.

El Dorado D L will meet at Georgetown, Aug. 2d, at 10 A M. All lodges requested to send delegates. The D D can not be present.

IN OTHER STATES.

Railroad men talk of an emigrant rate of $50 from Liverpool to San Francisco. The cheapest route then from New York or Boston to come here will be to go to England first.

D. K. Rine who was in California about two years ago recently died in a Michigan insane asylum. He had been a preacher, lawyer, printer, drunkard, reformed, blue ribbon reformer, gospel temperance lecturer, fallen again, insane, dead.

Bro. J. A. McMillan's appreciated poem "The Greatest Crime of the Ages" which appeared in the Rescue of April 6, has been on its travels ever since and has returned to its starting point, reproduced in the Glasgow Good Templar and in the Templars Standard of South Africa.

President Arthur in his social and moral example and influence is making a record exactly the opposite of that which made the name of President and Mrs. Hayes admired and applauded and beloved of all good people thruout the world. To make the demijohn and the bottle respectable seems to be his loftiest ambition.

Tennessee.—The Democratic party (State Credit Wing) of Tennessee have nominated Joseph H. Fussel for Governor a good man, an active member of the church, a strong advocate of temperance and in favor of maintaining the State credit. The platform demands that the Four Mile law (prohibitory) shall not be repealed, and that plank was greeted with uproarious applause in the convention.

Everywhere the rumsellers ignore party to ruin and kill their neighbors. Temperance men and good citizens should prefer the safety of their homes and of the lives and morals of their children to the success of any morally bankrupt iniquitous party which barters the lives of the people for the grogshop vote.

Canada.—The Scott Act (general local option law for the whole of Canada) has been declared valid by the Privy Council of England to whom it was appealed. The man-killers of Canada are just like ours here. They have an immense respect for law when it is in their favor. When it restricts their right to rob and kill people, they violate it; they appealed to the Supreme court of New Brunswick when fined; whisky judges decided in their favor; the people appealed to the Supreme court of Canada which decided for the people; rummies appealed fo England and when the final decision against them was unanimous they combined to violate the law and fight every case with a leag fund for the purpose. An active war is being waged in various parts of Canada to enforce the Scott Act and stop the business of the crime and murder factories altogether.

LODGES, ETC.

President Arthur is not expected to visit California this season, so whisky will remain at the old price.

Bro. G. M. McWain writes that Boulder Creek Lodge had a fine turn out on the 17th. Bro. J. W. Webb made one of his best efforts seconded by Rev. W. Dennett and local talent; 22 additions to Lodge and a new Band of Hope were the spoils of the occasion.

O. N. Cadwell, a Good Templar, is candidate for Supervisor in first district of Santa Barbara Co. His card, "No campaign time or cash to spend and no one need apply for liquors or cigars." Now,if the other candidate offers cash or liquors or cigars for votes, he confesses his utter unfitness to be entrusted with any public duty.

A Worthy Candidate.—Under this heading the Lompoc Record very strongly commends the nomination of Elder J. W. Webb as the Republican candidate for Assemblyman. It says if nominated he will be triumphantly elected and will be an honest, useful, capable, industrious and faithful advocate and champion of the best interests of the people. And that is true. If the Republicans want to put good men on their ticket whom the people will trust and honor and elect voluntarily, without political whip or spur or bribe, Bro. Webb is an available candidate. But if they want a trickster who will sell out all his constituents before his nomination, he is not their man.

Atlanta, July 22, 1882.—The battle against rum has fairly commenced. The temperance forces are closing in upon the whisky leag from every quarter. There is a unifying of the temperance element as never before. Presbyterian Democrats in this county (San Joaquin) are disgusted with their party and will not vote that ticket. A leading Democrat in Stockton said: "I drink lots of whisky and dont keep the Sabbath, but I have children growing up,so I can't stand that plank and will vote with the Republicans if they will give us the right kind of a platform." There can be no compromise with rum and law-breakers and public demoralizers. The time has come when the choice must be made between the whisky ring and the gathering hosts of temperance and reform. A third party is alr ady looming up in the near future. The very best elements of all existing political parties are being rapidly segregated and only await the action of the Republican State Convention to determine whether to fuse with them or crystalize in a new third party of power that will sweep the state for prohibition and good government. We say to the party in power in the name of every Christian and true patriot, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve, if the Lord be God serve Him, if the devil, then serve him." J. W. Bluett.

Ed. Rescue:—Allow me to call the attention of your readers to the following extracts from the report of Coroner Weeks of San Francisco. He says, "there were 72 suicides during the year ending the 30th of June 1882, and the causes of self destruction were; pecuniary 19; love 5; physical suffering 2; Supposed disease 5; fear of punishment after crime 2; alcohol 24; unsound mind 7; temporary insanity 2; insanity 3; remorse of punishment 1; scolding from parent 1; unknown 1." Here are one-third of all the suicides induced by the use of alcohol, and yet the coroner only has this suggestion; "that the Pharmacy Act be Amended making it impossible for would be suicides to obtain poison without a prescription from a legal practitioner of medicine." Now no one probably in this community knows better than Dr. Weeks that science has conclusively proved that alcohol is simply and only a poison—that all of the best informed physicians in this country and in England unite in saying that alcohol being a poison, the sale of it ought to be confided to Druggists, and even then sold only on prescription as other poisons are, and yet Coroner Weeks only calls attention to the necessity of amending the Pharmacy Act—leaving the 3,000 "artists in human slauter," the saloon-men, to retail their poison unrestricted. The humanity and bravery of the suggestion that the Pharmacy Act should be amended is worthy of all admiration. B.

Temperance Excursion to San Diego.—Ed. Rescue:—On the 1st of August, Golden Rule Lodge, No. 263, will occupy the new and magnificent Hall of the Odd Fellows in this city, lately built and furnished at a cost of over $30,000. Shall have open lodge and public installation. Everyone invited. We propose to make the Good Templar work in this city the "toniest" thing out. All the good-looking girls belong and all the boys of sense and manliness. As for genius, why we are the very fountain and reservoir of that article in this part of the state. We believe that California is bound to soon fall in line with Kansas and Iowa—the agitation of the Sunday law in the state, tho it has led to temporary defeat in the enforcement of the law, has done these things. It has roused the law-abiding, opened the eyes of the laborer to the necessity of action by them to save their day of rest, forced the Churches to become militant, and under the combined influence of bad whisky and over confidence of certain Bourbons, precipitated the Democratic party upon the shoals of destruction. Let the Republicans now have courage to espouse the poor man's day of rest or they will go up the flume with the balance of the wreck of fossilized politicians. The only living issues to-day are Temperance and Woman Suffrage—synonymous terms—"Anti-Monopoly" talk is played out; there is nothing in it; not a sucker can be caught with that bait. I have been writing to the lodges at San Bernardino and Riverside, and to Bro. Gould at Los Angeles, to try and arrange a grand temperance excursion and demonstration at San Diego early in August, over the new Cal. S. R. R.; everyone in the state who loves temperance is invited. We want to start a wave here that will roll through the state with irresistible force and wash all the "jim-jam" statesmanship far out from our shores, never to return. Will keep you posted as to details. H.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died—July 13th, at San Bernardino, Brother Dr. James A. Rousseau, aged 70 years, a P. W. C. T. of San Bernardino Lodge No. 220, an earnest Christian, a most useful citizen and an active member of our Order, it having been planted in San Bernardino County thru his exertions and influence. His death was very sudden from paralysis from which he had suffered several times previously. He had just seated himself in his office to commence his daily duties when his head dropped and he was almost instantly lifeless. The local papers give the following particulars:

"Dr. James A. Rousseau was born in Wayne county, Kentucky, August 30, 1812, and was therefore 70 years old. He came to San Bernardino in 1864 from Marion county, Iowa, having held offices of public trust in the latter named place. He was elected County Surveyor for San Bernardino twice, and has occupied the highest positions in the Good Templar and Masonic Lodges. He was a Royal Arch Mason, the 7th degree in that fraternity. He was a cousin of General Rousseau of Civil War fame. In the whole history of San Bernardino there has been no other man who has held the same influence in educational matters, or devoted more time and study to the advancement of education. A very large procession headed by the Masonic and Good Templar Lodges, accompanied the remains of Dr. J. A. Rousseau to the grave. The services were conducted by Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, of the M. E. Church South, of which society deceased was a life member. The procession was led by the San Bernardino Cornet Band, playing funeral marches, and the string of carriages was perhaps the largest ever seen in San Bernardino. Dr. Rousseau was highly respected by all for his strict integrity and manly honor, and this respect was shown to-day in so many joining in the last sad rites. The Court House was closed and public business suspended."

The Lodge passed the usual ceremonials in respectful and appreciative memory of their lamented brother.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

SOUTH AMERICA.

A PLEASURE TRIP.

In the Republic of Colombia there is about the meanest system of roads that can be found anywhere. The frequent heavy rains are a serious obstacle to keeping roads in good order, and the soil is in many places very easily washed away.

From Tumaco on the sea coast, to Barbacoas inland, the distance is for a bird to fly only about 40 miles but it is nearly 100 by steamer and probably 80 by canoe and an isthmus of 3 miles which has to be crossed on foot. Barbacoas is the end of navigation on the Telembi river and it is a distributing and receiving center for the commerce between the sea coast and the far interior.

A steamer runs to Barbacoas and so does a numerous fleet of large canoes which carry as much as five tons some of them. But from Barbacoas to Tuquerres (that is pronounced just like our "took a race," the accent on the took) the commerce each way is carried on the backs of men and now and then of women.

And the road they have to travel is so rough and wild and difficult that it cannot be described in a manner to convey any idea of half its ugly features. It was used in the same way before the Spaniards came to America. Time was of course when the trail was on the surface but now the greater part of it, a distance of 90 miles, is worn down about 8 feet on an average. The wear of human feet for many centuries, aided by the daily drenching showers have cut down from 5 or 6 feet to more than 20 feet in some places. And it is like a long, deep ditch, seldom 2 feet wide on the bottom, often not more than 6 inches in spots. The loaded peons meeting each other, sometimes have abundant room to pass, but often have to squirm and tug and wish each other the worst of luck and call ugly names when they happen to collide in a narrow place.

Now and then the trail is on the surface because the old ditch has got obstructed and become impassable and a new path had to be opened. Where it is so deep the fallen trees and shrubs and growing vines and creepers of that tropical clime have closed over the top and made it very dark and dismal indeed.

There is no danger of losing one's way on this route; you cannot get lost—one has to climb to get out of the ditch, and then the creepers and "guascas" (waskas) are so intertwined that it is necessary to cut a trail with a machete to get away from the road.

Sometimes the road runs thru a dense forest, but generally along the mountain side; sometimes a zig zag up a high and rugged mountain and down the other side. Sometimes along a whales back on the summit of a precipitous spur binding two mountain chains together.

A few cattle come down from the interior by this road, a few pigs and sheep, but no mules or horses could venture. The cattle and sheep have frequently to be killed on the road to save them from dying themselves; some of them arrive almost skeletons and very lame and some die a day or two after arrival from the hardships of the travel, the steeps and slides and falls they meet with.

The spirited inhabitants of that country have had for more than 20 years an ambition to secure a road from Barbacoas to Tuquerres. They were moderate in their desires; they thot a railroad might be had sometime in the future, but they did not want it now, it would take two or three years of their whisky to meet the expenses of building a railroad. A wagon road they deemed was far ahead of the needs of the age, but they were unanimous on what they called an "ironshod road" which means one on which mules, horses or cattle could travel ironshod with loads on their backs. That was consistent progress as it seemed to them. Like the political temperance people they did not want to bring on ruin by improving too fast.

Active steps were taken for the prosecution of this road enterprise. Congress took it up; the revenues of several toll bridges and a portion of the receipts of one custom house were set apart for the purpose.

In a few years there was enough money to begin; a preliminary survey was made which cost about $15,000; and what could have been honestly performed for $500 was the only result and the money was all gone. After a few years more it was thot enough money had been collected to commence the road and they went to work and expended from $10,000 to $12,000, but no one has ever been able to find any road made, except for about half a mile out from Barbacoas which they worked at and made next to impassable ever since.

In 1878 a good deal of money had been collected and the old ambition had revived to get this road on the part of the people and an anxiety on the part of the politicians to get hold of that money. There did not seem to be anybody in the country that had any capacity to make a road or build a bridge and as the whole dependence was upon foreigners the writer was very strongly urged to go in for the project and make a road for the people. But it is now too late to begin the pleasure trip till next week.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS AID SOCIETY.

This is a most meritorious institution and one that has done a vast amount of good in affording protection and instruction for the friendless and helpless youth of the city, and finding them homes and employments which give them a propitious start in the race of life.

From the recent report June 30 1882 it appears the project was started in 1874. Mr. Alvinza Hayward donating $5,000 as a start. During the second year a Savings Bank, a sewing school and a temperance society were formed. The new building has cost $6,000 and is out of debt, but as it has a great work to do it is in need daily of the assistance of all good people.

The President says, "if your enterprise is to degrade (a rum-shop or den of crime) people come to you, but we must go out into the highways and compel them to come in. For want of a little timely help the children are in prisons, alms-houses and in the Industrial schools. They are along the wharves, at the depots, in the streets and alleys, and in the dens of vice and temptation everywhere to be seen in the heart of the city."

The children cared for at this institution would cost $592 a year each if placed in the industrial school, and without at all considering the noble moral results of this enterprise, but looking at it as one of the financial problems of our city management, there should be a competent provision by the city to enable this Aid society to give the widest scope to its reformatory and preventive benevolent agencies.

If the city charters 4,000 schools of vice and crime, whose only effect and aim is to deprave men and women, to desolate homes and fill the streets with orphaned, neglected and corrupted Arabs—it certainly is in duty bound to provide for the care of the waifs, whose homes it destroys, and it is infinitely cheaper to make use of the Aid society than of the industrial school and penitentiary, if the question of duty is denied.

This is a good opportunity for people desirous of investing in a richly paying enterprise. Read the following card of the society and call and see the institution for yourselves:

"The aim of the Society is to aid boys and girls in every way possible; to rescue homeless, neglected or abused children. It provides in its own quarters temporarily for such; furnishes homes and employment; maintains Reading Rooms, a Library, Baths, a Gymnasium, Classes for Instruction, Lectures and Entertainments, and encourages Industry. Frugality and the saving of earnings among its boys and girls. The work is free from sectarianism, and depends for support on voluntary subscriptions. Donations of money, books and clothing are solicited."

OCEAN STEAMERS.

The Guion Steamer Alaska an English iron propeller boat of great size and speed has crossed the Atlantic between Queenstown, Ireland, and Sandy Hook westward in 7 days, 1 hour and 50 minutes, and eastward in 6 days, 19½ hours. The distance is 2,830 nautical miles, or 3,225 railway miles. So she averages 19.17 railway miles an hour one way and 19.93 miles the other. One day she made 430 nautical miles, or 495 railway miles, an average of 20.6 an hour. Screw Steamers did not promise very well at first; when they became so improved as to make 7 knots an hour and that is but a few years ago, slow people thot that was about as fast as could be expected; yet now they have reached nearly 3 times that. Nautical miles are 60 to a degree of latitude or a degree of longitude on the equator and 60 nautical miles are equal to 69.08 railway or statute miles.

We thot it wonderfully quick when a Steamer first crossed the Atlantic in 14 days; now it is done in 7; wonder how it will be when our little folks of this week will be 50 or 60 years older.

IMPORTANT TO PALE YANKEE GIRLS.

An American girl comes to me with a cough, a dyspepsia, a weak spine, general debility, or any other affection. One of the first questions I ask, is this:

"What time do you retire?"

The answer generally is, "About eleven o'clock."

Invariably I say, "Now to begin with, I wish to know whether you can go to bed at nine o'clock? If not, I shall decline to prescribe for you, for no matter what the malady may be, I am satisfied you will not recover. The trouble may be shifted into some other form, but you will not regain your lost health and strength without a long nightly sleep at the right time, in a sweet, refreshing atmosphere."

The changes in the health of the girls at Lexington, was a surprise to me, even altho I had expected much, and I am sure that retiring at eight and a half o'clock had more to do with it than any other one influence.

A pale, thin Yankee girl will gain ten pounds in a year with this change alone, and she will, besides, look much younger, and enjoy a buoyancy and a spirit, the absence of which in young persons is painful.

"Will it not do to sleep in the morning to make up the needed number of hours?"

No, it will not; and I could give you reasons why the sleep of the morning cannot be substituted for that of the first of the night; but really is it necessary to argue that which the experience of the age has settled?—Ex.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

Tobacco.—A few days since my attention was called to an advertisement of the Duke of Durham tobacco, and the idea was so suggestive that it deserves mention here. It was a picture of a handsome room with elegant surroundings, a glowing fire in the grate, and seated in a luxurious chair, smoking a huge pipe, and blowing out the smoke with an air of satisfaction is a huge, black monkey! This was a happy thought on the part of the advertiser and so appropriate. Now there is no objection to apes smoking for they are not endowed with reason, but it does seem a foolish and wicked thing for rational and intelligent men to abuse their God-given powers by the habitual use of a poison; slowly, but surely sapping the foundations of health, and all because they enjoy it!

And the question which is to-day of utmost importance to the rising generation is this: Dear boys will you be men or monkeys? It is manly and manlike to stand up alone, if need be, and avoid the wrong and pursue the right, not because everybody else does it, but because it is right! Monkeys are always imitating others—with no power to consider what will be the result, but boys have the ability to reason and think, and when they smoke or drink, because they see others do so, they are developing the monkey at the expense of the man!—Don't do it, boys!

The first Temperance lecture ever delivered in California.—The gentleman who had the honor of delivering the above lecture recently related the circumstances to me, and every Band of Hope boy and girl should know the story.

In the year 1849 this gentleman, who by the way, is one of San Francisco's most esteemed citizens, was the consignee of the cargo of a vessel which lay at anchor at Washington, opposite the city of Sacramento. In the cargo was about twenty five gallons of good brandy, which had been shipped for medical purposes, but had not been used, and with the rest of the cargo, was offered for sale.

Before a purchaser appeared, it happened that a young man, of great promise, who was one of the crew, went to Sacramento for a frolic. He came back to the ship, drunk, and in trying to climb the rigging, missed his hold, fell into the river and was drowned, thus adding another to the long line of those whom alcohol has slain. Our friend, the consignee, was greatly distressed; he was attached to the young man and the cruel fact that his death was caused by the social glass, was a great blow to him. Soon after this sad occurrence, a man appeared and offered him $5.00 per gallon for the brandy; he was told to wait till next day for his answer, and the matter was studied over by our friend;—the result of his reflections was, that the next morning he ordered the cask of brandy brought on deck, stove in the head, and turned the brandy into the river, and then paid the $125.00 from his own pocket. Was not that a noble temperance lecture? It is deeds as well as words we want in this cause. A friend of temperance says: "Anybody can talk, but not everybody can do!" And our good friend Sister Stevens says, truly "Acts are prayers." This man worked in the temperance cause both by precept and example when it cost something. Now, let us take hold and not only talk, but work for temperance, even at the expense of our ease, and quiet. Let us have the true missionary spirit, which seeks to bring others into our Band. Each member of the Band of Hope can bring another and so our number will be increased, our Bands strengthened, and our cause march on to victory.

"Do not then stand idly waiting
For some greater work to do,
Fortune is a lazy goddess,
She may never come to you.
Go and toil in any vineyard,
Do not fear to do or dare,
If you want a field of labor,
You can find it anywhere."

A $100 LIBRARY FOR $4,50.

Many schools do not know that D. C. Cook has prepared a library of 156 choice Sunday-school books, in cheap but very durable form, at five cents each, or less. The same books bound in cloth, and on thicker paper, have hitherto been sold by other publishers at from $1 to $1.50 each. An assorted library of 100 books, which ordinarily would cost $100, well be sent post paid to any school for $4.50, or 50 books for $2.50. Each book is numbered, and contains a catalogue of all. A simple system of keeping a library, etc., is also furnished which costs but 1½ cents each, additional. A sample book and system mailed for 8 cents. Catalogue sent free upon application to David C. Cook, 46 Adams St. Chicago.

HE SWALLOWS A FARM.

The man who swallows a farm is always dry because he drinks too much. He is a loose fellow who frequently gets tight. He is no sooner up of a morning than he opens wide his mouth and begins to let his money run down his throat. A glass of beer costs more than five square yards of good farming land, and every time he takes beer he swallows five yards of land. Then, in consequence of drinking the beer; he wastes his time and makes bad trades, so that only a few years are necessary to consume a good farm, and still he goes on swallowing.

If you ask him how he is, he says he would be quite right if he could moisten his mouth. He is a walking barrel, a living drain-pipe, a moving swill-tub.

They say, "loath to begin and loath to leave off," but he never needs persuading to begin; and as to ending—that is out of the question while he can borrow a nickle. He will never be hanged for leaving his drink behind him. He drinks in season and out of season. In summer because he is hot, and in winter because he is cold. A drop of beer never comes too soon, and he would get up in the middle of the night for more, only he goes to bed tipsy. Water is this gentleman's abhorrence, whether used inside or out, but most of all he dreads it taken inwardly, except with spirits, and then the less the better. He says that the pump would kill him, but he never gives it a chance, and he will never die through the badness of the water from the well. It is a pity that he does not run the risk. Drinking cold water neither makes a man sick nor in debt, nor his wife a widow; but this fine ale of his will do all this for him—make him worse than a beast while he lives, and wash him away to his grave before his time. They say that drunkenness makes some men fools, some beasts, and some devils; but according to my mind it makes all men fools, whatever else it does. Certain neighbors of mine laugh at me for being a teetotaler, and I might well laugh at them for being drunk, only I feel more inclined to cry that they should be such fools. Oh that we could get them sober, and then perhaps we might make men out of them! We smile at a tipsy man because he is a ridiculous creature; but when we see how he is ruined, body and soul, it is no joking matter. How solemn is the truth, that "No drunkard shall inherit eternal life."

Solomon says the glutton and the drunkard shall come to poverty, and that the drinker does in time. He gets more and more down at the heel, and as his nose gets redder, and his body is more swollen, he gets to be more of a shack and more of a shark.

His trade is gone and his credit is run out; but he still manages to get his beer.

Now, if we try to do anything to shut up a boozing house for guzzling, we are called all sorts of bad names, and the wind up of it all is, "What! rob a poor man of his beer?" The fact is that they rob a poor man by his beer. The ale-jug robs the board and the table, starves the wife, and strips the children. It is a great thief, housebreaker, and the best possible thing is to break it to pieces, or keep it on the shelf bottom upwards.—John Ploughman.

LAST LINES OF LORD MACAULEY.

The other day we came across the following riddle in an exchange. We have puzzled over it, given it to all our friends, and hunted for the answer in vain. Now we will give it to our fireside group, hoping that some of them will be bright enough to guess the answer, or lucky enough to find it:—Signal.

Come, let us look at it closely,
'Tis a very ugly word,
And one that makes us shudder
Whenever it is heard.

It mayn't be always wicked,
It must be always sad;
And speaks of sin and suffering
Enough to make one mad.

They say it is a compound word,
And that is very true:
And then they decompose it,
Which of course they are free to do:

If of the dozen letters,
We take off the first three,
We have the nine remaining,
As sad as they can be.

For though it seems to make it less,
In fact, it makes it more;
For it takes the brute creation in
Which was left out before.

Let's try if we can't mend it,
'Tis possible we may,
If only we divide it
In some new-fashioned way.

Instead of three and nine.
Let's make it four and eight;
You say it makes no difference,
At least not very great.

But only see the consequence,
That's all that need be done,
To change this mass of sadness
To unmitigated fun.

It clears off swords and pistols,
Revolvers, bowie-knives.
And all the horrid weapons
By which men lose their lives.

It awakens holier voices;
And now, joyfully is heard
The native sound of gladness
Compressed into one word.

Yes, four and eight, my friends,
Let that be yours and mine,
Though the whole host of demons
Delight in three and nine.

[Try this, it is quite easy, and a very good one indeed. For first correct answer before the 15th of August, one copy of the RESCUE will be sent to any address one year.]

HANS.

Hans was at work again. This time his father had broken his leg.

Hans was not above shoe-making. In fact he meant some day to have a shoe business of his own. The other week he had been thru a shoe factory and had seen all the various parts of the work, from the stamping out of the soles, to the packing in boxes for the shoe dealer. He had also been shown thru the manufacturer's new house, and had admired his conservatory, rich carpets, and beautiful pictures. And that man had once been as poor as his own father!

"How did you do it?" Hans had asked.

"Put my mind right to that one thing. I did my work well. If I saw a chance to make a piece of work prettier than common, I did so. My employer noticed it. I rose from one position to another till, at last, I was taken into partnership, and now I own the whole."

Hans liked shoe-making. He liked to hammer away at a piece of sole leather; and he longed for the chance to turn out dainty boots and shoes. He had also an idea of an improvement which he meant to work out and patent some day. Then he would become rich and his mother should have a beautiful home. All day long he worked right heartily, and his thots kept time to his awl, and his wax-end, and his hammer.

Meantime Hans Fleichman, the father, moved restlessly on his bed. His cheek flushed as he thot of his fifteen-year-old boy doing his work and supporting the family while he was lying idle here by his own fault. He could not blame the curbstone over which he had stumbled. He made an estimate on what he had spent on beer in his life. He was astonished at the amount. They might have owned their own little home by this time, and have been so comfortable. He would warn Hans against the vice.

Poor Hans Fleichman! he sighed wearily. It was too late to make his life over now. But he would warn his son. So when young Hans came up to see him that night, he said to him in his broken English:

"My son, I tell you vat I dinks dis day, as I lie here on mine bed. I dinks I might have been von rich man iff I had not mine money spent on der beer. Und, Hans, I vants you to gif me von promise, vat you vill nefer drink der lager more."

"Ho, ho! father!" laughed Hans, who had learned English better than his father, being but a child when he landed in the new world. "Ha! Ha! You remind me of Rip Van Winkle! Why don't you swear off yourself?"

"Too late! I lofes der beer," said the old man sadly. "But I would lofe to see mine noble boy safe vrom der temptation."

"But, father," returned Hans, "I am in no danger! I don't take more than a glass a day, and that with my dinner."

"And haf you no desire for more dan de von glass? Tell me, Hans?"

A sudden crimson leaped to the boy's brow and he hastily left the room.

But next day Hans questioned himself as he worked. Was a temptation creeping upon him unaware? And was it going to stand between him and all future uplifting?

He made an estimate of what lager and cigars would cost him in a life time. The boy was a good arithmetician, but he was surprised at the result of his computation. When he put his work away for the night, his mind was fully made up. He would touch neither lager nor cigars again. He would help his father to reform too.

It was harder work than he had thought, even for himself, but much more for his father, whose will was weakened, and whose nervous system cried out for the accustomed stimulus.

It needed long months of patience, and constant watchfulness against the temper, and a gradual building up of the system before Hans dared leave his father alone. But then came help from the Great Helper for both, and gradually the son felt that he could relax his watchfulness.

One day in the summer following, Hans heard a voice call after him in the street. It was the shoe manufacturer.

"You are the young man that took such an interest in my factory?" he inquired as Hans turned; and when he answered: "yes," the man added:

"I want a cutter. But I must have a man who does not drink. Do you? I can't afford to have my leather cut badly or carelessly."

"I don't drink," said he.

"Then you may have the place."

That was the first rung of the ladder up to fortune for Hans.—Joy Vetrepont, in the Royal Road.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE BUSINESS OF THE CITY.

The business men of San Francisco are invited to help circulate the Rescue in this city. It is the only journal which makes war with the great enemy of every honest business, the grog-shops and beer-dives which are pauperizing the general public; robbing honest trade of its patronage; making the working-men, who are the mainstay of the merchant's custom, unable to buy anything but beer and tobacco; filling the jails and courts and asylums and the industrial school with paupers and criminals to be supported by the honest tax-payers—whereas, but for the grog-shop and beer-dens, every one of these criminals, tramps, paupers, idlers, drunkards and hoodlums might have been not only supporting themselves but good citizens, adding thousands of dollars a month to the trade and custom of our honest business and thousands to the wealth and property of the city and state.

The Rescue is the only journal which tells the whole truth about these

PAUPER-MILLS

Which make their living solely by robbing and poisoning the people; ruining our labor; making white labor drunken and unreliable; opening the door wide for Chinamen to do the work of the men and boys whom they render unfit for work.

The Rescue proposes to tell the truth about these dens and schools of crime and pauperism and to drive their proprietors into an honest, wholesome business, for which we shall not need every year more policemen, more jails, more mad-houses, more graveyards.

QUESTIONS FOR BUSINESS MEN.

How many families of the men who are regular customers of the grogshop buy a bill of dry goods and pay for it like the family of a sober working man?

How many saloon customers pay their rent regularly and cheerfully?

How many of them can pay half the rental that a sober man can afford for his family?

How much does your individual trade profit yearly by the custom of 10,000 of the men whom the saloon or beer-den has debauched?

How many million grog-shop slaves would it take to provide one meal a day for a dry goods house like Murphy, Grant & Co.'s?

How many thousand of the saloon graduates does it take to buy one yard of carpeting in ten years?

How many of their customers do the beer-dens and snake-dives of Kearny and Montgomery and other streets in San Francisco send in a year to Taber's and Bradley & Rulofson to get their photographs? wont Mr. Taber please figure up and report when he gets enough to count one?

How many regular customers of a corner or other whisky grocery in a year, buy an album or a picture or half a dozen cups and saucers or a whole calico dress or a suit of clothes, or contribute a cent a year of their custom to any other but the rum-seller and pauper-grinder.

How many people do the men who sell books or bread or soap or photographs or coats or dresses or hats or boots or carpets send to the penitentiary and asylum and suicide every year? Did you ever know know them to send one?

How many do the grog-shops and poison-schools send there a year?

Does it help the business and property of San Francisco to have 4000 or 5000 pauper-mills and thief-schools (the leag of Freedom) plundering 25 million a year from the people that should be used to patronize honest trade and industry?

Would it not be better for business to have 25 millions of property burned up every year, than have the saloons spoil that much trade and triple our taxes and kill our people by thousands and make it their sole business to debauch and plunder the people and do no good whatever?

The Rescue asks the business men to help dry up the beggar factories and thief-mills and Sunday murder-schools so that $60,000 a day wasted upon them may be employed to help honest trade and industry and to teach and help our people to be good citizens. Make the pauper-mill go and the Chinese will go without driving.

GOOD BUSINESS TACTICS.

The citizens of San Francisco are invited to examine the enriching processes which are in vogue in the city; a fair sample of our industries and business enterprise are here exhibited in the occupations on both sides of a street in one business block.

It is evident that Chinese cheap labor is ruining that entire block, is it not? only fifteen drunkeries can get a living there and 8 or 10 more close by at the ends of the block.

There are some streets in the city where there is a somewhat larger proportion of shoe shops and stores and a smaller proportion of drunkery and deadfall. But there are many more where there is a good deal more deadfall and paupermill and less decent stores or occupations.

If there is any politician, statesman, journalist, doctor, preacher, lawyer, saint or sinner, judge or jailer, philosopher or prophet who can figure out anything but wholesale damnation, moral, physical, financial, religious, social, individual and general for a city, of whose industries and occupations that street shows a fair sample, he will display a wondrous talent and originality. The word applied above to indicate the condition is coarse, but it is the only appropriate one and is not used in a profane sense.

It inspires a lofty veneration for the leading patriots of the daily press of San Francisco that not one of them ever dares to utter a word indicating an editorial opinion that the dirtiest and vilest of these thief-den keepers are not thoroly respectable citizens and the honest peers of our highest types of manhood and patriotism. But they are brave when the Chinese are in question who don't subscribe for a daily.

DECADENCE.

Cheap John.—Under this heading the Rescue by far the strongest temperance paper we receive from America, has had a series of articles dealing with the decadence of Good Templary. The editor has given much attention to the subject, and as he is a thorough Good Templar he writes with earnestness. He points out how in State after State the attempt to have the Order "run cheaply" was followed without exception by lessened interest, lessened effort, and gradually dwindling members. Here is the conclusion of the whole matter, and it suggests a lesson that all will do well to lay to heart. The moment the Good Templars began to be a power anywhere, cheap johns have made an instant raid on the treasury, and wherever they succeeded, the Order has since been little better than a stumbling block and an obstacle which would do nothing for temperance itself, nor allow any one else. A little gang of them have made our great Order a sieve through which many millions have passed, and not half a million remain." —Glasgow Good Templar.

There is no denying the fact that there has been a lamentable downward progress and a more lamentable lethargy and inactivity and decadence in a large majority of our I. O. G. T. jurisdictions on this continent for a number of years past. And there comes no better report from abroad. The Order is good enough, its principles are good enough, its advocates and writers and speakers and membership are good enough for anything, and able to do anything but the one impossibility of running a costly reform without the employment of any capital.

That fatal mistake has rendered comparatively powerless and entirely defeated the main purposes of a society which had given into its keeping the grandest of all missions, to rid the Christian world of its bondage to rum and Satan. The men and women who enrolled themselves under its banners have always been (a large proportion of its first and foremost people at least) the most patriotic, conscientious, unselfish, benevolent and generous of their race. There was but one way to defeat or retard the progress of such an army of earnest spirits engaged in a cause of so much importance to humanity, whose purposes were all good and which aimed to harm no interest or individual in all the world; only one way to blockade their march, and Satan at once saw it. What can an army do without supplies? said he, and he sent an Ahithopel counselor into every camp and had the supplies cut off.

But he did not succeed in California; cheap john was here; but he was always forced to retreat; he never had much more than his own vote and at his last appearance he was ashamed to record that. Few states or countries, if any, have labored under greater disabilities and obstacles and with less favoring circumstances than California and yet this jurisdiction has always kept gaining right along, constantly adding new fields, new enterprises, new departments of labor, assuming every year greater financial burdens and every year meeting them with greater ease and less friction.

FAILURES.

New York, Pennsylvania, Maine, Ohio, Michigan, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois have all had much better facilities and opportunities and capabilities for pushing the Order than California, but they neglected the one great provision, which more than all else was absolutely necessary to success, a financial system and a treasury adapted to their work. Had they adopted our system of finance from the first and adhered to it, there can be no reasonable dout that they would have had a constantly increasing accession to their ranks, would now have had 1½ or 2 million members and would have carried prohibition in all their borders.

But their finances were just adapted in subordinate lodge to pay rent and fire and light in good times with the aid of donations from liberal members, and in the Grand Lodges the treasury was carefully limited to pay a starvation salary to a G. W. S. and a printing bill for an annual report of the decadence of the Order.

If an adventureous G. W. C. T. happened at times to be elected and he tried to put an organizer or lecturer in the field, to help run a temperance paper or circulate a few tracts, a ruinous Grand Lodge debt was incurred: cheap john turned things topsy turvy next session; kicked out that wicked G. W. C. T. and the progressive G. W. S. who were guilty of trying to do something to advance the cause; elected retrenchers in their place and hung that millstone of a debt around the neck of the Order, and all future misfortunes that cheap john inflicted were affectionately inscribed on the epitaph of that reckless G. W. C. T. that was so mad as to want to "go forward." The Proceedings of the G. L. of Maine April 1882 have just come to hand; 24th annual session. 4 Lodges lost and 3 members gained in a year; present number 287 Lodges 16,130 members against 24,000 a few years ago. Total receipts for the year, capita tax $2,960, supplies $201. Salary of G. W. S.

MAINE

$600. D. and S. Deputies expenses $200. G. W. C. T. and lecture service $250. Instituting new lodges $298.

Now the people, the men and the women of Maine are as capable, as good managers, as good financiers, as good temperance people and as good people in every department of excellence as the sun ever shines on in this world. No State probably but Maine in all the world could run a Grand Lodge for more than a year on a 5 cent capita tax. California could not do it half a year. Maine has had a Grand Lodge 24 years and has been running down of late on a 5 cent capita tax and is making a failure, simply because even Maine cannot build a 1000 ton ship out of one cartload of deckplank. But with five times their present tax they could lead the world and there is no reason at all why they should not. They had better make it 50 cts., or $1.00 a quarter than let whisky still maintain its fight in the State. The G. W. C. T. says in his report that he and his deputies and the Supt. of J. T. have been obliged to almost suspend work for six months for want of funds. And after all the G. W. S. wonders why they have so many dead lodges every year. Verily it is a marvel that the Maine Order survives; it would present a much pleasanter marvel of glorious progress if it would adopt the secret of California's success and set up a rational system of finance. Next week reference will be made to Australia.

LOOKING BACKWARD AND FORWARD.

Some years ago a Legislature was elected in this State on an anti-railroad basis; the fact that the Governor was a pronounced anti-railroad man did not in the least enable the people to make an inch of headway against that company so powerfully fortified in substantial resources.

If Gen. Stoneman should now be elected, his being ever so firm an adherent of the people as against the monopoly will avail so little that the company can very well afford to let the people have him and all he can do for them as Governor with a pro-railroad administration and legislature which will be elected if he is.

But there is another thing the people who vote for or against Gen. Stoneman may be assured of. He will certainly, if elected, veto any Sunday law, any act that seeks to restrict or abolish free trade in crime or that shall oppose the substitution of European paganism and barbarism for American civilization, for he is a high up member of a monopoly or confederation rather of monopolists who are a thousand times more rapacious and destructive than the railroad tyranny, and therefore his election under any circumstances, were he in all other respects of an angelic excellence, would be a formidable calamity to every reputable interest of the State. That is enough to say against his election. The attempts made by Republican journals to injure his canvass by ridiculing his war record or any other record of his, except his being a wholesale drunkard-maker and an enemy of the Sunday and of the people's right to vote upon their own domestic institutions and his being a champion of the Leag of Fiendom are puerile and disreputable.

JUDGES.

But it should be remembered that when that legislature was elected, a Judge of the Supreme Court was also elected, and his being placed in that office was perhaps the greatest calamity to the morals and finances of this State that has ever befallen it. It so happened that in his hands was placed a power for good or evil ten thousand times beyond that of the Governor.

The latter, altho a wholesale liquor seller, was not pledged to vote for free rum and free crime and no Sunday and he honestly and honorably signed and approved the local option law, which would have saved the State in a few years enough to have purchased every mile of railroad we have. But the Judge, who held one of the most sacred of all trusts and had the power to confirm that most excellent safeguard of the people's rights and properties—in the face of all precedent to the contrary, in the face of justice and humanity and to the infinite disgust of all good people, defeated the law upon the ground of one of the meanest and most frivolous and most contemptible of technicalities.

The Post of that day said very aptly that the majority of the court had affirmed in their decision that the legislature could properly pass a law, empowering San Francisco or any other town or district "to tax dogs next winter provided it rained," but they could not "to tax dogs" provided the people "so decided by a majority vote."

A COSTLY ERROR.

It was affirmed by many people that under that decision which declared that the rum-sellers were altogether above any law which the people could make, every act under which a tax was voted by by the people for schools, roads, etc., was virtually upset. And but for that most cruel and ruinous and unparalleled decision, the local option law would have before this covered the whole state of California or a completely prohibitory law would have succeeded it, and we should have had the State many hundreds of millions richer; its population would probably have been doubled and tens of thousands saved of those slain and pauperized and driven to crime and madness and death by that one majority of a Supreme Court.

That fatal error of electing along with an anti-railroad Governor, a Judge who could override the will of the people and of the legislature and make the Supreme Court, the servant of the groggeries of the State, and upset the most beneficent and just law that was ever put on a statute book—has cost the State hundreds of millions of dollars, kept out hundreds of thousands of good settlers, retarded the progress of the State and country, caused thousands of murders, suicides and untimely deaths, ruined homes without number, deluged the land with crime and pauperism and general ruin; did more harm than the railroad company could do in 40 years if they were allowed to double up all their exactions and extortions and crimes.

The people did not know what they were doing then, but they know now that they will soon have an opportunity of voting for or against candidates for the Supreme Court, who have already declared themselves enemies of American institutions and friends of free crime, no Sunday, no rest or liberty for the working man, and who have already officially announced that the people can have no rights which any rumseller should be asked to respect.

WHAT IS WANTED.

Questions are asked as to what would satisfy the temperance people of the State in a political platform for the coming campaign. The RESCUE has not been authorized to give an answer, but it can give a pretty accurate estimate of what the people of this State most interested in its welfare and in the uprooting of the crime dens—desire and what will be the least that can prevent their nominating a separate ticket.

The first thing necessary is to give the people an opportunity to avail themselves of their right to remove by a local option law the incubus of the grogshop where they can do so. As a local option law is at best a temporizing and partially effective measure, they desire that a constitutional amendment prohibiting the liquor traffic entirely in the State, shall be submitted to the people. And they insist emphatically not only on the maintenance of the Sunday law but on its being amended so as to make it easy and simple of enforcement.

It is a little singular that about every Republican temperance man believes that to put square, bold, manly planks to the above effect in the coming platform would secure the triumph of the party. And every drinking barroom Republican believes it would kill the party. As singularly every Democratic temperance man (and a good many not Democrats too) believe such a platform if adopted, would have carried the Democrats to undouted victory. But the barroom Democrats every one thot the leag of Shetzel & Co's. platform would get most votes, and they hoisted the devils flag accordingly.

In Maine, Kansas, Vermont, Iowa—where the Republicans have gone square for prohibition they have triumphed. Where they have sot the beer-dive vote and the decent vote both, they have been worsted or barely held their ground because the Democrats did a little worse.

In N. Carolina the Republicans are under the flag ot Antichrist and they will be discomfited because the Democrats are there the clean and decent party. In California if the counsels of their better men prevail in the Republican ranks, and honest men are nominated on an honest antigrogshop platform, that party will have the easiest triumph ever secured in the State, because the Democratic platform has been made the very best and easiest to court defeat.

If the counsels of the barkeepers and saloon henchmen are heedod, the Republican party will be very likely this fall to go into hyberntion quarters, which only the trump of Gabrial will arouse.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

The Chicago Tribune says this organization has the following provisions in its constitution as learned from one of its leading representatives:

"We look upon arbitration and co-operation as furnishing the best remedies for the evils which afflict the laboring class.

"Our objects are to educate and organize labor. Every man who works for his living, whether with his hands or his brain, is eligible to membership. We debar doctors, lawyers, speculators, members of co-operations, and dealers in whisky from membership. The prohibition against physicians dates back to the time when the organization was oath-bound and secret, and will, I have no dout, be removed at the next meeting of the General Assembly.

"WE CONSIDER THE RUMSELLER AS THE GREAT BANE OF THE WORKINGMAN AND NO PERSON IN ANY WAY INTERESTED IN THE MANUFACTURE OR SALE OF WHISKY CAN BECOME A MEMBER."

That sounds like about the first society of working men, that have ever organized on a consistent basis for their own benefit. In most places such Societies and Unions have been mere traps to enable either the politician or the loafer along with the rumseller every time to make an easy prey of the workmens wages and their votes.

In England most frequently the weekly meetings of the various Unions or Societies are held in a grogshop, that has a commodious room for the purpose, and the good generous philanthropist who runs the gin into the membership, generally acts as Secretary for them gratis. He is not at all selfish with them; he does their writing and keeps the accounts and as all the money they earn, save the smallest pittance for an occasional loaf of bread—is spent in his beer and rum, he dont charge anything for being Secretary. He is like the man who did not want his friend to will any property to him, all he wanted was to be executor of the estate.

And it has been little better in this country. As in other places the meetings of the Unions have been too often simply drunken frolics and men have been made drunkards by them a hundred times where one has derived any real benefit from them.

A political party or a society of working men of any description, that dont lay down the principle in large letters that THE RUMSELLER IS THE GREAT BANE AND CURSE AND ROBRER OF THE WORKING MAN, might better sell themselves to the railroad corporation or any other corporation or Claus Spreckles or the six companies and be their peons. Better a thousand times than permit the saloon-thief and beer-thief to own and brand them and starve them and send them to poor house and prison and death like droves of helpless sheep.

It is a pleasure to commend a rational and sensible organization of workers that some fellow will not be able to sacrafice himself on its alter of patriotism and offer inside of six weeks to the highest bidder per scalp among the purchasers of the Republican and Democratic vote brokers.

REV. C. T. WHITMORE states in the London Christian, that of 20 infidel lecturers and writers that have been prominent in the last 30 years, 16 have abandoned their infidelity and openly professed their faith in Christianity.

SHAFERISM IN ENGLAND.

The Bishop of Lincoln (England) sometime ago made a silly utterance on the relation of temperance to scriptural injunction, just as any other scholar or philosopher is very apt to do when he gives an impromptu opinion on a subject to which he has never given a moment's study, and of which he knows absolutely nothing. After the manner of the learned college graduate who was made President of an agricultural society, and desiring to experiment on turnips in his own garden, sliced them up as they do potatoes and planted them.

But the Bishop was at once canonized by the whisky-thieves and wife-beaters' co-operative association of England, and some friend of the Bishop surprised him by sending the following placard, which the English Shafers have stuck up in the grog-shops:

"[Enclosure.] Teetotalism—What is it?

The Bishop of Lincoln says:—The temperance pledge is not Scriptural; it undermines the Godhead of Christ, and he who takes the pledge and breaks it, weakens the bonds of society. Tender consciences fear to break it; thus often sacrifice their health and entail a burden of grief on others. Timothy, a water-drinker, was advised by St. Paul to use a little wine for his stomach's sake; and if he had signed the temperance pledge, he would have declined to break it, and thus have injured his health, and inflicted a damage on the cause of truth. The pledge is unscriptural and heretical, and it is a deadly sin for Christians to sign it, inasmuch as it leads to lying and disregard of truth, and tends to raise up a generation of hypocrites. Intemperance prevailed at the time of Christ, and if the temperance pledge had been the best remedy and the only one, the apostles would have commended it. Teetotalism should be supported by the Liberals, as it is a despotic policy, binding them down from, and robbing them of their freedom of action. The same men who lend their aid to temperance would destroy our National Church, back up despotic Russia in dividing Turkey in the same way as Poland was divided, and finish by establishing a Liberal despotism!"

To which the Bishop replies as follows:

"Peterhouse Lodge, Cambridge, May 22, 1882.

Sir—You are quite at liberty to state that no such words as are ascribed to me in the placard sent by you were ever used by me. I send you a pastoral, which I have just issued, on behalf of temperance and purity. (Signed) Lincoln."

Verily, the reverence manifested by the cutpurses for the orthodox faith, and for St. Paul and Timothy, and "our National Church" and the "Godhead of Christ," is to be admired. They will be asking for martyrdom some of these days, and their request should be promptly granted.

LIFE INSURANCE.

Ed. Rescue:—While at a small neighboring town a few nights since, a lodge of A. O. U. W. was organized with 30 charter members. I made some enquiries of the examining physician who is also a member, and I find that it costs $10 to join and some $15 a year assessments. On this coast there are 14,000 members and increasing rapidly. In the town I speak of, is a flourishing Good Templars Lodge, but no member insured in the Mutual Aid.

The question is forced upon us, what is the matter with our Mutual Aid?

It costs only about half as much to insure in this as in the A. O. U. W., and yet but very few have taken out policies.

I can see but one reason, and that is the objectionable clause, that insurance ceases when membership in the order ceases. The published report of the G. W. S. shows that about two thirds of the members of the Order lose their membership on an average, year after year.

There is not that feeling of permanency of membership in Temperance societies that there is in the Masonic or Odd Fellows orders. Membership costs but little, and people join on the impulse of the moment and drop out about as easily.

When a person takes out a policy on his life, he wants to feel that there is a large degree of stability and permanency about it, and that it is not based on contingencies so uncertain, and over which he has so little control.

It is true he can get an effective card if his lodge goes down, or if he removes to a locality where there is no lodge, but that is virtually paying six dollars a year more for his policy, which about doubles the expense.

I can see no objection or difficulty in changing that clause and only require the insured to continue a total abstainer. James Morse.

Guadalupe, July 11, 1882..

[The action of the R. W. G. L. at last session makes a clearance card good for all time and perhaps that will close up the gap which has such a menacing aspect for Bro. Morse.—Ed.]

THE GERMANS OF IOWA.

The vicious system of the still, the brewery and the saloon are practically enslaving a large portion of the best citizens of America. These woful effects must and will soon destroy this country, State and Nation. Gladstone, of England, has been obliged to warn his people against the evils of the liquor traffic, and now, for a home reference, read what has been done and what the Emperor of Germany, in his late address to the Parliament, says upon the subject, as copied from the Christian Advocate.

"And now comes a cry of distress from Germany, the land of wine and lager, a cry of alarm at the increase in drunkenness. The advocates of light wine and beer as substitutes for rum and whisky have for years pointed to Germany as an illustration. The advocates of the free sale of beer and ale have pointed to the same example. But now the Nation publishes a Berlin letter upon the alarming increase of intemperance, and the use of alcoholic drinks in place of or in addition to beer. Belgium has, since 1840, more than doubled the use of alcohol, and, in the industrial counties, has a dram shop to every seven persons. In Germany the dram snops increased in two years 12,261—about ten per cent. The Emperor of Germany, in his late address to his Parliament, called attention to the serious increase of crimes and misdemeanors committed by men in a state of drunkenness, and Parliament has sought to limit the number of licensed dram shops. One great difficulty in the way is the fact that the Prussian aristocracy have a monopoly in distilling whisky. All the same it is apparent that wine and beer are not preventatives of drunkenness. Rather, they awaken and stimulate the appetite for stronger drinks. We commend these facts, coming as they do from a source not under suspicion of special favor for total abstinence, to those good men who defend moderate drinking, and especially the drinking of wines and beer. It may be suggestive, also, to the cider-drinkers."—Northwestern News.

A NOBLE EXAMPLE.

An earnest temperance worker, a resident of Philadelphia but now sojourning in Santa Barbara, my friend Horace J. Smith who is doing more for the cause of temperance than I am now at liberty to state, recently read me an extract from a letter of his brother's, R. P. Smith, a wealthy manufacturer of Philadelphia. It was to the effect that he had just heard a lecture by a Methodist preacher on the Constitutionality of Prohibition, and so impressed was he (Mr. S.) with the permanent, good work that can be done in temperance that he resolves to give $5000 per year in that direction. With a few of his ability and disposition and thousands of others willing to do financially what they reasonably can, what a revolution could soon be affected! J. W. Webb.

A use for potatoes has been at last discovered. By a new process they are being made into meersham pipes. Big industry for Cal. If Sonoma Co., can raise ten million dollars worth of potato pipes a year and the people of San Francisco smoke them, it will make an enormous addition to the wealth of the State; equal to the wine interest. Some of the doctors will find too that there is a great deal of wholesome nourishment derived from smoking a potato meersham. Potatoes are very nourishing.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the Rescue will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

Two Divisions, A and B. Benefits in A, $1,000; in B, $2,000. Entrance fee in A, $4; in B, $5. A member of one joining the other pays half fee; under 49 eligible to both.

Classes: 1st, 20 to 29 yrs; 2d, 30 to 39; 3d, 40 to 48; 4th, 49 to 55; 5th, 56 and upwards.

Assessments. On the death of a member each member of his division shall be assessed, 1st class, 75c; 2d, 90c; 3d, $1.15; 4th, $1.40; 5th, $1.70.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank, S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

E. H. BOSCHER, Druggist,

DONT WAIT.

Our readers need not wait till they have $1,000 to spare, or even $100, to send for goods to H. A. Smith's Cash Grocery, advertised in another colum of this paper, but send for what you need or can spare the money for, if only $10 or less, and it will surely pay you, and that you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have knocked at least one pin from under the whisky fabric which is struggling and striving for supremacy over every thing that is good or that opposes its rule in this beautiful land.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

A Radical Cure for Intemperance!

PARKER'S

SALVATION POWDERS!

HOPE FOR THE INEBRIATE.

ALL CAN BE SAVED FROM THE TERRIBLE APPETITE FOR INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Now is the time! Hear it! wives, mothers and daughters, who are trying to reclaim a loved one. Hear it! young man, in whom an appetite for alcoholic stimulants is beginning its ravaging power. Hear it! moderate drinker, rushing headlong to moral and social degradation. Hear it! wretched fallen man, enslaved, lost in your love for strong drink. Hear it! you who would save your fellow-man from filling a drunkard's grave. Let it be known through the length and breadth of our land that a safe, sure, and radical cure for drunkenness and the love or desire for intoxicating liquors has been discovered, perfectly effective in its action, and of so harmless a nature that a very frail person or a child can take it with impunity. Alcohol is a powerful poison! Its action on the mucus membrane, or coating of the stomach, is similar to that of the most virulent poisons known to the Medical Science; such as Strychnine, Arsenic, Prussic Acid, etc. The same unhealthy change results from the use of Alcoholic stimulants, as when those posions are introduced into the system. An unnatural gnawing, or hankering, an insatiable desire, an unsatisfied thirst is produced, which this remedy counteracts and removes, changing the stomach from a diseased to a healthy, natural condition, and at the same time rendering alcoholic drinks unpalatable and positively loathsome to the most inveterate drinker.

This remedy was discovered over twenty-five years ago, by a well-known Physician of New York, and has been prescribed by him in his private practice in thousands of cases with unparalleled success. Parker's Salvation Powders are inodorous, tasteless, and colorless, consequently can be given without the knowledge of the patient, in coffee, tea, beer, or any other beverage, while they invariably produce in him a distaste and loathing for Alcoholic stimulants, and thus work a complete destruction of all desire for intoxicating liquors. It is sometimes advisable to give two of Dr. Parker's Indian Liver Pills. at bed time, to clean out the system. Perseverance in giving these Powders will surely emancipate the enslaved victim of diseased appetite. Many have testified to their astonishing efficacy in rescuing themselves or their friends from the horrible bondage which has dragged them down to the very verge of despair. To give general publicity to their names, would be an obvious breach of that honorable confidence which the physician owes to his patient.

HOW MUCH WE ARE LOSEING.

Hon. J. B. Grinnell is the man to whom Horace Greely wrote "go west, young man, go west" and he did go west; purchased a large tract of land and laid out the city of Grinnell in Iowa; he determined that no intoxicating liquor should be sold. Now hear what he says. "I may say that not one drop of ardent spirits has ever been sold on that tract of land; I began three miles away from any house and three years ago we had our quarter centenial celebration (25 years); then no fire had desolated a human habitation; no man had found his way to the poor house; not one had gone to jail and not one to the state prison. I happened to be Mayor of the city for the last two years: I will say there was only one person brought before me and fined for drunkenness. During the campaign which has just closed we were made a special point of attack by the enemies of temperance. Money was sent there by transient persons who had no visible means of support but they could not demoralize our people."

PEOPLE OF SAN FRANCISCO

Just think of it—reflect upon it; turn it over and over in your mind; and try to realize the fact that a city twenty-five years old, had no fires; no use for a poor house or jail; no house of correction; no fighting and a strict observance of the Sabbath day; they are healthy and prosperous. Why? because whisky-saloons beer-parlors, and dives are not permitted to locate there. Compare your city with this; you have 5,000 drinking places; fifteen courts: a penitentiary with 1,500 convicting; a house of correction and two or three jails always full, costing the city millions of dollars. All on account of whisky. And yet fifteen hundred men set themselves up in defiance of every principle of morality and against the law; saying we will not obey the mandates of your courts; we will poison your children; take the poor man's money he has made during the week; let his wife and children suffer for food and clothes, make them beggars to gratify the unholy passions of a drunken father. O how long must we sleep over this slumbering volcano, before it will burst forth its lava of destruction and punish the enemies of the people. Vengeance is mine saith the Lord; but it is so slow coming; the crop will all dry up for want of rain.

We must trust in God and keep our powder dry. When the Lord raised the dead the people had to roll away the stone first; we must do all we can and trust the Lord for seeming impossibilities.

Brother Wood if you have the report from Vineland in New Jersey, built by Mr. Landis we should like to see it. There is a happy people for you, no liquor, no poor house; no jail no police; no morning court exhibitions of drunkards; no fighting; no gambling; no children left by drunken parents to become inmates of orphan homes or find a place in houses of correction.

Yours truly, A. M. Winn.

CALIFORNIA PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

Ed. Rescue.—In your issue of yesterday I see a communication from our worthy Brother Robinson of Guerneville in reference to the late Prohibition Convention. I know of some who have stood side by side with Bro. Rrobinson for many years in this fight, who think as he did of much the convention did and said. They still stand beside him and all earnest Prohibitionists. I offer no apology for what the convention did but I do not want the position of the convention or of the party placed in blacker colors than circumstances and facts justify. The result reached by the convention was this that we wait to see if the Republican convention will give a good Sunday Law Plank and submit the question of license to the people, but if not then we meet again and take measures to give the people an opportunity to express their minds on these points. To my mind the power to license involves the power to prohibit, hence what the committee appointed to communicate with the Republican convention should do will be to require not merely what goes by the name of Local Option but also the submission to the people of a Prohibition Amendment to the constitution. Whilst I have personaly the greatest doubts about the Republican convention doing this, yet in asking these things, the committee asks for nothing but what is in accordance with the genius of Republicanism, and the Republican party ought to see that they can submit these questions to the people whichever way they individually view them.

Whilst many of us fully agree with Bro. Robinson in his estimate of the old parties as now constituted, yet I would refer him as well as the Republican party of this State to the recent action of the Maine Republican Convention, which says "We favor such legislation and such enforcement of the law as will secure to every portion of our Territory freedom from that traffic. We further recommend a submission to the people of a constitutional prohibitory amendment.

Now IF the Republican Party in this State will honestly do that, can we not better fight with them than against them? If they will not, let us wage our own warfare. What I want is the success of Prohibition.

Yours fraternally,
Geo. Morris, Cor. Sec'y.
West End, Cal., July 21, 1882.

Every iron front, iron shutter, costly safe, latch key, patent lock for houses, chests, cellars, barns etc., every burglar alarm, revolver bayonet, bowie knife, slung shot bot for protection from robbers is an expense assessed upon its purchaser by the grogshops who manufacture all the thieves, burglars, tramps, loafers and madmen. But for these rum-holes and beer-dives which train all these classes we should not need bolt or bar or jail or policeman in this beautiful land of plenty. The rum-hole and Vc. Sunday-school must go.

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,
Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,
AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

Expenses for Term of Fourteen Weeks.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G.Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. ALL ARE INVITED.

W. S. READ, D. S. C. J. COVILLAUD, D. S.

THE BREWERS of California are not making money fast enough, but are getting their poison mills seized for swindling the government in the matter of stamps. 8 cents profit on a 10 cent drink is too small a margin to make that kind of men honest.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.—Tulare Valley D. L. will meet at Grangeville Thursday evening, September 7th.

EVENING STAR LODGE meets Tuesday evening at Fraternity Hall, Pythian Castle, between 5 and 6th Market St.

BE SURE to hear Hon. C. A. Fox at Silver Star House, corner Sansome and Pacific streets on Sunday evening next. Come early to get seats.

THE Northwestern News, of Davenport, Iowa, looks jubilant all over since the amendment passed or else it makes one feel jubilant to see anything from Iowa.

MR DENNIS KEARNY recommends his audience to vote for Gen. Stoneman and no one would surely think of douting his entire wisdom and selfsacrificing patriotism.

MARRIED—FISH–KERR—At Redding, Cal., July 10, 1882, by Rev. I. W. Watterman, pastor of Presbyterian church, Darwin S. Fish, of Ashland, Oregon, to Miss Sarah J. Kerr, of Stockton, Cal.

THE MINISTERS of Illinois of all denominations are invited by a committee of themselves to meet in mass convention in August to inaugurate more active and earnest future work in temperance.

PROFESSOR FOSTER has been elected to the Dominion Parliament from New Brunswick. He is one of the most eloquent and able temperance orators and will do his country good service in his new position.

IT IS SAID that warden Crocker has been offered $1,000 for the rope with which Guiteau was hung. Send $500 to the RESCUE office and quite as good a one will be furnished promptly, all ready for use and expressage paid.

NEXT SUNDAY. All the Bands of Hope of San Francisco are invited to be present at Childrens Hall, Silver Star House, Cor. Sansome and Pacific on Sunday Aug. 6, at 3 P. M. at A MASS MEETING of the children for the purpose of organizing a Band of Hope. Mrs. E. P. Stevens and M. H. Savage will give addresses. M. E. RICHARDSON, G. S., J. W.

Subscribers and renewals this week.- San Francisco, (Mrs. A. P. Ellis), 8: (Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Stevens), 43: Ventura county, (Miss M. A. Guthrie), 2: Sheridan, (Mrs. L. Carpenter), 2: Cherokee, 1: S. F., 1: Oakland, (Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Stevens), 22: Dutch Flat, (W. C. King), 12: Carbondale Lodge, (F. Clifford), 5: Oregon, (L. Leland), 1. In all, 97.

NEAL DOW, the veteran prohibitionist of America, sends word to W. C. T. U. of Illinois: "Keep to woman suffrage, as the short cut to prohibition." This is in the direct line of our plan of work, which says explicitly, "To these advanced positions we have been slowly and surely brought by the logic of events and the argument of defeat in our seven years' march since the crusade."—Ex,

"THE drink den is a vicious educator. The State has chartered and licensed it. Voters for license make it what it is. Its pupils are known by their bloated cheeks, bleared eyes, and zig-zaging gait. Its graduates are gutter drunkards, brutal husbands and fathers, social corruptionists, and murderers. No revenue can pay the State for licensing such a crime-producer, and spreading such disorders in society."

THE Leag of Fiendom has had a successful week. One of them perforated his head with a bullet and left a $2,000 bill for the A. O. U. W. to pay. It was not skepticism either, it was whisky that put up the job. The leag succeeded in placing an unusually large number of drunks on the market last Sunday. The Sunday beer was of the pugilistic inspiration brand and it was fiting in various quarters of the city up to daylight Monday morning. Wife-beating has been lively thru the week, and the boys spent a large amount of pocket money in the dens and dives of the leag.

TALLY ONE for Bob Ingersoll. The bible tells us that Balaam was slain by the Israelites when they destroyed the Midianites and here he is now running for office up in Tulare county. So the Hanford Journal says.

THE Mariposa Gazette has a good word for temperance always and runs now a temperance colum edited by M. E. C. whom many friends will recognize.

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.—In Lapland, etiquet and time honored customs demand that the head man of the house shall cook all the victuals of the family. It is painful to think of the terrible commotion that will one day afflict church and state there, when some native Lucy Stone shall arise in young Lapland and proclaim the monstrous heresy that a woman has the brains to boil a mess of herrings as well as a man can, and has as good right to do it too.

WE HEAR an expiring old stereotyped groan still repeated every few days, to the effect that the wine business is going to be a big interest in California soon. It is big now in the penitentiary, lunatic asylum, the poor house and the morg; it has totally pauperized, brutalized and debauched every country that has tried it except France and is doing so there. The only reason France is not like the rest in rags and filth is that the wine and brandy business has in France to strangle the strongest combination of industry, economy and patriotic devotion to home interests outside of the wine business, that exists in the world.

SILVER STAR.—At Childrens Hall on Sunday evening last Mrs. Stevens addressed a full house on "Our homes in dauger." As a prelude ten minutes talk was given to the children who were allowed to retire at 8¾, Mrs. Richardson sang "Save the boy" and "King Bibbler's Army" with great acceptance. Mrs. Stevens as usual captured her audience and her calls to patriotic action in defence of our homes and institutions were warmly responded to. Mrs, J. W. H. Campbell opened and Rev. O. Gibson closed the meeting with prayer. Hon. C. N. Fox will be the speaker next Sunday, 6th, W. H. Barnes on the 13th and F. M. Pixley of the Arganaut on the 20th.

THE Chronicle alludes to the extraordinary number of burglars and their enterprise and activity in this State. It commends extra heavy charges of powder and buckshot as a remedy. It is unfair to use buckshot on burglars when we employ about 5,000 factories in San Francisco for producing burglars, running night and day and all day Sunday. If our voters would charge their ballots with prohibition and clean the thief colleges and Leag of Fiendom Sunday Schools out of the city and state we should have no burglars. Query: How many burglaries, murders, divorces, suicides and penitentiary crimes a week must we submit to have, rather than do away with the luxury of having 5,000 schools of theft and vice and debauchery to destroy property, beggar trade and murder our citizens by wholesale?

THE Sacramento Record Union lately asserted that the C.P.R.R. had literally created $80,000,000 of values in the San Joaquin Valley alone in a few years. To which the Chronicle replies that it did not pass thru seven counties of that valley till 1878. And in June, 1877 these counties were assessed 56 millions of value while in 1880 they were only assessed at 52 millions. The Chronicle adds that while the producers of this state have according to the Union realized 20 millions of savings in 3½ years the R. R. Co. had divided up 22¾ millions of clear profits. The Railroad ot to have added 80 millions of value to that valley, but wherever it goes it plants its grogshop-pauper-mills and hundreds more crowd round the railroad grogshop centre—and it is quite easy to see the grogshop business in those 7 counties (San Joaquin to San Bernardino) must in a few years do 80 millions of damage in pauperizing present settlers and preventing settlement and improvement.

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew, when walking thoughtless
Through the noisy, crowded way,
That some pearl of wondrous whiteness
Close beside our pathway lay,
We would pause, where now we hasten,
We would often look around,
Lest our careless feet should trample
Some rare jewel to the ground.

If we knew what forms were fainting
For the shade that we should fling,
If we knew what lips were parching
For the water we could bring;
We would haste with eager footsteps,
We would work with willing hands,
Bearing cups of cooling water,
Planting rows of shady palms.

If we knew when friends around us,
Closely pressed to say good bye,
Which among the lips that kissed us,
First would 'neath the daisies lie,
We would clasp our arms around them,
Looking on them through our tears,
Tender words of love eternal
We would whisper in their ears.

If we knew what lives are darkened
By some thoughtless word of ours,
Which has ever lain among them,
Like the frost among the flowers;
Oh, with what sincere repentings,
With what anguish of regret,
While our eyes were overflowing,
We would cry, Forgive! Forget!

If we knew? Alas! and do we Ever care or seek to know
Whether bitter herbs or roses
In our neighbors' gardens grow?
God forgive us! lest hereafter
Our hearts break to hear him say,
"Careless child, I never knew you
From my presence flee away."

SPELLING LESSON. SHOE SPELLS SHU.

(N. B. The following is Poetry.)

A woman, they say, once lived in a shoe,
Her children, all told, were twenty and toe;
She scolded so much, they called her a shroe,
And when she got mad, her visage turned bloe.

To feed such a broed, it was all she coed doe,
To stir up the mush, and season the stoe;
She never coed rest, for when she got throe,
The first she had fed, were hungry anoe.

As the children increased, the crosser she groe,
And she scolded and wallop'd the clamorous croe;
Till one very hot day, you may think it's not troe,
In a passion she floe, and the whole of them sloe.

BUILDING DAMS.

A gentleman in the State of Maine determined to build a mill on the stream which ran by his property and the first requisite was to build a dam which would stand all the pressure of the spring freshets and running drifts of ice. He built his dam as he supposed strong enough, 20 feet wide at the base and constructed accordingly to rule and custom; but it was a frolicsome stream and the next spring freshets made a clean way thru it.

His friends came round and took counsel with him and were generous as usual in the matter of valuable advice. They all agreed the dam was not wide enough at the base, and he should build it a foot wider; it was surely an easy thing to make a dam that would stand. So another one was built a foot wider at the base and it was swept away next year and the folks then agreed it ot to have been 2 feet wider. Next year another foot was added with similar result and for ten years a foot was annually added to the width and strength with no avail. Then other people, for miles higher up and lower down the same stream, undertook to build dams. Some of them followed the example of the pioneer builder and made their dams just as he did every year with the same result.

One man of rare judgment whose name was Mr. Chusetts now asserted that the mistake was in making the dam wide at bottom and narrow at top. He said it ot to be reversed so as to have the weight on top to keep the dam down, but even that lucid idea was a failure and the worst one of all. So the most of people kept on the old way of trying to build dams a foot wider every year and seeing them washed away regularly. Various other experiments were made, such as making a dam with large holes in the bottom, to let all the water thru; others to build them only half way across the stream and some of them stood for years but they did not stop the stream any.

It took the original dam-builder, Mr. Main E. Law, 26 years to get his dam, a foot at a time, wide enough to stand and to find out that it should be 46 feet wide at the base and then it wanted careful watching and patching.

Later, a youthful relative of of old Mr. M. E. Law named John Can Sass, set out to build him a dam, away out west, and he determined to make it 92 feet wide at the base so as to be sure it would stand. His friends pleaded with him not to be so radical and obstinate, but the young giant curtly told them, if they did not like it "to git" and mind their own business. And his dam stays.

Then one of his neighbors, Mr. I. O. Way, determined to follow the example of Mr. Can Sass and he made his dam 120 feet wide. His friends and relatives mourned over such a waste, and besot him to follow the example of good old father M. E. Law and take 30 years to build it firm and strong. They said he was going too fast and would rue it; but he was obstinate and declared his work should not have to be done over again. And it stays.

Then a Mr. K. L. Forny whose whole wheat crop and gold and silver crop and most of all his other crops for thirty years had been washed away by the pestilential, malarious, poisonous river of rum determined to stop it. Most of the neighbors stoutly declared that there was only one way to do it properly and that was the way Mr. M. E. Law had done. When it has been 26 years building, said they, the dam will be seasoned and sure to stay, and we shall be dead then and it won't hurt us or our political party. Many wanted an open and shut gate, that would close on Sunday which they thot was enough of the week to stop the river of Rum, as it did not smell bad to them on other days. And some obstinately declared nothing was worth wasting time and money on but the amendment dam of Mr. Way and Mr. Can Sass. They believed there was no virtue in copying 30 or 20 or 10 or 5 years of any body's blunders. And the other people called them fools.

DISESTABLISHING THE CHURCH.

The Watchword (London) proposes to take no side in the vexed question of separating the Church and State of England, but suggests that it would be a most commendable thing for the national liquor traffic to be disestablished. "Whatever scruples dissenters may have against conformity with a national church, they should have, in an intensified degree, against the national liquor customs."

The text of its discourse was "a recent fulsome wine-toast drinking at a Nonconformist Congregational dinner, in which eminent leaders of the body took part." A heathenish custom, it says, from which all non-conformists should religiously dissent. The dinner was at a licensed public dramshop, and the subject of discussion was "Some proposed improvements on public worship among nonconformists."

The Watchword says "this upholding of the Devil's Church is quite out of their line. It is a conforming to the world of a most dangerous kind—dangerous personally and as an example to others. The mixing of the spirituous with the Spiritual is a curse and a snare to the Christian Church. The drink, more than all besides, has kept men out of the church, and has dragged down to perdition those who have joined the church. It is not fitting that the pillars of the church should uphold her greatest foe."

And possibly some of these clerical improvers of the modes of public worship on the day following this public worship of the devil in a grog-shop, contributed to the religious press an edifying and improving essay on the "falling off in attendance at church services," and assigned the 125th absurd and baseless reason for it.

BEER AND INDIGESTION.

We find the following remarks upon the effect of beer upon digestion, etc.; in the Church of England Temperance Chronicle, by that high medical authority, Dr. Norman Kerr, F. R. S. They ought to engage the attention of all who are in the habit of taking ale, lager, or porter with their meals, under the delusion that they help digestion, and that they are healthy and wholesome drinks:

"Malt liquors are one of the main sources of the indigestion so common in our midst. The continued irritation of the delicate lining membrane of the stomach by the alcohol in even the mildest beers, persisted in for a lengthened period, is extremely apt to give rise to a train of dyspeptic symptoms, which tends to make many an otherwise happy life miserable. A lifetime of total abstinence would, I am persuaded, have warded off two-thirds of the dyspepsia I have been called upon to confront.

"The liver suffers severely in many cases in which beer has never been taken to excess. I have frequently observed considerable enlargement of the liver in persons noted for their very moderate but constant drinking, who seemed the picture of health while alive, but whose sudden and unexpected death necessitated a post-mortem inquiry.

"In nursing, stouts and beers are especially pernicious. Their use has wrought untold mischief to many mothers, and undermined the tender constitutions of a vast multitude of helpless and innocent infants.

"I have said nothing whatever of the damage resulting from beer-drinking to excess, or of the appalling extent of mental and moral evil inseparable from the general social use of beer. My warnings are on purely scientific and dietetic grounds, against steady, limited indulgence in such liquors as are weakening to the system, and invite gout, rheumatism, dyspepsia, and other unhealthy bodily conditions.

"There is no call for us to drink beer, however moderately. We can enjoy better health without intoxicating drinks than with them. Our Creator neither implanted a longing for them, nor provided a supply of them for our use. They are not, in the true sense of the word, a food. But though they can do us little, if any good, they may do so much harm. Many are killed by them, both for time and for eternity, and even their continued moderate use tends in the direction of loss of health, lessening of strength, and shortening of life.

"Let us all, who desire to avoid gout, rheumatism, and dyspepsia, shun ale, beer, porter, stout, and all other kinds of fermented and distilled liquors."

PETITIONS.

The petitions for non repeal of Sunday law, local option and constitutional amendment have struck a popular chord and have received a hearty response from all parts of the State except San Francisco. The number who have determined to vote as they pray are found to be very much larger than the most sanguine had supposed. California is even now ripe for prohibition, and would follow Iowa if that issue was submitted to the people.

The petitions are good reminders of how the people ought to vote. Let them be presented to every man, woman and child in this State as quickly as possible, and thereby hasten the impending crisis. They ought to be read in temperance meetings, Sabbath schools, church meetings and other places, and all urged to sign, that the full strength of the movement may be immediately brought out and in due time presented to the Legislature. For blank petitions send to W. D. Gould, Los Angeles, and when they are full paste on another sheet and another and fill them all—on one side only.

AN ORGAN'S IMPUDENCE.

Under this caption the Daily Examiner of the 21st, speaking of Hubbell's collection for political purposes says. "The smaller evening organ justifies Hubbel's extortions of voluntary contributions by alleging that Democrats years ago collected assessments from office-holders. If this were true it would not be relevant to the point at issue, for at that time there was no law against the practice." We would like to ask the Examiner how long since it became the champion of the Leag of Freedom, the most defiant criminal conspiracy against law that this or any other state has permitted to flaunt its defiance in the face of a free people. It is pertinent to enquire how much money did the Leag of Freedom promise for the privilege of inserting their "plank" in the Democratic platform. Will the Examiner answer both of these questions? In case of silence let it cease talking of law about which it seems to know little and care less. B.

TO THE LODGES IN SOUTHERN CAL.

During the past year it has been my duty and pleasure to visit the locality where our Southern Lodges are located—some of them more than once. I have just received from the East a fine, large Magic Lantern or Sciopticon, with Temperance and other scenes, not forgetting some comic ones for the children. I may be round to lecture among you this Fall and Winter, illustrating with the pictures referred to. But I specially write to say that the time is approaching—1st meeting in August—when representatives to Grand Lodge are to be elected. I heartily trust every Lodge will send at least one earnest, experienced brother or sister, even if the expenses in whole or part have to be borne by the lodges. It is to be in San Francisco, and we want it to be the grandest Grand Lodge yet held. Sister Guthrie will be there. J. W. Webb.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentiment; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

CAL. W. C. T. UNION.

President, Mrs. P. D. Browne, Blake House, Oakland.

VICE-PRESIDENTS.

Mrs. G. S. Abbott, and Mrs. P. R. Coxhead, Oakland; Mrs. T. K. Noble, S. F.; Mrs. G. W. Lamoraux, Petaluma, Mrs. J. L. Williams, Alameda; Mrs. N. J. Andrews, Merced; Mrs. J. S. Root, Watsonville; Mrs. N. Eyster, San Jose; Mrs. Arvidson, Placerville; Mrs. Hepler, Nevada City; Mrs. C. Maxwell, Modesto; Mrs. Jas. Cameron, W. Oakland; Mrs. R. Newton, Grass Valley; Mrs. G. Beanson, Salinas; Mrs. C. G. Aiken, Berkeley.

SECRETARY, Mrs. M. E. Congdon, Mariposa.
TREASURER, Mrs. C. Chamberlin, 1571 7th Ave. E. Oakland.

W. C. T. U. OF SAN FRANCISCO.

The report of this society should have been noticed some time ago, but it got covered up with a mass of other material for "to-morrow's" attention, and has hitherto shared "to-morrow's" fortunes.

The Coffee House at 629 Sacramento St. has become one of the perminent institutions of the city. Between 500 and 600 persons are daily served with meals; they are of all classes, but principally clerks, printers and the boys of various occupations. Receipts were increasing, and the prudent official and financial management of Mrs. K. S. Hart, the Sup't, is warmly commended. 1,425 meal tickets were sold during the year for benevolent distribution. Destitute families have been assisted and employment found for a few seekers.

The Free Reading-Room has been well supplied with books and papers and the daily number of visitors has been from 60 to 80.

A new branch of work has been attempted, to open a cheap lodging house for women and girls. And no more commendable enterprise could be set on foot. A great many worthy and industrious girls and widows and women are employed in a variety of the fields of labor in this city, and no class of people are more properly the objects of the solicitude of good people, not in affording them charitable assistance, but in protecting them from imposition and temptation and in giving them every facility to pursue their habits of industry most advantageously. It is hoped the ladies of the Union may find cheerful givers to aid them in fitting out this excellent institution.

Thirty-five new members have been added to the Society during the year, but that is 3,500 too little for a city like San Francisco, and with its grave necessities for the temperance work of good and true women. There are many more than 3,500 women here who have husbands, brothers or sons in imminent danger of ruin thru the horrible mantraps of San Francisco.

There have been religious services conducted at the Reading Room by Mr. John McKee with good results.

The regular meetings of the W. C. T. U. are on the last Wednesday of each month at 3 P. M., in the parlor of the Y. M. C. A. Building. It is to be hoped they will have large accessions during this year to their numbers.

MISS WILLARD'S VISIT.

Bro. W. D. Gould, P. G. W. C. T. writes from Los Angeles: "I am very much in favor of inviting Miss Willard to California, and I am confident that the necessary funds could be collected without great effort. She would be welcomed by all friends of Temperance. I suggest that the W. C. T. U., Ministerial Union, our Order, and perhaps other Associations, join in the invitation, and join in making her welcome so hearty that she will accomplish great good. I regard her as one of the foremost of great leaders."

Mr. Joseph Chilberg, of Olympia, G. W. S. of W. Territory writes: "In reply to your proposal to secure the services of Miss Willard and Miss Gordon to visit this section, for our people I can say most certainly we do want them to come."

Senator Dr. Elias Jessup, G. W. C. T., of Oregon, says Miss Willard and her companion will no doubt be most welcome in Oregon whenever they may be able to visit us. He also has strong hopes of securing a submission to the people of a Constitutional prohibitory amendment.

A WRECK.

He was stranded in the corner of a stubble field high and dry. (How dry, only those who have passed thru similar vicissitudes can accurately determine.) There the receding wave of yesterday's debauchery had left him sans hat, sans last weeks wages, sans everything:

> "A wretch so empty that if e'er there be
> In nature proved the least vacuity
> 'Twill be in him."

The morning was hot. The sun glared like a ball of fire, (so did his poor nose) as we drove slowly by, one of his hands went up with a feeble gesture as of appeal. Our hearts were touched. "Had'nt you better speak to him John? he may want something. Perhaps he is ill," we suggested to a passer by. "No, I aint sick," was the response elicited by repeated questioning and a sound shake, "I've been taking too much of A's bad whisky, that's all. "At a friendly hint from John, he gathered himself up painfully, steadied himself for a moment, and the place that had known him, knew him no more. We watched his swaying figure out of sight with a thrill of pity, and sadly conjectured as to how many subsequent overdoses? of A's or some other man's bad whisky would be required to complete the wreck, and send it hopelessly drifting out upon the unpathed waters of nevermore. MAY A. GUTHRIE.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE.

The Watchword (London) gives its readers a wholesome lesson on Gospel Temperance, which is suitable for almost any climate. The following is a part of it:

Gospel Temperance is not the "cant" of Christianity, nor the Pharisaism of self-glorification. Let us try to avoid this, for there is just a little—perhaps more than a little—danger with the best of us. The newer and younger we are at the work, the more danger there may be of our thinking ourselves so much wiser and better than those who have gone before. Do not let us be drawn into disparaging those who have laid the broad and deep foundations upon which we build. Let us avoid the "rant" of saying, "Now that teetotalism is based upon right principles—" as tho all who had gone before had based it upon wrong principles. Men who are new and fresh to the work should be cautioned against playing the buffoon by setting themselves up as the first to teach Gospel Temperance. They should religiously avoid railing against "the anti-Scriptural manner in which it has sometimes been advocated."

It is to be regretted that "high falutin" nonsense of this kind should be printed and circulated by tens of thousands of copies in so-called Blue Ribbon meetings, in which the hardest workers are the men and women who have been doing true Gospel Temperance work for years, some of them for a generation. Such a sentence as this, for example, is apt to make old workers suspicious of new company: "Against the extreme views formerly held, teetotalism found among the wisest and best of men its most uncompromising adversaries." The fact is that the "extreme views formerly held" by the few, having been persistently, ably and scripturally advocated, in season and out of season, for fifty years past, have gained ground; and, thru the agency of religious orders and societies, have of late years so permeated the people that the time for a great manifestation had come, and we thank God for the agency that has brot it about. But we must counsel moderation, and just a decent show of modesty, with new-born zeal in a good cause. We had heard of such talk as we have quoted, but were disinclined to believe it. We regarded it as we have regarded the charges so often hurled against the "intemperate" advocates of Temperance, or against the injudicious opponents of human slavery, and thot that such talk was confined to a few flunkeys such as always join in the hurrah of a winning cause; but now that we find it in print, and circulated broadcast with a kind of official sanction by some of the leaders of the movement, we think it is time just to give a gentle word of warning; for such uncharitable reflections are not based on truth, and they are not consistent with the advocacy of Gospel Temperance. Let us stand by the reality, and not poison the stream from which so many have taken of the pure water of life, and been saved.

THE attempt to prove that the temperance cause has become more respectable or its doctrines at all improved because any individual or classes of individuals have been induced to come over to it, is always ridiculous.

It is exactly the same gospel temperance to-day, that it was 50 years ago, only that every year the derided radicalisms of last year or two or three years ago, have received general assent as gospel truths. To say that "the wisest and best of men have been its most uncompromising enemies," is quite as absurd a falsehood as ever the rummies invented.

It would be rather irritating to the M. E. or Presbyterian Church, if a Chinese mandarin or professor or a Brahmin or other pagan should be converted this week to christianity, and go out next week to preach the new doctrine announcing himself thus. "Li Hung Chang having purged the ——— Church of its ancient ridiculous superstitions or its antiquated fossilisms, etc., will preach at ——— on the 'Reconstructed Gospel.'" But it would be no more impertinent and in no worse taste than the conduct of those whose work in the temperance cause is to degrade its only friends and genuine advocates.

STIMULANTS FOR THE SICK.

It is a well-established principle that all stimulants are debilitants in the end, that they simply arouse the system to a point of unnatural activity, which must waste vital force, on the same principle that undue haste in any labor produces wasting fatigue and exhaustion. Whenever this abnormal action is secured by alcoholic stimulants, the natural result is a diminished power to resist the encroachments of disease.

We have a right to infer that the use of such stimulants is absurd even in cases of sinking and debility. In the experiment tried in the Bellevue Hospital, New York, of treating the convalescents without stimulants, a larger per cent. recovered than of those of the same ward who continued the use of spirits.

In most cases of illness there is abnormal heat, with a quickened pulse, of course implying an increased labor of the heart. Since it is the legitimate effect of alcohol to excite, to increase the pulsations and to raise the heat of the body, is it not absurd to administer an element of this kind when these symptoms already exist to an undesirable extent? If not safe when the powers are low, and also when there is feverishness or inflammation—implying too much action—when are stimulants safe? Would not their disuse in sickness tend to discourage their use in health?—Dr. Hanaford, Watchman.

OUR OBJECT LESSON.

Again the Hayes commission comes before you with this subject. The pictures, for which subscriptions have been received, have been sent out, and surely there was never so large an expression of delight from every one; there has scarcely been known one shadow of a disappointment. "Well worth waiting for," "much finer than we anticipated," "lovely," "beautiful," etc., etc., have been the words written. To-day comes a voice from Spain, "We are much pleased with it, and hope that its influence may be for good among the girls of our school, so that it may spread thru the land." John B. Gough, Mrs. Garfield, Dr. Merrick, Mrs. Senator Blair, and hundreds of others, have expressed their gratification with the picture, and the hope it may fill a glorious mission. This it will do when placed in every school-room in the land. If, in each city and town, one energetic, earnest woman will tell the children of this beautiful memorial, and tell them how easily they can raise money for it for their school-room, it will be done, and this lovely object lesson in total abstinence will ever give its monitions. In many places one child has taken it in hand and speedily and easily raised the money. Collection cards for securing the money in small sums, will be furnished on application to the Treasurer, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York City. All subscriptions should be addressed to her, and she is prepared now to send the picture by return mail. We hope thousands will be called for, and that no school-room nor Sabbath-school, no W. C. T. U. room, nor Good Templar lodge will be considered furnished till this charming testimonial looks from its walls.—Our Union.

JUDGE KINGMAN, of Wyoming, in a lecture on equal suffrage delivered at Greeley, Colorado, related the following significant facts: "A certain man in Cheyenne was up for office, whose wife it was well know was often at home crying and ill-cared for, while her husband was carousing around. He worked for the position and was sure he would get it, but when election day came, he fell short 400 votes. Last Fall, in Wyoming, the Republicans put up Colonel Downey for delegate to Congress, a good man; the Democrats put up a man from Evanston, who formerly kept a dance house; he spent $10,000 to secure his election, but lost by over 3,000 votes. The women voted all over the Territory against him.

IM MACOMB, Ill. 710 women, 400 minors and 307 legal voters petitioned the city council for prohibition, but 384 men voted for license. The council was evenly divided 4 for, 4 against and the Mayor decided for licence. Do the majority rule in that case? Woman Suffrage in that community would have in that instance enhanced the value of property and the business interests of Macomb 25 per cent in a very short time. But a good many people would rather have rum continue to debauch and murder the old and corrupt and destroy the young than see good women invested with power to drive out the rum-thieves from their man-traps into an honest and productive calling.

Nos. 191, 226 and 445.

DELINQUENTS.—The following Lodges having so far neglected to file quarterly returns for the term ending April 30th last, the password has been withheld from them, and they are not entitled to its use until they comply with the law, and make good their delinquency: Nos. 121, 126, 129, 142, 217, 227, 229, 364, 372, 388, 416, 420, 425, 426, 435, 447, 449, 457, 466 and 471.

THE R. W. G. L. LITERATURE COMMITTEE.—The committee appointed at the last session of the R. W. G. L. to collect and distribute funds for literary work in the name of the I. O. G. T., have issued the following circular which it is hoped will be read in open Lodge in every Lodge:

LINCOLN, NEBRASKA, U. S. A. July 15, 1882.

To the Order of Good Templars:

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS:—At the Late session of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge, held at South Carolina, U. S. A., the following by-law was added to the by-laws of the R. W. G. Lodge:

"The Right Worthy Grand Templar shall at each session of this body, after the election, appoint a committee, to consist of five members, whose duty it shall be to have charge of the circulation of temperance literature for this body; the examination of temperance literature issued by the different publishing houses; the advising of the membership by circular of the nature, character and quality of such literature; the raising of money for the purpose of circulating literature in weak jurisdictions, and to build up the order everywhere, and to suggest plans and methods of work to be followed by the subordinate lodges. The committee shall remain in office during the year, and submit a printed report of their work at the annual session of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge. Said report shall contain an itemized account of all expenses, with vouchers for the same, said expenses to be paid out of the money raised by the committee."

The Right Worthy Grand Templar appointed, as such committee, John B. Finch, Nebraska; W. H. Lambly, Quebec; Mrs. A. A. Brookbank, Indiana; N. B. Broughton, North Carolina; Rev. George C. Hart, Pennsylvania. This committee issued this circular:

The literary committee of last year expended none of the funds which they collected but turned them over to this committee, and we in accordance with the instructions of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge expended them under direction of Hon. Isaac Brandt, P. G. W. C. T., of Iowa, in circulating literature in Iowa during its late successful struggle for prohibition in that state.

THANKS TO THE GENEROSITY OF THE ORDER.

Your committee was the only committee representing any national temperance organization, which was able to render any practical aid in the hour of Iowa's need. The order has a right to be proud of its record in the Iowa campaign. In a future circular we will lay before you the letters of thanks from the sisters and brothers in Iowa for your timely assistance. Every lodge and individual who contributed to the "Dime collection" last year may take some credit for the victory in Iowa.

The work for the coming year is plainly mapped out by the R. W. G. Lodge. In its by-laws it provides:

"The first week in October each year shall be known thruout the order as missionary week, and the entire order, at the subordinate lodge meetings held during the week, shall be requested to raise at least one dime from each member of the order, to be sent to the missionary fund of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge, to be used by the literary committee of that body in the circulation of temperance literature. The funds raised shall be sent by the Worthy Secretary of the subordinate lodge to the Grand Worthy Secretary of the Grand Lodge and by him to the Right Worthy Grand Secretary. The Right Worthy Grand Secretary shall acknowledge receipt of same, and forward the same to the Right Worthy Grand Treasurer who shall keep it in a separate fund, subject to the order of the literature committee through their chairman. The Right Worthy Grand Treasurer shall show in his annual report the amount of this fund, and by which Grand or subordinate lodges contributed."

The committee hopes to raise twenty thousand dollars by this collection.

1st. We want to use at least five thousand dollars in missionary work among the colored people.

2nd. We want to have prepared and print a manual of work for subordinate lodges.

3d. We want to print and circulate literature among the immigrant population in America in their own language and also to place it in the hands of European, African and Australian Grand Lodges for circulation in tneir various jurisdictions.

4th. We want to be in a condition to help various jurisdictions in their struggles to out-law the business of drunkard making.

The Right Worthy Grand Lodge determined to make it purely a Good Templar collection and so by by-law confine it to the lodges and the membership. We believe that this is the best way. Usually what is everybody's business is nobody's business. It is now laid upon the Order and if it is a failure it will be a Good Templar failure. Last year was the first attempt but this year with a plan of work fully developed the whole order will certainly respond. If the Grand Lodge officers do their part, we do not believe there is a subordinate lodge in the order but will do even more than is asked of it.

Hon. Theo. D. Kanouse, P. R. W. G. T., says: "Wisconsin will stand by the committee this year. We will do our part to press the missionary work."

Geo. B. Katzenstein, R. W. G. T. says: "All jurisdictions will hereafter join heartily in the movement and furnish the committee with the wherewith to effectively prosecute its labors."

Every cent donated by the order will be put into the work, as the committee do their work without pay and in the report of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge, the membership can see where every cent has been expended. To you, then sisters and brothers, we come and ask you to make full arrangements for the collection. Take it on the week named. Do not delay because you think you can get a larger collection the next week. Send it to your Grand Worthy Secretary as soon as collected. We want to be ready for work by December 1st., and all money should be reported by that time.

Hoping every Good Templar will help this work and thereby benefit the Order and cause we remain,

Yours in the work,
JOHN B. FINCH, Nebraska,
W. H. LAMBLY, Quebec,
MRS. A. A. BROOKBANK, Indiana,
N. B. BROUGHTON, North Carolina,
REV. GEO. C. HART, Pennsylvania.

MERCED.—Merced Lodge, No. 459, celebrated its anniversary in a very becoming manner on the evening of the 24th ult. During the afternoon delegations arrived from the surrounding lodges at Merced Falls, Cunningham, Plainsburg, Snelling and Central Point, which together with the membership of Merced Lodge produced a union and representation of every lodge in the county of Merced. This act speaks in eloquent praise of the harmony and true fraternal spirit existing within the District mentioned. Delegations were also present from White Rock and Catheys Valley Lodges, in Mariposa Co. In the early evening the members of the Order assembled in the Lodge room of Merced Lodge, and escorted by the Merced Brass Band paraded the streets of the town to the Cumberlrnd Presbyterian Church, Rev. Knowles pastor, where the exercises of the evening were to be held. The church was filled to overflowing, many remaining standing throughout the evening. County Auditor and Recorder Bro. J. F. McSwain, called the assemblage to order with a brief and pertinent address and presided over the meeting. Bro. J. M. Jackman read an essay on the history of the Order, and Bro. Geo. E. Isaacs delivered a historical and statistical address relative to Merced Lodge. The R. W. G. T. by invitation of the Lodge delivered the general address of the evening. The addresses were interspersed with recitations, readings, and vocal music. Though the exercises continued until a very late hour the interest manifested was so great that none left the room until the audience was finally dismissed. Merced Lodge has made a good record in the past and is destined to continue its good work through an unbroken series of years. It numbers over one hundred members and has the respect and good will of the community.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. O. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

J. W. WEBB.

Increased demand for the valuable space in the RESCUE, the Editor says, calls for briefer reports, so I must condense. From San Luis Obispo county, hurried to Watsonville for Dist. Lodge and two public lectures. Good attendance and interest. Rev. A. K. Crawford, Dist. Deputy, presided; considerable practical work done; stirring resolutions passed especially one by that, until recently, ardent Democrat Rev. W. L. Stephens of Santa Cruz, denouncing in round terms the anti-Sunday plank and pledging the members to vote and work against it. A full report appeared in some of the country papers, but nothing so far, in the RESCUE. Lodge had not met for some time but a faithful few held the charter, paid hall rent, etc. Bros. C. E. Taylor, Ercanbrack and others with some noble sisters gave every encouragement and we held a special meeting, starting lodge into new life and initiating some of those who gave their names after the lectures. Have been there since, Col. Babcock happening along, a true workfellow, who instituted a Home Protection Association. Sunday night, a very full house, Bros. F. H. Wales and Fowler of Tulare coming in and assisting. Obtained more names, among them the energetic Bro. D. Johnson and wife. For some time saloons shut on Sunday. At Soledad, saw Bro. Mitchell of Wells, Fargo who is arranging for meetings at Gonzales and Soledad. He is an active, zealous member.

SANTA CRUZ has always been a hard place in which to maintain a lodge, but the present lodge is determined. Spoke four nights, once to Mrs. Sagar's Band of Hope, kept up so long and faithfully by her; once at public installation of Sons of Temperance. All meetings small but the last the best. Was guest of Bro. and Sister Stephens, most earnest workers, and very hospitable. Bro. Rev. J. W. Riedemann, Pastor of German church, Rev. W. Dennett and Mr. Wm. Willitts assisted.

FELTON I visited twice, giving three lectures. Lodge run down and Sons of Temperance very weak. Bros. Trout, S. T. Jones, Sister Cormack and other devoted workers have lost all hope of reviving the lodge at present and my earnest efforts failed of that tho a good number heard and appreciated the truth told. It will yet revive.

LORENZO is a live temperance place but tho a small settlement in the Redwoods it maintains a lodge over 100 strong, some coming many miles to attend. Bro. Capt. Sutphen of Santa Cruz kindly drove me there and back and ably assisted in the speaking. Preached a temperance discourse for Bro. Stephens who has an appointment here, and spoke at open lodge on Sunday afternoon, he helping at both. Returned on the 17th to anniversary celebration, grand meeting in grand wood. In addition to brief report you published, the recitations volunteered by Miss Benfire, a most accomplished elocutionist should not be forgotten. She kindly gave her services gratuitously and being a christian temperance lady the pieces were as good in sentiment as in delivery. "The Rumseller's dream" was specially good and appropriate. After first lecture, lodge initiated 7 and tho they had seven more propositions we gleaned over 20 more at the celebration. Considering what large membership they already had, what small village and widely scattered community can do better? Bro. Peery closed his lumber mill for the day that his employees might attend. Started a good Band of Hope. Obtained a number of subscribers to RESCUE. This lodge will live and do good work.

H. R. HUGHES.

At San Andreas, found the faithful few holding the fort, waiting for fall for brisker times. They have over forty members and lumber and cash enough to enlarge theif hall to suit their needs.

The old mother lodge can be depended on. At Spring Valley, all are farmers and too far scattered in busy times to turn out but the lodge has done well and is solid.

At Campo Seco, the same may be said.

At Lodge Dexter, posters and letters had failed to connect and I had not even any assistance in my studies of astronomy while waiting for those who never came. But the lodge is all right.

At Mackville where I organized a few weeks ago, had a small meeting, conferred the degrees on 14 and gave them full instructions so they can run the ship. The prospects for a strong lodge is good.

At Lockeford, had a pleasant meeting, the lodge is prospering and Lockeford has the added dignity of a railroad town.

At French Camp, found the new Lodge all right. Brother Jones, D. D., had been very attentive and kind, and the Stockton friends have shown the true, fraternal spirit.

At Linden the boom has ceased to make its influence felt. The backsliders are many, but there remaineth a few faithful ones that never leave a ship while a plank remains. Better things are in store for Linden, after the busy season is over.

At Farmington, had a good meeting. This lodge has done good work and are determined to win yet greater conquests.

From here, I pass "over the river" into Stanislaus county.

Altho in the midst of heading and my meetings were of necessity small, the workers did all they could and I have only pleasant recollections of the friends in San Joaquin county.

CHANGE OF TIME.

Temperance Camp-meeting, at Concow Valley, Butte County, August 29th to September 5th.

On account of the District Fair at Chico, the above Convention is called one week earlier than heretofore announced. It will commence August 29th and continue one week, The change will bring the meeting at full moon.

Parties are recommended to come prepared to camp. Arrangements however, have been made for board at $5.00 per week, or $1.00 per day, or 50 cents for single meals.

Horses will be pastured at 50 cents per week, or fed with hay at 25 cents per day.

Campers will have an opportunity to bathe in the Spring Valley Company's Reservoir, which is one mile long and half a mile wide. Bring bathing suits.

All Good Templars and friends of the Order are cordially invited.

Good speakers will be present and no effort will be spared to make this the grandest temperance rally ever held in Northern California, for the purpose of discussing the live questions of the day in relation to the temperance Reform, as well as for recreation and amusement.

Programs will shortly be sent out.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.—Is your Lodge doing straight temperance work? Are you "adding daily to your number of such as may be saved?" Are you making your influence tell on the community? Is there less rum drinking there than formerly? Are there less shops which sell? Are the people more familiar with the temperance truth? And do they appreciate more fully the fearful facts of intemperance? Our lodges are organized for a purpose, and that purpose is temperance work. They would not have been organized but for this. They cannot be kept up without it. Are you doing this kind of business? If so, and judiciously too, there is no doubt about your future. If not, there is great doubt. A lodge may prosper for a time on pleasing entertainments alone, but it is very much like living on vanity-cake and troth kisses; there will be a terrible sense of goneness by and by. Entertainment comes in all right in its place. I like it, and will laugh as heartily as any. But in this battle it is hard knocks that tell, and it will not do for you and me to be constantly whistling "Yankee Doodle" in the rear. —Canada Casket.

THE Oakdale Wheat Grower states that "Crowhurst the temperance lecturer got beastly drunk at North San Juan." It is fair to assume that the publisher of that paper knew perfectly well it was an entirely baseless and malicious lie.

SACRAMENTO DISTRICT LODGE.

The annual session of the Sacramento County District Lodge of Good Templars convened in Sacramento on Saturday last, James Ferguson, of Galt, District Deputy, presiding.

The Committee on Credentials reported twenty-eight delegates.

The Committee on Resolutions, Rev. H. H. Rice, Chairman, reported the following, which, after discussion, were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we hail with great joy the advent of the temperance question into the political life of California, and look forward to the ensuing campaign as a season for Good Templars to put forth more earnest efforts than ever before in the cause to which they are pledged.

Resolved, That we adopt and heartily indorse the following sentiments of a distinguished Democrat, Judge O. D. Shattuck, of Sonoma, in regard to the present Sunday law: "That the law is not sumptuary, is not unconstitutional, nor unjust nor oppressive, nor fanatical, nor unwise, but, on the contrary, that it is the reverse of all this—a wise, conservative and just law, which if properly enforced will be found among our laws most efficient in promoting the peace, prosperity and happiness of the whole people, and that it should not be repealed. There will be no difficulty in enforcing a constitutional conservative law when the people more fully understand its objects and its advantages. That no class of people are materially injured by the observance of the Sunday law except the saloon-keepers, and they have no right to complain of the law to close up and give peace on election days and Sundays."

Resolved, That we advise all Good Templars in this district to demand of the Republican party a clear, outspoken plank in favor of maintaining and executing the present Sunday law in its essential features.

Resolved, That if the approaching Republican Convention betrays the interests of the people and panders to the liquor trade after the manner of the Democratic Convention at San Jose, or if they refuse to take strong ground in favor of the present Sunday law in its essential features, we advise Good Templars, and all temperance people, and all good citizens to leave their former political affiliations and vote with the independent party which, in that case, will certainly be organized.

Resolved, That the Subordinate Lodges in this District are advised to devote at least half an hour of each stated meeting to earnest Conference upon the Temperance work believing that our members will thus become more practically interested in the objects of our Order. Busy men and women will feel more willing to give their time to attend the meetings, and the great Reformation in which we are engaged will thereby receive material advancement.

Rev. H. H. Rice was elected District Deputy.

It was voted to hold the next session in Sacramento on Saturday, October 28th, at 10 o'clock A. M. Also, that a public meeting, under the auspices of the District Lodge, be held on Friday evening, October 27th.

The Secretary was instructed to apply to the G. W. C. T. on behalf of the District Lodge, for a lecturer, for a series of meetings at Florin.

During the noon recess, the delegates from outside the city, as guests of she two city Lodges, together with a large number from those Lodges, partook of a fine banquet at Fisher's restaurant.

ED. RESCUE.—In 1880 the Massachusetts Board of Statistics of Labor at the beginning of the year took up the county of Suffolk which is identical in its boundaries with the city of Boston. The results in this case as in every other similar investigation completely astonished every one not familiar with the statistics of crime. The total number of sentences for the year was 16,897. Of these 12,289 were due directly to whisky causes. Of the remaining 4608 offenses, 2097 or 45 per cent were committed by men under the influence of liquor, and 1918 by men who were in liquor at the time of the formation of the intent, thus leaving out of the whole 16,897 only 593 who could be said to be free from intoxicating liquors. The fact is that if any honest man will take the trouble to investigate the statistics of crime of any city, (where saloons are licensed) he will find that at least 80 per cent of the arrests made are due to the use of intoxicating liquors, and that as saloons increase in just that proportion do crimes increase. Let every tax payer, whether a philanthropist a Christian or a heathen consult his own interest and say what right the saloon business has to burden his property with taxes thus made necessary to take care of the criminals. It requires no great legal ability to arrive at the just conclusion that no business ought to be permitted which necessarily imposes such enormous burdens of taxation upon those not engaged in it. IN MEMORIAM.

CHICO.—Died of consumption, July 19th, at Chico, Sister Carrie Williams, aged 20 years, a member and faithful worker of Rising Star Lodge, No. 404. And on the same day died of typhoid fever, Sister Nancy Sinclair, aged 10 years, a member of Luella Band of Hope, No. 6.

Sister Williams was a sweet singer and the organist of her Lodge; only dauter of her family and both were favorite members of the temperance army and their loss to the community and the cause is deeply felt.

The double funeral was attended from Good Templars Hall by Fidelity and Rising Star Lodges in full regalia, by Luella Band of Hope and a concourse of sympathizing mourners. Rising Star Lodge celebrated the usual mourning ceremonials, and the sympathy of the Order will be extended to our friends of the two recently organized institutions in their affliction.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

SOUTH AMERICA.

A PLEASURE TRIP.

On former occasions when it was attempted to begin the road from Barbacoas to Tuquerres, the parties who were entrusted with the work had earned the thoro distrust of the people, and everybody seemed determined to prevent them from having any chance to repeat the old do-nothing game. So now, with the entire consent of the merchants and people of Barbacoas, two foreigners and two native merchants united in an offer to the government to put the road thru for about half the money that had been supposed it would cost.

A proposal was forwarded to the Governor of the State, who answered very courteously that he would do his utmost to secure the contract for us, and would appoint a commission empowered to close the terms as soon as he came to Barbacoas in March. In April we heard he was coming in May, and we waited till June when we heard for a little while that he would come in July and then that he could not come this year at all. We saw too afterwards a proclamation he had made, calling on the people to do this work themselves and not let foreigners touch it.

But about September he appointed the commission and chose them all in Tuquerres, because Tuquerres could give him about three times as many votes at next election as Barbacoas. And a Governor or President always works there for most votes, no matter whether the country goes to ruin or not. Strange, is it not? Now the people of these two towns and of Pasto, another town 40 miles beyond Tuquerres, are peculiar. At Tuquerres they tell a stranger, You will find pretty good people here, but those poor Pastenos and Barbacoenos are wretchedly mean people; at Pasto they tell you the same of the Barbacoenos and Tuquerrenos, and at Barbacoas they have a lofty contempt for the other two, and they are all as near alike as can be.

Had the commission been composed of Barbacoans we should have got the contract without the least delay or difficulty; the two natives of the company being silent partners who were to contribute their names and influence merely and make the company partly native and share in the profits. But the Tuquerres people did not want to oblige their neighbors and some one had to go there and make up matters with them. One or both of the native partners was to go with the writer, and they were going to be ready next week sure, for about two months more, when they concluded they could not go at all, and the stranger had to go alone.

There were only two ways to go; to walk or sit in an armchair slung to an Indian's back, and so that a traveler cannot change his position without great danger of capsiziug the whole outfit, perhaps in a mud puddle. Anybody but a lazy man would rather walk; and walk was decided upon. A peon had to be engaged to carry bedding, cooking apparatus, dishes and provisions, which every traveler is expected to carry. As these peons almost without a single exception drink all they earn, they have to be always paid half their trip in advance, and unless a native employer of these fellows is responsible for the advance, the peon will scud for home as soon as he gets it.

There was a native engineer with six or eight peons to wait on him and carry his instruments and outfit, returning to Tuquerres and we went in company. On the first day we made about 12 miles, but the miles began to get very long towards the last, for one just recovering from an eight month's malarial fever and many relapses. We all wore alpargatas, a species of sandal made of hemp soles with a toe and heel band and strings to fasten them on. Much of the time we tramped thru muddy water from a few inches to over two feet deep; then over fallen trees and boulders; up long ascents with here bare slippery rocks, there a field of boulders, but always mud puddles and plenteous stretches of miry, miserable clay mixed up every day by hundreds of tramping human feet. Up one series of 20 or 30 steeps, every one of which you are sure is the last and highest one to climb, and down again on the other side to get a chance for another climb.

In many places the loaded Indians meet with a perpendicular wall of rock as much as 3 feet in height, which they have to struggle up by putting their toes into a slight indentation on the face. In all these years nobody had thot of cutting steps tho from 50 to 100 passed over these places each way every day. Any number of places where for ten to fifty feet the ascent or descent was so smooth and slippery as to be dangerous for a traveler without any load, and nothing had ever been done to it.

And yet for centuries all these people carried loads over these horrible trails knowing that half a day's work of each one once a year, expended on these break-neck spots, would save a day's journey on the trip every time. Many of these Indians have carried loads of 75 to 150 pounds for many generations over this trail. Their legs are wonderfully large and stout, while their arms and hands are unusually small and delicate because of the very slight labor to which they have been subjected.

At each one-fifth of a leag there is what they call a rest; and when you ask them how far it is to a specified place, they will count up and say it is two or five or twelve rests. And, as in other countries, after being told it is five and traveling three of them, the next man tells you it is still five more; the first man wanted to be obliging, you see.

In any of the huts we passed all along the road we were welcome to a "room on the floor," to spread our bed; the only ceremony necessary was to ask permission of the lady housekeeper. We were also welcome to the use of their fire and they generally offered to assist the cook in preparing meals. They never refused any payment offered, but I believe if our party had had no money the poor people would have fed us cheerfully. A poor German had passed that way about a month previously—he had no baggage and not a cent of money, but he got along nicely. They said all the way, "A countryman of mine had passed that way," etc. "Yes, what countryman was he?" Italian, one said, another French or German, English, Yankee—whichever he was, he was a countryman of mine every time.

We used to set out pretty smart and fresh soon after 6 in the morning but always waited till some one had passed over the road to kill any snakes that might have fallen down into it during the night. The hot sun one time, a heavy shower now and then, the cold chills at the bottom of the mud pools, the constant tramping on hard and rough and sharp-cornered stones, the leaping from one boulder to another and the weary climbs, made one of the party at about 2 or 3 in the afternoon of every day a lame and decrepit centenarian, not wearied, but so doubled up and sore and lame from head to foot as to resemble nothing but a ? supporting itself with a staff. But it was a splendid trip.

FANATICISM.

Fanatics were so-called who did extreme and crazy-like acts and talked wildly under religious or other excitement. Men who threw themselves into the Ganges or hung themselves up all day on iron hooks, or maimed or burned themselves to earn a title to Heaven were called fanatics. So were those who shouted and yelled in an unseemly manner at religious meetings or who went up on the housetop and set out from there to fly to Heaven.

That used to be so. Now the word fanatic is generally used very differently. When a person can't be bribed or coaxed or compelled to lie or steal or to drink poison or smoke or get drunk, he stands a good chance of being called a fanatic. If he is of the opinion that Dan Flanagan should not be allowed to make Jerry Moloney drunk and crazy, and take all his money away from him for nothing, and send him home to beat his wife with an ax handle and chuck his children out of the garret window—they call him a fanatic, because they say sensible, righteous people want to see that thing all the time and vote for it every year.

If he objects to Hans Shwiper keeping a den where he collects all the little boys on Sunday and teaches them to gamble and smoke and drink and swear and lie—if he says Hans should be made to quit that and work at his carpenter's or blacksmith's trade like other people—he is a fanatic; for the people who call him so, like to see that kind of work going on, and always vote for it at every election.

When a truthful, honest, cleanly gentleman who knows that drinking poison sends 59 people to death every hour, he is a fanatic if he wont drink and be one of them.

But our young folks will think differently. When they see the red noses and blear eyes and bloated faces of the people who attend the gin-mills; when they see the miserable dirty rags and battered hat and tattered shoes which people wear that go to these vile places; when they get a sniff of how the saloon-keeper makes his friends smell and how filthily they talk—they will think that the real fanatic and fool is the well dressed and good looking young man who goes up to the bar to take his first lesson as to how to follow the road to beggary and ragdom and jail and trampdom.

Perhaps it would be a good plan to call people fanatic who could any year stop the business that kills 100,000 American people every year, but will always keep voting to have it continue its work of death.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

Supt's. please read this paragraph with particular attention and order accordingly. In asking for Badges, only ask for the number actually needed, and if there is prospect of additions to your Band, please order so that you will not have over 5 on hand. This will perhaps cause you to write again soon, but if you will only stop to think you will see that it is a needful regulation. There are now in the State nearly 200 Supt's., and if each one of them has 5 Badges on hand there will be nearly 1,000 idle, you will see at once that it will not do to have a larger stock than that lying unused.

Please accept this suggestion and govern your orders accordingly.

The following circular has been mailed from this office with the necessary blank for report to every Band. It is expected that each Supt. will attend to the matter at once:

To the Superintendent, Officers and Members of the Bands of Hope:—Greeting:—Again it is my privilege to announce to you the general prosperity and continued advancement of the Juvenile Army. We now have 185 Bands in the State, with a membership of 10,000, and all along the line new recruits are coming into our ranks. Let us continue our labors and make this a year which shall long be remembered for its success among the children.

Accompanying, please find blank for report. These reports are to be filled out and returned immediately. It is necessary that the report be made during the first half of the term, and if you will be so kind as to fill out the blank and return at once, a great favor will be conferred, and I shall be enabled to make my report to the Grand Lodge.

Please attend to this without delay. Reports must be in this office not later than Aug. 15th. Hereafter, all Bands which fail to return their reports will be considered delinquent, and further supplies will be denied them. Yours in F. H. and C.

M. E. Richardson.

FLY-TRAPS AND MAN-TRAPS.

The silly, stupid fly wades bravely into the molasses of the fly-trap which is watching to close over him; and it closes and opens and more flies as cheerfully repeat the process. Just like those silly flies and a good deal more so, the silly white man cheerily sings, "The Chinese must go," as he walks bravely into the lager-beer man-trap and the free-lunch man-trap and the whisky-grocery man-trap that are watching and waiting to close on every cent of his money and it closes on it, too. The man-trap dont kill the man just yet, but it puts a white labor stamp on his nose and all over his face and slings a white labor suit of rags and patches all round him. And when the employer of labor reads the white labor man-trap stamp, he solemnly sings, "The sober Chinese must go and do my work."

FROM SONOMA VALLEY.

Phyloxera Too Slow.—A few days ago a beautiful and quite intelligent young lady was on a visit to a neighbor in Sonoma county, when the conversation turned upon grapes and wine.

"Well, Miss Carrie, how do your fathers grapes look?"

"They look well I am sorry to say." (Shakes her head.)

"But you will make a good lot of wine this year."

"Yes, unfortunately. I wish the vines would all die; I don't like wine-making." (Very emphatic.)

"Well, Carrie, the phyloxera are doing the work you desire there."

"Yes, that is a help, but it is entirely too slow; it is like drunkenness; comes too slow to frighten, and just fast enough to encourage."

"Well why don't you raise something else?"

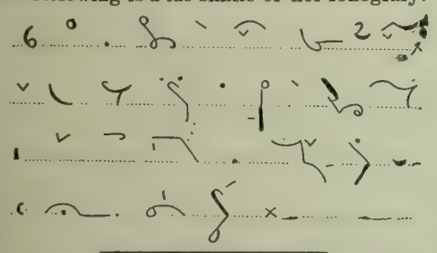
"Father thinks nothing else can be made profitable."

"Then I suppose wine making must be profitable."

"No, it seldom pays more than expenses."

"Then why does he continue an unprofitable crop?"

"Its exilaration keeps up hope."



This is brief but pointed truth; two-thirds of the vineyards in Sonoma county are so much in debt to the Valley banker that he will eventually get them for half their cost. The phyloxera is too slow for the good of the Valley. OBSERVER.

A CHILD PHONOGRAPHER.

The above (inserted by request) is the portrait of Harriet Graham, dauter of Wm. H. H. Graham, of Los Angeles, who will be 9 years of age in October; a native of Kansas. She is a prodigy of fonetic writing; is a total abstainer from tea, coffee, medicine, etc., and is remarkably healthy. Her father expects shortly to make a lecturing tour and to have her accompany him.

The following is a fac-simile of her fonografy:

WELL DONE FOR THE DOCTOR.

I have received of R. H. McDonald quite a number of his temperance documents;to-day Mr. Charles J. King took them up to his Sunday-school at Glenn Ellen where he and his children distributed them among the children and teachers who will take them home to their parents. They were delighted with them; that is the way to rouse public seetiment in the country.

I was telling a doctor up here what Dr. McDonald was doing for the cause of temperance and how he was saving the people by getting them to read his documents. "Yes I see" said he "and he is ruining our business, it is so healthy now that we can scarcely live in this part of the country; its a safe bet that he has quit the practice and no longer cares for the medical faculty who have to get a living by their trade; I like temperance as well as anybody but if everybody would quit drink, our occupation would be gone."

Said I "Doctor that is a candid confession."

"It is no more candid than true,for I tell you that nine-tenths of the people who support doctors bring on their disease by moderate drinking. When a man becomes a drunkard he is as a general rule, no further use to doctors for he cant pay them. No sir; I tell you the rich moderate drinkers are the best and most constant support of the doctors."

I cited to him the condition of Vineland without whisky and without vice.

"Yes I know, but a doctor would starve there if he had house rent free, the right place for doctors is New Orleans or Cuba where everybody drinks and brings on yellow fever." A. M. WINN.

DRUNKEN BOYS.

On the evening of July 3rd, several Lodi boys, about 16 years of age, went on a carousal and became shamefully intoxicated. On last Sunday evening about the same crowd again had a drunken spree. This is news that must be startling to the fathers and mothers of Lodi, and we give it, regreting the necessity of its publication. The boys say that they got their whisky at the brick saloon below the Sargent House. The accomplished compounder of the juice of damnation, who conducts that toll-gate to hell, must have known that he violated the law of the State of California when he sold these minors alcoholic drink. If he escapes prosecution for past offences, let him be warned that he cannot hope to so fortunate in the future, for the Sentinel, upon its own responsibility, promises that his methods of doing business will undergo an airing in the Justice's Court, upon the first recurrence of his committing the crime of selling liquor to a minor.—Sentinel.

"TEMPERANCE LAND."

[Air,—"Beulah Land."]

We'er marching to the Temperance Land
A happy, joyous temperance band
There shines undimmed one happy day
For whisky now has passed away.

Chorus.—

Oh, Temperance Land, bright Temperance Land,
On Prohibition's mount I stand
I look away across the sea
Where blessings are in wait for me
And view the shining, happy shore
Of Temperance Land forever more.

My brothers come and walk with me
And sweet communion here have we
Here may we walk now hand in hand
For this is blessed Temperance Land.

Chorus.—

A hope comes wafted on the breeze
That wo shall surely be at ease
When alcohol no more shall sow
Within our land the seeds of woe.

Chorus.—

We'll keep our banner waving high
And float it proudly in the sky
Our labor is for God and right
So let us keep our armor bright.

Chorus.—

The zephyrs seem to float to me
The hope of sweet security
When all shall join in happy song
A mighty, joyous, temperance throng.

Chorus.—

—E. O. Sharpe, in the Monitor-Journal.

SOME WAG or philosopher—or both combined—has added an "l" to the O in "Local Option," and so made it "Local Loption." There is humor and prophecy in the change, and it prompts an appeal to the head of Her Majesty's Government, who is known to be great at woodcraft:

Woodman, spare not that tree, for most it thrives
Upon the loss of countless wealth and lives;
If you decline yourself to cut it down,
Give power without delay to every parish, town,
Or village even where that tree extends,
And over which some deadly bough now bends.
Good Woodman, pass the axe to those who would Use it for self-protection if they could.
Give them the axe they call for—"Local Option"—
And they will soon surname it "Local Loption"!
Then will the baneful fruit of strong drink's tree
Fall with the boughs, and leave wide districts free;
Until the tree itself, uprooted lies.
And all the curse it carries with it, dies.

—Alliance News.

FIRST answer to Riddle come to hand at 8 o'clock July 28th, from Julia C. Milligan, 407½ Hayes St., S. F. "Manslaughter."

"A saloon is a place where young men learn to be dram drinkers. A place where ruffians congregate. A place where thieves consort. A place where drunkards are made. A place where men forget their homes. A place where a husband forgets his wife. A place where a son forgets his mother."

"Two thousand human beings and over 50,000 head of cattle are annually killed by snake bites in India. So says an unknown but esteemed contemporary. It would be interesting to know how many San Franciscans are killed by 'snakes' in this city every year."

"GOOD FOR THE GIRLS.—At an examination of girl graduates of grammar schools for admission to the Normal College in New York out of 923 applicants 666 proved successful. Out of 804 boys examined for admission to the City College, having like advantages of previous instructions as the girls and answering the same questions, only 360 passed a successful examination." In other words, of the girls sixty-one per cent, passed examination, while of the boys but forty-five per cent, pulled through. It would be interesting to know how many of the boys that failed used tobacco and beer.—Home Protector.

IOWA.—A large majority of the voters of Winnebago County Iowa are of foreign birth but they voted more than 6 to 1 in favor of the prohibitory amendment. When the Germans and Irish see the benefit of temperance and learn its advantage they will be as fanatical and violent advocates for the extermination of the brewers as they are now on the other side.

POPULATION of N. York City in 1880, 1,206,029. Natives white, 708,408; foreign, 477,165; colored, 20,456;. Over 90 years of age, 82 males and 264 females; in all 346. Of the age of 100 and over there were 6 males and 14 white and 9 colored women. That is probably because the men drink and smoke so much. Population of Canada 1881 was 4,324,810.

LEAG OF FREEDOM.—A 4 year old girl was discovered on the 27 July in a miserable den on Freelon Street in this city. She was gnawing a bone there being no eatables in the house. A brother of hers of 11 years old is in the Industrial school; another of 13 blacks boots and the little girl was employed by her father and mother to take the money her brother earns to buy drinks for them. The father was arrested and the mother was found in the drunk cell of the city prison; there are something like 5000 corner groceries, whisky groceries, wholesale liquor stores, breweries and beer dens in San Francisco, whose sole business is to turn good homes into such dens as this without windows, doors, bed, clothing or food and to make good parents drunkards and brutes and to starve innocent children and teach them to steal and send them to jail. The Leag of Freedom as they call it, is a society of the men who do this work all the week and especially on Sunday. Mr. J. W. Shaeffer as President and Mr. Buhlert is Secretary. It is a respectable business, is it not? There are to-day without dout many thousands of poor children in this city and state no better off than the children named, but we dont find out more than one in 100 of them. Another pupil of the Leag in Los Angeles was sent to jail for sixty days for beating his aged mother most cruelly and dragging her round the room by her hair. Beer makes nice boys and the Leag makes nice beer.

CAUTION.

RENEWALS FOR BAND OF HOPE SUPPLIES.

We desire to call your attention to the fact, that, while in ordering Sunday-school literature, one always orders for the then current quarter for "Band Supplies" it is difierent. No matter what time in the year a Band is organized, it is always expected to commence its lesson with the "first quarter," and for the following reasons:

The lessons for that quarter are upon the subject of starting Bands, and commence to teach temperance from the very first principles. Gradually, as the first, second and third quarters are reached, the scope of the lessons widens as the ability of the pupil to understand the subject develops. So on through each succeeding year. Therefore it is essential in ordering or renewing, to state definitely which quarter the supplies are for, otherwise there is liable to be great confusion. It is understood that these suggestions refer to the Band of Hope Teachers' and Scholars' Quarterlies,the "Red,White and Blue," and "Crystal Fountain"; the two last named being companions to the first named. We trust that we shall receive your renewal at the time of expiration each quarter, and that you will kindly assist us by keeping the above hints in mind.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE GERMAN VOTE AND VOTERS.

There is nothing at all in the soil, or in the climate of Germany that should make its people of a different humanity from that of the people of this country. Tho differing in language, traditions and customs from us, we find the virtuous German and the virtuous American will under like circumstances, think and act alike and the ignorant, dissipated or depraved of the two countries will equally sympathize and fraternize. It is fair to assume that a similar education will produce, as nearly as possible, an equal result upon the two peoples.

We are often surprised that there should be so much difference of opinion and action between the German and American on the question of beer and Sunday and temperance. The difference is not one of race or nature but of education and usage. But for the presence of foreign born citizens we should have doutless had 20 years ago an entirely successful national prohibitory law in in the United States. And if the native born alone of the Union, men and women, could vote on eternal prohibition one year from to-day it would be carried five to one.

But if the native born had voted on it 50 years ago it would have been perhaps defeated five to one, because they were then on this question, just where the anti-temperance Germans are to-day; entirely uneducated on the subject like many modern Americans who have studiously contrived to remain densely ignorant in presence of the clearest light.

It is at first sight irritating, that new arrivals in this country should set themselves to overturn the most precious and excellent of the institutions which have made this a splendid country to make a home in, and to substitute for them the pauperizing systems which have made other countries, which have equal advantages, the best of places to emigrate from. But we are apt to forget that we have been sublimely indifferent both as a government and as individuals, as to doing anything whatever to educate the stranger who is to help to make our laws, in the new duties and responsibilities which he has to assume in becoming a citizen.

A century ago, American statesmanship might have been properly defined as the art of guiding the Republic into the smooth waters of industrial and commercial prosperity and political security, with the end of founding a mighty commonwealth on the principles of righteousness and justice. To-day it has degenerated into the disgraceful traffic of office-seeking and the successful trickery of supporting one of two hypocritical parties in power at the utter sacrifice of patriotism, honor and justice.

The principal aim of the Federal and County and municipal governments has been for a long time, to license mantraps for the slaunter of the sons and for the betrayal of the virtue of the dauters of the country. And no effort has been made to encourage or countenance any counter influence or agency in favor of virtue and decency. We should therefore not forget this when we see men of foreign birth ready to avail themselves of the privilege accorded to them here, of enriching themselves by the plunder of our people, under government letters of marque.

Therefore as our Government neglects to exert any influence for good upon the strangers who come among us, it is of great importance that temperance people, Christians and philanthropists should take some measures for instructing our new citizens as to the nature and effects of this infamous traffic, which is nurtured in our midst. We can do so with the certainty that Germans, Swedes, Danes, Irish, etc., when they learn as much of these things as our educated citizens have, will exert themselves as actively to remove this giant evil as they do now to preserve it, and will be as good citizens as the 5,000 Germans who in June voted for temperance in Iowa, and as those already among us who have studied the temperance question and embraced the cause of morality and justice and mercy.

It is safe to predict that if we give them our temperance literature to read in their own language, the Germans in a very few years will be as rabidly opposed to the whole debauching outfit of rum and beer as they are now to prohibition.

CANDIDATES.

Some of the Democratic journals while disapproving of their heathen platform think it would be very stupid and foolish to leave their party for that, and vote for the Republican, which they have been fighting for life. So it would be silly to leave one party and join another no better. And if there is any one treason which the manipulators of a political party can commit which should forever consign them to obloquy and infamy, the San Jose Convention or its majority committed it when its candidates gave their obligation to deprive the workingman of his rest day, the American people of their Sunday and of their right to vote on the questions which most vitally affect their own welfare and to protect themselves from the outrages that are daily and hourly wreaked upon them by the most villainous and murderous gang of outlaws and ruffians that ever made robbery a science and murder a pastime.

It is idle to try to disguise the fact now that to get the gin mill vote the Convention solemly bargained to oust God and morality and sobriety and virtue from American soil and enthrone the images of lust and debauchery as the people's Gods. They vowed that the American father, mother, wife, sister, son, dauter should have no rights which the ruffian of the grogshop might not trample under foot, in consideration of his vote cast in the interest of hell and human woe.

Republican journals are endeavoring to rake up discreditable lies against Genl. Stoneman, but they are two cowardly to mention the strongest, if not the sole grounds of his unfitness for the office of Governor of an American State. They make a little fuss of course about his wronging the poor man of his rest, but they say nothing of his insult to American Christianity, and American institutions; of his proposed sell out of them for imported pauperizing barbarism; of his being largely interested in the manufacture and promotion of drunkenness and pauperism and crime; and of his denial of the right of the citizen to vote for the protection of his home, his family, his community, his country.

If they could discover that Geml. Stoneman bot a pair of Chinese made slippers or got a couple of shirts washed by a chinaman, when he was at San Jose, they would have a tremendous leverage on him. That would unfit hin to be Governor forever; and what a hero the discoverer of such an important piece of history would become. And if he had 6 months ago publicly used one kindly word respecting the Chinese or railroads or corporations, he would have been tabooed as a candidate by both parties.

If a rumseller and anti-Sunday and anti-Temperance and anti-American and anti-Republican government man, is a fit man to be Governor, Genl. Stoneman is probably the most honest and upright one that could be had. But if every man who fears God and has any care for the welfare of humanity, would register to-day a solem oath that never under any circumstances would he in future vote for any candidate for any office, who makes, buys, sells or uses any kind of intoxicating drinks, it would be a most safe act of patriotism and benevolence, and one that could never be regretted.

There is nothing now at issue between the Republican and Democratic parties except the distribution of the spoils, and the difference that may be on the Sunday question and that of the right of the people to determine to have no thief-school and drunkeries if a majority so decide. And the Republican managers may rest under the perfect assurance that unless they come out and up honestly and distinctly in platform and candidates, for the American Sunday and for the right of the people to decide by vote as to whether a minority of thieves or a majority of good citizens shall take charge of the public interests, there will be a remarkably healthy and numerous third party opposed to them who will take especial interest in these matters, and none at all in the relative merits of Democratic whisky rule and Republican beer devotion.

CORNER GROCERY SERMON.

"You see, Shakob, mine poy, der vine und der peer und der prandy is vot makes der mooney, und it is der mooney as makes der beeples rich und fat und pig und vot nose evry dings und ken pild pridges und delephoones und shails und goold vauches und hundred toller koffins und ralerodes ofer der mountains und tunnels und such dings ofer der water.

In Italy und Portagul und Crease und Shpane und Burvaria und Switzerland, dey makes vine und prandy und they trinks it blenty too, und dey is all very rich und fat und eats limburger casen, und polona sasach vot is made not mit kats too; und dey has blenty money and pilds raleroads und pig steampotes, vot der Chinamen to Kaliforny prings mid Kaptin Roper."

"Und is you rich too, poppa?" said Jacob: "You sells beer and makes vine mid vater und dem tings vot you bize fun de drugstore, und you trinks blenty too, is you rich?"

"I dont sold it long enuf yet, Shakob, but I kets rich pi und pi; look at dem vurkin beeples vot my peer trinks, und all hiz mooney mid me shpends: Dare iz 10 laudrymen und 6 milkmen und 10 vimmen in von lodgin house vot more as von dollar a day shpens mit my peer every one. Und soon I gits rich."

"Doze der milkmen und der vimmen git rich too, poppa?" "No, dey dont want tu git rich; dey dont keep s'loons mit lager beer; dey trinks de beer vot makes rich der s'loons; dey is de poor people vot makes us rich. But Shakob, I vonts you to see dat all the rich beeples, und de shmart beeples, vot cooms here mid blenty money, iz from der vine countries vere der peeple blenty drinks. Dr. Mc Tonald vot has der Bercifik Bank iz Italian, dat iz vere he his money got; vere dey makes der vine. Sharon vot de Balace Hotel bilt, iz a Portugoose vere dey makes der vine. Sutro vot de big tunnel bilt, coom from Shpane vere dey makes der goot prandy und der sherry vine, same as vot I in mine cellar makes. Und General Shtonemin, vot dey makes der Sunday beer guvner, he come from Burvaria, mine country, vere I comes too. Und Bankroff, vot makes der pooks und der maps, und Pixley und der men vot makes der noosbabers he is all Switzerlanders, vere dey makes de gin und der peer und gits rich all der dimes. Und der telegraf und der railroad men und Crokker und Shtanford und Denis Kearny vot is rich, is all from Italy, vere dey nose every dings und der gude vine und brauty makes mid dare grapes.

Und Shakob, dere is England, vere dey sings songs mid a grindshtone organ, und a monkey mid red kloze to pick up der cents, dey is all very poor beeples in England und noze nodings at all becoz he has no vineyards. Und dere iz der Skotch, vot iz poorer too; dey goze to church Sunday und all makes his livin mid a grindshtone musik und der bag pipes; dey has no vineyards in Scotland too, only Kabbige und he makes his vishky mid oats und has Sunday breachers mit gowns und is yust so poor as mice. Und he noze nodings at all.

Und dere is de Yankees too, vot don't got no vineyards, dey don't got noding more az de beer vot de Yarmans brings mid himself, und he lifs mit hash und kodfish und don't noze no dings. Ven der Italians und Bortagoose und Greeks here coom first, der Yankees voz very poor und could not read his own name, und he vurked mid de Englishmen und der Shvedes und der Danes und der Irish mid dere organs und monkeys und tomboreens und Sundayshkools; he vaz make his livin dat vay, und had no perlona sasage und no limburger, und no beer. But now der peer und der vine was coom mid lager beer s'loon und der vineyard und der distillery—und now dey haz raleroads, und shampane und gude kloze und meersham pipes und der votes prings $5 a piece, und der Sunday izh broke, und ve gets rich, us vot der peer und der vishkey makes. Dis iz gude blaces, Shakob; der vurkin men vot belongs to der beer shop, gits more az four times der vages vot he gets in Eurup, und he eats yust der same; so he shpends 4 times more mit der beer vot he can in der ole country; und so ve cooms rich; fill oop my shkooner agane, Shaikey, und gimmee der odar meersham vot is filled oop."

DRUNKENNESS AND CRIME.

In opening the Leeds Assizes, December 14, 1876, Mr. Justice Hawkins remarked:—"He was sorry to say three-fourths—he might almost say nine-tenths—of the crime in the calendar seemed to have been committed under the influence of intoxication, and he found that that was the case not only as regarded the calendar before him, but from the calendars of other counties he had visited."

At the Winter Assizes of the same year Mr. Justice Mellor said at Chester—"He thought he might express his long-held opinion with some authority after fifteen years' experience as a judge, that most of the crimes of violence proceeded either directly or indirectly from drunkenness."

In opening the Commission at Dublin, February 15, 1877, Mr. Justice Fitzgerald said:—"It has been the habit of judges on the bench, and of speakers on public platforms, to address very wise observations to the public as to the crying and besetting crime of intemperance—a crime leading to nearly all other crimes—a crime which they might very well say led to nineteen-twentieths of the crimes in this country."

At the Spring Assizes for the County of Durham, on February 23, 1877, Lord Coleridge said:—"He thought it was within the course of his duty to say that within his short experience as a judge, and having lived some considerable time in the world amongst other judges, and judges of much larger experience than himself, it was certainly the case that if we could make England sober we might shut up nine-tenths of the jails."

The Cincinnati Gavette says that 81 per cent of all the crime of that city last year, came from the liquor saloons.

Massachusetts statistics prove that 85 per cent and Rhode Island statistics show 90 per cent of the crime of those states is due to intemperance.

The whole 16 pages of this paper could be filled with statistics and records showing that three-fourths to nineteen-twentieths of all crime and pauperism is due to drink. But it is unnecessary, for everybody knows it.

NO RUM NO CRIME.

In Vineland N. J. a colony of people have lived for 20 years and had no grogshop, for 13 years at least they have numbered over 10,000 people of various states and nationalities; and in all that time this was the criminal record; a stranger once came there drunk and was caut breaking into a shoe store, and Mr. Landis the leader of the colony fired a pistol and badly wounded a man who had nearly set his wife crazy with malicious persecution. Mr. Landis was never an abstainer.

Bessbrook in Ireland has had 4500 Irish people half catholic, half protestant and been without a grog-shop or a policeman for many years and has no crime and scarcely any poverty.

Sixty square miles of Tyrone county in Ireland has no grogshop and needs no police.

Over 1300 parishes and hamlets and villages in England have no beer-shop or grogery, and "the condition of the people, social, moral and religious is all that can be desired;" so a church committee of examination reported in a large published volume of evidence.

Pitcairns Island was colonized about 80 years ago by mutineer sailors and Kanaka women. They foreswore rum and have never had a crime since, tho nearly 600 people have been raised there.

No lie could be told in painting the blackness of of the crime of the liquor curse. No man knows how to exaggerate the enormity of a traffic that butchers nearly 2000 people of this country every week and causes immeasurable crime and misery and woe beside—and has no purpose nor object but to enrich a few heartless unpitying murderers who live on the blood and lives and souls of the people of the United States, butchered with a thousand times more cruelty than is practiced upon the hogs and cattle at the slauter pens.

If that is not true, dispute it with facts. If it is true, let no man claim to have a spark of humanity or Christianity or mercy in his heart who looks upon this awful condition of our country with indifference or poohpoohs or denies or ridicules these most solemn facts, or who is not heartily in favor of expelling the great tyrant, murderer, monster enemy from our land.

ONE of the best authorities at San Quentin says that he finds ninety of every hundred persons came there thru the dram shop. The dram shop is and always has been the anteroom of the penitentiary.

PICKING UP A BONE.

At a time when good men and women of all parties are uniting to push to victory the battle against rum, the Rev. R. L. Harford, D.D., finds his favorite position in the conflict that of fomenting jealousies and antipathies between the Churches and the temperance societies. It looks as if some nauty Good Templar has lately forgotten to do him obeisance; and like one of old, he has erected a gallows in his back yard and is going to destroy his enemy's whole nation when he hangs Mordecai.

Without the least provocation or shadow of offense from the RESCUE, he has done it the honor of selecting it as the first thing to be demolished. There has been nothing deserving of any notice in his mosquito assaults, except that a continuous charge of falsehood has been made against the Editor of the RESCUE which perhaps Mr. H. is not aware is intensely offensive to people who regard and honor the truth, altho those who do not are not sensitive in that respect.

While accusing the RESCUE of fabricating and falsifying history, Mr. H. enticingly lays out in the C. C. Advocate as a bone for it to pick up, the lame assertion that the M. E. Church has always been an aggressive TOTAL abstinence society and the Christian Church in its various branches, thru its internal processes, and without any influence from without, has done about all the temperance work, and in Kansas and Iowa, he implies that the temperance people have only shaken down the ripened fruit. In this he figures too largely on the credulity or ignorance of his audience.

It is not news to temperance people, who have preached it for 50 years, that John Wesley fulminated against the strong distilled liquors, making, selling, using them and that his church was severe on drunkenness; but any attempt to prove that the enactment of a church rule against distilled liquors, which itself speedily fell into disuse and abuse, was at all intended to be a prohibition of wine, beer, cider, etc., is surely not made in ignorance of the fact that in Mr. Wesley's time and up to 1820 or 1830, those drinks were believed by all Christians and other people, with the very rarest exceptions, to be wholesome, nourishing, strengthening provisions of God's mercy for our use.

It may be new to Mr. Harford that Methodism began in England, where the Methodists have never yet heard of that total abstinence feature in their own church disipline, altho they are of late forming total abstinence societies and Bands of Hope with utmost diligence and cheering success; and they have been induced to do so by the influence of the temperance societies.

It is an entire wilful manufacture of history to assert that any church, except the Mahomedan, has ever been or is now an aggressive total abstinence society or has been the source of the temperance movement; no more than of free trade or emancipation or prison reform or the Sunday-school or the Protestant reformation or of Methodism. All these reforms were of the people, in and out of the churches. The churches have assented to and accepted them just as they were accepted by the press and public opinion, and as good men in the churches saw it to be their duty and as fast as they could overcome the rabid opposition of their obstructive and resisting fellow members.

The RESCUE cant be got into war with the M. E. Church South either, not even to please Mr. Harford. No disposition to quarrel on either side. That church dont seem to have any champion to pick quarrels for it or who wants to whitewash or falsify its history. And it dont want to employ Mr H. in that capacity. It is vastly more to its credit if it was in the rear of its duty 10 or 20 years ago, to be now reaching manfully out for the highest right, than to have been right a few years ago like Mr. H. and now exerting a bitter hostility to temperance and helping the Leag of Fiendom to breed discord among its advocates. Mr. H. may now proceed with the exercise of his inventive faculties unmolested; a last word is that some good dyspepsia remedy might be of great benefit to him, if taken in quart doses.

LODGES, ETC.

J. H. GILMORE WRITES: "I am spending the summer in the grand, old Sierras, at the foot of Mt. Talac, and at the Gilmore Glen Alpine Mineral Spring. This is quite a resort for tourists who come to Lake Tahoe to help to while away the hot summer months. We are in the regions of snow where God has stored away a never failing supply of his own beverage, pure water, nevertheless it is a lamentable fact that parties from the city who come here and ascend the grand, old Mt. Talac with its lofty head reared heavenward, 10,200 feet above the level of the sea, discard the pure, health and life giving water so bountifully supplied, and take a draft of the death-dealing, drunkard making liquid which they carry 14 miles in an old, black bottle. When they reach the summit of the mountain on the topmost peak they drink the beverage that makes men fools. Yes, and I regret to say that ladies (?) too indulge in the poison."

BRO. WEBB says: "I not unfrequently obtain an intelligent and appreciative subscriber for the RESCUE by correspondence." Bro. W. H. Craft of that beautiful health retreat at Crafton, San Bernardino county, says, "your work with us is still bearing fruit, my heart is in it tho, as you are aware, I cannot give all the time I would. Am busy selling the lands with irrigating water and the right kind of people are buying, and if I can prevent it there will never be the stain of whisky nor the trail of the serpent in our settlement. Our minister has come." With very much the same climate, productive soil, water and good, enterprising people, this will soon be second only to Riverside and if they keep the liquor out, that much ahead.

SUTTER CREEK LODGE meets every Tuesday evening in a Hall fitted up by themselves and everything is arranged pleasant and comfortable and judging from the tone of the speeches under Good of the Order last meeting, any one would conclude that a large field of usefulness in the future is yet to be added to the noble record of work done in the days that are gone in connection with this Lodge. A committee has been appointed to take charge and arrange for the next meeting of the District Lodge which meets here on the 25th of August for a two days session and no efforts will be spared to make the coming meeting one of the grandest affairs ever held in this county, further announcement will be made as the plans mature and are completed. But we wish to add that no Good Templar in the county should miss the coming session. It is hoped that all the Lodges will send their earnest workers and best material as delegates that we may be able to devise intelligent plans for future operation in the redemption of our country from strong drink. C. L.

ED. RESCUE.—As an infidel who believes in the suppression of the liquor traffic, I protest against you calling the Democratic platform an infidel platform.

From reading your paper one would imagine all infidels to be opposed to the Sunday Law, and temperance legislation in general. The fact is there are more prohibitionists among infidels in proportion to their number, than among Chistians. The oldest and most influential infidel paper in the United States (The Boston Investigator) is a thoro temperance paper, and advocates prohibition of the traffic.

D. W. Bennette of the Truth-seeker, also favors the entire snppression of the degrading traffic. Judge Thomas Hurtell, a very prominent infidel fifty years ago, was one of the very first to favor the total abstinence movement. I can mention the names of several prominent gentlemen of this city who are infidels, some of whom have been voting the Democratic ticket but won't do it this time because of their leaders pandering to the lowest of all elements, the whisky element.

It is true there are some infidels who are opposed to the Sunday Law, and who are not temperance men, but this is equally true of a great many Christians many of whom are clergymen.

The Democratic platform is no more an infidel platform than it is a Christian platform. The truth is, it is a whisky platform, and ot to be voted against by every good citizen be he infidel or Christian.

By publishing the above you will oblige an infidel who not only talks temperance, but votes temperance and spends his money for the suppression of this withering and blightening curse of rum. G. TELFAIR BRUCE.

[The term infidel was applied to an anti-Sunday, anti-temperance platform by the RESCUE under the impression that every one who assents to that platform which demands that rum shall be sold either 6 or 7 days of the week must have lost all faith in a God or a future life, as all who engage in the sale or manufacture of drunkenness do. But it has by no means stated that every infidel favors whisky. Of course a great many do not. Perhaps "pagan" would be a better appellation for a member of the Leag of Fiendom. It is admitted that a respectable infidel has a right to protest against so dishonoring the name.—ED.]

IN OTHER STATES.

A GAMBLER in Indianapolis has presented a pair of sleeve-buttons to a preacher for saying in his sermon that common gamblers were no worse than speculators in stocks.

NEW BRUNSWICK.— The liquor leaguers are getting put to rights since the Scott Act is declared valid. The law is to be rigorously enforced.

THE GERMANS cast 5,000 votes for prohibition in Iowa, 500 of them in Des Moines. When they have had the same education on the temperance question that the Americans have, they will vote in as large proportion for prohibition in California. The Champion feels bad about it.

CHEAP JOHN has been among the brewers according to the Drunkard-maker's Champion. It charges Satan's defeat in Iowa to the indifference and parsimony of seven-eighths of the Iowa brewers—and to the blind fanaticism of her farmers. It is surprising that fanaticism that don't want their sons and dauters enlisted in the brewer's army of jail birds and suicides and tramps.

VICTORIA, AUSTRALIA.—Report of G. L. Session shows 99 Lodges with a membership of 3746 and a loss of 11 Lodges and 560 members during the year. The executive say the incubus of a G. L. debt for some years has prevented the necessary efforts to establish new or help the old Lodges. And still there was some uncertainty as to the cause of the decline. Cheap john has been a very active worker in the I. O. G. T. Lodges all round the world. Our brethren will all find out that running a temperance organization that has no funds and is in debt is a failure and that 25 cents a quarter capita tax is the least that can bring any real success.

THE GRAND LODGE of Canada has raised its capita tax from 5 to 7cents a quarter to try to get out of debt. When it raises it 18 cents more per quarter, it will begin to do something consistent with a Grand Lodge of I. O. G. T. They did another handsome thing, too. Bro. T. W. Casey the G. W. S. and editor of the Casket, who gives his whole time to the work of the Order and does $3,000 worth of labor a year was scaled down from $1,000 to $800 a year salary. And now when they have cut him down to two meals a day the cheap johns of the Order think he will be able to do 33⅓ per cent more work and the Order can grow now. But how much better it would have been to have cut him down to $200—that would have saved the Order $800 a year to spread the cause and make it boom.

ENGLAND.—The Church of England Temperance Society held their first annual holiday at the Crystal Palace in the first week in July; 26,732 persons present, among whom were a large number of ministers and curates most of them wearing the Blue Ribbon and badge of the C. of E. temperance society. Canons Flemming, Wilberforce, and Ellison made grand speeches and Mr. R. T. Booth of the Blue Ribbon Army said there were 900,000 wearing the blue in the places he had visited. In Newcastle when he left it, there were 15,000 and now they have, thru the work of the churches and chapels and all of who love God and humanity risen to 36,000 , and 36 mantraps there have been closed for want of business. In Swansea where 26,000 signed the pledge only one per cent. have violated it. Weston, the teetotal pedestrian walked 50 miles on the ground there in less than nine hours and made a fine speech in the evening as fresh as a lark. The Church of England which at one time seemed hopeless as to temperance, is now about the most active and aggressive of all, altho they have a moderate drinking section of which they will soon probably be rid.

THE GROG-SHOP MUST GO.

People should not forget that all the works of the National Temperance Society are to be had at 1041 Market street, Rev. J. B. Hill, agent. The best and most valuable works of the ablest writers in America and Europe are to be had there always. Our business men who take the RESCUE should get there "Our Wasted Resources," "Bacchus Dethroned," "Dr. Richardson's Lectures," and various standard works they have never seen. People should read up on this subject of getting the grog-shop out of San Francisco. It will be worth far more than fifty millions a year of a clean find to get the grog-shop, beer-den, pauper-mill and thief-factory out of the city.

BEER HANDBILLS.

There is one of Julia Colman's Beer Tracts published every week in the RESCUE to show our lodges and readers everywhere what they are and where to send for them. These leaflets as they appear in the RESCUE should be read in the lodges every week. They fill a needed place in our temperance literature that is found nowhere else. It is probably correct to say that no literature ever published could be made more useful to our cause than these excellent beer tracts. Beer is the most dangerous, fatal, ruinous, besotting, debauching and utterly debasing agency that ever cursed any portion of this world, and it is so principally because of its being an enemy in disguise, of which if no one drank more than half a pint a day, it would not seem to do any harm, tho it could do no good and would really poison its user to that extent daily.

But the horrible compound of poison and villainy is so contrived as to produce an ungovernable thirst and more rapidly and more completely than any other drink enslaves and besots and brutalizes its victim.

Tracts are often wasted, always when shoveled out pelmel. You would not give a Swedish tract to a Portugese or a Spanish one to an Irishman; just as careful should we be in using tracts to give each one with a definit purpose that it shall produce a certain effect upon the party to whom it is given. In that way used, a dime expended in tracts may produce, and often has produced a result worth thousands of dollars; and a $100 worth of tracts may be so perverted as to produce only a dime result.

We should make this series of beer leaflets worth millions of dollars to this State, and to combat the beer plague there is no such other agency to be found anywhere.

If our R. W. G. L. would republish that series translated into German, it ot to produce a better harvest of votes and temperance sentiment than all the work of that body has done for years.

ADDRESS TO THE GREENBACK VOTERS OF THIS COUNTY.

We declare against Bank, Railroad, Telegraph, Land and Monied Monopolies.

We charge the Republican and Democratic parties with bad legislation in the extension of bank charters.

We declare against National banks, high railroad fares, telegraph tolls; in favor of land for actual settlers; for the payment of the National debt, and against refunding it;

For equal rights for all and special privileges for none;

For impartial suffrage:

For prohibition, and against the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage;

For the absolute prohibition of Chinese importation and immigration to this Country;

That there shall be no more funding or re-funding of the National debt, but that it shall be paid as speedily as possible out of funds now on hand, or whenever may be;

That Government shall make all money, whether gold, silver or paper, a full legal tender for all debts and dues, whether public or private. We endorse that plank in the National platform which favors the payment of the National debt according to contract, and do not favor or approve of any paper claiming to be a Greenback paper that advocates repudiation.

We call upon all industrial organizations and reformers everywhere to join us in carrying out the foregoing principles.—Lompoc Record.

The above was recently adopted by the Greenbackers of Santa Barbara Co. in council. The RESCUE is not run in the interest of the Greenback party; but it is in the interest so far of anybody that works for the abolition of the most cruel and barbarous crime that ever afflicted and scourged mankind.

The foregoing is a good square declaration of principles; contains nothing dishonest or revolutionary or harmful to any lawful and loyal human interest; it contains no single article of incompetent statesmanship or doutful policy. And it is an augury of good that the great majority of Greenbackers are for honest square prohibition.

But there is one wretchedly disreputable feature in the Greenback business as well as in the Prohibition party. They can't promise a fellow a post-office yet or a job in the mint, or custom house for voting their ticket. If they could do that and make it sure, their principles would command a frantic adoration purely on their intrinsic merits. Nothing in the world can kindle the fire of true patriotism like a post office or a salaried clerkship to make it interesting.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

TWO DIVISIONS, A and B. Benefits in A, $1.000; in B, $2.000. Entrance fee in A, $4; in B, $5. A member of one joining the other pays half fee; under 49 eligible to both.

Classes: 1st, 20 to 29 yrs; 2d, 30 to 39; 3d, 40 to 48; 4th, 49 to 55; 5th, 56 and upwards.

Assessments. On the death of a member each member of his division shall be assessed, 1st class, 75c; 2d, 90c; 3d, $1.15; 4th, $1.40; 5th, $1.70.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank, S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S. Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

E. H. BOSCHER, DRUGGIST,

DONT WAIT.

Our readers need not wait till they have $1,000 to spare, or even $100, to send for goods to H. A. Smith's Cash Grocery, advertised in another colum of this paper, but send for what you need or can spare the money for, if only $10 or less, and it will surely pay you, and that you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have knocked at least one pin from under the whisky fabric which is struggling and striving for supremacy over every thing that is good or that opposes its rule in this beautiful land.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

PROHIBITION vs. LICENSE.

This is the actual issue; it is civilization vs. barbarism; Heaven vs. hell; God vs. mammon. Shrink from it—avoid it or shirk it as we may, this is the real temperance question; and it is one we can no longer neglect; we must meet it; to neglect it or to be silent is to make a record for license.

(a) To drink liquor is sinful enough; (b) to make and traffic in it is more sinful; (c) to license—to give legal sanction, either actively or silently, is the most sinful and heinous crime of all. The gutter inebriate is the most innocent party of the three; he is more sinned against than sinning; if the drunkard cannot enter the kingdom of Heaven, how about the drunkard-maker, or the maker of drunkard makers? this maker of the drunkard-makers is the party of the first part and the tempter of the tempted. This most assuredly fixes the guilt of the wife-beater and man-slayer and innumerable crimes upon the sovereign voter who has so used his prerogative as to identify and connect himself in nearly all the criminality and pauperism of the times.

Does any one doubt this position? does any one deny that a licensed liquor-traffic—not an illicit or free traffic, is the Gigantic Crime of crimes—the stupendous immorality of the state and nation?

It is an urgent demand that there should be an investigation and ascertain if possible who is responsible—who is the guilty man, and to see that none escape. Thousands of voters in our State, who are counted as good citizens, above reproach, as the world goes, or may be ministers of the gospel, or editors of religious jonrnals, or church-members in good standing, or Good Templars against whom no charges are brought, are as ready as ever was Hazael, the Syrian, to exclaim "is thy servant a dog that he should do this great thing?" This indictment holds good against these parties, not officially or professionally, but in their sovereign capacity; in these two spheres there is an incongruity; the integrity of the one has given place or been obscured by the crookedness and corruption of the other. Holiness, good-will-to-man, pure conscience has been left out of the political arena; success-at-whatever-cost has been the ruling passion; parties and not principles have ruled.

The church membership ought to deplore the relation which they sustain to and the protection which they give to the distiler, brewer and saloonist. As sovereigns, their signatures are upon every liquor license in the state, for what they do by another they do by themselves; they employ and pay officials to sign licenses, and then with a palsied indifference accuse "the government" of injustice and corruption.

There is any amount of charlatanism among temperance people and he who hunts for the desired remedy in the moral power or self respect of the drunkard or the patriotism or humanity of the dealer will find himself a failure every time. 'Tis not the bad habits of the drunkard that require the remedy so much as the bad habits of the voter; and just here is where the temperance reform should begin; reform the voter and intemperance will disappear. The reform of the voter is just as much a personal individual affair as the reform of the inebriate, to purge his own ballot; it should be just as disreputable to countenance license at the polls as to be drunk on licensed liquor; moral character is as much at stake in the ballot as in a church certificate, and indeed it requires an affidavit of unusual power to establish a moral character for any one who persists in sustaining license at the polls, either actively or silently.

Voters have committed this error by inadvertence more than by intention, but it is none the less committed and that too by the will of the people.

This licensed traffic has been entailed or instituted by party policy. The nation adopted it as a measure to pay the nation's debts; and this was the egregeous blunder of the Republican party, it was emphatically the policy of that party when it was at the hight of its power and invincible, and this action of that party has had friends in those who ought to have been its enemies. Republicans, honest and true have been deceived again and again and even enjoy the deception of this vile, monster evil. This party was invincible and could carry any plan or policy it desired; from that time on to the present that party has not ceased to be the advocate and champion of a licensed liquor traffic. If, as shown above, to license liquor is superlatively worse than to drink it, then is the licensing Rep. party superlatively worse than a whisky drinking Dem. party. Let that be as it may, there can be no doubt that the adherence of the Rep. party to the ruinous liquor license system in the nation and a large number of the states has disrobed it of its glory and prestige. This party is so committed to this system and has so used its good name to fortify and popularise a base traffic that its moral susceptibities are paralyzed, and there is more to hope for in the possible reform of whisky drinking democrats than in the dazed and purblind Rep. party that has inaugurated, fostered and petted this licensed liquor traffic, and from an infant has reared a giant in less than 20 years. Can there be any so cranky or fanatic as to expect that that party will give up its hold on license and adopt prohibition? this party is the real opponent of the Prohibition Reform party as hell is opposed to heaven. For one in the ranks of a Prohibition Reform party I accept the situation and am ready to meet this issue and take part in its conflict; this is the fight we must make, viz. Repeal License and plant Prohibition in its stead. It is best that all should understand and accept this issue and abandon the mountebankism and chicanery of moral suasion, local option, license or any halfway, half-hearted, compromising scheme.

The attack of John Robinson upon the doings of the convention, if that convention was to be considered strictly a convention of the Prohibition Refrom party of the State was eminently just, but I am not willing to admit that the party was thus sold or stolen or that any mortgage was then or there foreclosed. I considered it a very courteous and proper thing that the State Central committee should make a call for a council or conference of the different temperance organizations, and to make an effort to bring "order out of chaos"—to unify or crystalise the advanced temperance sentiment into action. And it was satisfactorily shown in the brief discussions that the maintainance of the Sunday law or the verifying of the Rep. party were not the paramount issues, but that the establishment of prohibition on the grave of license was in the near future. J. Woods.

Ed. Rescue:—I have been a reader of the Daily Chronicle about a year and I think every paper has given an account of one or more murders besides other great crimes, and the chief cause seems to be alcohol. Negro slavery degraded our people and nation and alcohol is doing the same thing and the result will be the same unless we banish it. In the time of the rebellion we undertook to save our nation and slavery with it, but we could not then save our nation in its sins, neither can we now save it and continue the manufacture and sale of alcohol. We cannot lay any claim to patriotism unless we exert ourselves to put away this great evil. History, experience, and common sense teach it; a woe is pronounced upon it; it is wickedness, and God has said: "the wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God." We read: "the devil as a roaring lion walketh about seeking whom he may devour." and it does seem as though he had corrupted the pulpit, the press and the people.

Is it not strange that our Legislature should make an appropriation for the encouragement of wine and brandy making in these days of temperance agitation? Is it not strange that President Arthur should encourage dissipation at the White House after the good influence of the previous administration? Probably one reason was, he loves the "critter;" another, he is fond of the company of those that love it; another, he wants to be president again and fishes for the votes of the whisky party. When President and Mrs. Hayes banished the wine cup, good people rejoiced. When President Garfield took possession of the White House the people had no fear that the wine cup would be replaced, but when President Arthur restored the wine cup, good people felt sad. When the wicked rule, the people mourn. If this state of things continues, our legislative halls will become like a cage of unclean birds. But we hope for better things. The devil is a coward for we read, "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." Ten righteous men would have saved Sodom and Gomorah, and we hope there are thousands of righteous men in our nation that are praying for the right and working for the right and we hope the day is not far distant when prohibition will triumph in all of these United States. Man was created upright but he has invented a great variety of foods and drinks to gratify an unnatural appetite, that have caused him to become diseased and instead of returning back to a natural diet which would have worked a cure, he has invented a great variety of poisonous medicines to cure those diseases which have made the matter worse. The beasts, fowls and fishes use such food and drink as the Creator designed for them and are satisfied. If man would do the same, that would end intemperance and all its evils. Is it sensible for the government to license a business that causes all sorts of crimes and then punish the criminals? This whole alcoholic business is wrong from begining to end and should be immediately abolished thruout the world.

I understand there are to be three monuments erected to perpetuate the memory of President Garfield, one at Washington, one at Cleveland and one at San Francisco, and would not this be an appropriate inscription, "Assassinated by Guiteau and murdered by his doctors?"

A Universalist convention demands that the general convention shall refuse all beneficiary aid to theological students who use tobacco. Everything seems to indicate that the boys who are going to use tobacco are to be in the future the dull boys, the late boys, the weak boys, the poor boys, the puny boys, the ragged boys and the dirty boys.

JUNE TWENTY-SEVENTH IN IOWA.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

The long period of petition, argument and plea was over. Iowa had passed through four years of pros and cons in the great legislative struggle for constitutional prohibition, and to-morrow "we, the people," were to decide. The campaign of the prohibitionists had been marked thruout by moderation and good temper, the constant appeal of the temperance press and platform being: "Come, let us reason to-gether." On the Sabbath previous two thousand sermons and addresses had been made for the amendment. The church-going people were deeply impressed with the sacredness of the cause, and determined it should not suffer because of indiscretions on their part.

The day dawned calm and pleasant, with clouds drawn like an awning over the people who spent its hours in the streets, except those who were at prayer-meeting, in lunch rooms, or inside the voting places. The pleasant weather was an immense advantage to the temperance side, as the farming population had to go from one to eight miles to reach the polls, while the liquor vote was confined chiefly to cities and towns where the ballot-box was easy of access. At 9 A. M. the bells of Iowa began to ring, calling the children of "The Bands of Hope" to their appointed rendezvous. It told the progress of our cause that the dignified bass tones of the court-house bells often rang out this summons. At the same hour church bells chimed the call to prayer, and women gathered to besiege the throne of Heavenly grace. Meanwhile the voters began to assemble around the polls, where busy temperance men were ready to offer the following ballot:

FOR THE ADOPTION OF THE AMENDMENT.

Amendment to the Constitution of Iowa.

Add as Section 26 to Article 1 of said Constitution the following:

"SECTION 26. No person shall manufacture for sale, or sell or keep for sale, as a beverage, any intoxicating liquors whatever, including ale, wine and beer. The general Assembly shall by law prescribe regulations for the enforcement of the prohibition herein contained, and shall thereby provide suitable penalties for the violation of the provisions hereof."

A surprise awaited the sovereign citizens. For the first time in history the court-houses, city halls, engine rooms, and other places where the ballot-box was set, had assumed holiday attire. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union was early on the alert, and wreaths of evergreen displayed their motto, FOR GOD AND HOME AND NATIVE LAND, circling above the star spangled banner. Wreathes of flowers were around the box itself, or else helped to spell out the tender plea: BROTHERS, VOTE TO PROTECT OUR HOMES. Washington and Lincoln, transferred from many a quiet sitting-room, looked down benignantly upon the scene, little boys and girls circulated thru the room with prettily printed cards, of which this is a specimen: We, 500 wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of Marion, Iowa, earnestly request you to cast your vote for the Prohibitory Amendment. For in most cases, the towns had been districted and canvassed by the ladies, and the home vote registered on a petition like the foregoing.

At Ames, the polling place was fragrant as a flower garden. Mottoes and pictures covered the walls, the ladies brought their canaries, and the girls had the organ transferred from the Congregational church and sang patriotic airs, while next door coffee and lunch were served to all. There was no rudeness, no tobacco smoke; the voters seemed pleased, the saloon men couldn't be angry with those who actually asked them to a "treat" (even if coffee, not beer, was the proffered beverage), and an eye witness said, "You would have thought for all the world that it was a rousing old-fashioned church sociable."

At Marion the young ladies succeeded in confiscatin nearly all the choice flowers, in that bower-like village, "fo the cause." These they made up into bright button-hole bouquets, which they heaped up in pretty little baskets and gave to the children of the Band of Hope who moved freely about among the voters, saying to every one, "Please sir, will you vote for the Amendment?" They gave out the ladies petition, also, offering to all who favored "our side" one of their little bouquets.

It was no less touching than significant to see, as we did that day, men in checked shirts and "overalls" wearing a spray of geranium and heliotrope—doubtless for the first time in their lives; to see a colored man with a bunch of rose-buds fastened in his 'shocking bad hat," while he grinned from ear to ear with pride at the grateful recognition of his loyalty; to see a fair-faced foreigner bending to receive his "decoration" of "forget-me-nots" from childhood's innocent hand, while he murmured, in broken English his courteous thanks. One rough laborer was asked by a member of our white ribbon brigade (the W. C. T. U.), "Where is your bouquet, my friend?' He took carefully, from his big pocket a dewy bunch of verbenas, saying: "I wrapped 'em up to take home to my wife;" and the tears sprang to his eyes as the lady replied, "I am glad you have a home, and I thank you for helping by your vote to protect mine."

In the town of Dunlap one of our speakers had told a story about a generous-hearted Kentuckian who had been a hard drinker, but was now reformed, whose wife had asked him, instead of voting for license as his custom was, to represent her and their little ones, and how, as he dropped in his ballot, he had called out to the rough crowd: "If I never do another good thing in my life, by the grace of God here goes a vote for Sallie and the children." The temperance ladies of Dunlap sent word to their representative, who had told this anecdote in her campaign address, that many a man quoted the Southron's words as he voted that day "for the amendment."

What wonder, with the home forces thus at work, that the aggregate majority for prohibition was nearly thirty thousand strong! Never let it be forgotten, that thruout the canvass there was no arraying of national prejudice, and no anathema upon any set of men. It was a certain line of business which was assailed, and for the reason that it was the foe of woman's peace and manhood's purity. Because of this conciliatory spirit, the movement had friends where they are not usually found. Let it be remembered that the town of Emmettsburg was carried for the amendment by Irish Catholics, and that many a priest exhorted his flock to vote for it, after himself stumping his town or county, side by side with Protestants. Let it be remembered that 80 per cent. of the Scandinavian vote was in its favor, two Swedish ministers carrying a county by their individual efforts. Let it be remembered that a German lady, Mrs. Henrietta Skelton, gave seventy-eight lectures in her own tongue to the Fatherland voters, scattering "Der Bahnbrecher" (her German temperance paper) all through the State, and reporting two hundred votes of her countrymen in the whisky city of Burlington, five hundred in the noble capital, Des Moines, and five thousand in the State, for prohibition. All honor to that Scandinavian pastor who stood all day at the polls; church directory in hand, to check off his voting membership "that there might be no mistake"; and to that good German Lutheran who, for the same reason, distributed the temperance ballots at the close of his Sunday morning sermon; and last, not least, to that earnest colored pastor who came to the ladies, saying he wanted it understood that his people always stood up for the right.

"It was a famous victory," and with grateful hearts do those noble women, Mrs. J. E. Foster, Mrs. L. H. Carhart, Mrs. M. J. Aldrich, Mrs. Florence Miller, and their coadjutors read such words as the following from the Iowa Register, July 2, the leading paper of the State, and one which has been the strongest single influence for the right among the great variety enlisted:

"We say the credit, most of it, nearly all of it, goes to the women. With wonderful skill they at once made it a campaign of good heart and good humor, and excited no enmities, but summoned the power of love and of home as the whole spirit and strength of their campaign. The saloon rocked before the conquering power of this new form of opposition, and the forces which had before opposed the temperance work found themselves neutralized and disarmed.

With the three great weapons in the armory of women faith, earnestness and love, they never allowed this campaign of six years for the amendment to slacken, and never let a day pass without adding strength to its columns. They made nearly every household in the State, in whole or in part their ally. They allied the church and school house in every neighborhood. They asked the press for its help, and got it. They even weakened and half disarmed the saloon itself by appealing to the owner rather than threatening him. They were the evangels of love, and their mission was for the home, and their strongest arguments and appeals were their prayers."

Chicago, July, 1882.—Congregationalist.

IS IT REPUBLICAN NOW.

A prohibitionist sends two colums cut from a recent issue of the Record Union containing two editorials, one on the "Democrats and the Sunday Law," the other on the "Progress of Prohibition," and asks if that is a sample of what temperance people expect from the Republican party of this State.

If that paper could select its own candidates and govern or influence the acts of a Republican legislature next winter, there is no dout that temperance law and Sunday law advocates, and advocates of decency would have a worse show than they would under the success of the Democratic candidates nominated in San Jose.

But it is always possible that the honest, respectable men who are known to be in the Republican party may be more fortunate than the same class were in the Democratic convention. It is possible their counsels may prevail and the rum agencies may be induced to take a back seat. We may rest assured that if the managers of either party believed or felt sure they could get most votes by adopting and swearing allegiance to the most intensely blue laws, if such were desired, they would not hesitate to don the most saintly garb and mien and secure the votes. And if they believed they could make most votes by adopting the watchword, "no god but rum, no law but the rum-seller's will, no homes but the beer-dive, no Sunday;" they would not hesitate to do so. That is, the professional politicians, who run the machine and use the party whip and bridle, would do so.

But unless the Republican party nominate men favorable to allowing the people to vote for the extermination of the rum curse as well as pledged to sustain and perfect the Sunday law, they will not get the votes alienated by the Democratic heathen platform, nor the votes of the intelligent, temperance people. And then they cannot win. If they have sense enough to see that, as their best men will see it, they may give us what we desire and not what the Record Union would have.

As to the editorials alluded to, the first on the Sunday law is a very creditable one, abusing the Democrats for adopting a policy commended a few days ago when the Record Union spoke its real sentiments and scouted the idea of Sunday or Sunday law or anything that had the most distant flavor of christianity. The reason that consistent and godly and patriotic journal cursed and defamed and beslimed the Sunday law and the Sunday on one Saturday, and came out the next Saturday with a pious lament over the sinfulness of those wicked Democrats who would interfere with the blessed Sabbath—was not due as some supposed to an editorial change of heart, a sudden, miraculous conversion—not at all, it was merely a change of wind. On the first occasion the wind was N. E. in Sacramento, next time it blew a stiff breeze from S. W. That was all.

As to the second editorial on Prohibition, it is astounding in its intentional open falsehood as to facts, and its abominably false and misleading theories advanced to curry favor with the drunkard-makers and the bankrupts in morality and conscience who no dout are the much stronger force on its subscription list.

It is such a production as a played-out, whisky-crazed ex-editor and scholar might be hired for the bribe of a bottle of searching benzine to prostitute the remnant of his manhood to indite in defence of the gin-mill which had stolen his brains and all there had been of the image of God in him. There was a place for the Record-Union, and a first place in the state as the champion of virtue and morality and patriotism. It has preferred to be the leader and champion of all the forces that are at deadly war with these things.

Possibly the wind may change round the next week to a quarter that will bring out the easy virtue weather-vane with its head towards prohibition and its tail to the Sunday law again. Who knows? It may be Democratic next week if the breeze propitious blows.

POLITICAL.

The Argonaut of last week describes the political situation as follows:

If there is a question of right, one involving some vital interest for the welfare of all, it is ignored, because there is danger to the party if it shall dare to do what is right—danger that it will lose the votes of men who are confessedly in the wrong.

This condition of things will be present in the coming Republican Convention. There is danger that the nominees will come from intrigue and combination. The great question, the great moral question, the one that involves the highest consideration of political economy, of social order, of obedience to law, of reduced taxation, of labor interests, and the highest interest of religion and civilization, is the Sunday law. Every person who pays taxes, every wife and mother, every American who respects the law, and every working man who would rest one day in seven, recognizes the propriety of a law that gives a day of rest and cessation from toil. All Christian men and women who belive in the Bible as the inspiration of God, and who pay anything more than lip homage to their Creator; every Roman Catholic who goes to morning mass or evening prayer on Sunday; every Protestant who professes the Christian faith; every Good Templar and good temperance man, and every moderate drinker who recognizes the curse of sin, and is not blind to the fact that nearly all of the crime, poverty, taxation, sin, misery, and shame of modern society is directly traceable to alcoholic drink, will favor a Sunday law—perhaps not this Sunday law in all its provisions, but a Sunday law that sets apart one day in seven for rest, recreation, worship, and relief from toil. And yet there is danger that the Republican party will not have the courage to embody that provision in its platform. Nine-tenths of its members will admit that it is right, and one-tenth, with noisy declamation, with frothy and lying eloquence, will declare that such a resolution is a restriction of personal liberty; that it limits freedom of conscience, and denies freedom of worship, and that it will lose votes to the Republican party, and the chances are even that the convention will refuse to face the music. When all this lying declamation is stripped of its hypocritical cunning, and when these orators of rum are smoked out of their hiding-places; when the whole thing is panned out, it will be found that it is defeated through a pusillanimous and cowardly fear of the distillery, brewery, corner-grocery, lager-beer saloon, and whisky-drinking interest. It will be through fear of losing the vote of that League of Freedom conspiracy that has unlawfully combined to defeat an existing law. It will be through a fear of losing that part of the German vote which loves beer better than it does the law; which regards the license of Sunday beer-drinking as of higher importance than any other privilege of American citizenship, and which would sacrifice patriotism to its belly and good government to its stomach. This is not a libel against the Germans, for it is not true of a majority of Germans, and we believe but a limited minority will leave the Republican party upon this issue. As to the Irish saloon and grocery-keeper, the Republican party never had his vote, never wanted it and if it has any of that kind, desires to part company with it. Of the Germans, the Republican party has now, and will retain, the better part; of the Irish, it has now, and will retain, the respectable few; and if the party in convention dare not come up to the level of openly declaring its position upon this Sunday law, it will be, and ought to be, defeated. It had better be in the minority of right than in the majority of wrong. In such minority it could do more good to the State, and to such a minority it would be honorable to belong. The Republican party in State Convention must meet this issue, and must not dodge it. If it will meet it courageously, and on all questions of right act boldly, and be bravely American, it will achieve a victory. If it deserves victory, and fails, it will even then have preserved its self-respect, and that is what the Democracy has not done in its nominations, and will not do in any triumph which it may achieve for its sham candidates upon a cowardly platform.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

ALL ARE INVITED.

W. S. READ, D. S. C. J. COVILLAUD, D. S.

ALAMEDA Lodge, I. O. G. T., is to have a grand literary and musical entertainment at the Park Opera House on Friday evening, Aug. 11, which is going to be a success. Mr. W. H. Barnes is to be present and various other stars will add to the enjoyment of the evening. Tickets 50 cents; this will be an entirely respectable as well as pleasant entertainment, there being no dancing or other questionable adjuncts to the program.

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC.

With pleasure the attention of the reader is called to this old and reliable institution of learning advertised in another colum. Among its advantages are, its varied and wide course of study; the experience and strength of its Faculty, its high moral and religious character, all of its instructors being Christian men and women; its economy—all expense for board, tuition, washing and incidentals being but $250.00 per year.

It is situated in the farfamed Alameda, midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, with delightful scenery on every side, and has the advantage of a well nigh faultless climate.

The college building and boarding department are to be heated thruout by steam.

Thruout the northern part of this county there are unnumbered old and staunch Democrats who repudiate the anti-Sunday Law plank in the Democratic platform, and openly declare that they will vote the Republican ticket "straight" if the Sacramento Convention has the moral courage to sustain the Sunday law. As one said to us this week: "Our Convention has treated the order loving, law abiding and religious elements of the party as if they were so many sheep to be herded by Dave Terry—as if we were "Democratic asses" without sense enough to rebel at a plank nominated by the whisky mills of San Francisco. We propose to stand by our manhood rights and to teach political leaders of all parties that the party which deserts its best friends and sells out to the worst enemies of society, holds a very precarious tenure on its existence.—Lodi Sentinel.

THE News Letter talks the usual gibberish of people who worship rum about the Sunday law. To say that this law prescribes what one shall eat and drink or how he shall spend the Sabbath is utterly misrepresenting the facts. And to asert that "legislation can't make men good" is the crystalized folly of generations of asses who have repeated it. Law that only punishes crime is useless law, and is the very slimmest protection to life or property. Proper and useful laws can only be those which suppress temptation to crime and make it easy to do right. The law which the News Letter always advocates, discourages virtue, shares and promotes crime and debauchery, and anybody with an ounce of natural unalcoholized brain can see that those crime inspiring laws have debauched and pauperized, if they have not entirely obliterated from the map, every nation that has been guilty of such folly and brutality.

ANRWER TO CORRESPONDENTS.—Speller: No, there is only one x in Phyloxera, tho they use dubl l in that word. It is much regretted by orthodox spellers that the x in our language is seldom dubled, and almost never, at the end of a word. It seems a sad waste of opportunity to have to stop short at box, when you could just as well make it boxx or boughckss. The language is getting common when it takes only three or four letters to spell a word that could stow away nine or ten. Pretty soon, at this rate, foreigners will be able to learn English.

"PITTSBORD, Mass., Sept. 28th, 1878.

SIRS—I have taken Hop Bitters and recommend them to others, as I found them very beneficial.

MRS. J. W. TULLER,
Sec. Women's Christian Temperance Union."

That appears in an exchange. If a Sec. of the W. C. T. U. did try Hop Bitters, nobody will dout that she found them beneficial; they are almost equal to gin, and everybody that takes gin finds it very beneficial till the jim jams come on. But we may be pretty sure the ad is a forgery like most of the ads and notices of Bitters whisky. Sorry that any journalist would consent to advertize any such rat poison for men, as whisky bitters or whisky plain.

GLEANINGS. Arbuckle Lodge Colusa county is reported as in a prosperous condition, by the L. D. Bro. W. P. Rich, who adds that the good influence of the lodge is felt in many quarters, and that the whilom office seeker is now careful as to exhibiting and passing the bottle as he was wont to do..... Bro. Fred. B. Ellsworth L. D. of the Crystal Water Lodge at Michigan Bluff, expresses great pleasure at being able to announce an advance and increase in interest and membership in his lodge.....Aqua Pura Lodge of Napa City, according to the L. D. Bro, C. C. Dunn is meeting in a new hall under its own control. A recent entertainment there resulted in a financial success as well as securing seven members for the lodge. The agitation of the Sunday law question and recent dismemberment of the Leag of Freedom branch in that locality has gained for the lodge a good name. May it so continue....."Our Lodge was never in a better condition than now," is what the L. D. Bro. John P. Marsen of Little River, Mendocino county writes.....

SAN FRANCISCO AND OAKLAND. Valley Lodge No. 293 of San Francisco installed its officers on Thursday evening of last week amid auspicious and pleasant surroundings. Delegations were present from nearly all the other lodges of the city, the hall was tastefully decorated in evergreens and flowers and filled with a very large assemblage of Good Templars. Several Grand Lodge officers were present and briefly addressed the assembled company. The literary and musical exercises were profitable and entertaining to a degree. At the conclusion of the exercises refreshments were served by the Sisters of Valley Lodge to all present. The harmony and good feeling was noticeable, fully indicating "how good and how pleasant it is when brethren dwell together in unity." Valley Lodge commences the new quarter with a membership of 120, most of them alive and active in the good work, and giving promise of a bright and prosperous future for the lodge.....On Friday evening Prohibition Lodge of West Oakland also held a union meeting, delegations being present from the neighboring lodges of West Berkeley, and Fountain and Athens Lodge of Oakland, as well as several of the San Francisco Lodges, The Subordinate degree was exemplified by an initiation after which the Lodge opened under the head of Good of the Order and listened to short addresses by visiting members. Union meeting of neighboring lodges are always productive of much good and should be frequently held. An interchange of ideas as to the progress and manner of work for the Order is always beneficial, hence the system of union meetings is heartily commended.

Recently a wealthy young man shot his wife and intended to kill her and there is no dout that the whole cause of the shooting and of all the trouble which led to his beating her in a brutal and horrible manner on several occasions previously was the whisky and beer which the Leag of Fiendom want liberty to sell on Sunday and all the rest of the week.

About two weeks previously in Cincinnati, a gentleman, or a man who had been a gentleman till the leag's poison made him insanely drunk, shot his wife and his grown-up dauter and himself all dead. That is only a very little of all the work the leag of outlaws and desperados are doing all over the country; women are being beaten and stabbed and shot by hundreds all the time, and people pretend they can't put a stop to it and politicians dont want it stopped because each of the old parties thinks it can get more votes if they are drunk than if sober.

SUBSCRIBERS and Renewals this Week.—El Dorado Co., 2; Forestville, 1; Hollister (J. W. Webb), 8; Caspar (C. N. Goulding), 1; Fall River Mills, 1; San Francisco (Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Richardson), 53. In all, 66.

POST OFFICE IMPROVEMENT.

The Chronicle says Postmaster Backus is making judicious alterations in the management of the Post Office here. Smoking and chewing tobacco are forbidden to the employees during office hours;that is a rule that should be strictly enforced in every office or other place where work of any kind is being done and business transacted.

It is a pity too that the Postmaster could not do away with a most aggravating and barbarous nuisance that is daily perpetrated, not all by the employees of the P. O. who seem to be uniformly obliging and attentive and polite in the performance of their duties, but by barbarians who get in the line at the delivery window on Sunday, and every other day at the stamp window, the registry and money order counters, and puff their polecat pipes and rotten cigar smoke into the faces of innocent people who have to stand behind or beside or before them, awaiting their turn to have their business attended to.

Some people who do this are very kindly, worthy, good people in every other respect but so soaked in that one filthy habit that they forget all decency and propriety as regards the disgusting penance which they inflict upon their cleanly neighbors, and do not seem to know that it is nauseating to them.

To have to inhale any person's tobacco smoke second hand is annoying and distressing under the most favorable circumstances, but to have to endure and inhale the intensified evil odors of a horrible meersham or an exceedingly nasty stale cigar, is to submit to an outrage that deserves castigation as promptly as the offense of being spit upon. It ot to be considered equally an insult, for the offense against cleanliness and health is vastly greater.

It is possible that some men who do these things are gentlemen in other matters, but no man can defile and annoy his neighbor without cause and be a gentleman in that act. A polite and considerate gentleman is never guilty of such savagery, and it is to be feared that the use of tobacco very frequently and seriously impairs the capacity and the will to be truly a gentleman. What a noble occupation it is for a gentleman, a man, to employ a large portion of his waking hours sucking and puffing at a filthy and poisonous weed, that a hog holds in abhorrence and a dog could not be persuaded to touch with his lips on account of its nastiness.

A SCHOOL OF PERJURY.

The saloon of this country is primarily a school of perjury. From the very day it is opened it makes liars of men. You may say this is a strong charge. Indict a saloon man in this town for the violation of law. Your detectives tell you that he has persistently violated it. Bring him into court and put him on trial; subpœna from their houses in this city, twenty-five men, young and old, who have patronized him. They come into court, you reach out the bible, they will swear on God's Holy word to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Let them take the stand and try to prove by them facts which you know to be facts. Nineteen out of twenty-five will swear to a lie to defend the man who sold them liquor.

The man is on the stand.

"Were you in that saloon?"

"I was."

"Did you buy something there?"

"I did."

"What was it?"

"Don't know."

"What did you call for?"

"I didn't call."

"Well, what did you get?"

"I don't know."

"You drank something; what was it?"

"Well, it might have been tea, it might have been coffee, it might have been lemonade; I don't know."

Lie? of course he lies.

Suppose he had gone in the saloon and asked for beer and the bar-keeper set up lemonade, would he not have known the difference?

Suppose he had asked for whisky, and the bartender set up tea wouldn't he know the difference?

And yet that man comes into court, and after taking his oath on God's truth, deliberately and wilfully perjures his soul, degrades his manhood, dishonors his citizenship to defend the man who, when he has got his last dollar and made him a drunkard, will kick him into the street and call him a drunken dead-beat. Have you tried to enforce the law against saloons? If so you know this to be true.

They, everywhere, try to corrupt judges, to suborn witnesses, to defeat the ends of justice and prevent an honest, fair and full enforcement of the law.—[Finch, Neb. Liberator.

DOES BEER CAUSE GOUT?

BY NORMAN KERR, M. D., F. L. S.

No. 47.

Many persons who would on no consideration taste ardent spirits, remembering the words of the great surgeon, Sir Astley Cooper, "Spirits and poison are synonymous," make no scruple of habitually drinking beer and porter freely, and yet the alcohol in the strongest spirituous drinks is practically the same alcohol as that which is met with in malt liquors.

In plain words, all intoxicating liquors are, as their name implies, poisonous to both body and brain.

Ale, beer, porter, and stout are no exception to the rule. The average amount of this poison, alcohol, in a pint of each of this class of intoxicating liquors is, according to the Government analysis of liquors at Bethnel Green Museum, as follows: In London porter, ¾ oz.; in mild ale, 1¼ oz.; in London stout, 1¼ oz.; in strong ale, 2 oz.; and in pale ale, 2½ oz. As, according to the same unimpeachable authority, one pint of brandy contains 10½ oz. of alcohol, it is apparent that half a pint of pale ale is as strong in spirit, and therefore, as intoxicating as brandy. Alcohol vitiates the blood, beside impairing its building-up properties, by shortening the life of the red globules.

By virtue of the alcohol beers and stouts contain, these liquors sap the foundations of natural vigor and induce an unhealthy diseased condition of the blood, and through the blood, of various internal organs and regions of the body. It is common in brewers' draymen, and in persons of both sexes, in all ranks of life, who regularly drink what is conveniently looked upon as a very moderate allowance. I have repeatedly been enabled to effect a complete cure of rheumatism by insisting on the immediate and total discontinuance of the daily three half-pints of the temperate beer-drinker. In all cases of rheumatism, from whatever cause, total abstinence is, in my opinion, the most important element in the curative process.

Gout. Of all the physical ills which alcohol has inflicted on humanity, there is none which more openly bears the mark of its parentage than gout. I had occasion to testify, in the Lancet some time ago, that in 1,540 cases of gout that had come under my care, only one was in the person of a life abstainer who had inherited the disease, along with the rest of the family property, from a long line of port-wine and beer-loving ancestors. Intoxicating malt drinks are, undoubtedly, the fertile parents of this most painful and harassing ailment. I know of no disease which is more easily prevented, and which could be more effectually eradicated than gout. I have found total abstinence completely cure a large number of very bad cases; and, even to those sufferers who from inherited taint, could never hope by any degree of abstemiousness to be entirely freed from their ancestral burden, the unconditional disuse of intoxicants has shorn their "thorn in the flesh" of half its terrors, and greatly mitigated their tortures.

It is a significant fact, noted by Dr. Farr, the eminent statistician, in his annual letter to the Registrar-General, in 1877, that gout was then twice as fatal as it had been fifteen years before.

Another English phisician, eminent in hospital practice, says that gout from beer-drinking is one of the most common diseases he has to treat among poor people who are beer-drinkers.

A ROUTE PLANNED.

We have an old citizen in this place writes a correspondent at Industry, Ill., who is very hard of hearing. He has been talking some time of visiting Germany in the fall. I sat beside him at meeting the other night. After the sermon was over the minister took a turn round the church, shaking hands and talking. Presently he came to the old citizen, and taking his hand he commenced: "My dear old friend,are you thinking of going to heaven?"

"Yah," said the German, "ven I gits my greenpack changed mit gold."

"You don't understand me," replied the other. "I mean do you want to go to heaven?"

"Vell, I tink not; I was at New Haven once and it was a bad place. I believe I goes to Germany in the fall?"—Ex.

THE SALVATION ARMY is being criticised and investigated by some of the religious people and religious journals of England. They are afraid the army leaders are unscriptural, because St Paul never went round with a brass band and drums beating, converting people without forming them into churches etc. But they allow that the army is making a notable temperance reform, is doubling up its teachers and preachers and stations and multiplying its converts with astonishing rapidity;they are mobbed by the rumsellers,stoned by the leag of Fiendom, fined by the magistrates; they preach the gospel to the poor, they call in the halt and lame and blind and the drunkard and cast devils out of them all—and now when the priests and scribes and pharisees pitch into them and twit them with not obeying the law and the traditions of the elders, the case looks very strong that the spirit of God is moving them. Another strong point in their favor; they are going not for 150 or 200 scalps and then quit; not at all; they are going to work "till every soul in England, Scotland and Ireland is brot under the sancitifying influence of the gospel of Christ." They have 304 stations,650 officers, 15,000 speakers, have 5,000 weekly meetings, and their newspapers have a weekly circulation of 330,000. May God speed them and their work;whether it is exactly on St Paul's pattern or not, it seems to be a thousand times better than all the other combined religious interests and influences of England. It is the first enterprise that ever preached the whole gospel of converting every body to temperance and Christianity—and the only one that ever went rationally about such a work there.

DANCE OF DEATH.

This is a title of a work by the late Wm. Herman of San Francisco, on the subject of modern dancing, or "waltzing." It treats the subject from a moral stand-point, claiming that it is demoralizing in its tendency and ruinous in its ultimate results. The writer uses "plain words," and finds it necessary to offend the "good taste" of many lovers of the "amusement," simply because he can not do otherwise and be true to the duty he owes to good society. Pastors have found this little book the means of saving many of the female portion of their flocks from the disgrace of being turned out of the Church, simply because they "could not see any reason why the Church forbad dancing" according to the modern customs. The book has a tendency to make one wiser and at the same time better. It exposes the wiles of wicked, designing men, who systematically plan the destruction of innocent and unsuspecting girls. We dare say that after "Dance of Death" has been read by a young lady she will either lose her relish for round dancing to a great degree, or be fully on her guard when assailed by the base. We would recommend it to mothers as a good work to put into the hands of grown up girls. You will find a limited number of copies for sale at the store of E. J. Plummer and at the Journal office, Hanford.

There is one very remarkable fact about that remarkable book, the "Dance of Death;" the clergy generally endorse it and recommend its circulation, while the so-called "worldly" and pleasure-loving people denounce it as utterly immoral and bad. This fact cannot be without significance.—Hanford Journal.

THE DOCTORS.

At the annual meeting of the American Medical Association held in St Paul in June 1882, Dr. N. S. Davis, of Chicago, presented the following resolutions from the WOMEN'S NATIONAL CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

WHEREAS, We approve teaching the children and youth in the schools and educational institutions in this country, as facts of hygiene, the physiological dangers and evils resulting from the use of alcoholic beverages; and

WHEREAS, It is the acknowledged duty of the State to provide for such education of the people as is essential to good citizenship,

Resolved, That we recommend the State Legislature to enact laws requiring the physiological dangers and evils resulting from the use of alcoholic beverages to be taught in schools supported by public money, or under State control.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

A PERSONAL OPINION.

REST COTTAGE, Evanston July 13, 1882.

DEAR SISTERS OF THE W. C. T. U. In these wondrous days of answered prayer, it becomes us to show our gratitude to God by being obedient to every heavenly vision. Each one of us is responsible to live up to her light and to beckon others kindly to the outlook whence she has her "view." Let me then ask you to ponder the following statement of what seems to me a basis for harmonious action at the Chicago National Convention of Aug. 23, called by four different sets of authorities and in my judgment likely to be the most decisive gathering of temperance men and women ever yet convened. The heroic old "Prohibition Reform Party" will send its leaders; the "Home Protection Party,"—newly in the field but full of faith and works—will do the same. The National Prohibition Alliance will be out in force with its clear heads and earnest hearts and also the delegates under "the peoples call" of the National Liberator. "Many men of many kinds,"—and women too! The objective point with all will be identical, viz, Constitutional and Statutory Prohibition of the liquor traffic thoroly enforced. But here comes William Daniels who is educating Maryland by means of Local Option and here comes our friends from Arkansas with their Home Protection statute which works like a charm. Here is poor old Illinois with her local option law, but a feeble constituency back of it; Indiana with two Constitutional Amendments pending; Pennsylvania and Michigan toiling for what Iowa has reached; Mass. a seething caldron on both issues; Ohio the same; Conn. N. J. and N. Y. on the war path; Nebraska where prohibition was voted down and woman's ballot up; Oregon with a Suffrage Amendment pending and two or three other states where the legislative majority is greater for woman's ballot than for prohibition, and Kansas the "next move" upon whose chess board is woman's ballot as a method of enforcement. Then we have besides, the great South, stirred to the heart on the prohibition question but apathetic so far as the suffrage movement is concerned. What then shall this National Convention, representing not only our beloved W. C. T. U. but all temperance forces, what shall it do to leave us more unified in plans and purposes than it found us? And if this is not accomplished, it were vastly better that we should not meet at all. May we be so truly in the spirit of prayer, and of good will to our reform, that no failure shall be made.

Permit me now to suggest what seems given me to say:

1. PROHIBITION is the common goal. Iowa's God-given victory nerves every heart and clarifies every brain.

2. Some of our most earnest workers, perceiving that the enfranchisement of woman means not only prohibition but enforcement would prefer to put that first. As temperance workers, we can not seek the ballot for woman, because it is a right, any more than we can as temperance workers oppose Mormonism because it is a wrong. Our only question logically—and loyally to our calling must be "will this ballot help our cause?" The Prohibition party answers yes, and so we do all of us.

3. But we have noble workers among us who do not see this point so clearly as they will some day. If they will not concede to us, can we concede somewhat to them and yet keep true to our convictions?

4. Suppose we first insist on the three principles that we hold sacred: (a) Prohibition, (all agreed.) (b) Independent party action for the nation, and recommend to each State to decide for itself according to its needs. (c) Woman's ballot to be not only "resolved" but worked for in the national party and each State left to act according to its sentiments and circumstances.

5. As a general program suggested to States, (we recognise the independence of each within its own borders) the following:

Circulation of petitions, literature, etc., all forces uniting, as in the Iowa campaign, for constitutional prohibition. If carried in the legislature, keep solidly to this one thing until it is gained and then follow at once with an amendment for woman's ballot. If unsuccessful at any given session of the legislature or in either branch thereof let all unite at once to introduce then and there an amendment to the constitution giving woman the ballot. Repeat these efforts in this order until success is conquered save in those States where there is clearly more sentiment for woman's ballot than for prohibition or in those southern States where such an effort would be premature.

6. By this plan we all agree to make woman's ballot a method of work instead of merely resolving that it is a right which, besides being irrelevant, accomplishes no result, we also secure its recognition at once as a practical, legislative method, but we concede the first place to prohibition.

7. Finally, we recommend most earnestly tho we do not insist, upon the name "Home Protection Party." "Home vs. Saloon," was the rallying cry in Iowa and the argument that won, not only in the sense of victory but good of will. Dear Sisters, these great questions we must meet. Let us "take it to the Lord in prayer.

Ever yours for victory, FRANCES E. WILLARD.

(From advanced proof of Our Union.

A WOMAN'S WAR RECORD.

During the late unhappy war, a woman, in silence and unknown, wrought great deeds. When the armies under Grant stood waiting, and it was declared that sixty days would see the disruption of the Union and the virtual failure of the campaign, there came to the authorities at Washington a plan for opening the way to victory—a plan for the campaign of the Tennessee. A woman's brain conceived the thought, a woman's skill mapped out the work, and success was attained by the plans of Anna Ella Carroll.

When Miss Carroll presented her plan to President Lincoln, Secretary Stanton, Hon. Ben. Wade of Ohio, and Reverdy Johnson, they immediately recognized the utility and greatness of her suggestions, but they said:

"Madam, you have surpassed every man we possess, but we should not dare allow it to be known that a woman was the author of this plan, as we should not then be able to get our military men to follow it out, and we are not willing to confess to the world that a woman has excelled our wise men and warriors."

So Miss Carroll waited in silence, and the plan was variously attributed to Lincoln, Stanton and other great minds, and was wrought out to full success. Miss Carroll gave other help to the same cause. A Marylander by birth, she had long since freed the slaves she held, and her money flowed freely to serve the cause she loved. Her pen, too, was not idle, and two pamphlets she wrote are said to have contributed, more than any others that were sent out, to help the war to a victorious close.

Now comes the sequel. The war is over, Lincoln is dead, Stanton is dead, as are Wade, Johnson and others who knew her work, but each left record of her deeds. Anna Carroll is poor, in need. She petitions Congress for a pension for her services. But Congress is slow; it has other work to do. Anna Ella Carroll must wait, although the records of the military commission prove the facts alleged in her plea. Age creeps on, and she who did so much for her country is a feeble sufferer, denied her just claim by an ungrateful country. Stricken with palsy, she yet waits, poor and needy, for the paltry pittance she asks to relieve her necessities. Had she been a man, her claim would long since have been recognized, and honors would have been heaped upon her head. A woman, she suffers almost unnoticed.

And now another lesson we may draw from this wonderful story. In the new war—the war against King Alcohol—the temperance forces stand at bay, as did the army before the Tennessee campaign, and woman is needed to furnish the plan by which the war may be brought to a successful close. Ready, and O how willing! she stands and says, "Here is the plan!" Friend and foe say of it, "This will end the war." Men, can you refuse to take the plan? Here are the Anna Ella Carrolls of the alcohol war. Refuse their plan, and you will fail; take it, and all is yours. Victory will surely follow, and blessed peace shall reign on earth.—Ada H. Kepley in Signal.

WOMAN'S WRONGS.

Professor Adler is drawing at Chickering Hall, New York, terrible pictures of the condition of women in this 19th century of civilization and luxury. In one of his recent lectures he said:

"I claim that there are facts at the present day which fully bear out the assertion that the actual slavery of women on earth is not yet at an end. By such facts I mean the revelations that have recently been made concerning the so-called Black Country in England. There are two reasons why female labor is especially employed—the one is that the hours they are made to work are in excess of a great deal of male labor; the other is that their pay is so much smaller. The condition of women in certain of the agricultural districts of England is shown by the reports of recent Parliamentary commissions to reveal a state of things which is truly shocking.

But all this is mere child's play when compared to the condition of women in the collieries. About Halifax, girls from five years upward work regularly in the mines. In North Lancashire the same is true. Little children of four years are taken out of their beds and carried to their work. Little girls of six years have been seen carrying loads of half a hundred weight, backward and forward a long distance, fourteen hours a day. In the east of Scotland the employment of women is general, and there the condition of things is worse. The most horrible part of the whole revelation relates to the mode in which these women are compelled to work. There are long, low passages cut through the coal, sometimes not more than twenty-eight inches in height, often half full of water, through which the women have to crawl. Their business is to drag the coal through these passages, sometimes 16,000 yards a day. They are perfectly nude down to the waist. They wear a pair of loose trowsers of coarse cloth. A belt is fastened around their waist, from which is suspended an iron chain, that hangs upon the ground, and this iron chain is attached to the load which they have to draw, crawling on all fours, half in water through these narrow channels, barely two feet high."—Our Union.

WHAT SOME WOMEN ARE DOING.

Mrs. Mary E. Haggart was the orator at the Fourth of July celebration at Miami, Ind.

A meeting of women ministers will be held in Boston on some day of the coming anniversary week.

Mrs. C. M. Raymond (ANNIE LOUISE CARY) has given two hundred and fifty dollars to establish a free bed in the Maine General Hospital.

Miss Helen Gladstone, dauter of the Premier, has accepted the vice principalship of Newnham College, in place of Mrs. Henry Sedgwick, who will resign in October.

Twenty-five women physicians who took part in the military operations of Russia in 1877, have been decorated by the emperor with the order of St. Stanislas of the third class.

A larger number of young women graduated from the Boston University this year than ever before. From the School of Floral Arts there were seven, from the Theological School one, and from the School of Medicine thirteen. Three were admitted to the degree of M. A.—Miss Alice Leon Mumford, Miss Marion Talbot and Miss Agnes Fitz Henry Williams—and one to the degree of Ph. D.—Miss Marie A. Molineaux. This lady is the second one only who has taken this degree, Miss Helen Magil being the other.

In 1880, eighteen young women were graduated from a school of technology in Boston. Of these, eight found at once steady employment as designers in print factories; one in pottery works; two in an oil-cloth manufactory and one in a carpet mill.—Womans Exponent.

That last is a small matter friend Exponent. We had a class of 18 young men graduated from our Leag of Fiendom Schools in one small city of California and 5 of them have found constant employment as designers in the brick factories of our penitentiary, and the other 13 will soon be similarly provided for.

PROCEEDINGS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

GRAND LODGE I. O. G. T. OF CALIFORNIA.

BERNARD HOUSE, VALLEJO, July 31, 1882.

Pursuant to call of the G. W. C. T. the Executive committee convened in quarterly session and was called to order at eight o'clock P. M.

The following were noted present at roll call. G W C T, Robert Thompson and G W V T, Mrs. E. P. Stevens of San Francisco, G W C, Henry S. Graves of Pennington, G W T, Dr. I. S. Halsey of Vallejo and G W S, Geo. B. Katzenstein of Sacramento.

Absent, P G W C T, Wm. D. Gould of Los Angeles.

The minutes of the previous meeting held May 18th were read and duly approved.

The G. W. S. presented the usual quarterly report of which the following is a synopsis:

QUARTERLY RETURNS OF MEMBERSHIP.

For the term ending April 30 last, 356 lodges have filed quarterly returns showing a membership of 19,115 to which is to be added 13 new lodges and a membership of 303 since added giving a total of 369 lodges and a membership of 19,434 all bona fide and exclusive of all delinquent lodges, showing a gain of 505 members during the last quarter.

During the past term I have marked off the following lodges as defunct by reason of various delinquencies and for not filing proper quarterly returns for previous terms viz., Nos. 101, 103, 106, 250, 252, 276, 277, 282, 287, 306, 358, 439, 453, and 465.

The lodges upon the delinquent list, by reason of failure to file quarterly returns for the term ending April 30 last are Nos. 121, 126, 129, 142, 217, 227, 229, 364, 372, 374, 387, 416, 425, 426, 435, 447, 449, 454, 457, 466, 471, S. I. No. 7 and Japan No. 1.

AMENDMENTS TO BY-LAWS.

The following amendments to by-laws have been submitted and approved:

June 8. Buckingham Lodge, No. 143. Fixing dues of males under sixteen years of age at twenty-five cents per quarter, and seventy-five cents for males between the ages of 16 and 21. Females under 18 years, twenty-five cents per quarter and fifty cents per quarter for females oxer 18 years of age.

June 8. Evergreen Lodge, No. 477. Requiring the amount of initiation fee to accompany each proposition for membership, the fee to be returned in case of rejection of the applicant, but in the event of election, the fee to be retained by the lodge whether applicant presents himself for initiation or not. Restricting initiations to the first and third meetings in each month. Making it the duty of the W. C. T. at each meeting before closing the lodge to call on the W. Secretary to read from the minutes of the evening the titles of all committees appointed during the evening, designating the chairman and other members of the committee. The chairman of each committee so appointed to make announcement of the time and place of meeting of such committee. Also adopting the uniform code of by-laws with the foregoing additions.

June 9. Orange Lodge, No. 246. Permitting members under 16 years of age to vote upon all questions coming before the lodge.

June 22. Evergreen Lodge, No. 477. Restricting iniations to each alternate meeting night commencing June 13.

July 10. Del Norte Lodge, No. 512. Adopting the uniform code with following changes: Add to Sec. 3, Art. VI the words, unless satisfactory reasons shall be rendered for such neglect or absence. Sec. 4. Any nember who shall frequent or patronize any saloon shall upon conviction thereof be reprimanded, fined or expelled as the lodge may direct; and any member who shall enter any saloon, shall be required to give satisfactory reason for so doing at the next meeting of the lodge. Sec. 1 of Art. 14: Strike out the words "religious" and "political party."

July 15. Igo Lodge, No. 155. Requiring the initiation fee to accompany the proposition for membership, the fee to be returned in the event of rejection of the candidate.

July 19. White Rock Lodge, No. 497. Fixing night of meeting on Thursday. Making dues of minor males 50 cents per quarter and for females 30 cents per quarter. Providing for semi-monthly meetings. Permitting all members of the lodge to vote without restriction as to age.

July 21. Delaplain Lodge, No. 504. Adopting the uniform code except dues for females shall be 25 cents per quarter, and permitting all members to vote regardless of age.

The report was received and concurred in.

A petition from Vesper Lodge, No. 268 setting forth that it was situated a hundred miles from the county seat of Santa Barbara county and 112 miles from the most distant lodge of that county whereas it was but sixty miles from the most remote lodge in San Luis Obispo county and but 27 miles from the county seat of San Luis Obispo, wherefore it prayed to be attached to the San Luis Obispo District Lodge and relieved from allegiance to the Santa Barbara District Lodge. The application and petition were granted.

A petition from 47 persons praying for a charter to open a new lodge in El Monte, Los Angeles county, supported by Savannah and Duarte Lodges, etc.; was presented and after consideration was granted.

A communication was received from Bro. D. K. Zumwalt, chairman of the Finance Committee recommending that the books of the various officers and Boards of the Grand Lodge be closed on and including the business of the 20th of Sept,, and that the editor and manager of the RESCUE conform to the same requirement. Upon motion the recommendation was adopted and the various officers were directed to conform with the requirement of the Finance Committee.

Upon motion duly made and carried, the G. W. C. T., G. W. T. and G. W. S. were appointed a special committee to audit and allow, if found correct, the account of the RESCUE to Sept. 20 subject to the further approval of the Executive Committee.

Capt. A. D. Wood submitted his quarterly report as publisher of the RESCUE showing an increasing circulation commencing with an issue of 3,840 at the commencement of the quarter, May 4, and ending with an edition of 4,440 at the close of the quarter, July 27, the average for the thirteen weeks being 3995 copies. The average receipts were $84.-96 per week. The average expenditure $104.49. Total receipts $1,104.50. Cost of publication $1,-358.45. Deficiency $253.95. Salary of editor for the quarter $450, for assistant $75 to be added. Total deficiency for the quarter $778.95. The report was approved, the claim audited and allowed and a warrant was ordered, drawn in favor of Capt. A. D. Wood in payment.

A communication from Capt. A. D. Wood suggesting the publication of a large edition of the wine tracts Nos. 1, 2 and 3 from the stereotyped plates now prepared, was considered, but in view of the scarcity of funds at command by reason of the close of the year etc., it was decided to defer action until the next meeting of the Executive Committee.

The matter of arranging to secure a financial or advertising agent to labor in the interest of the finances of the RESCUE was discussed and finally referred to a special committee consisting of the G. W. C. T., the editor of the RESCUE and the G. W. S. with power to act. The same committee were also empowered to secure the services of subscription canvassers.

The G. W. C. T. as superintendent of the Lecture force, submitted his report showing the labor performed by the lecturers under his direction during the months of April, May and June. Also reporting the employment of Bro. F. J. Culver as a special lecturer during one month, June, and Col. Geo. Babcock during four days to be in attendance at the Yolo county District Lodge. A resume of the three months lecture work was as follows: Number of lectures delivered 371. Miles traveled 9,279. Adults addressed 43,016, minors addressed 8,349. Total number of persons composing audiences addressed 51,365. Expenses incurred $1,128.50. Collections, etc. received $1,277.15. New Lodges instituted 11. The report was received and approved.

A communication from Gem Lodge at Wyandotte, Butte county relative to obtaining possession of the Good Templars Hall situated in that locality, was referred to the G. W. C. T. with power to advise and act.

Mrs. M. E. Richardson, G. S. J. W., submitted her quarterly report showing a large amount of successful labor performed in her department of the work and submitting a quarterly financial exhibit showing the incidental expenses of her department for the past quarter to have been $118.75 with salary added aggregating $193.75 leaving a balance due her, less the cash on hand at last report $33.62, advanced by the G. W. S. $50 and supplies sold $6.30, of $103.83 which amount was allowed and a warrant was ordered drawn in payment.

The G. W. C. T. and superintendent of the lecture force submitted his quarterly account showing amount due him for amounts paid account of lecture field $253.80. Salary and incidental expenses $238.55. On account of juvenile work $70, and for distribution of temperance literature $9.75. Total $572.10 on which he had received an advance of $200 leaving due him $372.10 which sum was allowed and a warrant was ordered drawn in payment.

A bill from P. G. W. C. T. Wm. D. Gould amounting to $78.50 for expenses in distribution of petitions, etc., was read and referred to the G. W. S. with instructions to draw a warrant if after examination as to a supposed error it was found to be correct to allow the correct amount when ascertained.

The G. W. S. presented a bill for petty office expenses incurred during the past ten months, for exchange, expressage, gas and clerical assistance amounting to $215.50. The bill was allowed and a warrant was ordered drawn in payment.

The G. W. S. was directed to procure bids for printing the journal of proceedings, reports, etc., for the next Grand Lodge session in San Francisco.

The G. W. C. T. reported progress as to the transfer of property from the old to the new lodge at Alturas and was granted further time.

Upon motion all arrangements for the approaching session of the Grand Lodge was referred to the G. W. S. with power to act.

At 12:30 A. M. the committee adjourned.

GOOD TEMPLARS HOME FOR ORPHANS.

VALLEJO Cala., Aug. 1, 1882.

The Board of Trustees of the Good Templars Home for Orphans met at the Home building and were called to order at 10-30 o'clock A. M. President Wm. Sims presiding.

Upon calling the roll of Trustees the following were noted present: President Wm. Sims; Secretary, Geo. B. Katzenstein; Treasurer, I. S. Halsey; Samuel Kitto, R. H. McDonald, and R. Thompson.

The absentees were W. H. Mills, Niles Searls, and A. G. Clark.

G. W. C., Bro. H. S. Graves was invited to a seat with the Board as a visitor.

The minutes of the previous meeting held May 2, were read and duly approved.

The Administrative Committee of the Board of Trustees presented the records of their meetings as their report, which was accepted and their acts approved.

The Treasurer submitted his quarterly report which was referred to a special finance committee consisting of Trustees McDonald, Katzenstein, Thompson and Kitto, who compared, audited and recommended the approval of the report and vouchers, which upon motion was done and the report and vouchers approved.

A synopsis of the Treasurers report is as follows:

Dr. I. S. Halsey previously appointed to secure a certain piece of land reported that the area of the land mentioned was 63.84 acres of which 12 acres had been sold for town lots, leaving but 51.84 available to purchase and that the land mentioned could be purchased at an expense of $3.000. Upon motion Dr. Halsey was directed to close the purchase at the figure named.

At 12-30 the Board took a recess for the purpose of viewing the buildings, grounds and improvements.

Upon reassembling the administrative Committee reported having purchased and placed fifty feet of fire hose in each end of the upper story of the building. Action approved.

The Boards of Trustees and Lady Managers assembled in joint session President Sims of the Board of Trustees presiding.

Certain domestic affairs were then considered, resulting in the advice to the Board of Lady Managers to return the Griswold children and the Briggs children to their respective parents.

The Lady Managers were also advised to ascertain the whereabouts of the surviving relatives of the Tittle children and open correspondence with them in the interest of the children.

Bro. R. Thompson presented the Home with a handsomely framed engraving of Mrs. President Hayes, in behalf of and as the gift of Bro. T. J. Alley of Astoria, Oregon.

The joint meeting was then dissolved and after considering minor matters, at 3 P. M. the Board adjourned.

GEO. B. KATZENSTEIN, Secretary.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

C. N. GOULDING

I wrote last from Mendocino where I lectured on the 23d and 24th to large audiences, and I trust some good was accomplished. The lodge here is not as flourishing as it has been but is in good condition financially and will continue to fight the "good fight." Saloons abound and whisky is sold in every store in the place with three exceptions, and there appears to be a "Rip Van Winkle sleep" on and over the place; they may wake up, it is to be hoped they will. Am under many obligations to Bro .O. W. Everson and family, who kindly entertained me when in Mendocino. Tuesday, 25th, went to Westport, 30 miles, and found one of the most active and "Wide awake Lodges" I have met with in the state. Sister Fowler, our very efficient Lodge Deputy, had advertised the meetings and they were regular booms for Temperance. A good active "Wide awake" Lodge Deputy is invaluable and none should be elected to that office except those who will work. this Lodge ("Wide awake,") is said to be the most flourishing Lodge in the county, it will live and prove a blessing to that community.

Had arranged with Prof. H. E. Whipple of Kibesillah for lectures there, but sickness in his own and other families prevented and I very reluctantly gave up the lectures and came here (one day in advance.) Found the members strong in the faith, and while they are not creating any particular excitement in the neighborhood they are exerting an influence for good; they own their hall, fixtures and furniture and are doing well and will I trust add to their numbers. Lectured there, 28th and 29th. Am slowly working my way "down the coast," and through the county.

Mendocino, July, 30, 1882.

My last letter was written from Casper, on the 29th of July. Sunday morning, the 28th, Bro. O. W. Everson came up from Big River, (with a runaway team) and drove me safely to Little River, where I lectured at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M., to audiences that filled the schoolhouse. Lodge here is doing well, and is one of the best in the county. Was entertained here by Mr. and Mrs. Coombs in their beautiful home, and renewed the acquaintance of one year ago. Was invited to walk, and to ride on the bay, declined, afraid of the Ocean, Poison Oak and Tar Weed. 3rd, came to Albion, lectured to a small audience, gave up Salmon Creek appointment came to Navurro on the 1st. Visited the Lodge, installed the officers, lectured on the 2nd. On the 3rd went to Boonville, (35 miles from Navarro) lectured there, found the Lodge in very good condition, returned on the 4th to Navarro, lectured again to a large audience (for the size of the place) and hold forth at Navarro on the 5th and 6th. Navarro Lodge is a success. Bros. Lindsfelt Peiples and all working in harmony for the cause; they have one of the finest halls in the county, (the lumber for the same was donated by the Mill Co., other companies would do woll to make a like investment.) Whilst in Big River was entertained by Bro. Everson and family. "May they live long and prosper."

THE LEADING BANK OF THE COAST.—The annals of banking on this coast will be searched in vain for a parallel to the success of the Pacific Bank. This success is the more noteworthy, because it is the reward of rigid adherence to sound business principles. Its management has adhered in its conduct to a strictly commercial business, resolutely refusing to have anything to do with mining stocks and speculations. The result has been that while it has made less noise than some of its more pretentious rivals, it has progressed steadily, paid regular dividends, added from year to year to its assets, extended its business facilities, and seen its business grow, till it is to-day, among well-informed business men, ranked as the leading bank of the Pacific Coast.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

"What is life, father?"
"A battle, my child,
Where the strongest lance may fail,
Where the weariest eyes may be beguiled,
And the stoutest heart may quail.
Where the foes are gathered on every hand,
And rest not day or night,
And the feeble little ones must stand
In the thickest of the fight."

"What is death, father?"
"The rest, my child,
When the strife and toil are o'er:
The angel of God,—who calm and mild,
Says we need fight no more;
Who, driving away the demon band,
Bids the din of the battle cease,—
Takes the banner and spear from our trembling hand,
And proclaims an eternal peace."

"Let me die, father! I tremble, and fear
To yield in that terrible strife!"
"The crown must be won for heaven, dear,
In the battle-field of life;
My child, tho thy foes are strong and tried,
He loveth the weak and small;
The angels of heaven are on thy side,
And God is over all."

CHILDHOOD'S PART IN IOWA'S VICTORY.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD.

President of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"To the children of the state, whose hearts and songs were the sunshine that never left the banner of the amendment, let no one forget the fullest measure of gratitude." This sentence is from the Iowa State Register, which, in circulation and influence, stands at the head of journalism in that commonwealth, and is edited by Mr. Clarkson, a noble man and brilliant writer, whose utmost strength has been exerted for the success of prohibition, and whose paper has, by unanimous consent, done more to ensure the recent victory for temperance, than any other force. Mr. Clarkson was himself a member of the Cadets of Temperance twenty years ago, and is a conspicuous illustration of results to be expected from honest hard work among the children. Perhaps there is no paralel, in the history of a great reform, to the efforts made for temperance education among the children of Iowa for eight years past, and to the power exerted by them in securing the result by which the liquor traffic in that state was recently outlawed by a majority of 29,000.

As the Genius of temperance does not belong to that class in society who "reap where they have not sown, and gather where they have not strewn," it will be instructive to study the methods by which the children have become one grand "cold-water army." In the first place, the translation of Christian women out of the passive and into the active voice on this question, has had an immense influence on their little ones at home. I know of more than one mother in Iowa whose little boy would go two blocks out of his way rather than pass a saloon. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is perhaps stronger in that state than in any other; and the table talk, the juvenile literature that comes into the homes, indeed, the whole atmosphere, is tinged with an influence that leads toward purity in the conduct of life, and away from "fleshly lusts that war against the soul." Then, in many localities, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has succeeded in getting the Temperance Lesson Book of Dr. B. W. Richardson, and the Alcohol and Hygiene of Miss Julia Colman, into the public schools, where the effect of strong drink on the tissues of the body and the temper of the spirit, have been regularly taught. We have not yet succeeded in securing a legislative enactment by which the teaching of this branch is as obligatory as that of grammar and arithmetic, but expect to do so at the next session, petitions having been largely circulated to this end. Minnesota has the honor of being the first state to adopt such a law, and Iowa will doubtless be the second.

But the "good general," as she is called, of the juvenile temperance forces, is Mrs. M. F. Goode, a widow with children of her own, whose home is in Villesca, Iowa, but whose praise is on the lips of her great Band of Hope Army thruout the state. As superintendent of the juvenile temperance work, this lady has done more than any other in our ranks along this special line of duty. She is of just the nature most agreeable to childhood—strong, healthful, cheery, and loving hearted, with such motherly ways that every boy and girl turns as instinctively to her as chickens to the mother hen.

Mrs. Goode has organized the Band of Hope thruout the state, in which the reasonableness of total abstinence is taught by lessons, experiments, and blackboard illustrations. The children's reading is largely supervised in the interest of temperance as opposed to the Jesse James pictorials, and the triple pledge (against intoxicating liquors, tobacco and swearing) intelligently made.

Added to these instrumentalities, are two others of paramount importance. The ministers of Iowa preach against the making and the use of intoxicating liquors as a drink, with almost concurrent testimony and power, while the Sunday-school is earnest, clear, and systematic in its teaching. The Quarterly Temperance Lesson and exercises have been generally introduced, and meet the hearty approbation of the people. The recent Sunday-School convention at Waterloo was a real temperance jubilee. All our leading speakers were invited, and among those present to whom time was given, were Mrs. J. Ellen Foster the leading exponent of temperance reform in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Iowa; Colonel G. W. Bain, the Southern orator; Mrs. M. J. Aldrich, a Presbyterian lady of Cedar Rapids, who gives constant and most efficient service to the cause; and Mrs. A. M. Palmer, our state evangelist.

Let me conclude with a few incidents of the memorable day (June 27) when the people of Iowa voted so to amend their constitution as forever to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, including wine, beer and ale, as a drink.

Mrs. Goode had issued "Military Order No.—" to her Band of Hope; namely, that, "at 9 A. M. they should meet at an appointed rendezvous, wearing their badges, and carrying flags and banners, and should march through the streets with a band of music at the head of their battalion, singing near the polls, their cold water songs, giving three cheers for the amendment, and returning in good order to the starting place." These young folks were not raw recruits,—many a time had they marched before. They were not ignorant of the import of this day. "The Constitutional Amendment Catechism" had been so carefully studied at their regular meetings, that little people, eight years old, knew the difference between constitutional and statutory law—and the reasons of superiority in the first. They knew the facts and figures—having them illustrated by diagrams and pictures. "How much grain is used in our breweries?" "What is Iowa's annual drink bill?" "What proportion of our taxes, crime, pauperism, lunacy, comes of strong drink in our state?"

These and a score of such subjects had been thoroly set forth in the Socratic method, and few voters were better informed than these boys and girls. They had also been urged to repeat all this at home, and to plead with fathers and brothers to vote aright. With a woman's tact, Mrs. Goode had told them that at present the theory of our government is, that the father represents "the people" in his home, and that is why we say "we, the people of Iowa" will vote on these great public questions and decide them. So she urged the children to get papa to take the census in his own home, and go to the polls to represent not himself only, but his constituency.

It is well known in Iowa that the children did a vast amount of delightful and most effective electioneering at their own homes; and on the final day barefooted urchins went timidly up to well-dressed business men, and said, "Please, sir, won't you vote for my mother and me?—my father is a drunkard." Little boys marched up and down through the crowd of voters with banners wreathed in evergreen, whereon, in fleecy white letters, cut from cotton batting, were the words, "Please vote for the home" or "Tremble, King Alcohol, we shall grow up," or "Our guns are ballots, our bullets are ideas." Little girls went out two by two, with baskets heaped with button-hole boquets, and while at a little distance, fond motherly eyes watched their proceedings, they said to voters; "Won't you put in a ballot sir, for the amendment?" And if they said they had, or would, the little fingers handed up a dewy bunch of flowers. I gained new hope for poor humanity as I saw rough men carefully pinning childhood's sweet gift of "posies" on their checked shirts; Germans and Swedes fastening a sprig of mignonette in their old hat-bands; and colored men, with gleaming ivories, tying a full-blown rose to the only button left upon a threadbare coat, and saying, "Yes, honey, dis chile is fur de 'men'ment every time."

In one of the river towns, the mayor brought in a bloated German beer-drinker to vote the "whisky ticket," when the German's children, fresh from the Band of Hope procession, hurried forward, the little girl throwing her arms around her father's neck, and saying, with tears, "Papa, please vote for us at home," and the boy, who was a cripple, taking him by the hand, with the same plea. "Ach, mein Gott, dis vas too much!" exclaimed the German, breaking away from the man who had counted on him, and going up to the ballot box with the vote his little dauter gave him, while she held one hand, and the lame boy hobbled on the other side as guardian. Not an eye that looked upon the group could see it clearly because of tears. "A touch of nature makes the whole world kin."

Truly "a little child shall lead them." Truly that little child is "the fortress of the future," standing away out on the frontier of time. Let us furnish the fortress with provisions, weapons, ammunition, and eager hearts shall "hold the fort" when we grow weary. God bless

"The little soldiers newly mustered in."

A VICIOUS OX.

READER, I live in one of the richest counties in Missouri. A little over fifty years ago, the U. S. Government put these lands on the market. Our fathers (hardy, honest pioneers), bought, paid for, and improved them. Since then, they and we (their children) have paid annual tribute, not only on them, but also on our improvements and farm products. We prospered—we were happy.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago, certain persons seeing our "goodly tents," coveted them. They could have procured homes like ours by the same means, but unfortunately, they had an aversion to labor—they would prefer to use their wits. Seeing that ours was a rich pasture they applied to the government for permission to graze on our lands—to turn an ox into our fertile fields.

The government inquired:

"What is the nature of your brute?"

The answer was given:

"He is vicious, he is wont to push with his horns; he has gored many aforetime."

The government hesitated—said it douted the right of treating peaceable, loyal, prosperous people in that manner.

The witty, lazy applicants replied:

"But we will pay you big money."

That "made the mare go." The ox was turned loose upon us.

But oh! merciful heavens, what a change he hath wrought! The house of the Lord, built by our fathers, stands moss-grown and dilapidated, while the ox-owners hold liens on our once thrifty farms.

Our children are homeless, shiftless, and uneducated. Quite a number of the brighest of them having been gored by the ox, have been carried by broken hearts to infamous graves—"unwept, unhonored and unsung."

Yea, the terrible beast gored to death a goodly brother and brother-in-law of mine, while a nephew, of extraordinary ability is mortally wounded, and only lives as a warning to others.

When, oh, when, will the people's government cease to devour the people? And when, alas, will the people in might demand the death of the ox?

To arms! to arms! that ox or our children must die! Which? Let the people say.—Sel.

THE Official Organ of New York for June says: "The report of the C. S. of J. T. shows marked activity in this branch of our work. In this department California leads the list in point of membership, having 8,050 members, Wisconsin comes next with 5,007, Maine third with 4,960, while New York stands fourth on the list with a membership of 3,934. The financial exhibit, however, would indicate that New York is as lively a jurisdiction as any other, having paid into the treasury of the juvenile department for supplies nearly as much money as any other jurisdiction, and nearly as much as the three other jurisdictions named combined." But the California jurisdiction supplies its own needs for the juveniles, and perhaps expends ten times the amount that New York does; without counting at all the expenses of one juvenile organization in Vallejo whose "supplies" and improvements cost last year over $20,000.

A CALIFORNIA RECORD.

About 14 years ago there lived in a town of California an old man who was a slave of the dramshop. Miserably dressed as such people always are; ill-tempered and abusive, he would lean up against a post and curse people as they passed in the street, if he had any grudge or spite against them. He would cut a little firewood or do little odd jobs and spend the dime or half dollar earned, in drink. He was considered by the priest and levite a hopeless case and nobody cared for him.

Among those whom he insulted was a citizen of strong temperance proclivities, who had to administer a rather practical rebuke to break him of the habit so far as he was concerned.

Several months after this latter occurrence, this poor outcast was observed by the party who had rebuked him, on the outskirts of a temperance meeting, listening attentively to a speaker who was declaring that the slaves of drink could be restored to happiness and comfort if they would take the first step of signing and keeping the pledge.

He spoke to him kindly, asking if he had not experienced enough of that life of misery and if he would not like to be a free man once more and enjoy the respect and companionship of good people which it was urgently suggested he could recover. At the close he signed the pledge and from that evening became a changed man. In place of being rough and savage and impudent in his intercourse with people, he was now mild, respectful and pleasant. Soon he appeared in good clothes on Sunday and his church, for long years neglected and long forgetful of his existence, welcomed him back. He was ever after on terms of kindness with all good people and a good friend of the young folks and a good citizen every way.

Pretty soon the miraculous act ensued of his putting $100 into the hands of his new friend to take care of; later, $80 and again $100 were similarly put away and invested.

He was constantly at work now and the once careless spendthrift lived with remarkable economy. Was a constant attendant at all the meetings of his Lodge of Good Templars and at the end of five years of reform he had accumulated $1,600.

During the first part of the year, 1880. he got a friend to write a letter of enquiry to the old home he had left in Ireland 40 years before; finding that some parties were living whom he remembered and who had rendered kindly services to his parents in their latter years, he sent them some money to tide over the famine till next harvest. Thus, because there was a temperance meeting in a town in California in 1868 and because a poor lost victim of drink had been then induced to turn from his evil ways on that occasion, at last four families in Ireland in 1880 enjoyed a bonanza of good, wholesome and plentiful victuals for months of direst need and until the new harvest gave relief from the pinching famine of that time.

If ever four families or one family in Ireland or any other place have had such a stroke of good fortune and an empty cupboard miraculously and unexpectedly filled with a six months store of good, wholesome food, because somebody got drunk or did some mean act in California twelve years ago or at any time, it should be reported. No one can tell of such an occurrence; but if in a future state we shall be able with quickened faculties and new powers, to look back and read the unwritten history of the temperance reform; to see and follow out all the incidents of blessing that have constantly crowded along the path of its labors and conquests; we shall wonder with grateful, thankful appreciation at the rivers of tears and woes and agonies that have been replaced with peace and joy and happiness, because the blessed gospel of temperance has been preached by the humble agencies which God has privileged to do his will and to alleviate the misery and torment which the track of the serpent has entailed upon the just and upon the unjust, upon the innocent and the guilty, wherever his poison trail has cursed the earth.

Recently the old man passed away leaving in property and money $2,500. That has nothing to do with this story except to indicate the folly of saying that an industrious, prudent, working man cannot save and make a comfortable home in this country. Had he adopted temperate habits 20 years sooner, what a farm and house and happy home he might have acquired and enjoyed and what a life of usefulness he might have led in all these terribly blank, black, lost years of waste and sin.

There is a lesson for the boys in this; it would be the most unwise experiment to attempt to follow his example in sinning and reforming. For this one rare case of reform, there have occurred a terrible array of ghastly thousands of failures; a King Bibbler's army of many many thousands have in these 14 years gone down, down, down, and out into the realms of hopeless darkness.

Your plan is to start right and never have to reform; what a monstrous folly it is to spend the morning and noon of life in gathering tons and acres and cargoes of thistles and nettles and thorns, to be your uneasy bed the rest of your life even if the one in a thousand chances of repentance should happen to come to you.

SOUTH AMERICA.

A PLEASURE TRIP.

As we plodded wearily on our way making 10 to 12 miles a day only, over the horrible trail, so completely out of repair, so entirely gone to ruin, that nothing in the world but an earthquake could have happened to make it any worse, we met with numbers of people who knew the object of the journey. They wanted a road that was passable for foot travelers or mules, and were very glad to see the doctor who they believed was going to bring that blessing to their land.

They call their medical men and their engineers equally doctors, preserving the old signification of the word "learned persons." And here we may rest awhile and tell a little story.

Some months before this trip commenced, the iron steamer which made about two voyages a month between Barbacoas and the coast, had discharged most of her cargo at the city and at night her crew had retired or gone ashore without properly securing the vessel; always very careless.

It rained in torrents at night and the river raised 14 feet and fell again 6 feet before day; the freshets in the Telembi rising very rapidly with the rain and falling as suddenly. Just at the highest pitch of the freshet, the steamer had parted her upsteam moorings and swung round so that her heel rested on a hard flinty rock on the river bank and her head was in deep water, and there she hung at daylight the after end of her keel 6 feet out of water and the vessel lying across the stream.

This was a public calamity; everybody was summoned to get that steamer afloat, and everybody there knew just as much about how to correct the errors of the old translation of the bible as they did about getting that vessel afloat. At noon the writer came up to town for the daily mail which came once a month there, and found at least 50 men, black, white, and various compound colors, nearly all from ½ to ¾ drunk, yelling, giving orders, and swearing as well as they could in Spanish; but they never could have moved the vessel any more than they could Telegraph Hill.

It was a very easy matter for me to contrive short ways and let her drop on them by picking away half an inch of the rock at the point where her keel rested on it and having offered the service to the owners, all the howlers were dismissed but 2 or 3 and the ship very soon scooted into the water like a duck. Not one of the spectators could have repeated the operation or given any description of how that simple thing was done. To them it was some mysterious power only known to foreigners that moved the vessel and it was a marvel which was beyond their comprehension.

About a week after, being in town again, a group of people before a door across the street beckoned to me very urgently to come over. It looked somewhat suspicious but I went; then they beckoned me to come into the house, and not altogether sure but they meant mischief, their invitation was accepted. "Are you the stranger that put the steamer off the other day?" said the man who seemed to be the boss occupant. "Yes." "Well, we have a very sick man here; he has been a hard drinker, had a bad spree lately and now has had for 11 days a terrible fever and is all but dead. Won't you come and cure him for us? You strangers are always generous people, and the poor fellow will die if you don't.

To have refused to try would have been credited to a contempt for the life of the patient. He was in a sad condition and needed immediate active treatment. A visit to the drug store which cost me a dollar produced the necessary remedies, and the man took them with the most unwavering confidence and the attendants listened to further instructions with the same reverence they would have accorded to a prescription from St Peter himself. Same time there were pills and powders on the table which the regular bred native physician (educated in Paris) had ordered and the sick man would not touch one of them. That doctor's patients often died and the sick man was afraid his medicine would kill him. Many people suffer from worms in that country and as my treatment was fortunately successful, the sick man was out in 3 or 4 days ready for another drink of guarapo.

It was certain a man who could push a steam boat into the water, build dams and make roads could cure sick people, and wherever any body was sick, where we called, I was requested to feel the pulse (that was the main thing) look at the tongue and tell them just how to get well. Then the well people of the house would come with their wrists held out and try to find out from me if they were in a safe condition, and if I did not think some medicine would be good for them. And if any neighbors or travelers were on hand they chipped in with their pulse too and all the children huddled up and had their pulse attended to, with the most perfect trust and confidence.

It would have been cruel not to humor these poor people, for they would not believe that the stranger doctor who had come from such a far country was unable to cure simple people like them, altho he assured them he was not a medico. There was a California miner there who was a much better doctor than any of the native regulars. The latter being far behind the age.

Most of the houses along this rout sold guarapo or cane beer; cane juice boiled down a little and then allowed to ferment. Of course before fermentation it is a sweet, pleasant, wholesome drink, but when it has fermented and becomes strong enough to suit the Indians it is very fiery. The Indian natives are almost universally drunken on this cane beer as are the beer drinkers everywhere. In some of the huts they sold rum which is there called Anisado, a doctored rum similar to Absynthe. The retailing of this guarapo at 2½ cents a quart seemed to afford a living to most of the settlers along the way, for the Indians drank it as often as they could pay for it or get it on credit.

Board was inexpensive there for Indians. There was a feed they get up for them at 2½ cents a meal which they mostly patronized. It seemed to me starving my poor peon to give him a 2½ cent meal; ten cents seemed about as little as a weary traveler could dine on, and orders were given accordingly; but he never could hold more than 7½ cents worth at one time, and often gave in at the end of the second course.

A COMBAT.

The Indians are not pugilists, but they quarrel under the influence of guarapo at times. On one occasion an insult had passed between two of them, with enough guarapo courage in them to make them very brave and very sensitive on their personal honor. Nothing but a fight could be thot of and they prepared. They began to revolve around each other at a distance of 6 or 8 feet, one arm extended at full length and the hand open, the other hand behind them. Look out, said one, my father killed a man once with one blow, and on the next turn the hand of one touched the hanging rags from the sleeve of the other and at that critical moment each happened to have his attention attracted by something going on among the other peons and the blood shed was over. That was about an average of their fights.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

The installation of the Knights of the Golden Links took place in Cambrian Hall, on Monday, July 31st. Through the kindness of one interested, an invitation was extended to me. This Order, though yet in infancy, is most praiseworthy in its aim. It is a society founded for the purpose of uniting the young men of the city and State, in a pledge against alcoholic beverages, tobacco and profanity, and also pledges them to work for Prohibition, and the enforcement of the Sunday Law. They are also taught reverence for religion. This Order must have a good influence wherever it is established. The installation ceremonies were solemn and imposing, and the program which followed was of a high order, and well received by the audience. The dignity of the yonthful members showed that they realized the importance of the vows they had assumed.

It it indeed refreshing in these days to find a band of young men, with the moral courage to come out boldly, and thus avow their principles and practice. An organization of this kind would not be amiss in every community. Long may they continue the work undertaken, and may the number of the Links increase, till they shall form a Golden chain surrounding our fair State, binding its youth to Religion, Temperance and Virtue.

Spring Valley Lodge in San Francisco has elected Sister S. E. Cline, W. C. T., and Sister Hannah Johnson, W. V. T. So it seems they want to have the business of the lodge properly conducted.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

WOMEN AT THE POLLS.

A shudder of the iciest chills used to take possession of a certain class of prophets of 20 years ago, when they anticipated the possibility of women going to the polls some day; becoming wofully depraved there and taking noisy part in the drunken rows and quarrels and highly seasoned language which from time immemorial have graced the occasion, when men have exercised their most solem responsibilities at the ballot-box. Oh dear! said they what an awful thing it will be to have women lose all their modesty and purity and delicacy and sell their votes at the polls just like a—a—man, yes, just like a man.

Somebody replied that it was singular that their going to the post office where men go, and to the theater where men go, and the circus where men go, and to the ball where men go, and doing these things once a week, should not much more endanger their purity and modesty than going to the polls for a minute once a year, but the radical who said that, was only compassionated for the depth and comprehensiveness of his ignorance and impracticability; and the wail for woman's approaching dissolution continued.

But in Wyoming women have gone to the polls for more than 8 years and election day has been purified from its demoralization and has become one of the most respectable members of the calendar. In Kansas and Iowa where women have not yet voted, but where they have had business at the voting places they have changed the character of the procedings from a scene of brutal immorality and disgraceful riot to an occasion of chaste and cheerful and beneficent and improving influences. And so we need right there the purifying, reforming, blessing office of good women; for the circumstances and surroundings of the ballot-box should properly be as solem and decorous as those of a supreme court or a ministerial conference.

DON'T PROHIBIT.

So Fools say. But the Republican State Convention of Maine, the largest ever held there, and the General Conference representing 244 Congregational churches in Maine which met a few days ago in Bangor, have declared prohibition an eminent success. The convention declared "the wisdom and efficiency of this legislation in promoting the moral and material interests of Maine have been demonstrated thru the practical annihilation of the traffic in a large portion of the State; and we favor such legislation and such enforcement of law as will secure to every portion of our territory freedom from the traffic." They also commended a constitutional prohibitory amendment.

The Conference "desires to place on record the renewed assurance of its unqualified faith in the soundness of prohibition, its thankful acknowledgement of the great and salutary change it has wrot in our State and the belief, which we express with the full force of our convictions, that it is destined to complete success."

The politicians of that convention and the ministers of that conference, both bodies from all over the State ot to know all about the effect of prohibition that has continued 26 years there, the last 5 of which only have the laws been sufficiently strict and the penalties severe enough to make it entirely effective. And yet because in a few towns there are a few ruffians who slyly violate the law, we have idiots tell us the law is a failure and idiots too who never had a chance to know anything about it.

OREGON.

Our next door neighbor, and the eldest of the grown up family of the Grand Lodge of California—the G. L. of Oregon, held its session in June (20 to 22nd) at the Dalles, and the report of proceedings has been received from the prompt and efficient G. W. S. Bro. J. E. Houston.

It is fair to believe that Oregon, in its sparse population, great distances and slow and costly means of travel and other obstacles, presents difficulties in the way of planting and sustaining our Order, that would be ample excuse if we found it away behind the average of States which have dense populations, with a network of railroads and every advantage in their temperance work.

But Oregon has a capita tax of 20 cents a quarter (not quite enough) and its Good Templary is not a failure by any means. It reports now 68 lodges, 3318 actual live members and 600 members of the Band of Hope. There has been an increase of 10 lodges and 1200 members during the year and they wind up with $669 in the treasury.

And it proposes to continue its progress. They are looking round for a lecturer and the past Supt. of Juv. work, Mrs. E. M. Vandevert, most wisely recommends in her report, "that he shall be a man with a clean mouth and of pure speech so that the children may safely take him for a pattern and that he may command their respect".

She also commends a vigorous prosecution of the juvenile work, as upon the interest we take in it largely depends the permanence of our Order; she laments also that the indifference of Good Templars to the work of enlisting the young and their persistence in setting the bad example of using tobacco are serious obstacles in the way of success.

The Grand Lodge, last year adopted the Rescue as its organ, and the committee to which the matter was referred this year unanimously recommended its continuance, but the influence of the P. G. W. C. T. succeeded in substituting in an amendment a paper called the Temperance Herald which is published in Oregon.

Dr. Elias Jessup of Newberg (State Senator) was elected G. W. C. T.; C. A. Sehlbrede G. W. C.; Mrs. Elizabeth Lord G. W. V. T.; J. E. Houston re-elected G. W. S. and Levi Leland was made Supt. Juv. work. The Dalles has the banner lodge, 152 members. The G. L. endorsed the petition of the State Alliance asking for the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people. An excellent decision was rendered that it is a violation of our obligation to advertise for the liquor traffic or to lend our influence to sustain or extend the same.

The Rescue has endeavored to avail itself of every opportunity to help the cause in Oregon. When there was no temperance paper published there, a considerable circulation was obtained for it and it is to be hoped it will not decrease. The Lodges and membership are invited to continue their patronage of the Rescue, not as a help to it, but as a help to sustain the cause in their communities. Our interest is one all along this coast, and it is very important that the Order and cause should make use of a competent and effective temperance literature.

Bro. Leland has to look out for his laurels to keep up the work that has been turned over to him by Mrs. Vandevert.

A NEW ROAD.

A generous amount of legislative blank cartridge, political oratory and voter-trap-logic is annually expended in the most fruitless and objectless discussions of "how not to do it," in restricting the exactions and extortions of railroad and other corporations. Those who fish for political preferment, pretend they are going to legislate against the present oppressions and possible future encroachments of the railroad corporation and force it to deal fairly with its helpless customers.

This war of paper bullets or paper pellets has been in progress for ten years now, with the sum total of results as follows: since its commencement there has been periodically so many times a year another turn of the screw which puts the railroad up and the people down. At the end of every year we find that powerful concern has bot off or driven off some competing agency and added a series of new imposts to its already monstrous exactions. It has swallowed up the Pacific Mail company and made it an instrument of aiding its warfare upon the commerce of the State. It has built a southern line and bot off other lines looking to a Pacific terminus, and boldly threatens now to drive the wheat fleet from entering the Golden Gate. It intends to grasp exclusive control of every means of travel or transport in, to and from this State, with the purpose of placing the whole trade of the Pacific coast in a position of utter helplessness to resist any extortionate tribute or tyrannical outrage with which the gigantic despotism may choose to burden it.

If during all this time any reduction of fredght or fare has been made, in some exceptional cases, it has probably been done as a necessity, because old rates were extinguishing that peculiar source of profit to the company. And in reminding the reader of these matters of history, there is no intention of exhibitiug the managers of this institution, as at all worse or more grasping or tyrannical than the average money making man.

It might have been worse for us if Gen. Stoneman and Gov. Booth and the proprietors of the Examiner and Chronicle or any individuals of the State who make or sell drunkenness or make anti-monopoly speeches on the sandlot, had been the owners of the C. P. R. R. Perhaps we should be thankful it is no worse, for any person should know that to trust any men with such immense irresponsible power can only have one result—abuse of that power. We don't find more than once in a lifetime a man or a corporation that will modestly and conscienciously be content with a profit of one million when 2 or 3 or 5 can be had just as easily and without violence to law or mercantile usage.

The patriot at San Jose who was going to reduce freights and fares 25 per cent., might just as well have said 100 per cent. If the company don't like a reduction of two or 1 per cent., they can say it shall not be done and it will not. In the past history of this State a few thousand dollars properly applied has generally sufficed to secure or defeat a great deal of legislation, and there are a great many stages of a legislative enactment, where money can bring powerful agencies and influences to bear without open bribery.

Where a few thousand dollars have been or can be used with effect in a State, the R. R. company can put up if necessary a number of millions. It would pay them to put up six millions to defeat a 25 per cent. reduction, if there was any danger of such an outcome, and they could defeat it with much less than half a million. And the Railroad interest of the U. S. could use 50 millions in Congress if necessary, whereas a million or two would be sufficient to keep the politicians from harming business in any direction.

All efforts of clubs and political cliques to regulate the railroad power will be no more effective than the attack of a few mosquitoes on the hide of a rhinoceros. No one can tell whether the candidates now promising huge anti-monopoly performances are not the nominees and paid agents of the C. P. R. R. from first to last.

But there is one way to settle the question fairly and easily and by the most reasonable and natural as well as completely effective method. The government can easily build a railroad from ocean to ocean or from the Pacific to Omaha and to St. Louis. Were it commenced next year it would be needed to its fullest capacity when finished. The fruit trade during the whole season would probably be increased ten times by a reduction of freight to one fourth of the present rate, and thousands of tons of grapes now wasted at $15 or $20 a ton for wine (or $10 in the near future) could be dispersed over the continent from Nevada eastward to the sea at three times the profit to the vineyard men and both producer and consumer would be preserved from the ruin and damnation of the wine.

The C. P. R. R. has no more right to monopolize the transportation of the country than one merchant or company has to own the whole tea or sugar or cotton or timber trade, and when a merchant or trader is extortionate in his charges all we have to do is to put up another in opposition; we dont in such cases growl and howl about commissioners and laws to strengthen the chains around our own necks, nor should we be silly enough to persevere in a policy in this great matter which experience and common sense agree in declaring utterly barren of useful results.

IT PROHIBITS.

An experiment in prohibition is being tried in Liverpool on a pretty extensive scale. Lord Sefton and Mr. John Roberts, M. P., for Flint Boroughs, have agreed to prohibit the sale of liquor in any shape on land laid out for building purposes by them in the South of Liverpool. For some years past new streets have been springing up over this area, and it is estimated that when the whole ground is covered there will be some 50,000 persons living in a district where not a drop of liquor can be sold or bought. What are the results so far? Mr. Roberts declares that he has never had a word of complaint from owners or occupiers of houses in the district on account of the absence of liquor shops. Mr. S. G. Rathbone, the respected chairman of the School Board, has publicly called attention to the fact that the working-classes are rapidly migrating from the districts where public-houses are thick on the ground to this prohibitory district. The head constable reports that his officers have very little to do on this ground where there are no public-houses. The medical officer reports that the death-rate is exceptionally low in the district. The feeling of the inhabitants in this district toward prohibition may be gathered from the fact that when, the other day, application was made to the licensing magistrates for an outdoor license for a house on the borders of the ground prohibited, the court was crowded with residents around who opposed the application, and it was refused by the bench accordingly. These facts speak for themselves; and need no comment.—Templars Standard.

As an offset to the above some of our readers, who used to go to sea, will remember how the north end of Liverpool was built up. About 30 years ago the Liverpool docks were largely extended seaward; more than half a mile of new large docks were excavated north of the older ones and of course the town extended its business houses and dwellings along the line of the new docks. As usual there was much speculation and pleasant prophecy of immense prosperity in the virgin territory and a rush was made by the enterprising to secure favorite locations. This witness from one voyage to another noted the manner in which the extension was built up. Block one commenced with a big gin mill at each front corner; sametime a big gin mill was built at each front corner of No 2. and another at the first corner of block No. 3. By the time the front of block 1 was filled up with hardware, shipchandleries, tin-shops, groceries and smaller whisky mills,a big ginmill was pioneered out on the far corner of block 3 and another on block 4, and they commenced filling up block 2. As the whole line of new docks was built up, the plan of having always 3 or 4 big corner ginmills stretched away out in advance of all other enterprise was adhered to; and they were all occupied as soon as finished, to entrap the laboring men as they went to and from their work on the ships and the docks, and to catch the sailors as they came into town. Besides these advanced posts of the drunkard-maker's industry, the natural adjuncts grew up everywhere in the vicinity and the principal commerce was that of drunkenness and vice.

In 12 years from the completion of the North End extension, altho some of the old pioneers in trade had kept afloat, about three generations of traders on the average had been swamped there. How many of the gin-mill occupants died of their own bait or committed suicide otherwise is not known, but it is presumed the gin-mills themselves belonging largely to the Liverpool city officials and magnates have always paid high rents, altho they entirely pauperized every other business in their vicinity. And all the time there were bloated old Johny Bulls, sitting over mugs of beer and puffing at long pipes at the tables of these gin palaces, wondering how everything had gone down at the North End, and trade was good for nothink, just as some leatherbrained people in San Francisco wonder why business is depressed in a town which has 24 drunkeries and pauper-mills to every ten places of honest trade and industry.

A FLAT FAILURE.

The brewers and beer-drinkers of St, Louis are happy. They have now got "a Levite for a priest," and are on the safe road to heaven. The Rev. Dr. ——preached a sermon recently, in which he declared that the temperance movement, as it has been conducted, is "a flat failure," and he recommends the drinking of wine and beer as a panacea for the evils of intemperance. This theory is not original with the doctor. It is quite old, and has been effectually tried and found wanting. The Duke of Wellington, when Prime Minister of England, conceived the same idea, and had an act passed establishing beer houses everywhere in the realm. Sydney Smith, in writing in the Edinburgh Review, said the result was to 'make the sovereign people beastly drunk.' Lord Brougham, who helped to pass the law in parliament, lived to deplore its evil effects, and in 1870 the law was changed.

Again, Mr. Gladstone conceived the idea that a free use of wine would diminish drunkenness, and had a law passed to license every confectionery for the sale of wine. The Saturday Review and the Pall Mall Gazette both said the result had been to make drunkards of the ladies of the country. We have had a few prominent clergy of our country, and many obscure ones, to advocate this same exploded theory before Dr. —— broached it. Among them I may mention Drs. Crosby and Thos. K. Beecher. But both lived to be heartily ashamed of their position. Brewers and wine-bibbers applauded them lustily, as they will Dr. ——, while the true friends of temperance everywhere execrated their teaching. It is a singular coincidence that the brewers are heartily with such men as Dr. —— in this "reform." Mr. Clauson, president of the National Brewer's Association, in closing his official report a few years back, said:

"Political parties of all shades will, ere long, we hope, hurl fanatical dreamers and would-be moral reformers from their midst, and may we not hope that then a new era will be inaugurated in our entire social system? That men cannot be angels while in the flesh is a self-evident fact. This being the case, let us, the brewers of a good, wholesome beverage for their use, not abuse them, but use all our energies, of mind and body to bring about a result which may in the end accomplish that which others have labored for in the wrong direction—namely, the reformation of the masses to a taste for a pure and harmless stimulant, instead of poisonous decoctions which have brought about so much misery in our country, and have given occasion for much of the useless and foolish legislation for an object which moral suasion and the proper limits of law can alone accomplish."

It is thus seen that Dr. —— and the brewers are in entire harmony in their laudable desire to bring about a reformation in society. I hope he enjoys his company. To all such sophistry it is only necessary to point to the facts of history and individual observation. In answer to this senseless twaddle, Henry Ward Beecher truly says:

"In America men drink light wines as the first step toward drinking heavy wines; and they drink heavy wines as the next step toward drinking whisky; and they drink for the same reason that they put coal into the furnace and wood in the stove—because they want fire. Therefore to attempt to bribe men who want super-stimulation to drop rum and brandy and whisky, and go back to ale and beer and cider and light wines, is in vain. They will not do it, unless you permit them to swell the amount and make up in quantity what they lack in quality. We are a practical people, and we drink on purpose, for an object; and I do not think you will cure the conflagration by persuading men to take embers instead of great fires."—A. J. Yeater in the Churchman.

A MAN who runs a saloon in San Francisco recently met an old acquaintance whom he had not seen for about a year. He had changed very much in appearance and looked to weigh about 170 pounds in place of 250 as formerly. He accounted for the change by saying he had entirely quit drinking beer and all other drinks and really believed he felt better and it was good for him. He also said his average performance had been three gallons of beer a day. What a noble use for a man to put himself to, a sieve to filter rotten, filthy lager beer and a wheelbarrow to carry round 80 or 100 lbs of dead, foul, used up, offal of his system.

LODGES, ETC.

(Bro. A. M. Pearsall to Protection Lodge, Colusa.)

BROTHERS AND SISTERS:—In a little essay read here the other night it was said that we, as Good Templars do not love our Order as we ought. Is it not true? Do we all feel that anxiety for the welfare of our Order, and the ultimate success of the noble cause for which we are banded together, that we should feel? Do we not sometimes lose sight of the work which we have in hand, and look only to the momentary pleasure which we expect in meeting here week after week? It was said that Good Templars, as a rule, do not have the same love for their Order as do Masons and Odd Fellows for theirs. That may be true but is it right? Both the latter noble Orders are founded upon the principle of rendering mutual aid and assistance, both in prosperity and in adversity, to any member of the fraternity or his family. To elevate each other, mentally and morally. These are indeed noble objects, but how much broader is the principle upon which our Order rests. It embraces the objects of the other Orders, and goes farther. It does not confine its labors, its beneficiaries, its great solicitude to its own members simply or to their families. The whole world —the whole of the human race—is the object of its solicitude. Its principle is not merely to help up a fellow-being who may be down, or by fraternal advice and counsel to keep one from falling—to be sure we must do this, but more; we seek to remove the cause of the downfall,—to remove the temptation from the man, not merely the man from the temptation. With what zeal we should labor, then, and in what high esteem should we hold our Order! Now, then, how are we to work so as to do the greatest amount of good in the shortest time? A portion of the time of each Lodge meeting is set apart for the "Good of the Order." What is that time intended for? Is it simpy expected that each member shall under this head contribute something for the entertainment of the rest? I think not. It seems to me that that time is intended for discussion of ways and means, perfecting plans, and reporting results of plans put into execution. Of course we must not drop the social feature of our Lodge entirely. Our meetings must be made pleasant and attractive. But are we not prone to look more to the entertainment furnished at each meeting than to the real work? I am afraid we are. But let us make a change. Let us mingle the work and the play. Let us have our songs, recitations, etc., but let us have more solid temperance talk and work. Much of our work must be done outside of the Lodge room. Here we can discuss plans, and go out and put them into execution. It is not enough that we simply attend Lodge meetings, and abstain from the use of intoxicants. We must live, act and talk temperance. We are obligated, each one of us to do this. Let us go from here tonight feeling that each one has an individual work to do. Let each brother and sister say "I will bring at least one applicant for membership in this Lodge before a month rolls by." Get anyone who has sufficient honor to keep inviolate our sacred obligation, whether they can come to our meetings regularly or not. We will at least have their influence. Just think what an army of temperance people we would soon have if every Good Templar in California would bring in at least one more. And nearly every one could do so if they would try. Let us try. I did not intend to say as much as I have said; but I hope it may do some good—may kindle anew expiring hope in the heart of some brother or sister, and stimulate to fresh exertion each one here tonight.

SALINAS.—After having been closed for about six months, the saloon-keepers of Salinas, under the lash of the Leag of Fiendom threw open their doors to receive the wages of weary toilers from the harvest fields. The Leag then made sham complaints and employed legal counsel, but the temperance people went to work earnestly. One saloon-keeper was convicted and sentenced, another has been brought to court but not willing to trust his case to a Salinas jury he sought a change of venue to Castroville. The court has dismissed the bogus complaints of the Leag of Fiendom and the way is clear for genuine prosecutions with the highest penalty.

Till every saloon is closed the work of death will continue and worst of all on Sunday. Last Sunday the Leag of Fiendom made a poor fellow drunk, threw him on the Railroad track where the train ran over him, cutting off his foot.

BRO. T. B. Carter reports that Bro. Calver lectured three times in the Presbyterian Church at Virginia City, and delivered wholesome truths on prohibition. After he has been to the Eastern part of the State, and returns, they hope to organize a Lodge. He thinks there is not very much enthusiasm on the subject in Nevada.

THE Catholic Temperance Advocate, Pawtucket, R. I. monthly, 75 cts. a year, is a bright and spirited 8 page journal, gives the news of the Catholic societies in the Union and assails the liquor abomination roundly. An editorial "Groceries and Rum" is quoted: "GROCERIES AND RUM.—Under the sign—'Groceries and Liquors,' we have an enemy more powerful and destructive in itself than any other in the field. It sends its poisonous net into corners which that of the up and down rum shop would fail to reach. It is a warning for all to beware of the danger which is connected with a Grocery and Liquor store. The intention of the person who raises this sign—'Groceries and Liquor,'—is to do the liquor business first and last, and to attend to the grocery business just so far as it will benefit his principal trade as a rum seller. He uses the word groceries, to try to place himself with respectable merchants and with the express purpose of selling more rum. The field in which he has an opportunity to sell his poison and misery bearer is not that of the regular trader of the vile stuff. He introduces bad habits into the home, and in most cases, brings ruin to the home he is permitted to enter. Perhaps the result most to be dreaded in the sale of rum in groceries is the moral effect upon the minds of our youth, who will naturally come to the conclusion that, being handled with the necessaries of life, it is an acceptable and honorable business; prevailing customs help to form conclusions. We would advise all to beware of a rum-grocery, and rather than expose our families to the dangers they present, to trade with grocers who consider it inhuman to deal out poison to theirbrothers."

The Educational Visitor gives us cheering information concerning the State of Maine. Many farms mortgaged through rum, have been freed from such encumbrance—"Scarcely a farm under mortgage." "The farmers of the State know what they are about; they don't have any mean stuff around their farms," said an enterprising huckster in Maine. One town, which had seventy to eighty hard drinkers before the law passed, has now but two. Senator Blaine recently addressed a large meeting of citizens in the city hall of Portland, and he said: "There is no State in the Union which has been so prosperous and flourishing as Maine during the last twenty years. I do not forget," he said, turning to a Senator from Iowa, who was on the platform, "I do not forget that my friend is from one of those great Western States of marvellous growth; but not excepting his State or any other, Maine has been more prosperous than any of them. The reason is this, the enormous saving of our people in money, industrious habits and health, life and happiness, resulting from the policy of prohibition to the liquor traffic. That policy in Maine has no organized or respectable opposition from any quarter. Sneers and jeers come to us alone from without the State." Then why should politicians be so tried with us for attempting to inaugurate in this and other States a similar "marvellous growth," and "enormous saving of our people in money, industrious habits, health, life and happiness, resulting from the policy of prohibition to the liquor traffic?"

DAKOTA.—It is pleasant to receive the Temperance Advocate, published by the Y. M. C. A. of Yankton, Dakato. That territory is trying to come into the Union as a temperance state, and never to have its State records written in the blood of its children sold to slauter by the government for a few wretched pieces of silver. It affords peculiar pleasure to compliment and wish God speed to the Y. M. C. A. of Yankton for the faith and patriotism which has prompted them in the infancy of their new country to make a judicious effort to prevent the building up of the altars and temples of Satan to curse their future. No farming work can so well secure a plenteous goodly harvest as the prevention of the sowing of the tares and thistles, which if suffered to root, rob the wheat of its sustenance from below and its sunshine from heaven and make of it a lean and sickly crop.

WHEN a minister of the gospel declares that prohibition does not or cannot prohibit where tried, he declares that preaching the gospel is a useless and idle waste of time. All the time that prohibition has been on trial in a few places, moral suasion has been on trial every where and for centuries before a prohibitory law was enacted. And moral suasion has been an utter failure with the masses everywhere. And if moral suasion is so inefficient in the matter of promoting abstinence from the horrible sin of drinking destructive poison, that prohibition added won't make it effective, of what use can the moral suasion of the gospel be? If moral suasion for the good citizen and prohibition for the bad are together of no avail, what is the use of continuing a labor that must be, according to our "don't prohibit" advocates, a failure!?

STRONG DRINK has often brought on distress and disaster; but it never yet has been stated to have caused war. Still such seems to have been the case with our last Civil War. On the 4th inst., there was held a meeting in the Gospel tent, Flatbush and Fifth Avenues, Brooklyn, at which Gen. Conway, who presided, said the late rebellion was largely due to whisky. It was the General's duty to administer the oath to the Confederates in New Orleans after the war, as a member of Gen. Canby's staff. Admiral Semmes walked in, one morning, and asked to be sworn. They talked of the war.—"There would not have been any war," said Admiral Semmes, "had it not been for whisky." The war came about this way. Jefferson Davis and a dozen other leading Southern men met at a hotel in Charleston and discussed what they were going to do about the inauguration of Abraham Lincoln. Jefferson Davis was the only one who wanted to fight about it. The others were satisfied to let Mr. Lincoln be President. At 11 o'clock at night the discussion grew animated, and whisky was introduced. In an hour every one of the thirteen was for war, and whisky was the cause of the change.—Ogden Herald.

THE conscientious Democrats who at present decline to record their votes at the coming election as opposed to law and Sunday and American liberty, and who do not consent to be labeled obedient henchmen of the imported gin-mills and pauper-factories—have not fallen suddenly in love with the Republican party or been captivated by its merits. And unless that party puts up a manly, honest platform, for Sunday and for liberty, to vote out the cause of all the pauperism and crime of the State, and unless they present worthy candidates who can be had in abundance, not one of them nor of the prohibitionists of the state will vote for their candidates. It is a good time this year to scrape off barnacles.

TWO GOOD THINGS.—If our readers in San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara counties want the easiest and most comfortable hammock chair, inexpensive, durable and attractive, look out for Bro. J.T. Walker of Paso Robles, (P. O.) who is taking round samples and selling said chair. He has kindly consented to act as agent for the RESCUE, the very paper to read while resting in the chair. Order both at once and you will never regret it. Bro. Walker is an ardent temperance man, and a thoro Christian gentleman. Tell your neighbors about the chair and the paper, and get them ready to subscribe when he comes your way. J. W. WEBB.

CORONER WEEKS will have to mend his mortuary reports as unscientific. Of 72 suicides in San Francisco last year, he allows 24 were from alcohol; and we might suppose that pecuniary causes 19; love 5; unsound mind and insanity 12, that is 36 more or in all five-sixths of the whole were due to the same first cause. But one of the pulpits of San Francisco tells us suicide is chiefly caused by skepticism and if it is, there is a smart chance in California at least for a speedy exhaustion of that destructive influence at the present rate of thinning it out.

RIDDLE.—Beside the first lucky solution of the riddle, as reported, there came correct answers from the following: Rev. J. A. McMillan, of Plano; Sackett Cornell and Peter Brown, of San Francisco; C. T. Prindle, of Strawberry Valley; Mrs. J. M. Pedlar, Gilroy; John Woods, San Luis Gbispo; W. H. Magoon, Stoney Point; Jennie Shrode, San Gabriel; M. D. Buck, Santa Clara. It so happened that there were copies paid for and ordered to be sent where desired and the 10 competitors were all equally provided for.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

TWO DIVISIONS. A and B. Benefits in A, $1,000; in B. $2,000. Entrance fee in A, $4; in B, $5. A member of one joining the other pays half fee; under 49 eligible to both.

Classes: 1st, 20 to 29 yrs; 2d, 30 to 39; 3d, 40 to 48; 4th, 49 to 55; 5th, 56 and upwards.

Assessments. On the death of a member each member of his division shall be assessed, 1st class, 75c; 2d, 90c; 3d, $1.15; 4th, $1.40; 5th, $1.70.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 66c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank. S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

DONT WAIT.

Our readers need not wait till they have $1,000 to spare, or even $100, to send for goods to H. A. Smith's Cash Grocery, advertised in another colum of this paper, but send for what you need or can spare the money for, if only $10 or less, and it will surely pay you, and that you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have knocked at least one pin from under the whisky fabric which is struggling and striving for supremacy over every thing that is good or that opposes its rule in this beautiful land.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

HOME PROTECTION.

SANAT CRUZ, Aug. 7, 1882.

EDITOR RESCUE:—I have just completed my work in Santa Clara and Santa Cruz Counties for the present. At Santa Clara a large public meeting was held in Widney Hall, which I addressed upon the political issue raised by the League of Freedom and the Sunday law. In this place I heard much complaint from the intelligent and respectable portion of the community that the saloons prevented people with families from locating there during the summer months. A majority of the saloons here, as I was informed by an intelligent German, are kept by the most brutal and ignorant of this nationality; and as a result, the League of Freedom can justly claim a large number in proportion to the population of hoodlums from 12 to 18 years of age. The respectable portion of the property-owners, it is hoped, will learn by-and-by that their best interests lie in the direction of a Sunday law, vigorously enforced, and such other restrictions as may make their homes and families safe from the allurements and aggressions of these places. I have met J. W. Webb, of the I. O. G. T., vigoronsly at work in the interests of that order. He addressed a large audience in the M. E. church, on the evening of my arrival. I desire to bear most emphatic testimony to the industry and ability of this warm-hearted advocate of temperance. The address to which I had the pleasure of listening was one of the best I ever heard, and went far to make my effort on the following evening successful. The Home Protection Association of Santa Clara is composed of the best men in the community, and will do their part of the work in putting Santa Clara right on the record.

I spoke in Santa Cruz on Thursday evening, at an open meeting of the Lodge. The audience completely filled the hall. Much interest was shown, and seven applications for membership were received. The entertainment of recitations, music, etc., were all first-class, especially the lunch that was spread for the visitors after the adjournment.

The meetings of the Home Protection Association were held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, in the Christian Church. Those on Friday and Sunday evenings were largely attended. A strong aggressive organization, of over fifty members has been effected, and will soon number over a hundred members—all voters. Santa Cruz country is sure to send delegates to represent the better elements of society in the Republican State Convention. As I go about in the State, on the work of the Home Protection Association, I am more and more convinced that if the Republican party shall adopt a plain, emphatic resolution in favor of a judicious Sunday law, and another in favor of local option, it can carry the State by at least 5,000 majority. INJUSTICE OF THE MEANEST.—A poor Chinaman was sentenced to go to jail for having 12 unstamped cigars in his possession, and for not having $50 to pay his fine. A few days ago a hackman was reported as having come on shore with 30 cigars, bot on an English ship, for a new copper cent, which he passed for $2.50 on an English mate. The white man who was smuggling these 30 cigars was relieved of 15 by the officers, and allowed to keep the rest; but a Chinaman goes to jail for a less offence. And a short time ago over 1,000 rum-sellers were permitted to go scot free for open violations of the law, and were permitted to continue in open defiance of it every Sunday. Such discrimination is scandalous and criminal.

To all Subordinate Lodges, I. O. G. T., of California.

DEAR BROTHERS AND SISTERS:—Most of you know how difficult it is for many of our Lodges to obtain suitable places in which to hold meetings, and what a great hindrance it is to the advancement of the Order and the temperance cause generally. We have been paying rent and moving from place to place, which has a tendency to weaken our influence and to keep our treasury drained until we have despaired of getting a hall by our individual efforts alone; therefore we have concluded to try a new plan. A copy of this circular letter will be sent to each lodge in the State, asking it to donate one dollar toward our building fund. This small sum would not be missed from your treasuries, and if every lodge would respoud to the appeal, we should soon have a hall and be ready to assist some other lodge in the same way. We believe that if these calls for donations were not made oftener than once a quarter, every lodge could easily respond, and the result would be that many who are now laboring under great disadvantages, would soon have halls of their own. Those lodges who already own halls, and are in a flourishing condition, might donate according to their circumstances, being assured that the money will be faithfully appropriated to the use named. We expect to raise something by donations in our community, but not so much as we might were it not for the stand we took in the enforcement of the Sunday law, which prejudiced many against us.

If you decide to favor us with a donatiod, please forward the same to Mrs. L. E. Cheadle, Hanford, Tulare Co., Cal., either by express, money order or otherwise, who will at once acknowledge the receipt by post.

STOCKTON.—Col. Babcock, Superintendent of the Home Protection Association, intends visiting Stockton this week, with a view of organizing a branch there. The Colonel will find a responsive audience in Stockton.

SOMEBODY in Indiana says the Republican party is not afraid to trust the people. Very true; it never was afraid to do that. But the people are becoming a little scrupulous about confiding in the Republican party.

W. G. SWAN, of Healdsburg, would be a most useful speaker and organizer in the Home Protection interest. It is to be hoped his valuable services may be utilized in the present contest between rum and the homes of California.

INDIANAPOLIS has Sunday-schools and saloons: in ten years 6,000 people have joined the churches, and 50,000 arrests have been made and brot before the Mayor's court for drunkenness. 400 young people have graduated from the public schools, and 750 have graduated from the grog-shops to the penitentiary. The offi ial organ, N. Y., says so.

THE Chronicle and Examiner both quote the Sunday law sermon of Dr. Barrows, on the 6th, but they leave to conjecture which side of it he favored. The Rev. T. K. Noble, on the 30th, gave an excellent discourse, in which he outlined the political duties of Chsistians in the present contest of crime against temperance and Sunday.

CONSCIENCE.—The drunkard-makers and pauper-grinders are shocked at the idea of the the Sunday law doing violence to their consciences. The conscience of such men might be affected or stirred into activity by an exylosion of about two tons of dynamite, but no one would think of awakening it with anything else.

J. W. WEBB.

SOQUEL gave a fair audience, no room for a lodge as a strong Division of S. of T. is here. Rev. L. N. Barber, pastor of the Cong. Church is G. W. Patriarch. At his home found a hearty welcome. He is an ardent Good Templar and as he will soon take a vacation southward at least as far as Cambria and Los Tablos, if Brethren will get him audiences they can have some good lectures. Hope he will send word of the dates at each place.

APTOS is not much of a temperance place, my posters had not been put up; interviewed the post master and teacher about a meeting but met with no encouragement; hotel keeper did'nt seem to care whether I took a room and meals or not, one of his drunken loafer customers insulted me without rebuke from any one and so I returned to Santa Cruz on next train, went to prayer meeting, gave a short address and spent an hour with Col. Babcock, who was there doing good work for Home Protection, in plotting against the common enemy of mankind. The Brethren failed to get word to Ben Lomond, a widely scattered community, or I think we could have instituted a lodge there. I had left it to the Lodge Deputy, the Dist. Deputy not being acquainted here, for I knew nothing about the place and not a soul there.

SALINAS saloons having opened again on Sundays—only since the Democratic anti-Sunday law proclamation—the lodge called mass meetings on Sunday nights, as I was elsewhere for two weeks, arranged for Bro. Stephens of Santa Cruz to be there one Sunday and Col. Babcock next Sunday and Monday. Both did well and latter started a Home Protection Association. Afterwards I paid the place two visits getting good meetings, the brethren are in earnest. On the last Sunday night a poor fellow lay maimed, having been made helplessly drunk in open saloons on previous Sunday, then ejected from train, fell asleep on track and had his foot cut off. And those fanatics, Col Babcock, Dr. E. K. Abbot, Revs. Crawford and other preachers are trying to rob saloon men and the Leag generally, of "Freedom" to do this sort of thing and the county (not the rumsellers !) of "Freedom" to foot the bills if the poor unfortunate has no money, as reported !

MONTEREY Lodge holds its own against big discouragements. Had a small but attentive audience, Sister Plummer of Alameda being among the number. Bro. Crawford had arranged for the hall at Pacific Grove, and we did all we could out there to get an audience but could only muster 12 persons to listen.

CASTROVILLE has a good lodge, presided over last quarter by a Sister and a lady is elected for this term. Fair meetings tho people are very busy and nights short. Some good workers here. Saloons sympathising with the Democratic platform, have opened again on Sundays, they are conscientionsly opposed to "sumptuary laws" and "not allowing people to worship God ("whose God is their bellies," Paul) according to the dictates of their consciences!"

Santa Clara, Aug., 2, 1882.

SILVER STAR.

On Sunday, at 3 P. M., at Children's Hall in San Francisco, a Band of Hope was informally organized mostly of the children of the sewing school and vicinity. There were 85 little boys and girls, enrolled and obligated, including Dr. McDonald, Judge Thompson and J. W. H. Campbell who were also admitted to membership. Mr. M. H. Savage and Mrs. S. E. Cline were elected to the presiding offices. Mrs. Richardson being unable to attend, the installation etc., was deferred till next Sunday at 2:30 P. M. One little incident deserves mention: when the pledge was to be administered a sweet little girl implored her father, who was seated beside her, to take the pledge with her, and he did so, much to her delight; a little child shall lead many more there. Mrs. Stevens gave the young folks a very interesting account of the origin and uses of the Band of Hope and its progress here, and in Britain, and the children were charmed into the closest attention.

EVENING EXERCISE.

At 8 P. M., singing and opening prayer by Rev. Mr. Cummings. Mrs. Stevens gave the juveniles a pleasant and very instructive ten minutes talk on the nature of alcohol and its effects on the human system. They listened with deep interest and made quick and apt responses when questioned as to what they had been told. Then the children were dismissed and the was introduced to speak on the "Origin and necessity of a Sunday Law." He said such a law was called now by some people an innovation and a restriction of liberty. Nobody can tell the time of the origin of the Sunday law. Human records do not go back so far. It dated ages back and used to prescribe a religious observance. Egypt adopted Sunday as a day of rest for all, and devoted it to the worship of the Sun. Ancient India had its Sunday rest. Wherever of old there was a Union of Church and State, Sunday had been made a day of rest and worship. Why the 7th day was set apart is not known, but remote history tells us that Jews, Egyptians, Assyrians, Indians, Persians, Arabians, had one day in seven for rest.

Recent investigations reveal that before the law was given to Moses, this 7th day of rest had been long in vogue. In the Decalog the command was literally I have made and sanctified it a day of rest; observe it strictly (keep it holy). As early as A. D. 321, Constantine prohibited on Sunday all labor except agricultural and all legal acts save freeing slaves. Theodosius II. in 425, and Justinian in 469 enacted stringent Sunday laws. The Code Napoleon recognized the same principles:

In England, Sunday laws forbidding labor, except in the harvest fields, had been on the statute-books as early 693. From the English who had observed these laws for 1,000 years the people of America first came, and there never had been a time since America was settled when Sunday had not been set apart as a day of rest and as a day on which believers should worship their God. The hallowing of one day in seven as a day of rest for all and the liberty to worship God as they chose became a part of the faith of the people who framed the institutions of this great nation. Could it be said then that our Sunday law was an innovation and should be repealed, when virtually it was so much older than California? In the Colonial days Sunday laws were in vogue. In Virginia and other places some of the Sunday laws were rigid in their prescription of the worship of the Sunday. Since the adoption of the Federal Constitution no Sunday worship had been prescribed by law, but Sunday had been looked upon as a day of rest, and the day was a non-judicial one. In no State in America was any public officer required to perform his duties on a Sunday. The nature of man demanded a day of rest to prolong his life. Sunday was adopted as a rest-day out of respect for the beliefs and teachings of the majority of the people. The States of the Union adopted laws for the protection and government of the people, and all, with the exception of Louisiana, have laws upon the statute-books allowing laborers in all industries a holiday or day of rest on Sunday. Besides the Sunday law so often quoted our constitution prohibits noisy and barbarous amusements on Sunday and guarantees the right of men to worship as seems fit to them.

WHO ARE AGAINST IT?

A certain class wanted the Sunday law repealed, but that class could not be given a place among the industrial or producing portion of the State's population. It was in one way, however, a producing class; it was a most prolific producer of crime, hate, taxation, poverty and everything that is at war with prosperity and good government; and this class asks that the law be repealed in its interest, and in asking that the law be repealed had succeeded in securing the support of a few who did so against their conscience and against what they know to be their own interest. The majority did not want the law repealed. This class wanted the law repealed, and to repeal it, would be discriminating in its favor. The men who demand a repeal of the law are not representatives of the law-abiding citizens of England, Germany or France, but are men who are engaged in no industrial pursuits. The men who asked the repeal of the law, whether native or foreign-born citizens, were men like the immigrant, who when asked what his politics were, said, I'm against the Government, if you have one; and in looking at it in this light, the people should support the excellent law which protects alike the rich and poor, that all may rest, and those who wish may worship. Mr. Fox was heartily and deservedly applauded during and at the close of his timely and excellent address. If he could be heard all over the State, the anti-Sunday army would be reduced to the professional drunkard makers and their bung starters.

AN EX-PRESIDENT INTERVIEWED.

From the S. F. Daily Bugle.

May I take the liberty of asking, Mr. Shafer, what were your reasons for resigning your position as president of that highly odorous society which has recently made itself so famous in the defense of the wife beating industry? asked our reporter of the gentleman.

"Are you a Good Templar?" asked the Ex. P. in return. I wonder at the question, Mr. S. from a man of your experience. If I were one of them, said our reporter, I should not carry this certificate of character,—lighting a match by touching it to the point of his own highly cultivated nose and applying it to his cigar.

Excuse the question, said Mr. S. I ot to have known better. Now I see you are a friend, and I freely confess to you that my reason for resigning was the intensely pungent muskrat odor of the concern. It was too strong for me. I had miscalculated my powers of endurance. I went into the affair rather thotlessly but when I came to see the poor, drunken, ragged, crime-stained women, arraigned at the police court, and found they were the Leag of Fiendom's pet manufacture and were covered all over with the leag's trade marks, I began to feel that this thing smelt bad. When I came to remark that in the streets and dens and cellars and houses of correction and asylums of charity and in thousands of houses in this city and state, are many thousands of children innocent and helpless, from whom my friends of the leag had stolen everything except the privilege of suffering a perennial hell of kicks and curses and diseases and starvation in a land of utmost plenty; and when I saw the brand of the leag's handiwork all over them, I wanted to get round town thru the back streets and alleys, and wondered if such a fate could ever come to my children.

When I thot of the large number of saloonkeepers and bar-keepers that have shot and kicked and beaten each other and have beaten and killed the other men's wives with whom they live like savages, and how many of them have murdered their customers and taken their own lives, the odor of the business became more intense.

When I walked out Sunday or rode in the cars and saw so many poor, battered, ragged, scarecrow wrecks of manhood and boyhood all plastered over with the leag's trade marks and stamps and certificates of ownership, and when I saluted myself as president of this museum of the leag's works of art, I longed to change places with the captive Cetywayo or the fugitive Arabi Bey, and I thot of the leag's 2,000 crazy victims in the asylums and of the 2,000 criminals which the leag keeps warehoused in the two penitentiaries and I felt ashamed of that.

But I bore up with all this and with what the respectable portion of the press said about my leag and myself. Perhaps a reluctance to confess myself mistaken and a natural obstinacy might have induced me to persevere and harden myself to endure the horrible phantoms and goblins which daily haunted me; but my agony of shame and selfabasement reached a doubly accented crisis when I saw the personel of my Leag of Fiendom (excuse my using that invidious but truly appropriate word) assembled at the San Jose Convention.

You may wonder, but I assure you that every night since that convention, I had the most horrible nitemares of alligators and dragons and anacondas and rattlesnakes and lizards and stallfed prize toads and snakes holding an animated camp-meeting over my bed and every time there was a big, overgrown winged critter seated on the bureau waiting with a big empty market basket and my name in letters of fire on the cover. I could not stand that any longer, my boy, and I resigned and now I want to be a man again and take some comfort. Oh, when I think of that last scene at San Jose, and the nitemares and alligators it inflicted upon me, don't say any more leag to me.

It is just barely possible that it was not exactly Mr. S. himself whom our reporter saw, but if it was, those were his exact words.

CHICAGO reports fifteen deaths from wounds inflicted by the murderous toy pistol since July 4th, Burlington six, and Peoria three. This makes about fifty in all that have come to public knowledge within ten days. Comment is unnecessary. Let this villainous toy be wiped out. Cleveland Leader.

Since the Leader is expert in statistics, will it not also favor its readers with a comparative report of deaths since July 4th, or any other period it chooses, by the "murderous" whisky and beer? If it needs information, reference to the Liquorgram colum of the Signal will aid it. The deaths by whisky and beer will be to those toy pistols as a hundred to one. Let the "villainous" whisky and beer "be wiped out."—Del. Signal.

A LAWYERS Prayer Union in London is the latest evidence of the approaching fulness of time. It will be joyful news for all good people to hear that there are enough lawyers of that kind in London to run a prayer meeting. Wonder if something of the kind could not be started in San Francisco. Of course it is a kind of forlorn hope but who knows—?

RIVERSIDE.

BY ELDER M. V. WRIGHT. NUMBER SIX.

PRODUCTS CONTINUED.

I did not have space in my last letter to say all that I wished in respect to that rare fruit, the pride and glory of Riverside,

"THE ORANGE"

Something more in reference to it, will, I think, be of interest to my eastern readers.

I was conversing a few days past with Mr. A. J. Twogood a neighbor of mine, whose oranges have become so celebrated in the markets of San Francisco with reference to the profit of his orange crop the past season. He was one of the first settlers in the colony. I have lived near him for over nine years, and know him to be a very reliable christian gentleman. I asked him how much his income was from the oldest portion of his orange orchard? Which numbers 400 trees, that occupy about six acres, and are about 13 years old. He replied, about $2000, which you see is $5.00 per tree. Now after all the various expenses of cultivation, water, boxes, gathering of fruit, packing of same, and charges for shipment were deducted, it left him a net profit of at least $250 per acre. And yet the above trees which are seedlings, will not be in full bearing until they are fifteen or sixteen years old, when they should bear about 1000 oranges per tree. The above is the profit while oranges are selling at from $20 to $30 per thousand. The question is often asked, Will not the time come, when all of your trees come into full bearing, that oranges will become a drug in the market and be worth comparatively nothing. I think the answer to this question depends much more on the quality than on the quantity of the oranges that we raise. And no finer, brighter, cleaner and better flavored oranges are perhaps produced in any part of the world than those of Riverside and Old San Bernardino. To illustratethat the difference in quality regulates the price, take the following instance. The past season while Riverside oranges were selling at the above figures, those of an adjoining county, raised near the coast, and covered with a black mold which is the effect of so much fog and dampness, were selling at from $10 to $15 per 1000. Being near the coast does not only injure the appearance of the oranges and all other kinds of fruit, but what is still worse, their flavor.

But suppose that the time comes when oranges will not bring more than $8,00 or $10,00 per 1000, even that, on the basis of 75 or 100 trees to the acre, bearing an average of 600 or 800 to the tree, ot in its results to satisfy any reasonable man, who while living in the east, was happy if he could realize $10 per acre from his crops of grain and grass. I do not think the time will ever come when we will not be able to net $100 per acre for every acre of land in this colony, that is devoted to the culture of either the orange. the raisin grape, or the apricot.

When I speak of trees in full bearing at 15 years of age I refer to seedlings. But the majority of our orchardists are planting the budded varieties, which bear much quicker than the seedlings, say from 4 to 5 years after planting, while the seedling does not begin to bear under 7 or 8 years after planting. Of two, the seedling is regarded as much more hardy and long-lived. I think that it also bears a larger and perhaps with one or two exceptions a more saleable fruit than the budded varieties. The main exception to which I refer is the "Washington Naval" which I have no doubt is the finest and most beautiful orange in the world. But its keeping qualities are not perhaps equal to those of the seedling.

Having anticipated a portion of my views on the orange in my former letters I perhaps have said enough on that point and will now call the readers attention to another of our leading and profitable products,

THE RAISIN GRAPE.

The culture of the orange was not wholy a matter of experiment with the originators of this colony for they had been successfully raised in several portions of the county, especially Old San Bernardino, a few miles east of Riverside, with similar soil and climate, for 15 or 20 years before Riverside was dreamed of. But the culture of the raisin grape was unknown, I think, in Southern Cal., prior to the existence of this colony. It has proved a grand success, second only to the orange. In fact it is a question of time which of the three, the orange, the raisin or the apricot will prove the most profitable. In one respect, the raisin and the apricot have the advantage of the orange. Namely; their quicker return of compensation for money and labor bestowed. Plant good rooted vines a year old or even good cuttings, put them in well, carefully and thoroly irrigate and cultivate them, and the fourth year from planting, you will have a vineyard that should yield you a net profit of at least $100 per acre.

But there is a great deal of labor, hard labor, connected with the manufacture of the raisin,and there is no shirking of it. And the man who is so little afraid of hard work that he can lay down beside it and dream of the "sweet by and by," is not the man to engage in this kind of business. If he comes here, he'll never sit under his own vine and fig tree, for whosoever will enjoy that privilege in Southern Cal. must in the forcible, yet not quite correct scripture quotation of the old colored preacher "earn his bread in the sweat of his eyebrows."

It is generally supposed by those unacquainted with the manufacture of the raisin and the fig, that sugar is used in packing them. This is an error,for we use no sugar with either. The sugar often seen in them is the result of chemical action.

THE APRICOT.

This as I have already remarked is another profitable fruit. Until the past five years it was unknown in Southern Cal. as a fruit of commerce. A few old trees were found in the orchards of the Spanish population. But they were all seedlings and unlike the seedling orange they were very small and worthless for marketing.

The apricot is not confined in its culture to Southern Cal. It is raised extensively in some of the upper and middle counties of the state. The same is true also of the raisin grape.

The apricot is especially adapted to canning and as such is one of the finest and most saleable of fruits and finds a very extensive market not only in this country but in Europe, South America and Australia. It will keep in every climate and almost for any length of time. It is not so sure a bearer as the orange or raisin grape, but as the green fruit sells right here in R. to our cannery at from 1 to 2¾ cents per pound it is found to be quite as profitable as oranges or raisins.

The reader may have some idea of the magnitude of this single industry when I state that a few days ago one of the members of the canning company told me they had during that day received twenty-five tons of apricots and had put up about 7000 cans, which must require about 14 tons of green fruit. It is thought that the yield this season will nearly reach 400 tons and yet this industry is only in its third year of bearing.

There are several parties here who will this season realize from $150 to $300 per acre. But again the readers asks, will not this industry be overdone? I answer, comparatively it doubtless will be. But let us reduce our profits to $50 per acre, and that is better to take than was our mother's castor-oil, even backed up with the promise of a big piece of bread and butter with maple sugar on it. And if any of our readers think that they would not be satisfied with that, with our grand climate thrown in then I advise them to stay where they are. At least until I finish my articles on Riverside and Southern Cal.

I must stop for the present, for doubtless the editor of the RESCUE begins to think that he struck a kind of artesian well when he waked the writer up on this subject.

YOLO CO. DISTRICT LODGE, I. O. G. T.

The fourth quarterly session of the eighth year of the I. O. G. T., Yolo Co., D. L., was held at Madison, July 21st and 22nd. Friday evening, public meeting in the Methodist Church; house well filled tho it was in the midst of harvest in a farming community.

Col. Babcock of San Francisco was the speaker of the evening, and his address was thoroly appreciated. On Saturday, at 9:15 A. M., D. D. T. J. Goin called to order and opened Lodge; nine of the ten Lodges in the county were represented, and the officers with three exceptions present. Reports from the Lodges all favorable, showing a steady increase of membership. Whole number of members in good standing, 774; males over 21 years of age, 272; initiated last quarter, 130; losses from all sources, 68; net gain for last quarter, 47. Woodland was chosen for holding next District Lodge (it being the annual session) Sept. 15th and 16th. The report of a previous committee recommending the nomination of a temperance ticket was laid on the table till after recess. At 12 M. Semper Fidelis and Capay Valley Lodges set out a tempting lunch and the large number present (nearly 200) were abundantly provided for. At 1:30 P. M., the report of committee on political action and an amendment offered to let it go over till next District Lodge coming to a vote, amendment prevailed and the subject went over till Sept. 16th.

A resolution was passed that if none of the other parties pledge themselves to temperance, law and order, the temperance people will nominate a full ticket.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Dr. R. H. McDonald for free distribution of temperance literature, also to Col. Babcock for attendance, and Semper Fidelis and Capay Valley Lodges for their excellent entertainment, and to Sis. M. Kean for making badges. At 4 o'clock P. M. the Lodge adjourned, having been productive of good results.

IN OTHER STATES.

AT the Church of England Fete at the Crystal Palace on the 4th July, Cannon Wilberforce said, "a tremendous responsibility rested on that church as it is a larger owner of publichouse property than any other corporation in England, receiving from one house $50,000 a year." It seems a most revolting enormity for a church to run a grogshop, but if any one feels inclined to thro stones let him state whether he votes for license or not.

TENNESSEE.—The Prohibitionists have endorsed the nominations of the State credit wing of the Democratic party which supports the prohibitory law (the 4 mile law) of that PENNSYLVANIA has 68 Catholic total abstinence societies with 4,015 members and every one has paid its per capita tax for 1882.

THURLOW WEED after 85 years of experience in the world is out to advise the general use of wine and beer to make people sober. In spite of the fact that wine has destroyed more lives than war, pestilence and famine, before brandy and whisky were used—and in spite of the fact that beer and wine drinkers over the world are the most swinish and numerous drunkards and gluttons, a few people can remain so idiotic as to commend these most seductive of all the nasty list of devilish poisons as preventives of drunkenness. It is singular too that men who are any thing but fools on general topics, can be comprehensively blind and imbecile on this subject; but "wine is a mocker;" "whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise;" that explains it.

TENNESSEE claims to have instituted 65 lodges since October last and Michigan 50. The former publishes a good weekly temperance paper; the latter a weekly and a monthly. The people should sustain them manfully and make diligent use of them if they expect to win the coming fight.

LEXINGTON, KY., July 20, 1882.

To Delegates and Temperance people interested in the National Convention in Chicago, Aug. 23, 29.

BROTHERS:—The officers of Lake Bluff Convocation hereby send greeting and a cordial invitation to so arrange your plans as to attend both the Convention and Convocation in the same journey. As Convocation occurs Aug. 8—22 and Convention opens Aug. 23d, this can readily be done.

Lake Bluff is 30 miles or about an hour from Wells St., (Northwestern) Depot. As thousands of Chicago's citizens reside on the Lake Shore for 35 miles north, who go into the city in the morning and return at night the facilities for travel are first class. It will be entirely practicable to live at Lake Bluff during the Convention and attend all its sessions.

Lake Bluff Convocation is purely a temperance meeting. It is primarily an Annual consultation among the temperance leaders, especially that active and capable group who figure prominently in the stirring and triumphant Northwest. To promote acquaintance and cultivate unity, to educate workers and derive better plans are prime objects of the Convocation. In order to these ends and to give opportunity for the freest expression of opinions, conferences are held each day

The best and most popular lecturers in the country will be present, several of them as members of committes on the Press, Reception, etc. Miss Willard and a large number of prominent women will conduct the Training School for Temperance workers during the afternoons of the Convocation.

MISTAKING LIMBURGER CHEESE FOR A SMALL-POX ODOR.

When Hoffenstein entered the store there was a look in his eyes which plainly told that something had happened him, and his clerk noticing it, said:

"Vat's de matter, Misder Hoffenstein? You don't look vell dis morning."

"Noding, Herman," he replied, "but a brivate citizen dot can haf any rights mitout some oder people objections, you know. I vas arrested by the bolice yesterday!

"Arrested, Mr. Hoffenstein?"

"Yes, und it vas all about dis small pox pizness vat is going around. Ven I goes home yesterday efening I buys a cake of Limburg cheese, puts it in my market basket, und den I gets in a street car vat vas crowded mit beople vas all dalking uf de smallpox. Afder a while de cheese begin to smell, and efery von looks around at von anoder. Limburg vill do dot vay,und you can't help it,Herman. Soon I see dat efery von in de car hat der eyes on me, und mit de red bimples vat is on my face, togedder mit de smell uf de cheese, de beople all dink I haf de smallpox, und dey begin to visper. 'Shentlemen,' says von man mit big feet, 'vas you all vaccinated?' 'No, sir,' dey says. 'Vell den, dere vas a case uf smallpox in dis car. I know it by de smell,' he says, und mit dat he dives right out uf de door. De next minute de whole crowd runs for de door, und more as ten uf dem shumps de windows out. Von old man mit a big stomach und a green umprella gets stuck in von uf de vindows and yells 'bolice!' vile he shakes de umprella, scares de mules und de cars runs avay. Ven de car stopped de bolice came und I vas arrested for having de small-pox und disturbing de beace. Shust dink uf it, Herman, a brivate citizen don't can haf any privileges in de town, you know."—N. Western News.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

AUGUST 29th,

AND CONTINUING ONE WEEK.

GOOD SPEAKERS! GOOD MUSIC!! GOOD COOL Water, Good Milk, Plenty of Horse Feed and everything else necessary to make the affair a GRAND SUCCESS.

ALL ARE INVITED.

W. S. READ, D. S. C. J. COVILLAUD, D. S.

GRACIOUS WORDS.—That is a monthly of excellent reading published by David C. Cook, Only 11 cents a year if ten copies are taken. It contains the articles on the currents of the Sea and Air which appeared in the RESCUE last year. Ordering it to begin with the Feb'y number of this year you will get them all, about 18 or 20 numbers.

HEART DISEASE.—If the doctors would tell the whole truth, we should learn that many of the deaths reported as occurring from heart disease are really due to melancholy, occasioned by the execrable photographs people get in some places. Readers of the RESCUE get their portraits at the ELITE PHOTOGRAPH STUDIO 838 Market St., where they are sure to get the best of everything in that line. Instantaneous photos of children a specialty.

THE BAND of Hope at Mariposa has been having a brave time at the public installation and expects to have a good time sometime this fall.

JUDGE S. C. Denson, of Sacramento, is said to be willing to accept a nomination for Judge of the Supreme Court. If elected he will not be a Leag of Freedom Judge, nor will he be an enemy to American institutions.

IN England a petition signed by 159,000 women for a strict Sunday law has been presented to Parliament. It was a load for two men, and some of these days it will be a load that will stagger and tumble the whole liquor traffic.

PETITIONS.—It is hoped our lodges are active everywhere in filling up the petitions sent out by Bro. Gould. It is of the most extreme importance that we should get them signed by a majority of the voters of the State, and in good time too.

CROWDED.—Every week there comes more matter for publication than can find room. Many a time a card or note would be sent to friends and contributors explaining the absence of their papers, but what is done in this office consumes every moment of waking hours.

Subscribers and renewals this week, Winnemucca, (F. J. Culver,) 3: Trinidad, 1: Sacramento, (W. C. King,) 3: Marysville, 1: Rio Vista, (S. P. Sorensen,) 4: Guerneville, (J. Robinson,) 2: Gilroy, 1: Kansas, 1: Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Richardson 82: in all 98.

THE history of the Gibson wife murder would be an excellent document for the Leag of Fiendom to circulate to get votes at the coming election. Poor Gibsons wife had been a member of the leag for years, and her life and death afford an excellent and impartial illustration of the manner in which the Leag exercises its freedom when it enters a home.

THE last reported "sagacity of a dog" was that of a big old mastiff whose particular friend, a juvenile terrier had fallen into a well 20 feet deep. Mastiff went for a clothesline which he lowered and hauled up terrier. A crippled old gentleman saw it all. The next and most sagacious thing for a dog to do will be to write a treatise on human lying.

CONSCIENCE.—That, my little boy, is an invisible commodity, like air and heat and electricity. Candidates for the State Legislature and for the National Congress are always highly charged with it, till the day after election, when the last symptom of it evaporates. It is remarkably volatile like ether and elastic like India rubber. But there is another kind, solid as gold.

THE Temperance Herald of Oregon has died. The failure of a temperance paper any where for want of support is a calamity, but as that State had adopted the RESCUE as its temperance organ before the Herald was started, it need not be a misfortune to have a paper once a week in place of twice a month and free of cost to the Grand Lodge and at half its cost to the subscribers.

THE Rev. F. H. Wales who was a delegate to the recent Temperance Convention and has since made a tour thru southern California, says the people there are ready for prohibition at once; even a dozen saloon-keepers there assuring him they would go for complete prohibition if it is ever attempted in earnest; and many of them would be glad to see it, for their own wretched business is driving them to perdition in a body like a drove of sheep going to the shambles.

BRO. W. C. KING being unable to make arrangements with the Executive Committee for his continuance as agent and canvasser for the RESCUE has retired and accepted other employment. He has done a useful work, made many friends and will be held of them in most kindly remembrance.

FROM THE R. W. G. S.—THE R. W. G. SEC'Y BRO. F. G. Keens says the journal of proceedings of the Charleston session was to be issued on the 13th inst. Also that J. J. Hickman Degree Temple No. 1 was instituted at Copenhagen, Denmark, last month; and the G. L. of Denmark will be instituted early in September.

AN item has been published in several papers, supposed to have originated with the San Juan Times, stating that William Crowhurst, the popular temperance lecturer had been drunk. The Stanislaus Wheat-Grower published it without credit, and has laid itself liable to criminal prosecution for defamation of character, as letters have been received from certain parties which prove that the report is utterly false. Suits will be brought against those publishers who have given this false report to the public with the evident intention of injuring Mr. Crowhurst, and his friends who know him to be an honorable and zealous worker in the cause of temperance.—Modesto Herald.

UTAH.—A leaflet comes to hand from Salt Lake with a timely article from the organ of the Mormon Church entitled the "Law of the Lord," urging a closer and better observance of the Sabbath; not to make it a day of sadness or bondage but a day of rest, of worship, of praise. "The leaflet has also a few extracts from the Salt Lake Tribune, the champion of anti-Mormonism; one says: "The News had a good deal to say last night about the "law of the Lord." The law of Congress is good enough for us." Again about the news from Washington, "this lets the polygs out. Praise God from whom all blessings flow. Kick the polygs and let 'em go." And again, "God and the governor will run Zion for awhile. They can beat the old mormon revelators out of their boots."

AN APPROPRIATE SIGN. A drunken woman on First St., who has four children from 10 months to 10 years old, was found on Saturday in a room, bare of all furniture but a stove, and she had sold the legs of that to get drink. A few filthy rags were in the corner a bed for the children, and under them were pieces of putrid meat and bones which they had gnawed. The baby was so starved and weak it could not hold its head up. A year ago she suffocated another child in a drunken sleep. Her husband is a painter, but can only come into the house occasionally when she is a little sober. A portrait of this woman, in her den with her starved children would be a most appropriate transparency for the Leag of Fiendom to carry when the ante-election torch light parades come on. It would be a proud trophy for M. Buhlert to carry.

A GREAT many improvements are suggested for the RESCUE. A few stories, more reports of lodges, full reports of the district lodges, lots of news from other States, we all like that; more articles on third party, more about prohibition, more Sunday law, not so much Sunday law, not variety enough; why dont you stick to one thing; too much small print; all the articles should be on the editorial page, and in big print; dont say anything about tobacco; why dont you have a full report of all the public meetings and temperance sermons in the State? You ought to have one of Sir Wilfrid Lawsons speeches and one of John B. Finch's and Governor St. John's every week. What is the reason my communication was not in this week? All that our inquiring and suggesting friends have to do to get 4 or 8 pages more reading matter in the paper is to sail in and run the mail list up to 10,000. It should be considered worth at least double the price of the R. to have Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham and a dozen liver and kidney sermons and essays left out every week.

AFRICA.

BY R. SMITH.

[From a Poem on Livingston.]

Hoary enigma,
Christendom's stigma;
Africa! dark, light, degraded yet fair;
Gentle—rebelling;
Wooing—repelling;
Entreating, "Come, Christians, but come if you dare."

Deserts tremendous,
Mountains stupendous,
Highlands—cloud-reaching—amazing in size;
Ravines gigantic,
Gorgeous, romantic,
Terraces mounting like steps to the skies.

Peaks with snow piled,
Bright, undefiled;
Valleys appalling, thru weirdness and gloom;
Plains and morasses,
"Joy of wild asses,"
Home of the lizard, the asp, and mushroom:

Store of great waters,
Borne to all quarters;
Rivers, whose whither none know at their source,
Rolling thru regions,
Peopled by legions.
Bearing no ship thru their zone-spanning course.

Cataracts thundering,
Flood from flood sundering,
Precipice frowning, terrific in height;
Cascades entrancing—
Rainbowed and glancing—
Veiled for milleniums from civilized sight.

Lakes on streams threaded—
Lake to lake wedded—
Drinking, outpouring, the wealth of the clouds;
Finny tribes teeming;
Birds past all dreaming;
Game in variety, beauty and crowds.

Creatures ferocious,
Gentle, precocious,
Numberless, startling in bulk and in form;
Creatures amphibious,
Marvelous, hideous.
Born amid swamps, where they live, where they swarm.

Forests, vast, gloomy;
Trees, giant, plumy;
Parasites barring the traveler's way.
Shrubs efflorescing,
Grasses distressing,
Thwarting, so dense, the sun's tropical ray.

Insects titanic;
Piles talismanic;
Reared by elf-architects, emmets so-named;
Insects productive,
Baneful, destructive;—
Bee, chegre, scorpion, locust far-famed.

Awful sterility!
Boundless fertility!
Spots where the sun at its hottest doth burn;
Wastes sempiternal;
Glades ever vernal;
Nature surpassingly lovely and stern.

AN IMPOSSIBLE STORY.

About 8 years ago it was reported that 70 years previously, an orphan girl had been neglected and allowed to grow up without any care in a village in a certain county of New York, not named; that she had led a vicious life and from her had descended over 600 people 200 of whom had been committed to prison for crime, some of them had been hanged and most of them had been paupers, burglars, beggars, thieves, etc. And the moral was drawn that an enormous cost had come upon the county and state, as a consequence of allowing one girl to grow up neglected and vicious. The RESCUE then treated it as an impossible story.

But now the Pacific Medical Journal repeats it on the authority of Dr. Elisha Harris of New York. It says a county on the Hudson; the girl was born about a hundred years ago, has had 623 descendants —200 of them convicted prisoners—some hanged, most of them bad, idiots, paupers, lunatics, prostitutes, etc., and have cost the county at least $100,000.

But the story is an utterly impossible one. The challenge may be given safely to relate an authentic instance of a hale, honest, virtuous, healthy, long-lived couple who were born seventy years ago or 100 years ago even, and have had 623 or 600 descendants in that time.

If that girl had 15 children which is a most unlikely supposition, and each one of them was the parent of 15 children, at 70 years from the birth of the "mother of criminals" as she is called, there would have been 15 of the first, 225 of the second and a few of the third generation of her descendants but not enough to make 600 in all by any means.

A race of paupers (not criminals) comfortably housed and well fed at public expense might increase very rapidly, but no such instance is at all credible as a family of 600 descendants of one mother in 70 or 100 years; but that a family of criminals, idiots, lunatics, prostitutes, etc., should have so multiplied is utterly beyond any possibility. Such are the most unlikely people to increase largely even in a second generation and the story is evidently an entire romance invented by some wag to test the credulity of the public. It was supposed when it first appeared that it had been coined to distract attention from the crime that is caused by the dram-shop. That is the true "mother of criminals."

ALL ALONG THE LINE.

BY A PICKET GUARD.

The present leader of the part of the Democracy which will vote the ticket is a man who took off his judicial robes to shed human blood.

Jefferson and Jackson are mentioned with undue familiarity in the man-killer's platform. One of these men said that "the delegated will of the State should be implicitly obeyed," and the other said that "resistance to law should and must be overcome, if necessary, by force.

George Washington would not have passed muster as a patriot with the majority of the San Jose Convention. In his purblind bigotry and religious imbecility, he believed that "all obstruction to the execution of the laws, all combinations and associations (under whatever plausible character) with the real design to direct, control, counteract or awe the regular deliberations of constituted authorities, are destructive of the fundamental principle of liberty."

The Democrats of Fresno county, the county of O'Grady, have repudiated the anti-Sunday plank of the San Jose Convention; and he is to be their leader. He will stand on both sides of the question now, and slobber at the South Methodists and drivel at the anti-home organization, if perchance he can win the necessary votes to elect him.

Just wait till the great, warm heart of the people of this State shall be moved, as by a live coal from off the home altar, and the infamous attempt to publish the bans of marriage between the people of California and the demon of the vat, the dragon of the still,—the foul spirits of rapine, poverty, sorrow, sacrilege, crime, ruin and desolation,—shall be awfully rebuked.

Senator Vest, of Missouri, in a recent speech in the United States Senate, charged the Republican party with being "the party of good morality, progress and reform." This is a dreadful accusation. Had not the Democratic bosses better import Vest to this State to prove this crime on the Republican party—to drive it home? Let him make his first speech in Barbary Coast, under the auspices of the anti-home organization.

No! I retract that. Even there, among the human wrecks strewn along the sands of that coast; even among the seething, reeking, bloated mass of resemblances of human beings, even there shall be found some who have not utterly died to the influence of a home of earlier years, who shall rise up and protest;—protest in faint memory, in dim recollection, of a father's bowed head and broken spirit, of a mother's entreaties of love and agony of despair;—sitting in deformity, but still touched by the mellow rays of remembrance cast by the embers of a hearthstone of other years, protest—even from the twilight preceding the blackness of darkness of crime and sin shall come such pictures of sanctity, and purity, and sweetness, and glory, and everlasting love of home as to cause protest in the last gasp of decency, in the last throe of virtue.—Petaluma Argus.

WINE AS A REMEDY FOR INTEMPERANCE.

BY HON. NEAL DOW.

In the New York Tribune of July 9th, is an article by Thurlow Weed, with the above heading. Mr. Weed was one of the sharpest and shrewdest of all the old Whig politicians of the time of Webster, Clay, Calhoun, and all the rest of them of that old ante-bellum time. He was owner and editor of the leading Whig paper of the State of New York, and was as much responsible as any other man for holding back the Whig party from responding to the demands of the times, so that the party went down because it did not answer to the needs of the hour, nor to the conscience of its best members. So far as he can do so, he is striving to play the same part in the Republican party now, and if he should succeed, it would go down as the Whig party did. The Republican party cannot live simply upon its past record. It must face the important questions of the day as they arise, take its stand upon them and succeed or fail, as it determines wisely or otherwise. Prohibition of the liquor traffic is the one great question of the present time.

Mr. Weed furnishes another instance of an able man undertaking to give advice about the temperance cause, knowing nothing of it, and pronouncing an opinion about prohibition, in absolute ignorance of its principles, its purposes and results. He says: "After more than forty years of earnest and persistent efforts, prohibitory liquor laws have signally failed to promote the cause of temperance." Mr. Weed has always been esteemed as a man of honor who would by no means intentionally make a false statement, yet the whole of that sentence is absolutely false, except the statement about the "persistent efforts." The labors of temperance men have been crowned with great success, with nothing whatever in the history of the movement that can by any fair construction be considered a failure. The movement began in Maine thirty-one years ago, and prohibition is now established there, in New Hampshire, Vermont, Kansas, and Iowa, in more than half of Massachusetts, in many localities in Rhode Island, Connecticut and New York, in nearly half of Maryland, in several parts of Tennessee, Missouri, Mississippi, Georgia, Alabama, and other States.

It has also been established on a firm foundation by local option in all British North American colonies, under which a larger part of their territory has absolute prohibition. The whole of Prince Edward's Island, with one hundred thousand people, adopted prohibition by a vote that was practically unanimous. New Brunswick has prohibition in a larger part of its territory, including its chief city and capital, Fredericton. Nova Scotia has prohibition in all its territory, practically; and in a large part of Canada West, there is also prohibition, and in the whole of Manitoba. In England, there are more than fourteen hundred parishes under absolute prohibition, and several large districts of London and Birmingham are in the same condition. The large manufacturing town, Saltaire, in Yorkshire has had prohibition for many years, as Bessbrook, in Ireland, has and a large territory of sixty-two square miles in County Tyrone.

Scotland, Wales and Ireland have absolute prohibition for one day in the week, and England will have the same in the near future; and in the United Kingdom, and in all its dependencies, the question of prohibition occupies the public mind to the exclusion of almost all others.

In this country, now, the policy of prohibition excites more public attention than any other, and the elections in many States will turn upon it in the near future, and they will do so in the nation within eight years. It is under these circumstances that Mr. Weed declares the policy of prohibition to be a "signal failure." Nothing can be further from the fact than that, and yet Mr. Weed did not intend to falsify. Why, then, did he say it? Because he is absolutely ignorant of the whole matter. I challenge Mr. Weed to mention even one locality where prohibition has failed, We can refer to hundreds where its results have been wonderful for good.

Mr. Weed says: "The great champion of prohibition, Neal Dow, worn out by long years of indomitable effort, has announced his intention to retire. Legislation having proved abortive in Maine, Kansas and Iowa resort to an amendment of their constitution prohibiting not only the sale, but the distillation of intoxicating liquors." Let us look at this sentence. It is a very bad thing for anybody, especially for a prominent man like Mr. Weed, to say the thing that is not true when discussing important public questions. There is not a word of that true. Exactly the contrary is true. The Maine Law is and has been a wonderful success, and, for myself, I have never been more active in temperance work than now, and am full of heart, hope, and confident expectation of a glorious triumph of the cause in the near future thruout the country.

Mr. Weed desires to bring the Republican party into a direct opposition to the prohibitive movement. If it should take that attitude, the party will certainly go down, as the great Democratic party of Maine did, on this question—never a fragment of it coming to the surface since, except a bit of wreck in the shape of Governor Garcelon. The Democratic party was really great and strong in Maine, controlling every county in it but one for many years; but its leaders put the party against prohibition and the temperance men abandoned it, so that it is in a minority so pitiful that it does not venture to make a nomination in its own name, but meekly accepts those offered to it by our fiat-money financiers.

Mr. Weed proposes unlimited grape culture and unlimited wine-bibbing as a sovereign remedy for intemperance. All he says about that is very old—mere rubbish, put away into the lumber loft long ago, with the dry rot and worm-eaten. What a pity that such a man should talk upon a snbject of which he is profoundly ignorant,—Morning and Day of Reform.

THE N. Y. Examiuer, a Baptist organ, is making a most disgraceful record for itself in opposing prohibition. A newly imported Chinaman would cut quite as respectable a figure in denouncing our leading physicians and preachers and college professors as a body of idiots and fanatics and fools, as the editor of the Examiner or of any other journal religions or otherwise, who has never given any attention or study to the question of temperance nor had any sympathy with or for it—when he offers an opinion for or against prohibition, and denounces as fanatics and fools the prohibitionists, who are the educated students and scholars and priests of the temperance system. Mr. Examiner says they are as great enemies to temperance as the rummies who plead the inalienable right to get drunk etc. He wants high license and local option, probably because his own gin would thus be assured. Such men in such positions and the journals under their charge, are in every way most dangerous enemies of all good interests. The man who calls the advocacy of prohibition fanaticism is either an ignoramus or a knave or more probably both. The prohibitionists intend to have a rest on this topic and a long rest. The gin advocating religious teachers may prepare to take their turn at wearing that distinctive appellation.

W. C. T. U.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentiment; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

OUR OBJECT LESSON.

Again the Hayes commission comes before you with this subject. The pictures, for which subscriptions have been received, have been sent out, and surely there was never so large an expression of delight from every one; there has scarcely been known one shadow of a disappointment. "Well worth waiting for," "much finer than we anticipated," "lovely," "beautiful," etc., etc., have been the words written. To-day comes a voice from Spain, "We are much pleased with it, and hope that its influence may be for good among the girls of our school, so that it may spread thru the land." John B. Gough, Mrs. Garfield, Dr. Merrick, Mrs. Senator Blair, and hundreds of others, have expressed their gratification with the picture, and the hope it may fill a glorious mission. This it will do when placed in every school-room in the land. If, in each city and town, one energetic, earnest woman will tell the children of this beautiful memorial, and tell them how easily they can raise money for it for their school-room, it will be done, and this lovely object lesson in total abstinence will ever give its monitions. In many places one child has taken it in hand and speedily and easily raised the money. Collection cards for securing the money in small sums, will be furnished on application to the Treasurer, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York City. All subscriptions should be addressed to her, and she is prepared now to send the picture by return mail. We hope thousands will be called for, and that no school-room nor Sabbath-school, no W. C. T. U. room, nor Good Templar lodge will be considered furnished till this charmign testimonial looks from its walls.—Our Union.

A SERMON ON DANCING.

FOR THE YOUNG LADIES.

Now, girls, don't make any faces! I know this is a tabooed subject with many of you; but as Aunt Samanthy Allen puts it, "I'm up on my cast-iron principle, and nothing on this earth can get me down off'n it." Let me ask you a candid question—Why do you dance? "Why," says one, "because we're fond of it. It's the fashion, and where's the harm in it?" Did you ever reflect, my dear girls, that "I do so and so because I'm fond of it" is neither safe nor sound reasoning? Our likes and dislikes are very unreliable guide-posts to set up along life's way. They indicate a line of travel which has led too many, alas! to find themselves in wandering mazes lost.

If any of you had ever been made wiser, or stronger, or better, or more womanly, by dancing, I should have remained forever silent on this question. But have you? Let me ask you again, do you consider the ball-room, with its glitter and its glare, its sensuous odors, its voluptuous music, and superficial conversation, just the place to develop the highest type of womanhood? Then further, what is the character of many of the young gentlemen (?) with whom you are so closely associated there? Is it always of a sort to inspire your respect? I think I hear you retort, "Well, for the most part, they are nice."

Pardon me, I have ever entertained a supreme skepticism for that word nice. I think of it sometimes in connection with anything that goes against the wall on a bracket, or into my lingerie box; but I never could apply it to a man—a genuine, whole-souled man—without feeling that an apology was due him from me. Indeed, of all the men who have compelled my trust and admiration, I cannot now recall one that I ever met in a ball-room. There, the truth's out. I own it with regret. I was once a habitue of the ball-room. On one or two occasions, I believe, I enjoyed the questionable honor of being the best dancer present. But one morning I awakened with the tranquilizing conviction, that having reached this ne plus ultra of the fool's paradise, on general principles, the rouged and tarletaned danseuse of the beer-cellar might step in and justly usurp my claim to such a distinction. I thot it all over, and having proven some things to my sorrow, resolved that in the future I would hold fast to that which is good. It is a fact that to dance well requires neither a high order of brains nor morals. Fancy Dio Lewis and Miss Alcott leading off with the racquet! As to the harm in it, that involves a subtler analysis of whys and wherefores than I am inclined to enter into; suffice it that I refer you to the testimony of the Chief of Police of New York City, who asserts that three-fourths of the abandoned girls of that city owe their pitiable condition to the demoralizing effects of the dance. What a sad commentary on a social custom so widely sanctioned—that many professedly Christian parents teach their daughters to regard as essential to a finished education. One reason why I am opposed to dancing is this—It brings our purest girls into companionship with men whose very presence is contaminating. That such men are frequently brot into our sphere of acquaintance by force of circumstances cannot be denied. But under ordinary circumstances our intercourse with them may be limited to a bow; not so with the dance. There it is "All hands round and swing." Argue as we may, the ball-room is a cosmopolitan institution, patronized by all alike solely out of a desire to whirl or be whirled, and to draw comparisons there would be invidious of course. Then what would you think, girls, to hear your respective merits as waltzers, or polkers, or racqueters, discussed (as is often the case) in divers saloons, over steaming glasses of vile toddies, much as tho you were a human species of trotting stock? Were I a man, it seems to me that I should try to live so that when I asked a woman to share my name and fortune, I could do so feeling it was the highest honor I could confer on her; and in making the momentous choice I might select a girl with freckles, a girl with big feet, or possibly one who was cross-eyed. But the girl who had undergone an indiscriminate course of hugging from her fifteenth year would hardly be the lady whose colors I should choose to wear between my heart and my armor. Forgive me, girls, I mean to insinuate nothing harshly, only to remind you in love that your lives are solemn problems, to be worked out with fear and trembling, and prayerful steadfastness in which there is no variableness or shadow of turning from that rectitude of purpose which should be the true arbiter of all our actions. It has been beautifully said you are the delicate vessels in which is borne onward thru the ages the treasure of human affections. Guard well against the baneful innovations of fashion, lest by rude contact with the unfaithful and the untrue, these sacred vessels become tarnished and shattered, and their treasure of human affections be lost to the ages or perverted into springs of bitterness. Your glory and your shield is the pure young womanhood with which the tender All-Father has crowned you. Accept it from him as a legacy too priceless to be frittered away in empty pleasures—in frivolous enjoyments that endure but for a season. Wear it as a talisman against the temptations that lurk beneath many a rose-covered ambush—wear it as the amulet of a hallowed purpose,

"With a loyal gravity."

Finally, beloved, "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are honest, whatsoever things are just, whatsoever things are pure, whatsoever things are lovely, whatsoever things are of good report, if there be any virtue and if there be any praise, think on these things." MARY A. GUTHRIE.

GOOD ADVICE.

Aunt Emma's eldest son has just left for a three years course at college, and I asked her what advice she gave the boy.

"Oh!" she said, "I only had four charges, very easy to keep when one has once learned that it is a pleasure to be good; indeed, I don't see how any one can suffer the discomfort of being bad."

I looked up, we were sewing in the East room, Aunt's work had fallen in her lap; it was old gold floss work on a black satin ground. I know that the correspondence of that color with Aunt was love, and I thought how beautiful it could make the darkest colors of earth look. And how easy it must be for one of Aunt Emma's children to be good; inheriting no evil propensities, and early taught the habit of right; and guarded by the spiritual influence of her love.

Recalling my thoughts I again asked what the four charges were?

Aunt resumed: "First, never to use any intoxicating liquor; second, never to use tobacco in any form; third, never to gamble; fourth, never to swear away his own conscience to the standard assumed by any person, or class of people." BETH.

LITERATURE DEPARTMENT.—Miss Julia Colman, No. 76 Bible House, New York City, writes Aug. 2nd, 1882: "The Temperance School" is helping thousands to a knowledge of the first principles of temperance, and would help thousands more if they knew about it. I send it for you to notice, if you please, and will you kindly say that I will send a copy freely to any one sending me a postal for it? I shall be greatly obliged to you for this helping on the good work.

AN EXPERIMENT WITH BEER.

Dr. Andrew Clark, physician in the London Hospital, a man of the highest medical authority, talks thus about the relations of alcohol to work: "I have some experience to speak from, for I am a workingman myself. I take it I work as hard as most, for I have eighteen hours a day at my work, working in a hurry, with very anxious subjects to work upon, and work that goes over Sunday as well. I have also the experience of the ten thousand people that pass before me every year. I will risk all on the statement, that however pleasant alcohol is for the moment, it is not a helper of work, but it is a certain hindrance of work.

"The late Dr. Parkes, of Netley, was the most loyal, careful, faithful and truthful of observers whom it was ever my good fortune to meet. He was an earnest lover of truth, and he performed the following experiment: He got a number of soldiers of the same age and of the same type of constitution, living under the same circumstances, eating the same food, breathing the same atmosphere, and he did this that the experiment might be fair, and he divided the soldiers into two gangs—an alcoholic gang, and a non-alcoholic gang—and he engaged these two gangs in certain work for which they were to be paid extra. He watched these gangs, and took the result of their work, and it turned out that the alcoholic gang were far ahead at first. They had buckets of beer by their side, and as they got a little tired they took beer, and the non-alcoholic gang, were in an hour or two left nowhere; but he waited and watched as I told you, and as the experiment went on, the energies of the beer-drinkers speedily began to flag, and, do what they would, before the end of the day the non-alcoholic gang had left them far behind. When this had gone on for some days, the alcoholic gang begged that they might get into the non-alcoholic gang, that they might earn a little more money; but Dr. Parkes, in order to make the experiment clinching and conclusive, transposed the gangs. He made the alcoholic gang the non-alcoholic gang, and vice versa, the men being very willing to lend themselves to the experiment, and the results were exactly the same.

"The alcoholic gang beat the non-alcoholic gang at the starting, and failed utterly toward the end of the day. This is the most conclusive, and, I think, by far the most crucial experiment that I know of upon the question of the relation of alcohol to work. With this I will set aside the question by saying, from personal experience, and from experiments, most carefully conducted over large bodies of men, it is capable of proof beyond all possibility of question, that alcohol, in ordinary circumstances, not only does not help work, but is a serious hinderer of work.

THE Temperance cause needs strong arms and courageous hearts to uphold it. Moral cowardice is its bane; men are afraid to vote and speak their sentiments in regard to it because, perhaps, their neighbor is in the business. If your neighbor's business is murdering those around you, why hesitate to destroy it? Which would you fear more, the anger of a just God, who requires your brother's safety at your hands, or the feeble enmity of man? An extensive petition having been signed in Milwaukee by business houses, requesting the managers of the theaters to cease giving Sunday performances, the brewers, fearing an attack on the beer interests, have unanimously resolved to cease business dealings with every firm whose name is attached to the paper. As a very large number of men, employers and employees, are engaged in the breweries, the result is expected to be only a hastening of the time for the passage of a prohibitory amendment.—N. Y. Gazette.

That is the personal liberty the brewers are always prating about. It means perfect liberty for the brewers to kill and destroy, and if any one expresses an opinion in favor of liberty to any body else but the producers of crime, he shall be ruined in business and driven to poverty or expatriated. Time decent people were beginning to provide for a little personal liberty for themselves.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LODGE DEPUTIES.—Proper recommendations for Lodge Deps. for the next year ensuing have been forwarded and filed in the G. W. S. office during the past week, and their receipt is hereby acknowledged.

Nos, 12, 112, 115, 123, 152, 166, 198, 210, 214, 240, 254, 258, 259, 278, 279, 283, 294, 296, 314, 324, 352, 354, 360, 361. 366, 382, 400, 456, 476.

CREDENTIALS RECEIVED.—Copies of credentials certifying the representatives elect to the next session of the Grand Lodge to be held in San Francisco, have been received at the G. W. S, office during the past week, and their receipt is hereby acknowledged from the following Lodges:

Nos. 12, 112, 115, 123, 152, 240, 241, 254, 283, 296, 314, 324, 328, 352, 354, 366, 370, 456, 476, and 484.

ABOUT CREDENTIALS AND RECOMMENDATIONS.—The attention of Secretaries is particularly called to the note printed at the head of the blank forms of credentials which asks that the first name of representatives and alternates elect be given in full, if this cannot be done that the initials be used and in all cases where the names of Sisters are used that the prefix "Miss" or "Mrs" as the case may be, be added. Several credential forms already received have been returned because of the non compliance with this requirement. It is of little use to report that — Smith has been elected, or even J. Smith, as it places the G. W. S. in an uncomfortable position to address J. Smith Esq., and learn subsequently that the party addressed or who should have been addressed was Mrs. Jane Smith. So in filling up recommendations for Lodge Deputies, or in fact in sending any name for any purpose to the G. W. S. the observance of the beforementioned rule will make it much easier and certainly pleasanter to all concerned. "A word to the wise."

PERSONALS.—During the past week the Grand Lodge office has been honored with passing calls from the following members of the Order. Bro. D. K. Zumwalt, Chairman of the Grand Lodge Finance Committee of Visalia, whose many friends will regret to learn has recently been quite ill.....Bro. D. Heron, P. W. C. T. of Pleasant Prairie Lodge, Yolo County.....Bro. D. Kellogg, L. D. of Newcastle Lodge, Placer County.....Bro. W. S. Read, L. D. of Northern Star Lodge, Oroville, Butte Co. .....Bro. W.R. Culver, L. D. of Centennial Lodge, Colfax, Placer County; Sister C. D. Perkins of the same lodge is also visitng Sacramento and was in attendance on Siloam Lodge on Saturday evening .....Bro. D. D. Brewster of Roseville Lodge, Roseville.....P. G. W. C. Bro. the Hon. Niles Searls of Nevada Lodge, Nevada City.....Bro. Dr. J. F. Dillon of Faithful Lodge Blacks Station.

"THAT LAWYERS FEE."—As usual, Bro. the Hon. Niles Searls of Nevada City deposited with the G. W. S. his annual donation to the Good Templars Home for Orphans, in the shape of five double eagles.

THE NEW CERTIFICATES OF MEMBERSHIPS.—Quite a number of orders have already been followed with the new certificates of memberships. All who have been supplied with them so far unite in praising its design and execution. Bro. J. Q. Adams of San Francisco writes "The Certificate more than realized my anticipations and in its production you have made a handsome and valuable contribution to the Order. Please send me another copy for which I enclose the one dollar—a price quite reasonable."

GOOD AND PRACTICAL RESULTS.—Says Bro. I. Leroy Mansfield L. D. of Gem Lodge, Wyandotte, Butte county in transmitting returns: "Our hall is in very good condition now for meetings and all we require is for the members to take an interest in them. This they are doing and we hope may continue to do. That our lodge has already done much good is manifest by the difference in observing the Sabbath, now all peace and quiet where before whisky and cards were the order of the day. The only bar in the place does not average four drinks a day sold now since our organization. Our male members are composed of those that were drinking men and they are the ones that are taking an interest in and working for the cause. If good intentions, honest work, in and for, with funds if necessary will keep up a lodge of Good Templars and keep it on the increase then consider that Gem Lodge is going to live and prosper.

GLEANINGS.—"Our Lodge is prospering finely" is what Bro. A. H. Longley L. D. of Castroville Lodge remarks.....Enterprise Lodge of Guerneville, Sonoma County initiated seven on the night of installation and the Lodge Deputy, Bro. N. E. Manning says the lodge is "getting along finely" which all will be prepared to believe.....According to L. D. Bro. Oscar Smith, Lily Lodge No. 330 of Contra Costa County is having interesting meetings, is in good working order and is making its influence felt upon the whisky power.....The W. S. of Fairview Lodge, Turlock, Stanislaus county, Bro. S. V. Porter conclude that his Lodge has done more sound substantial work during the past year than during all its previous history, and the prospect is it will so continue in the future.....Boulder Creek Lodge of Felton, Santa Cruz County gained 29 members during last quarter and initiated 20 in the first two meetings of the current term, making the present membership of the Lodge 120 which is more than the entire population of the village, wherefore the L. D. Bro. J. W. Perry enthusiastically enquires "can this record be excelled in the State".....Rev. W. L. Stephens L. D. of Santa Cruz writes, "We initiated three and entertained 13 propositions at our last meeting. I think I can see a boom for the temperance cause in the near future in this place. I have voted the Democratic ticket all my life but I am now pledging all Democrats I can to repudiate the damnable doctrine incorporated into and set forth by the Democratic party in their platform at San Jose....."As a Lodge" writes Bro. F. A. Anthony L. D. of Livermore Lodge, Alameda County, "we are doing well and have much faith in the final triumph of our worthy cause".....Seaside Lodge No. 354 of Santa Barbara County enters upon its third year with 61 members and bright prospects for the future" so writes the W. S. Bro: Jno. J. Steele.

TO LODGE DEPUTIES.

From unavoidable mishaps, there has been a delay in sending out the circulars to Lodge Deputies, by me for their annual reports. They are being sent this week. I ask my Deputies to return them properly filled out before the first of September. I use them in making out my report to the Grand Lodge. You will oblige me by being prompt.

Fraternaly yours,

R. THOMPSON, G. W. C. T.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

J. W. WEBB.

SANTA CLARA has a good lodge with which I met, Rev. Bro. Buck, W. C. T. elect. Good moral element and literary and musical talent. Have a fine, new piano. Bro. E. E. Carey is about to move north to Etna to teach; he will be greatly missed but Santa Clara's loss will be Etna's gain. At public lecture, fair audience. Col. Babcock called on his way to Santa Cruz and helped. Good Home Protection Association here to help which he gave one of his able and convincing lectures next night. He soon goes south and Los Angeles, Santa Anna, San Diego, San Bernardino, Riverside, Ventura, Santa Barbara and San Luis Obispo may look for grand help from him on the Sunday question. As I am so interested in that section and he is too modest to publish his appointment in the RESCUE I diverge a little to do so. And at the same time I may publicly answer many private enquiries about Bro. Goulding's long promised visit south. I understand he is to start for San Diego directly after Grand Lodge and work his way up thru the various southern counties. Get a "good ready" for him, give him a royal welcome and hearty, well-planned co-operation. At Santa Clara I addressed some hundreds of children in the five public schools. The Principal, Prof. Manzer who resides in San Jose is a strong temperance and christian man and several of the teachers are members of the lodge.

LOS GATOS has a good lodge with good workers, and is a pretty, healthy and stirring place. Publicly installed officers, over 20 brethren and sisters coming from San Jose, a number would have come from Santa Clara but they rightly judged that most good could be done by staying to support Col. Babcock. Next night a good audience in M. E. Church. Here and all thru the county the times are too busy and nights too short to be fully propitious and a further visit of some lecturer thru September and to attend Dist. Lodge is anxiously desired. I left Rituals and Sr. Richardson's address and hope to hear that a Band of Hope has been started. Addressed the two public schools on the Triple Evils.

SAN JOSE has two lodges, Garden City and Granger. Each held an open meeting. Both have considerable musical and literary talent—it is said;—hope next time to have proof of the fact. Bro. Rev. D. Bushnel gave a cordial welcome and tendered his church for Sunday night but the friends afterwards thot more hearers could be obtained in the California Theater and they waited on Dr. Ravelin who kindly accorded me 20 minutes of his time to an audience of 1000 people of all classes. As best I could in so short a time, I referred to the numbers and power of our lodges and membership, of our organ the RESCUE, of the grand crisis now at hand, of the necessity of every one doing what was possible to take advantage of the tide of temperance in our State which, if taken at the present flood would lead to fortune and urged systematic organized effort such as the Good Templar lodges afforded. Am assured that a further visit and other lectures would be appreciated and do good. Some additions to our membership resulted as it was. The W. C. T. U. have a good coffee house and reading room; some noble women, among them Sister McLellan of International Lodge, S. F. At 5 and 10 cents per dish can be had a great variety of viands and the RESCUE, Liberator, Signal, Day of Reform and a tablefull of other papers can be seen. There ought to be a more systematic effort made by all temperance people to sustain and extend the usefulness of this good institution. In afternoon attended a full meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association; temperance was not forgotten as one of the subjects.

BAY VIEW is a model community for morals, temperance, Sunday school, Church and general intelligence. The lodge Dr. Merrick started is doing well. Bro. Rev. Gillespie drove me out from San Jose, had me address Sunday school, and afterwards preach for him a gospel temperance sermon. Bro. Ralfe drove me back in time for the other two services enabling me to get in 4 for the day, at the risk of being accused of "working" on Sunday.

C. N. GOULDING

I left Navarro on Saturday 5th lectured that evening in Manchester also 11 A. M. Sunday to an audience of seventy-five persons, the lodge here is "sleeping" and the prospects for an "awakening" not promising, local bickerings and jealousy have produced the usual results. Bro. Fairbanks very kindly entertained me and conveyed me to Point Arena where I lectured in the Presbyterian Church in the evening, and in the M. E. Church Monday evening, large audience but no enthusiasm for the cause. Bros. Bacon, Fenton, and Woodin, will do all that can be done. Up at 2 A. M. the 8th and off for Gualala, found the members active and the lodge in good condition. Bro. Ward, all the Ward family determined to hold on, addressed a large audience that evening and trust my effort was not in vain. Wednesday 9th started for Fishermans Bay, found that "Horicon Lodge" was located in the hills about 9 miles from the coast. Bro. J. E. Hickman had a team in waiting, lectured to an audience of 25, no fault to find the whole neighborhood was there, Lodge numbers about 20, and they have the courage "to do and dare;" am under many obligations to Bro. Hickman and family for their kindness. On the 10th came 40 miles to Duncans Mills, on the 11th went to the City intending to join my Brothers of the G. A. R. on their excursion to Santa Cruz, but was not able to do so, attended District Lodge Saturday evening (12th) and came here Sunday morning.

NORTHERN DISTRICT LODGE, I. O. G. T.

The Northern District Lodge, I. O. G. T., convened at Arcata on Saturday last, July 29th. There was a very full attendance, the meeting being the most satisfactory District Lodge that ever assembled in the county. These resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, Intemperance and immorality and the audacity of the promulgators thereof have become alarming, and

Whereas, Powerful organizations have been formed for the purpose of defying the law, defending crime, and opposing all moral institutions, and

Whereas, We believe the ballot box to be the proper avenue thru which to defend the rights and liberties of the citizens, and that as Good Templars it is our right and bounden duty to take a fearless and unequivocal stand, therefore be it

Resolved, That in the coming election our entire influence and support shall be given to those candidates in whom we have confidence and who will pledge themselves to support the interests of TEMPERANCE and morality and the rigid enforcement of the Sunday Law, and who will wage an unceasing warfare against any organization the principles of which are antagonistic to the best interests of a moral and law-abiding people.

2. That we are in favor of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and urge upon our legislators to submit a a Constitutional amendment to the people at its next session.

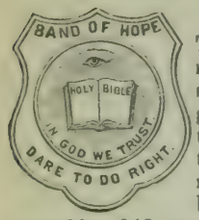
3. That every Temperance man in the State, regardless of party predilections, should be untiring in his efforts to elect members to next Legislature and State Senate pledged to the submission of the Prohibition amendment, and if the object cannot be secured in no other way, PARTY must be IGNORED in order that PROHIBITION may PREVAIL.

4. That we pledge ourselves in District Lodge assembled, that we will never cease to use all legal means in our power, till the banner of Prohibition shall proudly wave over our fair State.

5. That we view with pride the bold and fearless action of Judges Morrison, Thornton, Myrick and McKee, Justices of the Supreme Court for upholding a law that elevates the morals of society and tends to advance the best interests of the community.

6. That the bold and fearless stand taken by Wm. Ayres, editor of the Democratic Standard on the side of morality and the rigid enforcement of the Sunday Law, merits our hearty approval, and we commend the support of the paper to all law and order loving people in the county.

7. That we, as Good Templars, believe the law for the observance of the Christian Sabbath is one of the glories of American citizenship, and we pledge ourselves not to vote for any man at the coming election who supports or sanctions by word or deed the violation of the same, or is in favor of a repeal thereof.



8. That a Committee of one from each Lodge, with the District Deputy as Chairman, be appointed to call a meeting of the temperance voters of Humboldt county, at such time and place as they may deem best, to determine for whom they will cast their votes at the coming election.—Standard.

The 9th reaffirms the 3rd resolution of the Prohibitory Reform Convention, promising to take steps to form a new party if forced to it.

SILVER STAR. Address on Habit by Mr. W. H. Barnes was a very excellent one, as always. Notice crowded out.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

"MIRANDA AGAIN."

"The clerk reported that this was the forty-second time Miranda had been up for drunkenness and disorderly conduct."

"And a tidier, respectabler woman you'd never wish to see when she's sober;" this was what a neighbor said of her.

Can you fancy that the two characters are one and the same woman?

A woman in her home, speaking kindly to her children, busy about her daily work, her face still comely and pleasant.

A woman standing at the bar of a public house, under the flaring gas lights. Her loud, coarse voice rising in vulgar jesting, yelling laughter—aye, in oaths and curses. Her fingers clutching at the counter's edge to steady her swaying form and reeling brain, her other hand stretched eagerly for more and still more of the liquid devil that already has possession of her.

A policeman's strong hand upon her shoulder, a savage scuffle, and through the quiet streets ring out yelling shouts from a woman's lips as she is dragged away to the police cell.

Forty-two times has this scene been repeated in the life of this woman, still young and comely. But, oh! the hundreds of women, whose womanhood is daily, in this Christian land, dragged through the mire of the streets. Think of it with shame and horror.—S. S. Worker.

Perhaps Miranda, before she learned to drink, was as pure and noble and kindly as any of our good sisters and mothers. But for that she might perhaps have been one of the best women of her community. It happened that she was one of those whom the appetite for liquor once formed took complete possession of, as it may of any one who tampers with it.

Now the corner grocery or any grocery that sells liquor or beer, the winery and brewery and every place that makes or sells liquor of any kind is a factory for turning men and women and children into helpless drunkards and criminals and idiots like Miranda; for converting good men and women into howling, dangerous, murderous outlaws. Every good worthy person that we know is so because the saloon keeper and brewers traps could not catch them. The traps have been set all the time but they could not be coaxed or driven into them. And if they had, any one of them might have turned out just like Miranda.

It is a nice business, is it not, setting a trap to catch the bright, sharp, jolly, ruddy boys of the Band of Hope and to train them up to be Guiteaus; and the brewer sends his wagon to drop his beer keg into your pleasant home that the sweet, innocent little girls of that loving family circle may be poisoned and trained to be Mirandas in the police court and city prison—42 times, yea if 4,000 times, the drunkard-makers conscience would not be disturbed.

TEMPERANCE WORK IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

BY H. W. ADAMS.

A Temperance Band in connection with a sunday-school can be conducted in much the same way as the school itself, only the songs, lessons, books, papers, etc., all appertain to temperance. If you will remember this, the way will readily open up as you go along.

Some hold their meetings on the Sabbath. In places where the Sunday-schools are held in the morning it often works well to unite and hold a Union Band in the afternoon; or if thot best, each can work separately. Friday afternoon, at close of day school, is a capital time, and others may like Saturday afternoons still better.

The pastor, superintendent, or any wide-awake, judicious teacher would make a fit leader. We never know what we can do till we go to God for power and wisdom, and then go ahead. Moody began his wonderful career with stammering and hesitation, trying to teach a handful of street arabs of the glorious possibilities which lay before them. Now, Moody and his waifs sway thousands of men in two continents.

When you are ready to start, give out your notice in Sunday-school, explaining that there will be a library, a weekly paper, lively temperance songs, speaking, reciting, pledge-singing, etc., and that badges will be given to every one enrolled. It is quite important at this time to have samples (to show to the school) of the books, papers, badges, pledge-roll, etc., which you intend to use. These you can procure from the publisher of this paper.

A still better plan in connectien with showing the samples, is to give out a printed card of invitation. Every scholar should receive one, and extra cards should be given to all who can scatter them among their friends, at day-school and elsewhere. The following is a good form.

A MEETING TO START A BAND OF HOPE,

Will be held in this Sunday-school Room,

Next Friday Afternoon, at the close of Day-school.

You are invited to come and bring others with you.
Bring this card with you.

A BAND OF HOPE is something like a Sunday-school, only held on a week day. It will have a library, a weekly paper, songs, lessons, concerts, etc. Every one joining the band takes a pledge against liquor, tobacco and profanity. All are invited to join, whether members of our school or not.

N. B.—Teachers are wanted for the classes.

These blanks on heavy paper will be furnished, along with band outfits, by the "Revolution Temperance Publishing House," 46 Adams St., Chicago, at five cents per hundred. Much fuller details in regard to Sunday-school Temperance work can be found in No. 1 of the Temperance Worker which can be had at the same address; single copy, three cents; twenty-five copies or more, one cent each.

THE most thoro enthusiastic and efficient temperance workers are those who study every phase of the temperance question, and read all the important temperance literature of the day.

THE SALOON A SCHOOL.

BY PROF. GEO. E. FOSTER.

The legalized saloon is a school. It must and does teach. The keeper is the master, and the liquors his apparatus. This school is open sixteen hours of the day, and often seven days of the week. Its pupils are the citizens, and its object lessons all but indellible. What does it teach?

That the sale of drink is necessary and useful, for the law protects this as it does every other sale.

That the drinking of liquors is necessary and useful; for, of course, the State would not allow the sale of what was unnecessary and harmful.

That it is right to turn sober people into tipplers, and tipplers into drunkards, if only in the operation revenue is made for the State and gain for the proprietors.

That it is right to run establishments which breed idleness, foster vicious habits, prepare criminals, nurse pauperism, and destroy manhood, provided only this waste of the human is coined into golden showers.

That neither God's moral law, nor society's pure interests, are to be counted in the scale against the appetites of the destroyed and the avarice of the destroyers.

That it is only necessary to carry on debauchery by wholesale in order to gain the sanction of law, and receive the proud name of business enterprise. For, is it not true, O honest citizen, that the saloon system of this country produces more want, causes more idleness—weaves more chains of evil habits—schools more criminals—ruins more homes and slays more precious lives, than all other systems of vice put together?

And is it not true that God's law and man's good require that this work of debauchery cease? And is it not also true that it could not exist for a year against the indignant remonstrances of outraged humanity but for the golden streams it pours into the coffers of the nation, and the pockets of the liquor monopoly?

THE TENURE OF LIFE.

An industrious German, Baron G. F. Kolb, has lately compiled a book of universal statistics which furnishes much good food for thought. His figures show that every advance made by a people in morality, in profitable and healthy employment and useful knowledge, brings nearer to the ideal—the greatest natural tenure of life. Domestic virtue also tells favorably on the health and wealth of a population. Thus in Bavaria, out of 1,000 children born alive, there died, of legitimate children, 248 boys and 212 girls; of illegitimate, 361 boys and 342 girls. Out of 100 children nursed by their mothers, only 18.2 died the first year; of those nursed by wet nurses, 29.33 died; of those artificially fed, 60 died; of those brought up in institutions, 80 died out of the 100. The influence of prosperity or poverty on mortality is shown by Baron Kolb. Taking 1,000 well-to-do persons and another 1,000 poor persons—after five years there remained alive of the prosperous, 943; of the poor, only 655. After fifty years there remained of the prosperous, 557; of the poor, 283; at seventy years of age there remained 235 of the prosperous; of the poor, 65. The average length of life of the well-to-do was 50 years, and among the poor 32 years. One of the most potent shorteners of life is the anxiety of providing for bare subsistence. The lack of sanitary conditions also shortens life. Idleness, as compared to intense industry, outweighs,—prejudicially outweighs—all the advantages of ease and abundance.

AFRAID OF HIS INFLUENCE.

Everybody knows General Winn and understands his principles and actions as a temperance man. A good joke occurred with him when he was lecturing to the sailors on the levee in this city. He met a friend just in front of a drunkery saloon on Kearney near Clay street and they commenced talking on the sidewalk; the owner came out saying "every body knows you and will not come in while you are standing here; you will accommodate me by stepping to one side, my customers are afraid of you." The trap was set and well baited but the animals would not approach as long as they could see a human being clothed in his right mind standing in front of the dead-fall.

REV. A. J. GORDON, D. D., of Boston, thus writes in the Watchword: "And it came to pass as a certain man journeyed from the cradle to the grave, he fell among saloon-keepers, who robbed him of his money, ruined his good name, destroyed his reason, and then kicked him out worse than dead. A moderate drinker came that way, and when he saw him he said: 'He is but a dog; they served him right. Let him die; he is a curse to his family.' And also a license-voter came that way, and when he saw him he said: 'The brute! Put a ball and a chain on his leg and work him on the street.' And a tetotaler came that way, and when he saw him he had compassion on him, and raised him up, and assisted him to his home, and ministered to his wants and to the wants of his family; got him to sign the pledge, and started him on his journey in comfort and happiness. Who, think you, was the greater friend to humanity—the saloon-keeper, the moderate drinker, the license-voter, or the tetotaler?"

OPIUM.

The people of Fresno wont tolerate opium smoking, much to their credit. Last Saturday five young men, convicted of the abominable offense, were sentenced, by the Judge of the Superior Court, to pay a fine of $500 and be imprisoned in the county jail for six months. These were all young men, the oldest not over twenty-two or three.—Encinal.

That opium smoking is somewhat worse, a good deal worse and more dangerous than smoking tobacco. But it cannot be said to be more dangerous than drinking beer nor any more sinful. There are plenty of people who smoke a little opium now and then and it don't seem to hurt them much and there are plenty more who become completely slaves of it and die an awful death thru it. Just the same with beer, some people never get drunk on it, never appear to hurt themselves with it while others go strait to ruin and death with it. And the people who are slaves of beer are more swinish and brutal and savagely criminal than the slaves of opium. It would be an excellent thing to fine $500 and imprison for 5 years every body that makes or sells or buys a pint of beer. There would be no cruelty in that for after one was sentenced it would be stopped and it would save 100,000 lives a year and the destruction of alcohol would be the greatest blessing that has come to earth for 1800 years.

SOUTH AMERICA.

A PLEASURE TRIP.

The first place of any note on our way was Buena Vista, which means a "fine view." It was well named for it was the only place so far save one, where one could see more than a few yards. We had passed one partially cleared farm where a few cattle grazed, but the rest was forest and an underground ditch for a road. At Buena Vista we could see, when it was not rainy or foggy, a long distance over the Yacula Valley away below us and a varied assortment of mountain tops beyond pushing their blue summits ambitiously one beyond the other. In very clear days a snowcapped giant could be faintly discovered in the dim distance, and it had a refreshing effect to be reminded that it was cool some where.

Buena Vista was about 2,000 feet above the sea and being a projecting shelf into and over the valley, it was quite a healthful resort for the fever patients below if they could get there. It was quite a flourishing village of 7 huts and a center of trade. Every hut sold guarapo, most of them rum; two or three were heavy speculators in coffee, pork, fowls, eggs, etc. It was not often they had more than 100 lbs of any one thing, but sometimes they bot up all the pork or beef or chickens that came along from the interior for a week, till prices rose in Barbacoas with the scarcity and then they rushed in their stock and made a little pile of perhaps 5 or 6 dollars on the corner; and this put the lucky speculator in funds to gratify his ever present longing to bet courageously on the next cock-fight.

This was a favorite resort of the cargueros as the Indian carriers are called; to remain there over night they would stop at noon or soon after, or travel two or three extra hours till near dark; because there would be pretty sure 50 or more of them drinking guarapo, and singing till ever so late every night; and it was funny to notice that the guarapo in sufficient quantity at 2½ cents a quart produced precisely the same effect upon those untaut and nearly naked Indians as the same amount of alcohol in the choicest imported French champagne at $5 a quart does upon the bosom friends of President Arthur or President Grant when they sit down to a business jamboree.

They would shout "keep that bowl full," "fill the foaming bowl," "make that bowl run over," "oh the joys of that magnificent guarapo;" and when they tried to say Barbacoas they said Baab——uth just as a U. S. Senator with all his compartments full and the pumps choked, would say, "Ish Rip—plik" for this Republic.

They had a few pigs and cattle here, and as it rained at least 7 days of every 9 and rained hard for a few hours, and sometimes rained all day, the clay soil of the entire neighborhood was a constant mud hole well stirred up and meaner than the most adobe country anywhere but about Vallejo.

Leaving Buena Vista we found the country less settled and more rugged and earthquake plowed. The roadside huts became scarce and the traveling stages longer. It seemed to be difficult to find a dwelling place anywhere that had a level spot large enough for a hut. A third of an acre was a large clearance and it was almost always as slanting as an old fashioned pitch roof. But there was no level land anywhere for many miles.

We came to one place where there were no living inhabitants for about a days journey and here the government had provided a spacious house, most of it roof, for the shelter of the cargueros and travelers. Here the first come secured the driest spots under the leaky roof to spread their mats and about all the space is usually occupied by the sleepers. We found it so on arrival but the native surveyor of our party told them his people were government employees on service and the best quarters were vacated in our favor.

Among the occupants that evening were two white ladies from Pasto going to the coast;one of them had three little girls from 5 to 10 years of age. The ladies had each a chair and a third carried the three children. The new readers are informed that the only mode of travel on this road was on foot or to be carried in an armchair with a small platform for the feet and the whole slung on the back of an Indian and supported from slipping down by a strap around the forehead. The three children must have been an uneasy load for the carrier, as a slight movement without due notice loses the balance and leads to shipwreck.

Beyond this we came to a country of much plantain and corn and here of course we found more inhabitants settled. Whenever you get enough settlers to start a cockfight you come to the indications of that great resource of Colombian wealth and enjoyment. There we would meet 3 or 4 young men setting out east with each a blanket, a couple of fighting chickens, half a dozen boiled eggs and a bunch of bananas; the two latter items and the blanket supplied all the purposes of the Palace hotel to them and the roosters were the South America bonanza Comstock Lode of that country.

These fellows were going perhaps 20 or 30 miles to a chicken argument, which was to be the grand event of a holy Saint's anniversary. Next day we would meet 3 or 4 young men returning from another religious festival, with the shattered remains of one badly used up rooster in a basket; the bird looking as if he had just been discharged from an inebriate asylum after a tedious and violent struggle with an acute type of jimjams.

Few people except the advocates of wine and horseracing of this State understand what a grandly enriching thing for that country the cockfighting business is. In every little village the highest of all ambitions is to raise successful fighting fowls. Some of these will win their owner $20 up to $50 in a successful campaign and see what mines of wealth to the country are developed by so many chickens. Colombia should be an enormously rich country but in spite of its cockfighting, its beer and rum industries and its gambling, it is most exasperatingly poor.

We have similar industrial enterprises in California. A large number of farmers are engaged in raising fast horses for gambling purposes, and we have annual State horse gambling exhibitions; the theory being that if 100 men gain $200,000 on a series of horse bets, the State is $200,000 richer, and the poor fellows that lost it will go to work to retrieve their losses some way.

And the wine, brandy and beer again. If Sonoma County can raise a million dollars' worth of brandy and wine, and sell it to a few San Francisco liquor-dealers, and they sell it to the people of the State for six millions, the State will get immensely rich in time, and a vast amount of employment is made in building jails and asylums and poor-houses for the people who drink the wine; and it employs a large number of policemen, lawyers, judges, etc., trying the people who commit crime when they drink.

There was one constant source of thankfulness in that country. The flea has been drowned out in the low, rainy districts. The flea is not amphibious, and when he is caut out in one of those showers the first big drop that strikes him sweeps him helplessly away into the brooks and rivulets that are set running with a ten minute shower, and he drowns easily. In a residence of two years I failed to meet with a single instance of that insect, so indispensable and so prominent and active a factor in every other Spanish civilization.

When we arrived at an elevation of 10,000 feet above the sea, after a last climb of 1,500 feet or so, to a plateau of 20 miles or more, extending to Tuquerres, and as we looked upon the level fields ahead, and the confused mass of broken, tumbled, earthquake-riven peaks and hills and ravines thru which we had passed, the first sensation we experienced was a sudden impression that now, after all our weary climbs and mud baths and conflicts, we had arrived in a flea country; something unmistakable told us so.

At a hut, the first we came to, our party joyfully accepted hospitalities for the night. Now we were in a new country. The houses, hitherto, had all been built on stilts, 5 or 6 feet from the ground, with a thatched roof projecting 4 or 5 feet all round and open on one or two sides, the walls being lathed up only about 2 feet from the floor. But now we came to houses built on the ground, all closed up, the fire-place in the middle of the floor and no window except when the door is open. In these huts they largely cultivated dogs and guinea pigs, not for any apparent use or ornament, but as affording the most economical and successful mode known of cultivating the flea. There were something like four full regiments of fleas awaiting us at this outpost, and I was so much interested in their movements, all night long, that not a moment's time was left me to sleep till daylight; at 5:50 A. M. they took a recess for rest and quiet digestion.

Just after Gov. John P. St. John, of Kansas, had finished his speech at the great temperance campmeeting held this month near Seymour, Ind., a German, accompanied by his wife and a half dozen little "germanies," approached him, and after introducing them, remarked: "Vell, guvnor, I have all de time obbosed dese temperance peebles, but ven I hear your speech to-day, I say to my Josanna, "Dot is de nicest man vot lifs in dis country and Germany too, and he has told me so many dings dot he makes me out one entire prohibition dutchman!"—Del. Signal.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

SIGNS.

In walking up and down the streets of San Francisco, many signs attract the attention, signs on the faces of the throng that is ever crowding the thoroughfare; signs in the general appearance of the business houses; signs here, there, and everywhere, which plainly tell the observer of the character of the person or place observed.

When a young man, with clear eye, and steady tread passes us, we feel sure that he is traveling in the straightforward path which will lead to honored manhood; when we see, next behind, a man whose bloodshot eyes, trembling hands and faltering footsteps, tell of nights passed in carousal and dissipation, we know that he is treading rapidly in the downward path, and that if unchecked, his fearful race will end in that saddest of all places, a drunkard's grave.

The signs of the business houses, in their turn tell of prosperous or adverse affairs.

We are all governed in our estimate of men and affairs by these signs, but the signs to which my attention has been called, in an especial manner, are not these involuntary signs, but those advertisements which are placed above business houses to designate them.

THE BOOMERANG.

First there is the "Boomerang." This is the name of a saloon, and wisely did the builder select his name.

The boomerang is a weapon which is used by the natives of Australia and is thrown through the air with much velocity, but by some peculiar skill it always returns to the person who threw it. Now, what the circumstances of the owner of the Boomerang saloon may be, it is not in my power to tell, but many a saloon-keeper has been made to feel that his traffic was indeed a boomerang, and after seeing many others fall victims to his baleful wares, has at last fallen himself, or if he has escaped, has suffered the agony of seeing the appetite fasten itself upon his children and has followed them to drunkards' graves.

THE WASP.

Another saloon rejoices in this suggestive name. The good book tells us, at the last, drink stingeth like an adder, and no doubt the first stings may be justly likened to the wasp. But my dear boys, if you have been drinking beer and wine, and wake with fevered and throbbing brow, and think it is only the sting of the wasp, remember that the adder's sting will surely follow at the last, and when it is too late for repentance, woes unutterable will enshroud you in their serpent like embrace.

Flee while yet you may.

THE BEARS!

The most suggestive sign is the sign of the two quarrelling bears—fighting over a cask of wine.

It almost seems sometimes as if the evil one inspires people in these ways.

Fancy a man who wants people to drink his liquor thus showing the passions that will be aroused by its use.

For men do quarrel like bears, and gnash their teeth when drink has crazed their brains and roused all bear-like propensities.

He who painted the last has "builded wiser than he knew."

Next week another sign will be noticed and some appropriate ones suggested.

M. E. Richardson.

The Drunkard's Will.—"I leave to society a ruined character,a wretched example, and a memory that will soon rot.

"I leave to my parents, during the rest of their lives as much sorrow as humanity in a feeble declining state can sustain.

"I leave to my brothers and sisters as much mortification and injury as I could bring on them.

"I leave to my wife a broken heart, a life of wretchedness and shame to weep over my premature death.

"I give and bequeath to each of my children poverty, ignorance and a weakened intellect and the remembrance that their father was a monster. —Ex.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

WHAT IS WANTED.

Every body can look back now and see that it was cowardice, the lack of courage to do right, that extinguished the Whig party. It was their plain duty as well as their open road to victory to declare against slavery but they blindly refused and were annihilated. And the same treason to duty and justice also extinguished all there was of the Democratic party, save the embers which the misdeeds of Republicans kept alive and ever and anon blow into almost a successful flame.

Whenever the Republican party is now asked to make the issue of rum and anti-rum, it draws back from cowardly fear of losing the criminal vote and is in a constant worry of battle; always struggling with imminent defeat; because its infamous vote is altogether unreliable, its failure to set up a platform of truth and justice and its cowardice offer no attraction whatever to draw over any votes good or bad from the opposite party and its own most respectable and reliable voters are discouraged and become disaffected.

The exceptions to this general rule of that party are seen in Maine, Kansas and Iowa; there every step toward temperance has been a bulwark and tower of strength to the party; the trouble which came to it in the Garcelon fracas being entirely due to its falsehood to the enforcement of the prohibitory law.

It is natural when one sheep in a drove jumps over a pole for all the rest to follow and jump just the same, but when a leading sheep in Illinois jumps over a pole, it is not at all necessary for the sheep in California to jump the same way. If disaster and defeat have followed blunders in Ohio and Indiana etc and good fortune has followed honesty and justice elsewhere it will be silly indeed for California to blunder.

One party in this State has been by its leaders arrayed in open hostility to the christianity, morality and virtue of the State. In the battle of the grog-shop and crime den against the American home and American liberty and American institutions, it declares itself on the side of the former; it has solemly proclaimed that Americans have no rights which the drunkard-makers can be required to respect; that no American law or usage shall dare to stand up and claim a right to life, liberty or the pursuit of happiness except as prescribed and permitted by a certain criminal small minority class who represent neither their own decent countrymen nor have anything in common with ours; whose only mission is to promote vice and destroy what honest citizens build.

The conduct of the leaders of that party has insulted and disgusted thousands of their better voters who stand now ready to unite with good men of all creeds and parties in a contest for the prevalence of right and decency over crime and vice. They desire as other good men of all parties do, to vote for good men on a good platform. But if no party offers them any improvement upon their own surrender to crime platform, they would much prefer to see their old party triumph on a vile principle than see their old enemy gain the victory on it.

If any Republican is so blind as to think that the crime and rottenness of the State can outvote its Christianity, temperance, morality and good citizenship, his advice is the safest to disregard. It is still a matter of thankfulness that virtue in a fair contest with crime can still prevail in any State of the Union, but it is doutful that it would long continue so, if the Leag of Fiendom is permitted to sow its deadly poison further.

There is no possible policy then which could so surely attract to the Republican party the largest possible number of good sound votes as the strenuous sustenance of a complete Sabbath rest and an outspoken pledge to submit the two questions of constitutional prohibition and local option to the vote of the people separate from all other issues. And no one can deny with a shadow of reason, that the people are most emphatically entitled to decide these matters by majority vote. The coming convention can choose between the loss of their little skeleton share of the gutter vote and the opposition of the whole temperance sentiment of the State. There is no arithmetic that will count these two elements on one side any more in California.

STEALING AND WHY.

The Examiner of Tuesday gives the details of an organized system of pillage and robbery and piracy which has for years been practiced upon the merchandize shipped by the steamers of Messrs. Goodall, Perkins & Co. It reads almost like the sensational pirate romances got up by villainous publishers East to capture boy readers. It seems incredible that a regular piracy should have been so long continued on the wharves and on the steamers as to cause the loss of $250,000 or more and the perpetrators never discovered. But the story seems to be authentic.

Some of us have lived long ago where axes, shovels and various other portable properties were invariably left out of doors, where clothes were left out on the line all night, where no barn had a lock and where a door or window was rarely fastened at night, and nothing was stolen except in the very rarest instances when a stranger had been there from afar.

It was a matter of intense surprise to some of us to go to seaports in Italy, Portugal, Greece, Spain and find that everything portable had to be locked up or sat on night and day to keep it from being stolen, and we wondered at the thieveries of these Dagos and foreigners.

In India and China thieves everywhere and of much adroitness, but more especially so in China. There we pitied the poor heathens who had never been taut lessons of honesty and truth; they were pagans and it was natural to expect it and we boys were thankful we belonged to a different race and language and religion.

Later in Dublin, Glasgow, Cork, Liverpool, London, thieving was so rampant that anything stealable was sure to be stolen whether it was watched or not. And we used to pity these poor, starving thieves of our own race and language but degraded by what we called slavery and poverty and ignorance.

Still later we find ourselves in this country of unequaled plenty and variety of everything necessary to the comfort and happiness of man, where within easy reach of honest industry is the cheapest and cheeriest living to be found in all the world. Ah! here dishonesty and pilfering is unheard of will say the new comer. Far cheaper to work and earn and enjoy than to prowl and pilfer and suffer. But no; here we have not only property but human life less safe than in any other part of this wicked world. More stealing, loafing, cheating, than in any other country and on a larger scale. And what is the reason of all this stealing? The answer is evidently

THE GROG-SHOP; THE BEER DEN.

Wherever in these European countries, people were in the habit of stealing there was a grog-shop or wine-shop to account for the stealing or the necessity of it. Generally in the vicinity of a grog-shop is the pawn shop to convert stolen articles into coin to purchase drink; stolen mostly, for if not stolen from other people they are robbed from the families of the drinkers.

In England, Ireland, Scotland and America too where the church and the school and the bible have taut people to be virtuous and honest, the grog-shop is surrounded with its plenteous harvest of thieves: and in all these countries there are communities and districts small and large where the grog-shop has not come; and no bolts, bars or locks are needed because there are no thieves.

In California there is no need to have a single thief, but for every grog-shop and beer-den and wine-shop, high and low we shall have its group of thieves; the lawful natural fruit of the dishonesty and villainy and pauperism which it is the sole business of the saloons to generate and nurture.

THE PLATFORM.

There seems to be much difference of opinion as to what the political parties can afford to do in preparation for the coming election. The safest and best thing for them to do would be to do right. But people are slow to believe that. To children the story of Pharoh's continued defiance of ten loathesome plagues sent to punish him, is the most incredible and impossible of all the legends they have to encounter; but to the experienced student and observer of human history, it is such a natural and consistent relation of human folly and human stubbornness in wrong, that Pharoh becomes a familiar every day character. The whole history of the Democratic party and a great deal of the latter history of the Republican, is a faithful copy of the career of Pharoh the selfblinded.

The Rescue cannot say what the Republican party will do, but it can pretty nearly tell what is the sentiment of the great mass of the temperance people of the State and what will be their action when the policy of that party is determined upon. A few, well disposed toward the cause of temperance, would be perfectly satisfied to get the Sunday law amended and enforced but they are only superficial temperance advocates who have never given much thot to the matter and believe other issues are of more importance than the demolition of the grog-shop.

These few will have no influence in the councils or acts of the rest. We have carefully watched the history of this warfare against rum. We know just what has been good for nothing, what has been worse than nothing and what has been successful in temperance political action. We know that half measures and double sided platforms have never been as good as none at all; that electing whisky candidates to enact and enforce prohibitory laws is nosing into a gopher trap; that the beer vote and the Good Templar vote for the same candidate count all for beer and nothing for temperance.

And with the example of Maine and Kansas and Iowa before us and the attitude of several other States that are following their lead to victory, we will not copy the blunders of those other States who have been fooling for forty years in coquetry with treacherous political parties and have not gained an inch of success in all this time.

The Sunday law is well, the temperance people want it of course. But a Sunday law plank alone will not prevent the placing of a third party ticket in the field, pledged to submit a constitutional prohibitory amendment to the vote of the people. We ask that not as a boon but as a protective right, to which the people are most justly entitled and which it ot to be the first duty of a government to accord on the first demand. And it is a most reasonable demand to ask that we may protect the American home from the pirates and murderers who are at present chartered to destroy it.

One step at a time, says one, don't go too fast. But we want that step to be forward not backward. To pass a Sunday law and charter all the avenues and instruments of crime to run six days, would be a step backward. It would be going back 15 years with the added disadvantage against us of the corruption that has been effected by free crime during all that time.

The first and only forward step we can take is a constitutional prohibitory amendment; because we cannot have that immediately we want to do what we can with a local option law in the mean time But we know very well that any law that does not put immediate stop to the act of its violator, any law which can do nothing to close a saloon on Sunday but lodge a perfectly idle complaint against it, is altogether useless and damaging to us, because it is falsely called a failure of prohibition.

The first thing that will secure the temperance vote from going for a separate party ticket, will be a plank in the coming platform promising submission to the people of a prohibitory amendment; then a re-enactment of the Sunday law and providing for its complete and easy enforcement and a present act of local option. But first and most of all, the first steps for the submission of the amendment are desired; that is the first and only thing that means real, honest, valid progress.

This is not given as governing or ordering any one's acts or opinions. But it is believed to be the candid, deliberate and determined sentiment of the great majority of the people who have for 15 or 20 years labored and prayed and hoped for the downfall of the rum power. We are willing to have prohibition from any source, Republican or other party that will sincerely make it a square open issue. And there is one point still; they won't vote for a whisky selling or whisky drinking chorister and choir to sing temperance hymns nor trust them to make temperance laws or fulfil party pledges.

To follow the Republicans of Iowa and Kansas is to win; to blunder is to secure certain defeat.

PROPHETS IN DISGUISE.

There is a certain class of newspapers which cherishing a Damon and Pythias affection for the Vc. Beer interest, are ever greedy to publish any thing to bring odium upon the Good Templars.

It might be supposed that the Home for Orphans at Vallejo would be free from invasion by the friends and agents of the Leag of Fiendom, but it is not. That institution has always been managed with the utmost kindness and tender care for its inmates. They have been participants in all the amusements and indulgences that afforded them opportunity, have never been debarred from any proper privileges or subjected to any hardships.

On a recent occasion it was not deemed advisable to close the public school at the Home, and expose the children to the chances of a prevalent fever, to have them attend a circus to which they were offered free admission. There were other reasons but no rule was made on the subject, nor was the matter of the propriety of their attending a circus brot into question. But the management forgot to ask orders from the Vallejo Chronicle and that paper and the Sacramento Bee at once became very philanthropic on the tyranical treatment of the orphans, altho the great source of orphanage and poverty in this state has their warmest sympathy and friendship. The fact that their Leag of Fiendom friends have thousands of children orphans and worse than orphaned and suffering the keenest misery all over this state, never excited a word of protest from either of these models of virtue and vessels of tender pity for the orphan. For any act of theirs the 1500 orphans which have been lovingly cared for in that home, might have all starved to death; neither of them would have made it a matter of comment.

Other papers deceived by the report of the Vallejo Chronicle have shown an undue readiness to give currency to the nasty invidious slander that the children are debarred from enjoyments and amusements. The Grand Lodge will no doubt be thankful for the valuable advice of the Bee and Chronicle as to the punishment of the "hidebound moralists," the "puritanical lady managers." But the Home belongs to 19.000 sober people, every one of whom is a contributor to its support and a guardian of its welfare, and recognizing the gallantry and courtesy with which the education and associations of the ginmill have so strongly flavored the editorial prize essays of those two champions of philanthropy, they will probably seek inspiration and counsel from a more respectable source—when they need it.

TIVOLI.

The Argonaut gives the following mild and charitable description of the Tivoli:

"Through accident, and a desire to please certain young ladies, the writer found himself one evening this week at the "Tivoli." The Tivoli is a nondescript opera-house, a sort of foreign graft upon American manners, a cross between a lager-beer saloon and a concert hall. It is a spacious, cheap, uncomfortable hall, with hard chairs and sloppy tables, where anybody who has two bits can go, drink beer or gin, smoke bad cigars or worse cigarettes, with his hat on, and listen to the music not of the first quality, to an opera not of the best morale, sung and played by artists not of the highest professional character. The house was comfortably filled with respectable middle-class people, and served to afford them a very satisfactory amusement. The audience was well-dressed, well-behaved, quiet and orderly, and was composed mostly of people not born in America. The "Vienna Garden," the "Winter Carden," and the "Fountain" are places of similar resort, with the same general features of cheapness, music, beer, ham-sandwiches, and Limburger cheese. They are German "bier-gartens" and the French "jardin chantant," made to accomodate itself to our climate by coming in from outdoors under the protection of a roof. While we do not quarrel with any one whose tastes prompt him to the enjoyment of this kind of thing, or criticise his right to thus spend his evenings, we take the liberty of saying to those American parents who have been brought up to another kind of recreation, that in our opinion the old-fashioned American way is better for their children than this foreign thing which is being grafted upon our institutions. It is not only desirable but indispensable that amusement and recreation should be provided for our young folk; but when it comes to a mixed audience in a beer hall, with the free colloquium that beer-tables invite, we are oldfashioned enough to think that our girls can find safer and better places to enjoy themselves than at the Tivoli, Winter Garden, Vienna Garden or the Fountain."

It should always be remembered that the sole object of these institutions is to entice people to acquire an appetite for beer and waste their money to make rich brewers. Altho it is not their purpose to make men and women helpless sots and criminals, because such soon become poor customers, still they cannot ply their beer garden business without being in fact extensive factories that produce just such human goods, and they should be avoided with the same scrupulous care that the pest house and houses of worst repute are by decent and virtuous people.

A FAIR QUESTION.

WHY ARE OPPONENTS OF INTEMPERANCE IN LIQUOR INTEMPERATE IN TOBACCO.

We wonder if it can be true that abstinence in drink has a tendency to cause and justify intemperance in tobacco? We think this is a fair question; we cannot help but ask it. The present week has seen a great number of temperance people in Des Moines—mostly strong and radical temperance people. The Register office had several visits from several of them which was very complimentary to it. But we noticed, as one peculiar fact, that most radical men on the temperance question were not only immoderate, but extremely intemperate in the use of tobacco. The stronger the advocate of prohibition, as it seemed, the stronger was the cigar, the smoke of which he could cooly puff into anyone's face or, the larger the cud in his mouth, and the nastier the drool of tobacco juice on his lips. Some of the good people nearly choked us to death with their clouds of tobacco smoke, while telling us of the terrible and degrading use of drink, and others, in telling the same story of pathos, could hardly work their tongues for the dirty cuds they had in their mouths and for having to stop so frequently to make a sewer of their lips. It may have been very wicked—we suppose it was—but while we were being suffocated in the smoke of these poor cigars, and being made to wonder how so much disgusting fluid could be issued from the human mouth, we found ourselves sighing for some wicked man to come in who had nothing in him more nasty than good whisky. We wanted a change. But seriously, why is it that a larger percentage of tobacco-burners and eaters among temperance workers than among any other set of men, and why on earth is it that so many of them use such poor tobacco to smoke, and that they never learn to spit without spitting all over a room and without any regard to decency? Can it be that they are filthier in the use of tobacco than other people are? Or is it because such depravity looks worse in reformers than in ordinary mortals?—Iowa State Register.

GOOD TEMPLARY vs. GOOD TEMPLARISM.

It is a habit with many of those who have occasion to allude to the theories and teachings of our noble Order, to make use of the term Good Templarism. I desire to protest against the use of this expression in connection with our work.

The use of the terminal "ism" is the common and accepted method of describing, in a "contemptuous" manner, a particular doctrine or belief such as "Skepticism," "Darwinism," "Pantheism," and a score of other "isms."

An "ism," according to our best authorities, is a "specious," but "wild and visionary theory." There are but few Good Templars who would be willing to acknowledge that the teachings of their institution are of such a character. Good Templary is in no sense an "ism." Its theoriee are not "specious," but are deduced from established truths; they are not "wild," because conformed to well established rules, nor are they "visionary," because its schemes are practicable and are based upon solid foundations. An "ism," proceeds from a "dogma"—that is, "a principle of belief asserted or taught, without sufficient evidenee to sustain it." Our doctrines are not of that kind.

Based upon the law of Social Renevolence (as Dr. Johnson terms it) the law of Charity embracing the full scope and meaning of that grand word—its teachings can be accepted by the whole human family because its object is the elevation of the members of that family and because its methods have been endorsed by some of the brightest intellects and most enlightened wisdom of the world, and because all civilized people have recognized the catholicity of its operations.

Let us not then degrade our noble work, by ourselves alluding to it, as an "ism." Good Templarism, Pah! what a word, Good Templary is the proper expression and means, "that which pertains to Good Templars and their peculiar work."—Lodge Visitor.

PRIMARIES. It is to be hoped our good citizens will attend the primaries and see to the election of proper delegates to the Convention. The Leag of F—dom is sending its agents everywhere to put in illegal votes. If our friends entitled to vote honestly dont attend, the war will go against us.

ARTESIAN wells are becoming a necessity in San Francisco. The Spring Valley water has so many bugs and tadpoles and little tiny fish in it, that it dont do well for making champagne and other California wines. The fat of the little things after they rot, makes a kind of scum on the top of the wine and imparts a fishy taste to the fancy high priced brands of wine manufactured in the San Francisco city vineyards.

BRO. WATERBURY of Stockton called on his way to the springs for a holiday and reports a booming progress of temperance since the new hall has been in use. He wants to see every other community go and do likewise. By the way there are Lytton springs in Sonoma county and Bonanza springs in Lake county for temperance people to go to. No vice dens possess these places, and that should be remembered by all good citizens as well as temperance people.

The best bulwark of the Mormon Church has been for many years the bad character of its most active enemies to which they could point, the S. L. Tribune, the saloon-keepers, gamblers, and debauchees who have been the missionaries voluntary or otherwise engaged in the business of extirpating mormonism. No wonder the latter has numerous converts, even if its preachers were armed with no better arguments than a file of the Tribune. The grog-shop and faro table and licensed vice have never been successful champions of orthodox or pure and undefiled religion. The only way to mend mormonism is to put something better alongside of it. So far the federal government has been trying to drown it out by placing it in contrast with the worst crimes that have ever been tolerated in Christian countries and holding up vice and utter godlessness as the religion of the State.

THE FIELD OF POLITICS.

THE PROHIBITION MOVEMENT IN THE WESTERN STATES.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—John B. Finch, who was one of the most earnest advocates of prohibition in Iowa, and who has lately been lecturing in his own State (Nebraska) on the same subject, says that the people are working for the submission of a constitutional amendment prohibiting the sale or manufacture of liquors for drinking purposes. They are making a thoro canvass, with good chances of success. If the amendment is submitted it will be carried without dout, by a large majority.

Interviews with leading anti-prohibitionists and liquor men in Chicago show that they view with some alarm the inroads of temperance advocates in the adjoining States, and that they are formed in a compact body and intend to fight them in all their interests from the inception with money, votes, and political and personal influence. They generally advocate high license as a means of suppressing low doggeries and disreputable saloons.

The German temperance element has called a German Temperance Convention in this city on August 25th, and have elected two delegates to represent them in the National Temperance Convention to be held here on August 23d.—Chronicle, Aug. 9.

At last prohibition has got into politics and into the Press despatches. The young giant of the future has grown amazingly since the 28th of June, when, tho he was the subject of the most important intelligence that has come to hand since the surrender of Lee and the ending of the war, he only occupied four lines of small type in the Iowa victory despatch and in that four lines was the falsehood that the vote was very light.

When the battle is now surely to be lost for the rummies, they are willing to sacrifice the low doggeries and disreputable saloons. Yes, but when they are suppressed there will be none left. The gilded soul-trap that snares the sons of the Vanderbilts, the judges, the lawyers, the merchants and makes them tramps and thieves and suicides is just as low and vile a doggery as the Barbary Coast den that drugs and robs the drunken sailor or crazes Patrick Flanagan to murder his wife.

All hail to the German temperance element in Illinois, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska. Sooner than they think we shall have a German boom in California for temperance and home and peace and happiness and a Sunday rest.

Again on the 10th the Call has nearly half a colum of prohibition special dispatches of which the following is a synopsis.

OMAHA.—Inspired by the successes in Iowa the Neb. temperance people have begun an active canvas for prohibition altho licences are $1.000 a year in cities of 10000 people and $500 in smaller places. A saloon keeper who is a councilman proposes to make liquor license $50.000 a year, as prohibition is sure to come and we might as well have it now. The rummies are awake and call a drunkard-makers convention.

BOSTON.—A State Convention on the 9th had 155 delegates and nominated a prohibitory state ticket, Chas. Almy of New Bedford for Governor. Resolutions of sympathy were expressed with other states fighting for liberty to live and Iowa and Kansas were congratulated.

KANSAS.—Gov. St John will doutless be reelected and the Republican convention will memorialize Congress to attend to the question of prohibition at its next session.

GEORGIA.—Governor Colquit candidate for the U. S. Senate and a Democrat publicly declares for temperance and prohibition.

ILLINOIS.—State Prohibition Convention in session declare that 12.000 liquor dealers shall no longer run the State government by bribery; nothing can be expected of the Republican or Democratic parties therefore they call upon all good citizens to unite in a separate political party.

TENNESSEE.—The Dem., Rep., and Greenback parties have all refused to insert in their platforms a clause favorable to the continuance of their four-mile prohibitory law or for the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people. A State convention has therefore been called to organize for the defense of the homes of the people, their children and property against the ravages of the rum-pirates.

ARKANSAS.—There, the women petition against saloons, same as men. The law-breakers applealed to the courts against the validity of these petitions but were defeated. Of course the next step is to defy the law.

IN ALLEGHANY CITY, Joseph Hess, keeper of a rum-den, killed his wife some months ago. His son recently attempted to kill his own sister and in jail has twice attempted suicide. The saloon of Mr. Hess has been a success as a crime factory.

THE Living Issue, Cooperstown, N. Y., which has been for years one of the very ablest and best temperance papers and an uncompromising prohibitionist, is now published by D. S. Jones solely, Mr. Scrambling, his partner having withdrawn. Its temperance space will be somewhat lessened but it promises to maintain its sterling and stirring prohibition activity. It is sad to think that in the great state of New York when such a paper as the Living Issue should have been patronized into a prohibition daily, the temperance people stand by supinely and let it shorten sail at a time when its services are more than ever needed.

INDIANA.—Hendricks, English, Voorhees and McDonald are called the "Big Four" of the Democratic side of politics in Ind. They are committing their party to anti-prohibition in spite of most vigorous protests from their own people in many counties where Democratic majorities have always been sure. And the N. Y. Sun says the Republicans are in the same muddle, the people demanding a prohibition plank and their leaders objecting for fear of losing the German vote. It is a cheerless sign of the times when the criminal section of the foreign vote is of more political value than the American vote undivided.

MICHIGAN.—The whisky papers are eloquent upon their defeat in Iowa. Fanaticism of the people in not appreciating the blessings of pauper-mills and crime-schools and drunkard-factories on one side and the parsimony of the drunkard-makers in not putting up enough bribe money to defeat the people of Iowa, are the themes of sonorous lament.

NEVADA.—Bro. F. J. Culver is lecturing in the State of Nevada; found Reno and Virginia city not quite the most receptive soil for temperance, but is hopeful of better things.

ENGLAND has one "vicar" who has come out with a wailing protest against the rapidly spreading evil of teetotalism. Poor man, he should be put on the list of heathen candidates for missionary effort.

BAD TIMES FOR THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.—Some of us hardly dared to hope that we should live to see the day when brewers and publicans would cry out because they were losing their trade. We begin to be more sanguine now. From Bradford we hear that a brewery has just been sold for $200.000, which was valued at $675.000 only ten years ago, and that brewers are putting tenants in their houses to sell what they can and say nothing about rent. And we have an impression that Bradford has not been the centre of any temperance revival. If so, all the better, for it indicates steadier, and therefore healthier and more enduring growth. In Newcastle and Swansea, where Blue Ribbon missions have been held, breweries and publichouses have been closed; and in the Isle of Wight the price of beer has had to be reduced, whilst the brewers have to deal with the publicans on much the same footing as they do at Bradford. We have not heard better news than this for a long time.—Ch. Commonwealth.

HEALDSBURG, Aug. 3, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—Judging by the despondent tone of some of the Republican papers, especially that of the Argonaut of July 29, it appears that the Republican party will not have the courage to embody a decent plank on the Sunday law in their platform, much less say anything on temperance. I hope that the Prohibitionists will be ready with a good set of candidates and principles to take the field at once, after the adjournment of that party, unless they disappoint us by taking high moral ground. There ought to be found in this State of California, a party who have the courage of their convictions to do right, and for whose ticket and principles good men need not blush to work and vote.

Excuse me for troubling you; I do not wish to let the occasion, the crisis slip by without us doing something. We will have to act with promptness and energy for the time is short, if we intend to produce an impression on the general election.

I am sorry that the Greenbackers are disunited, and very sorry that the Emancipator is for McQuiddy. To me he is very objectionable as representing a spirit of lawlessness, which seems to pervade the air.

We must put ourselves in shape to administer the rebuke of defeat to the Republicans, if they refuse our proffered assistance.

Would it not be well for you to impress upon the Republicans through your journal, that we intend to nominate, which will result in their defeat unless they take an unequivocal stand for our measures

Yours truly. W. G. SWAN.

Soulsbyville Lodge celebrated its 2nd anniversary Aug 5th, inviting Bald Mountain, Confidence and Rough and Ready Lodges to pay us a fraternal visit and well did all three lodges respond, for they came in crowds and just filled our spacious hall, which was nicely decorated with greens and flowers; Brother J. T. Holland had to acknowledge that it was as good a looking audience as he had seen at R. W. G. Lodge. Officers Quarterly Reports were in good shape, and elicited commendatory notice. The annual report to G. W. S. was read by L. D. and shows good progress for a lodge only 2 years old. Initiated 2 members and installed officers. then the usual lunch and song and speeches in one of which Brother G. L. Coles urged us as Good Templars to do our duty at the next election. With report to G. W. S. went 2 applications for the Mutual Aid and I hope to get more. I think I can answer why our M. A. does not prosper as the Workmen and some other societies; it is because Good Templars and especially L. Ds. do not take hold of it and recommend it to others, but lay back and pick out all the faults they can with it. Our M. Aid only requires that members shall conform to the laws of the society; in order to receive its benefits, the same as the Odd Fellows, Chosen Friends and other such institutions.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

Two DIVISIONS, A and B. Benefits in A, $1.000; in B, $2,000. Entrance fee in A, $4; in B, $5. A member of one joining the other pays half fee; under 49 eligible to both.

Classes: 1st, 20 to 29 yrs; 2d, 30 to 39; 3d, 40 to 48; 4th, 49 to 55; 5th, 56 and upwards.

Assessments. On the death of a member each member of his division shall be assessed, 1st class, 75c; 2d, 90c; 3d, $1.15; 4th, $1.40; 5th, $1.70.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank, S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S. Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R. Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

E. H. BOSCHER, DRUGGIST,

DONT WAIT.

Our readers need not wait till they have $1,000 to spare, or even $100, to send for goods to H. A. Smith's Cash Grocery, advertised in another colum of this paper, but send for what you need or can spare the money for, if only $10 or less, and it will surely pay you, and that you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have knocked at least one pin from under the whisky fabric which is struggling and striving for supremacy over every thing that is good or that opposes its rule in this beautiful land.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

EDITOR RESCUE:—Our Lodge is still slowly gaining ground. At the expiration of first quarter in this year, we had 49 members. Now we have 60, and several more candidates to initiate. We now have a comfortable hall in which to meet, and as the Lodge grows stronger and the evenings grow longer, we hope to ad a great increase in interest and enthusiasm.

Our "Band of Hope" is growing weekly, and has a membership of 98. We would hail with joy the coming of Miss Willard and Miss Gordon, or any earnest temperance workers. We greatly need a "temperance revival" in Southern California.

Yours in F. H. and C.,
HARVEY STEWART.

NEARLY 8,000 youths were arrested in Chicago, last year, and nine-tenths of them were arrested in saloons: So the Monitor Journal says. Verily the saloon is a murderer of the boys.

HOME PROTECTION.—Another Home Protection Association was organized on Monday 24th in Stockton. A large meeting was held in the First Baptist Church and Col. George Babcock according to the reports in the Independent delivered a very able and eloquent address. Col. B. never fails to effect an organization when he undertakes it.

GOLDEN RULE LODGE at San Diego had their open lodge at the first meeting in the I. O. O. F. new hall. S. Whitmore L. D. and Mrs. W. W. Stewart G. M. installed the offiers. After a splendid program the meeting concluded at 10:30 P. M. with "Hold the Fort" rendered in a very spirited manner.

THE Leag of Fiendom is the same everywhere, or rather its modes of action are equally infamous altho the Examiner calls it a legal organization. Its principal business after doing its days work of poisoning the bodies and morals of its own slaves is to invent assaults upon the characters of the respectable men who object to the deliberate murder of their fellow-men. In Los Angeles a chief of the outlaws of the city assails Will D. Gould one of the purest and best citizens of California as a lier. He pays a vile paper for publishing his jargon and the willing instrument of the infamy declines to publish an answer to the charge unless paid 15 cents a line for it. But Bro. Gould is honored more by the malice of both parties than he would be by their approval. Their praise would ruin a saint.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE
FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

SPOOL COTTON.
Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

LODGES, ETC.

Ed. Rescue:—I wish to say a few words in vindication of Hanford Lodge, I. O. G. T., and the effort its members are making to raise funds for the purpose of building a Good Templars Hall and reading room in Hanford. A little over a year ago our membership was double what it is today, and altho we were paying ten dollars a month rent, we considered ourselves in a prosperous condition, and looked forward to having a hall of our own in the near future.

About this time the "Sunday Law" question, which had been agitating the community for some time, was brought into the lodge. We soon discovered there was an opposing element in our midst, and when we came to take sides for or against the enforcement of the law, a large minority of our membership withdrew from the lodge. Among the number was our secretary who clandestinely showed the minutes of our lodge to an attorney, and he thinking to intimidate us threatened to make out a case of conspiracy against us.

This had the effect of causing more of our members to withdraw, and by this time we had only a few earnest, working members left. But they stood up boldly in defense of the law, and with friends outside of the Order were laying plans which would have proved judicious and wise if they had been permitted to carry them out. But, our then District Deputy, who happened to be here, took matters into his own hands and without our consent precipitated us into a "Sunday Law" suit. He being a nonresident incensed many against him and a certain class became so outspoken as to even threaten his life.

Unfortunately the first case tried was that of a respectable merchant who had formerly been associated with our Order. Altho this was not chargeable to us, it was used by our enemies to excite popular prejudice against us, and everything was done to hinder and perplex and make it as expensive as possible. Every mistake—every failure was attributed to the lodge. Three of our most respected citizens, active members of our Order, were hung in effigy by the rabble, and it seemed for a time that not only our lodge must go down but that anarchy must rule!

All this time whisky flowed freely and the saloons thrived amazingly, while our lodge was struggling on amid poverty and persecution. But it has not been without its reward tho it has not come in the shape of gold coin. The moral standing of Hanford to-day is far in advance of what it was a year ago and we believe the struggle we maintained has had much to do with it. For the past year we have had the free use of the C. P. and the M. E. Churches of Hanford. Our numbers are being steadily increased and our finances are on a substantial basis, but every lodge knows how necessary a hall is to the advancement and the efficiency of the Order. There is none in our town that we can rent, so we have decided to make an enthusiastic effort to have one of our own, believing it will be the means of accomplishing more good in our community than anything else we can do. Our Sister lodges are responding nobly to our call for donations toward our building fund, we having received $24.50 from nineteen lodges. May the blessing of heaven rest upon the donors. Mrs. L. E. Cheadle.

Our Lodges would all do a worthy and generous act to help our Hanford friends in their effort to retrieve their misfortune. It costs but a very small trifle each and the aggregate trifles make a large amount and do a vast amount of good. First the Hanford lodge, then every good citizen of Hanford is benefited by the full amount of the whole sum; and then every one of us who has contributed his dollar or whose lodge has done so can have the satisfaction of saying to himself "I built that fine, new hall at Hanford and own the whole of it."

Westminster, July 27, 1882.

Ed. Rescue—In great kindness you have been sending the Rescue to my address for the last two years for which I return my cordial thanks. To say that I appreciate the Rescue is tame language. It is a noble journal and advocates a cause of paramount importance. It battles with a master evil—one that strikes at the whole man. What more terrible calamity can possibly befall the human race than the liquor traffic. It has obtained such universality and so been familiarized to the consciences of men that they not only endure it but pity and embrace it. Could all the saloons, rum-shops, gin-shops, beer and wine-shops in America, to say nothing of other parts of the world, be confined to one separate territory with all their patrons knowing the evils which universally attend the liquor traffic, what an appalling scene this would present to every virtuous mind. Men stand aghast at the scenes presented at the close of some terrible pitched battle, but what is such a scene of carnage when brought in contrast with the more terrible carnage of the liquor traffic unrestrained. It would furnish a picture of human woe, triumphant—a bedlam—a pandemonium.

I have lived over 72 years and have tried to keep my eyes open to observation and have seen something of the liquor traffic in more than half a dozen States, and yet I have failed to discover one redeeming trait. It is an unmitigated calamity. It ought to be scouted from every community as an infamous criminal. I have never made my peace with the beverage of hell and never expect to. The Rescue keeps me well posted and awake to the wide-spread evils of the liquor business. I have always been a Republican but now I am Prohibitionist first and last, independent of the old party lines. Yours truly, B. Leffler.

The following comes from Modoc Co. Cal:

Tho late coming I sincerely return thanks to you and the Grand Lodge of the State, for the Rescue. While laboring for 3 years in this far off country as a minister of the gospel, many times while cast down and ready to say "Lord who has believed our report or to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" the Rescue has come with words of cheer and comfort which buoyed me up and I would then thank God and take courage. I am very glad that the Lord put it into your heart to beard the lion in his den. We have long been under the whisky rule in Modoc county but there is now a strong determination on the part of many voters of this county, irrespective of party to put down the whisky ring. *

Editor Rescue:—Dear Sir. At a meeting of the Montecito National Home Protection Club, held on the 5th inst., the following pledge to be endorsed by the delegates to the various county nominating conventions, was adopted:

I hereby pledge myself to support the principle of prohibition at the nominating county convention to be held at Santa Barbara, and to use my best efforts to secure the nomination of pronounced Prohibition candidates for the various offices. J. A. Simpson, Sec.

Reforms must begin with the people, if we cannot get what we want from the present parties, let us have a new one. Yours for Prohibition, J. A. S.

Star of the Hill Lodge No. 127, at Forest Hill has had a flourishing installation, with a good time on the occasion, a good set of officers and an increasing membership. No wonder, if everything there is as pretty and pleasant as the little note of Minnie Brown the W. S., which brings the above report.

DR G. S. ALLEN.

The many friends of Dr. Allen will be glad to hear that he has not been destroyed by the Leag of Fiendom, but is still giving the liquor traffic hot shot as in the days of the "Blue Ribbon" movement. He has been honorably acquitted of the trumped up charges against him. We publish the following statements from Dr. Allen and his estimable wife—who are supposed to know something of their domestic affairs—but we do not expect the Leag of Fiendom to believe anything they say:

Ed. Rescue:—Please contradict the charges circulated in the newspapers against me of battery and wife beating The whole charge is false, and the matter has been a cruel, senseless persecution from the begining to the end. My only offense is, that I am now and have been ever since I canvassed this State in the "Blue Ribbon" movement, an earnest, aggressive, temperance worker. I am now happily married and very pleasantly settled in business at Los Angeles. My wife and I are enjoying the most perfect domestic bliss, and we desire and ask the privilege of enjoying our home and love in peace. Please also publish my wife's affidavit which I send herewith. Dr. G. S. Allen.

Los Angeles, August 5, 1882.

In the Justice's Court, of Los Angeles township, county of Los Angeles, state of California.

The People of the State of California, Plaintiff, Against G. S. Allen, Defendant. } Affidavit of Mrs. N. S. Allen.

State of California, } ss.
County of Los Angeles. }

Mrs. N. S. Allen first duly sworn deposes and says: That she is the wife of the defendant in the above entitled cause, that the complaint in said cause against her husband is maliciously false and wholly untrue; that the complaint was made without her knowledge or consent and is the second of a likewise maliciously false and wholly untrue complaint made by the same person against her husband, that at all times since her marriage with the defendant, they and each of them have sacredly kept their marital vows; that she has earnestly and constantly protested against this prosecution and persecution of her husband, and is unable to understand why it is that the District Attorney persists in the matter, after having dismissed the first complaint, by her request and upon her assurance that the same was unfounded and maliciously false; that she has been subpœnaed as a witness for the prosecution in this case, notwithstanding her assertions that the complaint is false; and that she now appeals to the Court to dismiss the complaint against her husband and protect the privacy of her home from a horde of scandal seekers whose domestic relations, if generally known, would be a stench in the nostrils of public decency. Nettie S. Allen.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this first day of August, 1882. James A. Fisher.
Justice of the Peace.

TO THE PEOPLE OF RIVERSIDE.

Neighbors and Friends:—Pause from your orange and grape culture, and consider a question of great importance, affecting the welfare of every individual in the community, financially and morally, as well as the welfare of our State and of mankind generally. It is this: Shall we continue, as a people, to spend our earnings on, and affect our health and happiness by, the use of spirituous or malt liquors, wine or cider?

We, the undersigned, have come to the conclusion that we will not do so; and there are many others in Riverside, who, though not yet members of our organization have come to the same conclusion.

We believe, on the testimony of scientific men, and of teachers of morals and religion, confirmed by our own experience, that the articles spoken of are injurious to the health, and retarding to the moral and spiritual advancement of mankind; and we deem it a duty, not only to abstain from such drinks ourselves, but to urge on others the desirableness of the same course.

To effect these objects we have been for some time banded together in the only organization for that special purpose yet established in the town, and our success is not discouraging; but we need more help, sympathy and co operation, not only from all those who are abstainers from these injurious liquors, but from those also who are desirous of becoming abstainers, though yet only weak in power to help on the work.

We ask you, therefore, will you join our ranks and help us to work? There is much to be done in Riverside on behalf of temperance. We need a commodious temperance hall, which should include a large library and reading room, in which all, and especially the young men of the town, and even the young ladies, could spend their evenings; and this should be made so attractive, intellectually, æsthetically and otherwise, that it would supersede the liquor saloons, even with those who now find them enticing. The same building should have a large lecture room, in which concerts or courses of lectures of a popular, elevating kind could be given; and it should include accommodation for the Good Templar Lodge and the Band of Hope, and might include a department for harmless refreshments. Riverside has built a pavilion—can she not build a temperance hall?

Our Band of Hope needs development. It needs better meeting accommodations, and more general effectiveness. The grounding of our children in the principles of abstinence from the tempting, mocking and evil drinks which so many yet use is an important work and needs more attention.

The offering of prizes to our common school children for best essays on the twin evils—alcohol and tobacco—is an object worthy of consideration; and what else? Come and help us think it up.

We need your help. Give it promptly and willingly, and our Lodge and its work will be a continued success. Refuse or neglect to help us, and you may see drinking and its evil results growing in our midst, and producing its evil fruits—drunkenness, swearing, fighting, etc., Sundays and week days.

Need we say more. Come one, come all, and help on the needful and elevating work. Give in your names at once to our officers and members, and you will receive a cordial welcome. The Good Templars of Riverside.

THE LIQUOR TRADE.

DESPONDENT VIEWS OF AN OLD DISTILLER,

One Mr. Girsh Martin, an old and experienced distiller, writes in a Peoria paper on the present and possible future of the distillery business in the United States. He says that there are now on hand in this country 150,000,000 gallons of whisky, of which 90,000,000 are in bond in the government warehouses. The foreign demand has fallen from 200,000 barrels in 1880-'81 to almost nothing. The distillers, however, have to keep their machinery in order, and the production goes on, anticipating an increased demand. This Mr. Martin, however, claims that the 50,000,000 American people of the present day drink less whisky than 25,000,000 people did thirty years ago. This reduction of the average and the total consumption of spirits, he insists is the result of the introduction of lager beer as a general beverage of the Americans, and he pronounces lager beer "the worst enemy whisky has to face in the United States to-day." The same writer discusses the questions arising under the prohibition agitation, and the effect which any angry controversy on that subject between those in the trade and the prohibition people will have upon the social as well as the political character of the country. Referring to the eventual fate of slavery, Mr Martin warns the manufacturers of intoxicating beverages as follows:

There are less than 100 great distilleries in the whole United Staies. The retail dealers, "the saloon men" are generally men without means and are not of habits to acquire much wealth. With rare exceptions, like Peoria, the wholesale dealers are not very much better. The social position of the liquor trade holds no sort of comparison to the social status of American slavery. The moral and religious sentiment of American society is against it. The women are against it. The moral sentiment stands like a stone wall to confront it. Of course, this is a free country, and any man, any editor, any class or any interest has an undoubted right to beat its brains out against this stone wall. It is their privilege as well as their right. But personally you may count me out of any such idiotic "nonsense." Let the liquor men go along quietly; let them take out their license and obey strictly the law; let them provoke as little attention as possible to their business; let them ward off opposition by seeking to conciliate rather than antagonize the moral sentiment of the whole country and their business will go on with as little disturbance and annoyance as it is possible to do. But let a financial collapse of the distilling interest occur now or in the near future, and it will scare every capitalist and business man from ever re-engaging in the distilling business. Then, with the temperance element rampant, and no capital to fight it with, prohibition could be enforced and in ten years there would not be left a distillery, a brewery, or a saloon in the whole United States.—Post.

The Home Standard is a new weekly published by Carlos White 320 Sansome St. The two first numbers promise it shall be an interesting and useful paper. It discusses the questions of the day from the standpoint of the Christian, moral and temperance citizen, gives news of the churches and has a sermon of Mr. Spurgeon every week. There are frequent additions to the press roll of this city and it is pleasant to see a new aspirant for popular favor present itself with a clean face, clean conversation and most satisfactory certificates of good sound moral character and honest godly principles.

The Cala. Apiarist (Oakland and Los Angeles) alluding to complaints made by orchardmen of the bees in their vicinity, says that if the bee made a distillery of his hive and in place of manufacturing fruit into a healthful food, sent forth a stream of damnation that would rob men of their brains, impoverish and degrade their family, destroy their souls and desolate the land—then the blessed bee would be precious in the eye of many fruit men, and would be a fit subject of protective legislation.

Some of the California papers, the Bee and the Spirit of the Times, and perhaps others, in their over anxiety to assail and malign the Good Templars have made the serious mistake of supposing the statements of the Vallejo Chronicle to be worthy of credence.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G.Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. NEW SONG. Old King Alcohol, by Mr. E. C. Carr is a sprightly temperance song, published by Kohler & Chase, San Francisco; it ought to become a favorite. Send 40 cents to publisher and get it.

REV. MR. DILLE will have a rousing good audience to hear him at Silver Star House on Sunday evening. He is an eloquent speaker and will treat of the stirring questions which are of such moment to the people at this time. Come early to get seats.

THE EDITOR of the Good Templars paper which is published in Sweden sends for the cut of the picture of the R. W.G. T. which appeared in the RESCUE of March 2 and intends to reproduce it with a translation of the biographical sketch in the Swedish language.

PYTHIAN DIVISION No. 2 K. of P. is to have its annual picnic on Wednesday Aug. 30th, at Shell Mound Park, Berkeley. The Band and Division leave on the 9:30 boat from Oakland ferry wharf and a grand time is expected. Thanks for tickets received.

A MILLION dollars in U. S. gold coin weighs 3,685.71 pounds avoirdupois, or 1⅞ tons nearly of 2,000 lbs. In Standard silver coin of 412.5 grains it weighs 58,928.57 pounds, or 29½ tons, and if any of you boys saves all his nickels and can get 100 tons of them, he can sell out for a million dollars and quit business.

PROHIBITION of the sale of infernal damnation is making rapid progress on the other side of the mountains and why not here? Rouse up temperance men and women; buckle on the armor of prohibition and rout the rumsellers, human destroyers who dare to flaunt their colors, death's head and cross bones, in our faces.—Greenbacker.

MR. FRANK MCDONALD will give at Children's Hall Silver Star House, on Saturday morning at 10 A. M. Aug. 26, a Sunlight Stereopticon Exhibition. A class of pictures will be displayed of intense interest and great variety. Admission 25 cents for adults and 10 cts. for children. Proceeds to be employed in purchasing a library. Come one come all. The best collection ever seen in this State.

HENRY GEORGE. The attempt to condemn the arrest of this or any other suspected person in Ireland is very silly and stupid and those who preach it, do so solely to curry favor with a faction who in this country seek to carry war into Ireland. No Irishman or American going from America to Ireland is superior to the law there or has privileges beyond those of a British subject. If by any chance an Englishman in America of any rank high or low should be mistaken for or suspected to be a forger or a robber or unlawful conspirator, there is a perfect right to arrest him and inquire into it. And the same right of self-protection exists in Europe and will exist every where while civil government lasts.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR at the Pavilion is immense in its attractions. Be sure to go early and often and see all there is to be seen.

CANONIZED.—The Rev. Dr. Crosby of N. Y., Rev. W. A. Scott of San Francisco and Dio Lewis of Boston have been adopted as the Gods of the Examiner. It holds them up as having ably proved the folly of the ancient Sabbatarian and prohibitory laws given on Mt. Sinai. There are some other equally meritorious parties whose names should be added to the new calendar of whisky deities.

CORRECTION.—In the list of workers for the RESCUE given last week the names of many warm friends and helpers were omitted whose opportunities are limited. Mrs. Mayhew, Miss M. A. Guthrie, Miss Walbridge. Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Carpenter of Sheridan, Mrs. E. Davidson of Woodland, Dr. Hawver, Bro. Frost of Dutch Flat, Dr. Hall of Riverside and others deserved the warmest thanks for their good offices.

IT is hoped the respectable newspapers which were misled by the scandals reported by the Vallejo Chronicle regarding the Home for Orphans, will apprize their readers of their falsehood. From those like the Sac. Bee who applied opprobrious and offensive epithets to a most respectable Board of kindly and actively benevolent ladies—without cause or provocation—no apology is desired.

THE W. V. Ts. of the Order are reminded that but a very small number of them have responded to the circular sent them by the Executive Committee last quarter. Also that it is of the very utmost importance that we should extend the circulation of the RESCUE; a very slight exertion on the part of all would send in 1000 subscribers next week. It is an easier matter still to aum up our number to 5000 by session of Grand Lodge.

THE MAN who sells shoes, shirts, clothes, who have baths and barbershops, boarding houses, restaurants etc., are learning that when a working man gets his wages on Saturday evening or comes into the city with a months wages, if he goes into a beer-dive or a bar, he dont ever come to spend a quarter with them for any of their commodities or a wash or a bath. The saloon pumps him dry.

No more Leag of Freedom Judges of the Supreme Court should be elected in this State. The election of one of the Supreme Judges a few years ago, was a damage to the state of hundreds of millions of money and thousands of lives, besides an irreproachable setback to the progress of the State, in the defeat of the local option law. The continuance of the liquor traffic these 8 years, unresisted, has been a greater calamity than the failure of three-fourths of the wheat crop every year would have been.

SOME WICKED fellow has started the report which lacks entire confirmation, that Mayor Blake and the City Supervisors have invited the Leag of Freedom to place on exhibition in the Industrial Fair at the Pavilion, at the expense of the city, the Gibson family and the painters family on First street, reported last week, and a week's collection of the small percentage of the city drunks, male and female, that are daily prescribed for in the police and criminal courts of San Francisco—the Secretary of the Leag to be in attendance at $5 a day, with a wand to point out and name the different specimens of the leag's handiwork and explain the various modes in which the industry of the leag had been employed to manufacture from the same innocent material the various types of wife beaters, wife killers, hoodlum stabbers, pickpockets, burglars, street walkers, beergarden danseuses, window tappers, till tappers, lunatics, bummers, etc. It would be a most interesting exhibition, and the most appropriate we could have; for the Leag industry is the most active and by far the most extensive business of the city. The Secretary could explain the whole process nicely too. It is to be hoped the report is true and the public may not be disappointed.

THE PIRATICAL PORTER.

Oh, it was a jolly porter on the sleeping car that sailed,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed he;
And always in the wake of the traveller he trailed,
As he cruised along the berths so easily.

"Look aloft, look aloft!" oh, the jolly porter cried,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
And the weary traveler looked, and the upper seven he spied,
As we cruised along the berths so wearily.

"I see nothing of the pillow, I see nothing of the sheet," Blow high, blow low, and so wailed he;
"But I see a white oak blanket and a lobster at my feet,"
As he cruised around his berth distractedly.

"Oh! arise, now arise," loud the gallant porter cried,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we:
"It is four o'clock A. M., and you've ninety miles to ride,
But I've got to make them berths up just now," says he.

"Ahoy, there! ahoy, there!" the traveler grumbled he,
"Why should I get up at four when I went to bed at three?"
But the porter bounced him out most despoticallee.

"Now, all hands ahoy!" the grim conductor said,
Blow high, blow low, and "show up" screamed he;
But when they sought their tickets they had lost them in the bed,
As they cruised aboard the gorgeous P. P. C.

"Oh, these are not my boots," then the weary traveler wailed,
Blow high, blow low, and so swore he.
"Yours were taken by the pirate down in the lower three that sailed,"
And the gallant porter laughed most unfeelinglee.

Now "for quarter! for quarter!" the porter loudly cried,
Blow high, blow low, and so brushed he;
But the quarter that they gave had a hole punched in its side,
As they cruised aboard the gorgeous P. P. C.

Now, all ye jolly porters, a warning take from me,
Blow high, blow low, and so sailed we;
Or they'll nail "no quarter" to the mast when e'er they go to see
Who is cruising in the tinselled P. P. C.

HOME PROTECTION.

AN ABLE AND ELOQUENT SPEECH BY COLONEL GEORGE BABCOCK AT STOCKTON.

Colonel Babcock commenced his address by saying that the differences between those who regard the license system one of absolute wrong, and those who defend the sale of intoxicating liquors on any ground have become so radical and so uncompromising that nothing short of a settlement at the ballot-box will satisfy either. In fact, these differences are already in politics and no middle ground is any longer tenable. These differences or issues are as broad as the curse of intemperance, and as far-reaching as the rights and interests of human nature. My object in addressing you this evening is to show you, as clearly as may be, that to honest, loyal, patriotic men there is really but one side to this controversy, and that all else is sophistry, delusion and fraud.

The Christian, and the temperance people have been admonished over and over again by the political press and by politicians, to keep their religion and temperance out of politics. The Christian people might consent to keep their religion out of politics if the Leag of Freedom had not commenced a crusade against the Church by demanding that the Christian Sabbath, either as a day of rest or worship, should no longer have legal recognition. Every one knows that the "plank," the fifth resolution in the Democratic platform, was put there at the demand of the Leag of Freedom, and that however interpreted now, it was intended then, and means now, the repeal of the Sunday law and the substitution of nothing in its place. When any political party, at the dictation of those engaged in the liquor traffic, or for the purpose of securing votes, proposes to abrogate the Sunday law, they may expect that the church people, having a just appreciation of their duties to God and their country, will not remain silent or inactive at the bare suggestion of those "who grow rich by augmenting the miseries of others," that it is wrong and fanatical to deny the "constitutional right" of the saloon-keepers to sell whisky on Sunday in violation of law. As to the temperance people, I think I may safely say that they are glad this controversy has, at last, become political, and that they will never, never consent to ground arms or rest till every saloon thruout the broad domain of this fair State is closed, to stand closed forever by force and virtue of a constitutional prohibition.

No sincere, honest man, who really loves his country, can long hesitate to declare himself. The position assumed by the Leag of Freedom and the other liquor dealers' associations thruout the country has left no alternative to the people but abject submission to the domination of a whisky oligarchy, inimical to the best interests of the country, or an open and manly fight for the vindication of law, and for the suppression of the murderous traffic in strong drink. There is no occasion in this discussion to appeal to passion or prejudice. I could not, if I would, make a more damning criticism upon this Leag of Freedom than it has ostentatiously made upon itself. It seems to be a matter of pride to them, as it really is an insult to the patriotism of every loyal American. Look for a moment at the record, after the decision of the highest authority in the State, upon the Sunday law, The temperance people waited week after week, month after month, the slow deliberations of the Supreme Court of the State—waited with a prodigality of patience that put them under the imputation of cowardice and imbecility—hoping, if not believing, that when that decision came then those engaged in the whisky traffic would render a ready and loyal obedience. But mark the decision and Language of the Leag of Freedom. As soon as the decision was promulgated, a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Leag was held at their rooms in San Francisco, and the result of it was given to the public by the Secretary as follows: "The Leag expects and desires its members to keep open as usual. If they (the members) wish to respect the Sunday law, they have no business in the Leag and should not have joined it. If any member should close his place of business in deference to the law, he should be expelled."

On the 17th day of last April, "The Licensed Liquor Dealer's Association," (another name for the Leag of Freedom) met in the city of Sacramento. The report of its proceedings appeared in the Record-Union, and showed a membership of 3121 in good standing—and $13,931 on hand. The objects of the meeting were set forth as follows:

"First—To maintain and increase our organization.

"Second—To see to it that no man should enter the halls of legislation of California next term who does not go there pledged to repeal the Sunday laws.

"Third—That we will ignore party in electing members of Legislature.

"Fourth—That the Sunday law is wrong, is not American law, is contrary to the rights of American citizenship and is unconstitutional."

But these associations in California and their declarations are of but little relative importance to the overshadowing influences and devilish purposes of the Liquor Dealer's Protective Association of the United States. The Sunday law here is a mere collateral issue to the one tendered by this association to fifty millions of people. The Retailer, the leading organ of the liquor traffic of the United States, speaking of and for this association, as well as for the branch organizations, says: "They have entered the political field to protect, maintain and further their own special interests by political action. They have left the defensive position heretofore occupied and become an aggressive force, as the best means of self-protection." This declaration was made long before the associations in this State assumed the "aggressive" and treasonable position they now hold. These leags and associations in the States of Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, California and other States, have separately and yet unanimously declared in favor of the "personal liberty" to sell intoxicating liquors and that they will oppose the nomination and election of any man to office not in favor of their "rights" as interpreted by themselves. It is a matter of little consideration to them that the Supreme Courts of all of these States have declared that the prohibition of the sale of intoxicating liquors is constitutional, as long as their constitutional authority, "The Licensed Liquor Dealer's Protective Association of the United States," has declared that such prohibition is "anti-American and unconstitutional." The evidence is clear and positive that all these associations are acting under common instructions with a definite purpose of defying and defeating the execution of all laws which do not accord with their views of "personal liberty."

In reply to the platform of these political whisky associations, the Cincinnati Gazette, a Republican paper says: "Since the issue is made let it come to the test. Let it be distinctly decided whether the people are for free rum and no Sunday or not. The liquor dealers have decided to appeal to the ballot-box, and they open the campaign by defying the law. Upon this basis let the battle of ballots be fought. This will bring out the friends of law and order if anything will. It will certainly bring out the friends of free rum and no Sunday." And are not such observations pertinent here? Enough has been said, I trust, to convince you that a third political party, in the interest of the whisky business, supported by the worst elements of society, and inspired by the devil of disloyalty, mischief and ruin has been organized to defy law, to obstruct the courts, bribe jurors, sheriffs and constables, intimidate business men, control political parties and to obtain the repeal of all laws resisting the traffic in strong drinks.

This "aggressive" political whisky party, with its record, principles and objects fully known to every intelligent man in the State, has boldly entered the field, and already scored its first victory by forcing the grand old "Democratic party," which "inherited the doctrine of Jefferson and Jackson" to bow its lofty head at San Jose to receive and wear the golden collar prepared for it by the Leag of Freedom at San Francisco. No matter, now, how private citizens may interpret that "plank" in the platform. It was put there and accepted as satisfactory to the Leag of Freedom. And now, (though the words may mean nothing) upon the time-worn banner of California Democracy are displayed the soul-inspiring words "FREE RUM AND NO SUNDAY." Train under this banner now who will, the time is coming and not far away, when those infamous words, and the banner which bears them will become the political winding sheet of those who have thus betrayed the Democratic party into the hands of the worst enemies of God and man!

And the Republican party, the party claiming to be "the party of ideas and progress," this party with "all its grand record of noble deeds," what will it do? This is the momentous question of the hour. If it too shall accept the generous friendship of these "criminal and disloyal conspirators," and inscribe upon its banner "FREE BEER AND NO SUNDAY," and attempt to secure a victory by prostituting its honor and patriotism, then will the loyal, Christian and temperance people of this proud State, irrespective of the past and irrespective of party, assemble in convention and nominate a ticket upon a platform which shall represent the enlightened, moral and Christian spirit of the age and country, and sweep the State with such a majority that treason to it and to the rights and interests of human nature will never again dare to masquerade under the absurd and lying name of "Leag of Freedom."

I have said that the Sunday law is only collateral to the main issue forced upon the people, and the leaders of the Republican party should clearly understand that a "plank" pledging the party to a "judicious" Sunday law, will come far short of the emergencies of the hour, and far short, too, of expressing the full sentiments of the people. Now that the issue has been made, now that the gage of battle has been defiantly cast at our feet, now that this whisky party has boldly entered the field of politics for the purpose stated, the temperance people demand that the whole matter shall be submitted to a vote of the people. No platform that fails to answer this demand can arouse their enthusiasm or engage their hearty support. The Home Protective Association of California, was organized to antagonize the Leag of Freedom, as well as any other political party, which becomes the sycophant or ally of the liquor traffic. No platform of doubtful meaning no rotten "planks" will be accepted: We demand prohibition whenever and wherever we can get it. Let the Republican convention give us a clear, emphatic platform, and the State will vote prohibition now.

The concluding portions of this emphatic and aggressive speech we are unable to give for lack of space. The arguments presented were clinched by a mass of statistical information, presented in such a way as to be entertaining instead of tedious, as is usually the case. Near the close of his address the Colonel submitted the following pertinent propositions:

Sunday is a civil institution and has been such from the foundation of the Government, and no man who is at heart an American, will consent to the repeal of the statute which protects it.

Neither of the political parties which submits to the dictation of this conspiracy against the most sacred rights and interests of human nature ought to receive the support of any honest and patriotic citizen.

Candidates who avoid these issues and refuse to declare themselves ought to be defeated.

Independent political action becomes a duty when existing political parties submit to be dominated by a whisky oligarchy, inimical to American law, American institutions and American traditions.

After the conclusion of Colonel Babcock's address, which was listened to with the greatest interest, and frequently interrupted by applause, names were solicited for a Home Protection Association, and a large number of the best and most influential citizens responded. A temporary Chairman and Secretary were elected, and the work of the Home Protectionists will be commenced and continued to the end of the chapter, we suppose.—Independent.

A SLANDER.

We are sorry to learn that the managers of the Good Templars Orphans' Home refused a free pass which was tendered to their wards to attend Robinson's circus "on the ground that the children were not allowed to attend any amusement of any kind." This dispels in a day the good opinion of the Home which we have always had. A Board of Managers who will not permit the little ones "to attend amusements of any kind" is too cold and gloomy to properly care for children. The sunshine and joy of life is never more needed, nor less harmful than in childhood, and we have no sympathy with the anti circus action of the Board above alluded to, and are positively and earnestly hostile to the spirit of the reason given for refusal.—Uncle Sam's Weekly.

AND when the report turns out to be an utterly unfounded, purposely malicious and infamous lie invented purely to injure the reputation of a benevolent, and always excellently managed institution please tell your readers what you think of it now and of its author. It looks very much as if the League of Free Crime has been using its sack round Vallejo.

TEMPERANCE CAMP-MEETING.

Every body should go to the Concow assembly who can leave home and who wants to inhale good fresh mountain air, hear good honest patriotic temperance speeches and have a week's good time with the best company that can be found in that region. Mrs. Stevens and Col. Goulding will be there; W. S. Read, C. Covillaud and Bro. Graves are sure to have perfect arrangements.

W. W. CHEADLE of Hanford is a candidate for Assemblyman, on the greenback policy. A greenbacker who is an honest advocate of temperance and who in his card "defiantly scorns the Anti-Sunday and whisky vote," is a thousand times better and safer and more honest candidate to vote for than a Republican or Democrat that is at all behind him on these two points.

ESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
RRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell. 53 Bible House, N. Y.
EASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, th its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the larg- Society ever composed exclusively of women, and nducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the urns are very incomplete), there were at the close of t year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal scendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, d is a union of Christian women of all churches for purpose of educating the young; forming a better blic sentiment; reforming the drinking classes; trans- ming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are slaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from streets by law.

MRS. HAYES' PICTURE.

There was a question as to where we should hang One thought it should go into the study, another parlor and so on, every room in the house was avassed for its appropriateness. Mother finally ided it should go into the dining room to preside r the side-board.

The boys said there would be no drinking then, ely.

Father thought it a capital idea to have such a ardian.

Little Lucy said she wished she could grow up live in the White House and set such a good ex- ple to every body.

Mary said what lots of women had lived in the ite House and never once thought of what a great g they could do. So many women think there is chance to make a grand record but for her part thought there were chances enough every day for er man or woman or child to accomplish great gs.

nd so the picture looks down upon us at each al and I am sure we shall never need a temper- e rebuke as long as it is there. That pleasant, ng face shall be our monitor hereafter.

Clarence says it would shame any one to indulge ntoxicating liquor after knowing the brave stand took when all the nation was watching her ex- ple. How noble that influence! it has made her ular with thousands; and though she has gone back er quiet home, her name will go down through ages in American history the peer of any Presi- t in her moral example to the nation; and what ord could stand higher than the example and in- nce of any great principle, temperance, morality, esty, kindness? QUARTERLY REPORT.

BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS.

The Board met at the Home on Tuesday Aug. 1st ed to order in usual form, at 11 A. M. by the Pres- t Mrs. Thompson.

resent, Mesdames Thompson, Alsip, Carpenter, yhew, Partridge, Robbins and Stevens G. W. V. -Absent Miss Rix of Washington Corners.

n Motion, Sisters Miss Jennie Naismith and s Emma Peck of Fountain Lodge No. 193, were ited to remain with the Board during the transac- n of business.

inutes of the last meeting were read and ap- ved.

eports of officers, Standing and Special Commit- s read and accepted.

umber of children in the Home at the close of quarter ending July 31st, 144.

umber admitted during the quarter thirty-eight, harged sixteen, deceased four, there have been y-one cases of measles, some scarlet fever and ooping cough. Four cases having terminated fa- y. As the above report will show. At present, are improving, mostly well with one exception.

inancial Secretary reports the amount for war- ts drawn during the quarter as follows:

y	$1590.70
e	2026.04
Grand total	$5314.23

Many applications for admission were received. apparently the most needy were admitted. The ainder, numbering twenty-two, had to be de- l admission, for want of room. The Home is , and it is not judicious to receive any more chil- dren until room is made by the dismissal of some, which cannot be effected until they arrive at the age, which is the limit for remaining in the Home.

Children for adoption; good homes have been provided for four of the children during the quarter.

Communications read; Among them was one from Merced Lodge No. 459, containing a postal order for thirteen ($13.50) dollars and fifty cts., a donation to the Orphans Home. Vote of thanks was tendered to the Lodge.

In addition to the above donation we have received others from the following friends. Bro. Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S. and Bro. T. J. Alley of Astoria Oregon, each presented to the Home a handsomely framed engraving of Mrs. President Hayes. Mr. John P. Leonard of Oroville, and Bro. Herbert Folger, P. W. C. T. of Valley Lodge No. 293, each contributed five ($5,00) dollars, Mr. Haws of Vallejo donated to the Home school a map of California and Nevada. Package of clothing from an unknown friend, also one from Mrs. Harrier of Vallejo, two salmon from unknown friend. Mesdames Hilborn, Jeffries, McCarty and Hill of Vallejo have generously donated at different times during the sickness among the children, books, pictures and flowers. Vote of thanks was tendered to the donors.

After the disposition of miscellaneous business the Board met in joint session with the Trustees, and concluded their work. The result of this meeting has been reported by the Secretary of the Board of Trustees, making it unnecessary to again report.

In conclusion the Lady managers would like to find a place in the RESCUE, to refute certain charges made against the Board in an article appearing in the Vallejo Chronicle issued on the 7th headed "Too Utterly Utter" wherein the ladies were accused of making a standing rule, that the children of the Home should not be allowed to visit shows or entertainments of any kind. The author of the various scurrilous items appearing in the same paper, day after day, accuses the ladies of making this arbitrary ruling while the invitation received from Mr. Robinson for the children to attend the circus managerie was pending the acceptance or rejection by the Board, to gratify the whim of some "strait-laced, dyspeptic, cross-grained, member of the Board, and recommends an immediate change in "this" Board. Two motives prompt a recognition of these assaults. First we think the Chronicler of these several items has been misinformed, and we would like to set him right. Again we would like to satisfy parents having children in the Home, that from personal motives of the lady managers, they were not deprived of the amusement so generously offered. When the Board met July 11th the Matron reported fifty-one cases of measles, three of which terminated fatally. Doubts were entertained as to whether we had used precaution enough to protect the children from the ravages of disease. Acting upon the representation of Dr. L. C. Frisbie, attending physician, that measles and scarlet fever were very prevalent in Vallejo, a motion was made and carried that the children be prohibited from visiting town until the sickness abated. We deemed it an act of wisdom ("not hypocrisy") to take precautionary measures to prevent the introduction of any epidemic disease into the Home. After this motion had been carried Mrs. Robbins, resident manager of Vallejo, said she anticipated an invitation would be received for the children to attend the circus when it appeared in Vallejo, "should she decline it?" All thought it more judicious to decline for this time only, and not for all time as represented by our assailant.

Every invitation heretofore received has been gladly and thankfully accepted, with one exception. The children were once invited to join the Military Company of Vallejo in an excursion to San Rafael, which invitation was not accepted for want of proper attendants to look out, and care for the children. Not many years ago this same Board, (now so severely censured) obtained from Mr. Woodward of San Francisco, a free admission to his Gardens for every child in the Home. Arrangements were effected with the Rail Road Co. to pass them down to San Francisco. The ladies solicited funds to spread a fine lunch in the Gardens for the children and entertained them for two days. As "straight-laced" as we are represented, we secured a pass for all at the California Theater, through the kindness of Mr. John McCullough, Manager, The Board on several occasions, have gone to the Home and assisted in preparing the children that they might accept an invitation, received to participate in the exercises celebrating the great national holiday.

Every Thanksgiving the children are provided with a genuine New England dinner. Christmas and New Years are always made a joyful occasion for every one. Our Order generously contributes funds, and if our maligner could see the ladies as they wade through mud and rain to purchase Christmas gifts that the children may be made happy, and feel the loss of their parents less, they would scarcely assail the Board in such ungentlemanly terms. We feel such an assurance in our well-doing we believe this will all come out right in the end. Mrs. Robbins by some oversight failed to notify the Secretary of the Board that the anticipated invitation had been received, or that officer ere this would have acknowledged it by communicating with Mr. Robinson, thanking him for his kindness, and explained to him the reason for declining his invitation. We are sure he would have justified the Board in their action. Mrs. Robbins probably did not know this would end so disastrously or she would have proclaimed the reasons for taking this action upon the housetops instead of waiting to make her monthly report.

Further remarks are deemed unnecessary. We now commit this Board to the mercy of our judges.

Fraternally Submitted,
MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, Secretary B. L. M.

A GOOD GERMAN LADY.

There is a Mrs. Henrietta Skelton in Ohio, who is a grand apostle of temperance. She publishes a German Temperance paper called "Der Bahnbrecher," and lectures to her countrymen on the great theme. She was actively engaged in Iowa among the Germans in the recent campaign, and no dout added many votes to the majority.

Indiana is the next State to vote on Constitutional Amendment and she has gone to work there, lecturing and circulating her German paper. After making speeches in several places she came to Han over Center, where a saloon mob would not allow her to enter the school house, but cursed and hooted and behaved so shamefully that one German saloon keeper determined to sell out and quit such a horrible business.

At St. Johns the saloon keepers had a mob organized to put Mrs. Skelton in a cart with opprobrious pictures and haul her out of town, if she should attempt to speak—but they saw a stranger with her, who they supposed was a U. S. officer and gave up the project. Elsewhere she is meeting with good success.

Mrs. Skelton's name will be added to the list of excellent patriotic women who have done great work for the cause and the country. There is room and work for 100 more good German women like her; for the Germans would be about the most determined of prohibitionists if they had learned all about the matter, as they will before long.

EXPLOITS IN BEER-DRINKING.

No. 49.

From time to time we see remarkable accounts of the enormous quantities of beer that some people manage to drink. Here is a story about the men in a Philadelphia brewery who drank eight hundred barrels of beer in one year, and then it specifies one and another who drink fifty or sixty glasses in a day, and of some who go up to one hundred. Here is another, which takes two Cincinnati papers to tell of, a man who can drink a gallon in about half a minute. One of the reporters thought the matter so important that he went the round of the breweries to see what rivals there might be in such exploits, and he found another man who had drank a keg of eight gallons in two hours on a wager, and another who averages fifty glasses a day, and has done this for so many years, that if he had paid for it at the rate of five cents per glass it would have cost him $25,000.

All this is a wanton violation of nature's laws. Eating and drinking should be in proportion to the demands of nature; they should be moderate and deliberate, and never to the extent of gorging or flooding the organs which have the task of conveying nutriment to the system. The men who do such things perpetrate a gross outrage upon themselves, and with no good to anybody, that I can see, but the brewers. The publication of such stories seems to me to be entirely in the interest of the brewers, to induce people to make strainers of themselves, to make it fashionable to buy large quantities of beer, and so put profits into the pockets of the dealers and the brewers. It is astonishing, too, how many men, who ought to be respectable, lend themselves to these devices of the brewers. Who that has read can ever forget the account of the strange ovation once given to an American beer-drinker who was sent to represent our Government at Berlin. On his way out, a beer-drinking society in New York City detained him for a reception, when they all drank beer and smoked cigars; where the program was drink and smoke, and drink and drink again; where at the call of ein, swei. drie, they all raised their swimming glasses and drained them dry; then displaying their empty glasses they sat down again to smoke, and soon to repeat the glass-draining. The room was full of men, and beer, and smoke, yet this seemed to be the most important part of the proceedings. The new minister made a speech, but it was hardly worth reporting. The president of the society made a speech, the gist of which was that their visitor was not "a politician, he was one of them literary fellows," and nobody seems to have been benefited but the beer-sellers. They were paid large profits as several hundred rounds were drank. They would like to see many such exploits.

If the beer were nutritious, men would not need so much as that. If it were harmless, men would not want so much. Water is more harmless than beer, but we never hear of men trying wagers to see who can drink the most. Why? Because water costs nothing. What then, shall we thus continue to drain our purses, drown our brains, and drench our stomachs for the benefit of the brewers?

T. 1.

CREDENTIALS AND RETURNS.—The Quarterly Returns report were due from every lodge, immediately upon the close of the term ending July The representatives to the Grand Lodge were elected in each lodge during the second August, yet quite a number of lodges have their credentials in the office of the G. W. S., out having filed their Quarterly Returns. Since credentials are based upon the returns, the should be filed first, and until they are filed the little use of filing credentials. Let everything done "decently and in order." Every lodge has not now filed its Quarterly Returns is quent, and there is no good reason to offer Returns have not been filed by every lodge.

THE SACRAMENTO BEE.—This journal taking from the abusive articles being published Vallejo Chronicle, and assuming all that it be true, denounced the Board of Lady Managers the Good Templars Home for Orphans for without their consent permitting the children Home to attend a recent circus performance. seeing the card that was published by Mrs. Carter, the Secretary of the Board of Managers Bee did the amende honorable in its editorial umns, for which it is to be commended.

A PROFITABLE CENT.—At a meeting of Locke Lodge No. 115, of San Joaquin County, a cent was put up at auction for the benefit Good Templars Home for Orphans; it was sively bid in, and resold as follows: to D. J. for $2.75; G. S. Locke, $2.25; M. Howell, $1; Miller, $1; D. J. Locke, $1.25; and finally to Kuehl for $2; thus realizing $10.25 to the Home Orphans' fund. The cent was forwarded, together with the donation, to Dr. I. S. Halsey, who presented the cent to Sister E. P. Stevens, in whose doubtless it will be "heard from" again.

GLEANINGS.—Some of the officers of the Herville Lodge, Tehama County, who reside six away, ride over the hills that distance, and are ent at their posts upon each meeting night, the L. D. Bro. J. W. Gill, justly calls "fair service," and all of which prepares one for the ance, that: "the lodge is doing a good work exerting a good influence."....The L. D. Charles Hidden, reports Rincon Lodge of Bernardino County as in a healthy condition counts for its slow increase by saying: "We gathered nearly all in, and the few remaining side are being occasionally picked up."... arro Lodge of Mendocino County, though against heavy odds, is gaining slowly but according to the L. D., Bro. E. Peeples... getting along finely, good attendance and every ahead looking prosperous" is what Bro. Graves, G. W. C., writes of North Butte Sutter County. He adds: "We are working camp meeting at Con Cow, with earnestness prospects of good success"....."Two propos at our last meeting and all working in harmony what Bro. Geo. D. Kellogg writes of New Lodge, Placer County.....Graniteville Nevada County, when organized last May, had person among the number who had previously a member of the order, yet it has grown and pered, and the L. D., Bro. Geo. A. Tyler, reports it has brought happiness to several homes which previously been made desolate through drink that it is continually making reprisals upon liquor traffic, to the discomfiture of the "saloons".....From Bro. J. J. West. W. S. of Elk Lodge, Colusa County, comes the information the temperance cause flourishes thereabouts never has before, and that the boom goes so far provoke the inquiry, as to whether candidates office are temperance men before receiving the frage of voters.....

LODGES, ETC.

s HATTIE DODGE is stated to have gone from rd to attend school for a year in San Jose. Mahford people say she is an active worker in ood Templar Lodge, and a most estimable girl ry respect. The Good Templars of San Jose tified of the above, and it is hoped she will n San Jose the most valuable friends and such come as her record deserves.

Bro. F. J. Krauth of Alameda Lodge has, with his friends gotten up a most creditable, high toned, first class and successful entertainment which has netted the lodge about 100 dollars, for which the lodge has passed a special and emphatic vote of thanks to the brother. Now could not brothers and sisters in many of our lodges do likewise? Nothing like trying.

The Stanislaus District Lodge will meet in the Oakland Lodge, No. 326 at 10 o'clock, A. M., Saturday Sept. 2nd. The following program has been arranged for the occasion.

I. "The Sunday Law viewed in its relation to Temperance," by Rev. C. D. Crabb of Oakdale Lodge.

II. "Local Option: its expediency as preparatory to Prohibition," by Bro. Leighton of Burneyville Lodge.

III. The duty of young men in the impending conflict," by Bro. P. R. McCabe of Turlock Lodge.

V. "Womans Mission in the cause of Prohibition," by Mrs. May W. Hanscum of Ceres Lodge.

VI. "The comparative resources of the Friends and Foes of Prohibition," by D. Deputy, M. D. Gage.

Bro. H. Hanson writes that Forestville Lodge has 10 new members and is doing well. He also adds: "We have set in to pray our saloon out of this place; we did do it once and we think we can again; what we want is the prayers of all the good people; it will cost them nothing and will be an honor to us all; we have been at it ever since the camp meeting at Guerneville and he is squirming very much. He has been ordered out twice by the man that owns the house."

It has been conclusively proved that saloons can be prayed out. It has been done many times, but there is one weak spot, they dont stay prayed out. After all is quiet a fellow that never prayed in his life can start up the saloon again if let alone. But it ot not to be so; the step that is lacking to permanent success should be sot for and found. It is suggested that a couple of good, plucky citizens, about such men as Bro. Hicks for instance, who have works as well as faith, should go down to that saloon to make a final effort at prayer, each furnished with a supplementary petition of three feet of hickory. The saloon man would be prayed out that night without using the hickory and he would probably stay prayed out. The Lompoc people are praying men and women; they prayed out their saloon to stay out; but their prayer had an emphatic supplement to it.

FATHER WAUGH ON THE WAR PATH.

ED. RESCUE:—At Freestone Camp-meeting from Thursday to Sabbath noon we had a lovely time, good preaching, and refreshing Christian enjoyment; Methodist, Southern Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, Episcopal and some Roman Catholic Christian brethren and sisters worshiping the blessed Heavenly Father together in love in the beautiful leafy grove; Oh, how sweet and melodious the songs of Eden were!

But Sabbath noon a sad change came—Oh, a terrible state of things. I am sorry to have to report it. A large man with good clothes but rather disordered in appearance and flushed, was seen heading a group of boys, more than a score, about all smoking, several of them just in their teens and so drunk as not to be able to discern what they were about. At the public table among the men, women and children, they were rude and boisterous—one even swearing most profanely. In the evening they were still worse, talked and mocked and smoked in the congregation and drank from their whisky flasks carried in their pockets. The water pipe supplying water to the Camp ground was severed and at the close of the service such was the yelling and disturbance near the main outlet that ladies with their children were terrified and feared to leave; there did not seem to be an officer of the violated law on hand to protect the people.

But the good people are being aroused in this section.

I have been around among them; there is an intense interest now felt against this Leag of Freedom Liquor Movement. A leading Southern Methodist brother said to me, "This Leag of Freedom Terry platform has let us out." If the Republicans now give us a decent platform and decent men on it, there will be a tremendous scratching; but if they give us a Terry leag platform and nominees, we will have a new party and the decent masses will conquer if it takes four years to do it.

On the 28th inst., I will be 74 years old and you can set me down as one to stump the State in favor of PROHIBITION—complete, thoro and effective and we can win, God helping us, and He will help us. Thoro prohibition is all that now can save us, if we can get this—say in four years, a few Liquor sellers may yet be saved from hell. If we do not get thoro prohibition even for their sakes as well as for the salvation of all our boys, they are going pell mell to eternal perdition and it is God's word, "there is no place in Heaven for them," and many of these unfortunate ones as well as many of their miserable victims are suiciding and getting down into the dark regions ahead of the time set for them. God speed the right.

LORENZO WAUGH.

August 21st, 1882.

When the Leag of FREEDOM gains the day, these Camp-meetings without lager beer which are a menace to LIBERTY, will have to stop, especially if the Terry no-God, no-Sunday, Supreme Judges are elected.

The Chronicle and Examiner of Monday each made a short review of Mr. Pixley's Sunday evening address at Silver Star Hall. If repeating and exaggerating and twisting certain expressions of his into the form most offensive to certain classes, and suppressing altogether all the sound, pertinent, practical truths which he uttered with the approval and assent of all good citizens—can be called a fair truthful report and gentlemanly or honest treatment, Mr. Pixley owes thanks to both those journals and is probably in ample funds to cancel the obligation.

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN.

Under this head in the Examiner, a nasty ruffian, sneaking under the name of East Park, Sacramento, assails our Home for Orphans at Vallejo with a pack of malicious falsehoods and not a word of truth. It is surprising that so many newspapers in this State should have so gloated over the publication of a selfevidently malicious and baseless lie, invented for the vilest purposes. The avidity with which the slander was repeated and editorial embelishments and scurrilous homilies so liberally added, is accounted for by the fact that the Home for Orphans is a Good Templars' Institution. Had it been an authentic report of a genuine cruelty in a Roman Catholic or a Masonic or an Odd Fellows Orphanage, not one of these douty praters about kindness to children would have DARED to whimper once. When a case of death by starvation of a whole family of children by the Leag of Fiendom comes to light, not one of these whisky Don Quixotes or Coyotes DARES to make a comment on it. When a slave of the leag of rum beats his wife to death or cuts the throats of all his children, not one of these maligners of the innocent dares for his soul to say it was rum. When a drunken man or woman perishes in delirium tremons, not one of these champions dare tell the truth about it; but when any lie however absurd is floated to the prejudice of the Good Templars or of the cause of temperanee and decency these sweet slanderers of women are out with their scavengers rake to make speedy capital and earn five cent drinks at the bar of the temple where they worship their liquid idols.

The North American Review for September has for its leading article a very forcible presentment, by Dorman B. Eaton, of the evils produced by the practice of levying "Political Assessments." The paper is noteworthy for its striking array of facts, but more so because it will be universally regarded as the ultimatum of a large and influential section of the Republican Party, addressed to the party leaders. "Oaths in Legal Proceedings," by Judge Edward A. Thomas, is a discussion of the question whether the interests of morality and of public justice alike, would not be promoted by the abrogation of all laws requiring testimony to be given under the sanction of an oath. Thompson B. Maury, late of the Signal Office, contributes an article on "Tornadoes and their Causes," which, in addition to its scientific interest, possesses the merit of suggesting many practical measures for averting disaster to life and property from wind-storms. "Architecture in America," by Clarence Cook, is marked by a freedom of utterance that is refreshing. In this respect it deserves to rank with Commander Gorringe's celebrated paper on the United States Navy. Augustus G. Cobb writes of "Earth-Burial and Cremation," and J. F. Manning, in an article entitled "The Geneva Award and the Ship-Owners," sets forth the justice of the claims of consignors of cargoes and owners of vessels to indemnification out of the Geneva Award fund, for losses from the acts of Confederate cruisers. The Review is sold by booksellers and newsdealers generally.

ONE OF THE blackest sins in the calendar properly revised, will be found the manufacture and sale of rotten and useless thread. How many disappointments have occurred in life from a treacherous thread in a garment of male or female;—had to turn back from the picnic, could not accept an invitation to dinner, had to sit cross-legged all the afternoon, had to beg to be excused from all sorts of good times and suffer miles of disappointments—simply because some unprincipled, avaricious fiend swindled his fellow men by making villainous thread—at the instigation doubtless of the evil genius who prompts all these wicked things. One of the many fields in which the RESCUE loves to be useful to its readers and enhance their enjoyment here below, is that of introducing them to the business advertizements of worthy dealers in honest merchandize and they are invited to peruse carefully every week what Messrs. Kittle & Co. have to say about the "Coats" thread.

HYPOCRITES.—The patriotic politicians who make loud howls about Chinese invasion now that it is stopped and about monopolies, keeping entirely quiet about the monopoly of the drunkardmakers, the meanest and vilest and most destructive monopoly that has ever existed—and who dare not say a word in favor of abolishing the beer-hells and thiefdens of this city and state—are no more to be trusted in their anti-monopoly, anti-railroad, anti-Chinese, anti-land-grabbing, loud-mouthed professions, than any other class of self-evident hypocrites. Rum-bot Republicans and rum-bot Democrats are just alike in this matter. Whoever sells himself to rum will be a cheap purchase for the railroad and is the worst enemy to his country and people.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

JUVENILE TEMPERANCE WORK.

By Julia Colman. Tract No. 167.

In the temperance work we would like to have all parties thoroly understand that "we have come to remain." And we do not know that we can give any better evidence of the sincerity of our intentions, than by deliberately setting about the systematic instruction of the young in the first principles of Temperance. While we would embrace every opportunity to reclaim the fallen, we find it far cheaper, far easier, and we believe far more acceptable in the sight of God to prevent men from falling. Certainly intemperance cannot be cleaned out of our land until drunkenness is prevented. While we would gladly take away the temptation from the young as well as from those whose appetites have become uncontrollable, we recognize the fact that the moral strength for resisting temptation, as well as the legal influence necessary to take it away, can best be obtained by careful, religious, temperance education.

The time is past for supposing that the best work to be done for the young is to save them as individuals from becoming drunkards. In every department of temperance work, the cry is for workers! more workers!! better workers!!! At the polls we want men who shall vote for temperance intelligently and effectively. In legislative halls we want men who can frame laws that will hold water, and not whisky. As executive officers, we want men who will carry out such laws honestly, and to good purpose. And it is better in every way to educate these men while boys, than it is after they have been elected to place and power by whisky votes. We also want ministers whose temperance utterances shall have no uncertain sound; men who can understand and explain the difference between fermented and unfermented wines, and who will refuse to place the latter upon the Lord's table, men who shall not only welcome Temperance workers, but be Temperance workers, and manage to enlist their congregations on the Lord's side in this matter. We want doctors who, instead of giving a prestige to alcoholic drinks by recommending them as medicines, shall make it their business to help the Temperance work by doing their best to discredit and discard alcoholic drinks in every shape, and especially by exposing their deceitfulness, and warning the people of their disastrous effects. We want women everywhere for matrons of our homes who shall dispense with the social use of wine; girls who shall demand in their suitors the same high moral standard to which they themselves subscribe; boys who care more for a clear head, a calm eye, a steady hand, a pure life, and a clean record, than they do for wild oats, low-bred sneers, and drinking customs. We want men and women everywhere, intelligent, brave, and earnest, to work wisely in all sorts of ways for Temperance. And how can we have them unless we educate them? When we see how weak and faithless and indifferent are many of the men and women to whom we appeal for help, and from whom we expected better things, our very hearts should be stirred within us to go to work and out of the material that God has put into our hands, make men and women capable of better things!

Whom shall we teach?

Everybody, but especially the very best and most earnest minds you can get. Do not be discouraged if you can not hold the multitude, if the bright and the trifling, the stupid and the lazy fall away. Your thoro teaching may be a sifting process. If so, take good care of the wheat that remains. Remember, your great aim is to educate workers, and if you educate but few, see that you do it thoroly. Rest assured that the kind of education which we propose in these pages will make the best sort of workers—earnest, competent, effective, and likely to stick to it as long as soul and body hold together. Even if they should be mostly girls, still educate them thoroly. Girls and women make good workers.

BOYS AND TOBACCO.

Boys, why do you use tobacco?

Tobacco is a weed no more fit to eat or chew than any other weed that grows in our fields.

Are boys who use tobacco smarter than those who do not? Don't know that they are. Well, do they get rich faster? No, can't say that they do. Well, can you mention any advantages the smoker has over the non-smoker? Here again you are compelled to answer no.

The boy who smokes spends all his pocket money for a dirty, filthy weed that does him no good but certainly a great deal of harm.

One who smokes cigarettes must needs take a great deal of his time in their manufacture or buy them already made which is too expensive for most boys. No matter what he is doing, if he wants to smoke he must stop and make a cigarette.

And besides, how many accidents happen in our harvest fields and dry prairies by fires which are started by pipes, cigars and cigarettes.

Now, reader if you are a smoker, just sum up one year of your smoking life, and then try it Band of Hope style a year and compare the footings and then if you are not satisfied that you ought not to smoke, start again by all means.

If tobacco does any good at all, it must be in enabling one to distinguish readily the fool from the wise man. L. P. G.

TEACH THE CHILDREN.

UNION LEAFLET, NO. 49.

There is, probably, no hallucination so obstinate as that which attributes to alcoholic drink a certain virtue which it never possessed. After all the influences of the pulpit and the press, after all the warning examples of drunkenness and consequent destruction, after all the testimony of science and experience, there lingers in the average mind an impression that there is something good in alcohol, even for the healthy man. Boys and young men do not shun the wine-cup as a poisoner of blood and thot, and the most dangerous drug that they can possibly handle; but they have an idea that the temperance man is a fogy, or foe to a free, social life, whose practices are ascetic, and whose warnings are to be laughed at and disregarded. Now in alcohol, in its various forms, we have a foe to the human race so subtle and so powerful that it destroys human beings by the million, vitiates all the processes of those who indulge in it, degrades morals, induces pauperism and crime in the superlative degree when compared with other causes, and corrupts the homes of millions.

It is a cruel thing to send a boy out into the world untaut that alcohol in any form is fire, and will certainly burn him if he puts it into his stomach. It is a cruel thing to educate a boy in such a way that he has no adequate idea of the dangers that beset his path. It is a mean thing to send a boy out to take his place in society without understanding the relations of temperance to his own safety and prosperity, and to the safety and prosperity of society.

What we want in our schools is to do away with the force of a pernicious example, and a long-cherished error, by making the children thoroly intelligent on this subject of alcohol. They should be taut the natural effect of alcohol upon the processes of natural life.

(1). They should be taut that it can add nothing whatever to the vital forces or to the vital tissues, that it never enters into the elements of structure, and that, in the healthy organism, it is always a burden or disturbing force. (2). They should be taut that it invariably disturbs the operation of the brain, and that the mind can get nothing from alcohol of help that is to be relied upon. (3). They should be taut that alcohol inflames the baser passions, blunts the sensibilities, and debases the feelings. (4). They should be taut that an appetite for drink is certainly developed by those who use it, which is dangerous to life, destructive of health of body and peace of mind, and in millions of instances ruinous to fortune and to all the high interests of the soul. (5). They should be taut that the crime and pauperism of society flow as naturally from alcohol as any effect whatever naturally flows from its competent cause. (6). They should be taut that drink is the responsible cause of most of the poverty and want of the world. So long as a hundred million of dollars are annually spent drink in this country, every ounce of which made by the destruction of bread, and not ounce of which has ever entered into the sum national wealth, having nothing to show for cost but diseased stomachs, degraded homes, stroyed industry, increased pauperism, and aggvated crime, these boys should understand the fa and be able to act upon them in their first respon ble conduct.

The national wealth goes into the ground. If could only manage to bury it without having it p thitherward in the form of a poisonous fluid th the inflamed bodies of our neighbors and frien happy should we be. But this great, abominal curse dominates the world. The tramp reminds of it as he begs for a night's lodging. The wid and the fatherless tell us of it as they ask for bre It scowls upon us from the hovels and haunts the poor everywhere. Even the clean, hard-wo ing man of prosperity cannot enjoy his earnings cause the world is full of misery from drink. T more thoroly we can instruct the young concerni this dominating evil of our time the better will be for them and for the world.

Dr. J. G. Holland.

NEW YORK'S GREATEST ENEMY.

The greatest enemy of human life in New Yo is long protracted heat. It kills off the children the tenement houses as if the plague was upon If the thermometer keeps up continuously abo eighty degrees, and especially if it rises into nineties, the mortality is at once doubled, or nea that. And about two-thirds of the deaths are amo infants under five years of age.—N. Y. Sun.

If a temperance paper or lecturer were to reb such monstrous gibberish as that, it would aron the indignation of the whole reading public. N urally there might be under any circumstances few more deaths in the heated term in New Yor but what causes nearly all the extra deaths in heated term is the accursed grog-shop and brewe These wretched torturers of our race pauperize people by tens of thousands and compel them live in miserable unwholesome tenement hou packed like herrings in a barrel almost. There streets of these old, rotten houses that one has pass thru in haste to avoid the horrible odors wi which half a century of squalid, drunken, dir habits seems to have saturated the very coverin of the houses.

Here, children ragged, illfed and unwashed, children of the slaves and victims of the Leag Fiendom are playing in the streets, a sickly se blance of infantile sports and sometimes venturi upon a dis-jointed, distorted, lopsided caricature a childish laugh—they are unused to breathe an thing but the vile odors of their street and worse horrors of their stifling dens of homes.

Beside the deathdealing influence of these wretc ed dwellings, there are tens of thousands of ch dren born in New York of parents so poisoned wi the beer and tobacco and debauchery provided them by the leag of beer and rum-sellers that th die of any little complaint that would be a m trifle for a healthy child.

The summer heat merely aggravates the odors of the filthy dwellings and the effects of the vile habits of the drunken drink pauperized people of New York. A it is safe to say that three-fourths of the dea of the children of New York are purely the work the beer and whisky dens and that probably a half of the deaths of adult men are either caused hastened from 10 to 40 years by drink, and a v number of the deaths of adult women too.

New York's greatest enemy is beer and its next whisky and other drinks. But for them, there wo be no one to inhabit the vile tenements which an disgrace to American civilization and call for Chr tian and patriotic interference a thousand tim more than Mormonism in Utah or any ism that p vails in any pagan land in this world.

It is a crime and a falsehood to call the sun or heat of the sun New Yorks greatest enemy. It is source of all that is good and pleasant for manki there; and from the excessive heat sober people protect themselves completely.

Caught a young lady smoking a cigarette, other day. It's bad enough for boys to do so. too bad for young ladies. Cigarette smoking is first station on the road to hell. By-words, hours, bad company, disobedience to parents, too much "style," are other stations on the s road. Smile if you please; sneer if you please; you'll admit the truth some day—perhaps when is too late.—Wheat Grower.

TRANSCRIPTION.

PSALM XIX.

The heavens reveal the hand of God,
The jeweled arch above,
Proclaims His majesty abroad,
And speaks His boundless love.

Day unto day uttereth speech
Too deep for human ken;
Their mystic voices over-reach
The feeble tongues of men.

The nights flow on in melody,
The chime of silver spheres
Rings in the changes yet to be,
The purpose of the years.

Their line traverses all the earth
And the vast realms of space;
His being gave the worlds their birth,
And fixed them in their place.

Who can be likened unto God
Below, or in heaven above?
His majesty shines forth abroad,
And speaks His boundless love.

MARY A. GUTHRIE.

GOOD WINE.

The Chronicle frequently makes the ridiculous attempt to show that the making of wine is going to be profitable in this State. And it is strange indeed, that the people who talk that way so entirely and so often contradict themselves, and either do not know it, or do not care about the falsehood of their statements.

We are told that France has been made wealthy by wine; but France has been made wealthy by industry, economy and commerce, and is now being made rapidly poor by wine. It used to make 1500 million gallons of wine a year. It exported 50 millions of it and drank up all the rest. It used to sell 45 millions worth and drink 30 times as much, and you know that raising wine in France, and drinking it there, could no more enrich the country, than making the same amount of fire-crackers in Sonoma county and burning them on the 4th of July in San Francisco could enrich us.

In France the Phyloxera has attacked the vines, and the wine from grapes has been reduced to 1,000 million gallons, and it is said to 680 millions in 1879, but France drinks the same amount as usual and exports the same as usual, and the price remains the same. And it imports only 20 million dollars worth from Italy, Spain and Portugal. The rest is made from potatoes, glucose, rotten apples, dried prunes and all sorts of refuse and rotten fruit.

And in Italy, Spain and Portugal, where they have been learning to make wine for 2,000 years, they are sending it to France for 15 to 30 cents a gallon, and the common people of those countries after all these years are about the poorest of all the world except the Chinese.

And the wine from glucose and rotten apples is just as good and wholesome in every way, as the best wine from rotten grapes; the flavor and color derived from the grape skin, does not at all effect the wholesomeness or goodness of the wine. All there is of reality in the wine from fermented grapes is the alcohol, into which the sugar was changed, and water.

That is all there is of wine, brandy, gin, rum etc., —alcohol and water defiled with some flavoring and coloring. Beer, too, is simply alcohol and water, with a good deal more dirty things in it to make people crazy and thirsty.

Our young folks can see that all the grapes used for wine are wasted; the wine made has no nourishment, nor any good use, and the money and labor used on it is utterly wasted. But it makes people drunken and criminal, and poor and degraded, and it has always been a mocker and deceiver, and is a fit offspring of the father of lies.

About 10 years ago a friend introduced me to a fine pleasant gentleman "one of our principal wine-growers" in a beautiful grape region. Soon after he told me two brothers had died within six months of delirium tremens from their own wine and brandy, and that people who engaged in that business there were getting to be stupid and lubberly and always full of drink etc., and they lived and died and were buried without thot or belief in God or a future state. A few weeks ago meeting the same party enquiries were made as to how the wine region was progressing. He said the pleasant genial gentleman of the former occasion had become now most of the time drunken and the rest of the wine-makers of that commmnity of that time are nearly all dead; fallen into the old trap.

And that is a true picture everywhere; in all time from Noah down wine has entrapped the noblest of men, and transformed them into violent maniacs and criminals. And if all our young folks were going to drink wine and beer without any warning against it, and if we could find out which of them was going to become the most depraved, and barbarous and wicked of the lot, we should perhaps find them among the smartest, and brightest, and purest of our boys and girls. But they are not going to play around that trap of death. They will keep clear of Satan's sausage-machine.

DEAR RESCUE:—If every where in this State the progress in temperance the past year has equalled that of Mariposa county, then indeed we have a powerful influence from Shasta to San Diego.

Last Saturday evening we had public installation of officers. The Lodge met at Good Templar's Hall, then marched to the Court House accompanied by the Band of Hope of forty or more members —that Band is the apple of my eye—how proudly they marched with their banners, inscribed on one "We are the Band of Hope" with the anchor and floral emblems; on another, a beautiful blue silk flag with gilt letters painted "We are the Hope of our country." The latter and twelve National flags were presented by Bro. Bloomegrin. The exercises at the Court House were excellent. The lodge is strong—visitors from Hornitos over twenty miles and Snow Creek, twelve miles. I love to hear those men talk, who say when they rise to speak, "I never said a word in a public meeting until I joined the Good Templars, but now I can tell to a large audience what the Good Templars have done for me." We had two eloquent speeches from such men. Our Band sang one of their temperance songs. Adjourned at 10½ o'clock to a fine supper given by the Lodge at Gallison's Hotel, the family being members, the use of dining room was kindly donated. I believe in taking out the Bands to the public installations. My boy, nine years old said "I just had a splendid time—didn't they talk good." Another boy thought the regalias of the lodge the most beautiful things he had ever seen and would be glad when he could wear one. Next day we had a full Band meeting and four initiations. Are using Cook's Quarterlies. Band divided into three classes. After regular meeting and closing exercises the classes form.

Bro. Bloomegrin wishes me to say that Bro. Hughes came here and sowed good seed, but that we need some one to come and water the ground—in other words Mariposa county would welcome any of the Grand Lecturers.

Yours in F. H. and C.,
M. E. CONGDON.

THE RIPE FRUIT OF THE SALOON.

BY MARY ALLEN WEST.

Endow a man as richly as you will with every good qualification of good citizenship; give him health, industry, intelligence, genius; add wealth and powerful influence, if you will, and then add yet this one thing more—that he becomes the perfected fruit of the saloon, a drunkard—and what is the value, to himself, to his family, to the State of all his rich endowments? It soon becomes but the value of real estate in Sodom.

Young ladies, if you do not wish such fruitage frown upon the beginning of the evil; use your splendid opportunities to influence others.

WHAT is the matter with that plant, a white, sickly, weak growth? It is growth in the shade. What is the matter with the drunkard's home, his wife pale-faced, his children ragged, the table poorly furnished, the bedding scanty, and the entire house one of discomfort? It is growth in the shade of that terrible curse, RUM.—Our Young Ladies.

PIOUS DISTILLERS.

CHICAGO, August 17.—The Western Distillers' Association passed a resolution to-day favoring the enforcement of Sunday observance laws and judicious license laws, and opposing the policy of the saloon men in uniting with political parties for the purpose of advancing their interests.

Yes; Arabi Bey will be an advocate for peace too, when he finds himself sure to be beaten. The rum army thought it was strong enough to destroy our Sabbath and the laws and liberties of the American people, and govern all this country with the beer barrel. But they now see their weakness and are quite willing to be good and pretend to favor a Sunday law—if we will allow their wolves in the sheep-folds, six days of the week. If they can rob and kill 6 days they will agree to rest Sunday, and only keep their back doors open.

TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.—Every teacher should have Miss Julia Colman's Temperance School as a helper and instructor in the work of teaching temperance. It only costs five cents which you can send in stamps to her at 76 Bible House, N. Y.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

SIGNS.

In the notes of last week, several signs of saloons in this city were mentioned. It has been reserved for a Polk St. saloon-keeper to be the most blasphemous of any man on record. He has painted a sign which is posted high in his saloon but in plain view through the window. "In God we trust, but all others must pay cash." Thus blaspheming the Holy name and daring to presume that a man who follows daily and nightly, for the sake of gain, the business of making drunkards, can trust in God. Let this man and all others in his calling remember that God will hold every man responsible for the deeds done in the body, and he who sows the wind will reap the whirlwind—yea, God is not mocked! and he who thus blasphemes His just and holy name, will yet be utterly confounded and put to shame by that God in whom he dares to profess to trust.

KING GAMBRINUS.

Before scores of beer-dives in this city is placed the picture of the above named king—he is represented in a flowing garment of crimson, a crown upon his head, and in his hand a foaming cup of beer.

The poor victim of alcohol in going for his usual dram, sees the picture, and when the stimulating beverage is swallowed, and his brain on fire, he fondly imagines himself a king. He feels a kind of kingly proprietorship over the whole world, himself included. Visions of rose-coloured hue dance before his eye, and brilliant prospects are waiting him in the near future. If the wife and babies are cold and hungry, he forgets it all, and revels in his own kingly surroundings.

ALCOHOL has been a deceiver from the very first. A man is exposed to cold, drinks, and alcohol tells him he is warm, but in reality the temperature of his body is lowered. Alcohol tells a man he is stronger, when in fact he is weaker, and his vitality exhausted, but the most barefaced, the most pitiful lie that alcohol ever tells to man is this; when he is, in fact, the most abject slave, when he cannot control even his own appetite, with syren like voice, alcohol whispers to him of his royalty—alcohol tells him he is a prince of good fellows, even a king.

The man who has indulged in strong drink, until he is dependent upon it for his enjoyment, is, alas, no more master, even of himself, but for ever a slave.

My brother, you as yet can work through the week, and only upon Saturday and Sunday give full scope to that appetite, which is getting the mastery, I speak to you, in the name of the mother you loved, and whose memory is yet so sacred; in the name of the wife, who has so faithfully born with you the burden, in the heat of the day; in the name of the daughter, who is crushed to the earth with shame, whenever the loved father is overcome with drink; in the name of that dear little son, in whom you take such pride, and who will surely do as Papa does; and in the name of the Father of infinite love, who gives you one more chance, will you not turn while yet there is time? Oh, break away from your chains! Stand forth a man, master of yourself! Make the effort, looking to God for help, and you shall yet gain the victory.

M. E. RICHARDSON.

THE TOBACCO HABIT.—The Medical Times and Gazette gives an account of 127 cases of cancer of the lip which have been cut out, nearly all of which occurred with smokers. A physician of many years practice states that he never knew one who had ulceration of the tongue, who did not either chew or smoke. Young ladies can "put their foot down," in regard to this bad habit, and accomplish wonders in making it disreputable! The standard of purity for young men should be just as high as for young women, and you can do much to make it so.—D. C. Cook.

POSTMASTER BACKUS has prohibited the use of tobacco among the P. O. officials while on duty. The Pacific suggests that the letter carriers should be required to be total abstainers from intoxicating drinks, noting that they are necessarily exposed to unusual temptations and sometimes young men of their number fall victims to the habit and lose their positions. The suggestion is good and is worthy of consideration and acceptance in every government employment. The requirement of total abstinence in every person who draws a salary from the state and national governments would be a far grander and more judicious step in civil service reform than has ever been proposed.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—WE AIM FOR NOTHING SHORT OF A SWEEPING NATIONAL PROHIBITORY LAW ENDORSED BY EVERY STATE AND TERRITORY OF THE UNION, IN THE YEAR 1885, AND AS MUCH SOONER AS THE CHRISTIAN AND TEMPERANCE MEN AND GOOD CITIZENS OF THE COUNTRY MAY DESIRE TO ACCOMPLISH IT.

PLANKS FOR THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

GUARANTEED FREE FROM WORM-HOLES, BARNACLES, RAT-HOLES OR KNOT-HOLES.

Resolved, That the Republican Party of California emphatically condemns the unlawful conspiracy which, assuming the title of the "Leag of Freedom," avows its purpose to disobey, resist and openly defy the laws of the State, and has been for months persisting in that open rebellion.

That the American day of rest, hallowed by centuries of beneficent results and recognized by the law of 37 States of the Union as a necessity of our physical and moral welfare, MUST AND SHALL be preserved and sustained, and it is the duty of the State not only to protect the citizen in his right to rest from toil on the seventh day, but also to protect him from the assaults and depredations of the men who surround him with temptations to drunkenness, vice and crime. And to this end the sale of liquor must be entirely prohibited on that day by effective law and competent penalty of its infraction.

That the traffic in intoxicating beverages which is productive of incalculable evil and has no good results, should be placed within the power of the people to control or prohibit, as the vote of the majority may decide. And the Republican Party of California affirms that OF RIGHT the people of the State are entitled to settle this question by a Constitutional Amendment submitted to them in due form as was done in Kansas and Iowa. And that a judicious local option law should be enacted by the incoming legislature to enable the people of any county, township or city to decide this question for themselves, awaiting its final and general settlement by the people of the State.

That is by no means a radical deliverance. It is the meekest and mildest any convention should dream of offering the people on those most important points, with a view of obtaining credit for any patriotism or sincerity of intention. It is about the meekest deliverance too, that will prevent the nomination of a prohibitory ticket and the smiting of the Republicans hip and thigh and sending them to ignominious grass in November.

Intelligent Democrats know that their party sold their chances of victory to the Leag of F. for a sad mess of decayed fish on the Sunday and temperance questions; intelligent Republicans see now that their party can make the most capital for itself by taking a position exactly opposite to that which ruined their opponents. There is one sole chance left for the Democrats; they have the outlaw and mankillers vote sure; the Republicans cannot get one of them—not even if they should hold out polygamy, wifebeating, freelove, canibalism, slavery, idolatry, perjury and eternal perdition among their enticements. That crowd were secured on all these points in San Jose. But if the temperance vote is driven from the Republicans by a chalk and water, how-not-to-do-it, eleven sided platform and by the nomination of whisky sellers for official positions, the Democrats may win, if the third party fails, but the Republicans will be surely defeated.

And the temperance voters who have been so often sold, would just as soon see the Leag of Fiendom rule the State two years thru the Democrats, as thru the Republicans; many of them believe it would be better for our cause to utterly rout the latter if unfaithful now, and then the victory afterward over the other enemy of the people's welfare would be easy.

Another thing for the Republicans to remember is, that where they have been true to the people, as in Maine, Vermont, Kansas, and Iowa, they have been firmly seated in power. Where they have been false to the people and vacillating and treacherous, their position has nearly always been uncertain. The only thing that has kept them in those States from being driven from office and falling as far as the angels that were turned out of heaven, was the misfortune that the Democrats were there a little worse and more whisky corrupted and blinded than they.

And one thing more for temperance men to consider: all the half measures proposed to deal with the liquor traffic have but helped to strengthen and build it up and wear out and discourage our workers and helpers and weaken our cause, and they have seldom ever come to a trial, much less succeeded in any way. But actual, square, uncompromising PROHIBITION has achieved the only success, is the only watchword to inspire confidence, to invite respect, to deserve the victory. All other substitutes are counterfeits and compromises with Satan, and a compromise that proposes to blaspheme God six days of the week publicly, and let up on the seventh or to do it then privately, never did, never could, never intended to do anything but promote the worship of the devil.

INJUSTICE.

There is no profit and there should be no pleasure in bearing false witness, or making unfounded and unjust accusations against any person or interest. We have a war against rum and tobacco, but if any one should make an untrue or unjust accusation against the so-called Leag of Freedom, it would be as readily disclaimed and refuted in this journal as if it were against the Good Templars.

The Chronicle has several times unjustly charged that the railroads have not enhanced the value of real estate in California, and the injustice is in attributing the lack of improvement to the exactions of the company. The railroads have certainly made farming lands worth $30 to $50 or more that would not be worth $5 without them. It has built up little towns all along its lines or rather it has made them possible where they were not so before, and must have added many millions to the property values of the State.

There is good reason to believe that in many instances the freights and fares are perhaps double or more than double what is necessary to yield the company a fair return, had they, furnished every dollar of the capital invested—but their exactions are not sufficient to seriously retard the progress of the State or of any community, altho the fruit business with the East might perhaps be made ten times its present volume under fair freights.

The truth is, the railroad could not largely increase the value of property nor add much to the wealth of the State, if it carried all its freight and passengers free. Wherever the railroad has made a station, it and other people have established a complete system of pauper-mills, loafer-factories and thief-dens that would pauperize and deprave Heaven if they were allowed to start and continue their business there.

The Comstock Lode made a few millionaires and rich men, but it could not make a rich community because the grogshop and its gambling and debauchery accompaniments and its stock boards pauperized and ruined perhaps 1,000 previously industrious, well-to-do, virtuous people for every one that succeeded in making a little competence or a fortune out of the Comstock. All the silver in it could not advance property round the mines—with the grogshop there.

The richest gold mines in any of these Western regions have never been able to create property and enhance values to one hundredth part of their natural ability to do so—because the grogshop and its brothels and gamblers and sneak-thieves and all sorts of thieves, as regularly as the night came have skinned bare about the whole community of its earnings for the day.

The Navy Yard at Vallejo and the money disbursed by the government in various ways there since 1856, has afforded ample opportunity to have made a city there of industries and factories and commerce whose assessor's list should to-day foot up to a hundred millions of dollars; but the grogshop has contrived to utterly wipe out and starve out every attempt at industry and improvement, and with a chance of progress which the wildest ambition could not ask to have improved or added to, the grogshop and its gambling and other polluting instruments of thievery and corruption, make the town a little poorer and a little more deteriorated every year. Its last industry, a foundry, fled lately across the bay to get away from the grogshops which utterly depraved its workmen and rendered them useless. And outside town lots which cost $150 to $200, a dozen years ago, in place of being now worth $1,000 or more are unsaleable at over $10. The difference between $10 and $1,000 or $1,500 is the assessment the owners of them pay for the support of the grogshop and the privilege of voting for its continuance.

If gold mines, silver mines and rich mines of employment of labor by the government can do nothing better against the destructive work of the grogshop than show a state landscape of ruined towns and villages here, and declining ones there, and stationary ones elsewhere—and if the city of San Francisco, with a magnificent trade and industrial interests and better chances of progress than any other city in the world, is either stationary or going behind every year, under the all devouring arms of its 5,000 devil fishes of rum—how can we expect a railroad or a dozen lines of railroad to do for us what gold and silver rained from heaven could not do for us, until we destroy and drive out the only serious obstacle to progress that was ever known in California—the grog-shop.

The political howl about railway tyranny is entire froth and hypocrisy, and there is good reason to believe the loudest howlers are in the pay and service of the R. R. to do just that thing and get into office, thereby to serve their masters. And if it were sincere we could not pass an act which that company desired to prevent, any sooner than we could reach heaven with a new tower of Babel. There is but one way to settle these exasperating questions of monopoly tyranny and that is for the people themselves to put thru a government operated line from here to Omaha. And as to exactions, which are oppressive but which the oppressions of the grog-shop render us entirely unable to cope with—they are not of an amount to retard seriously the welfare of the country: they are a hardship we could get smoothly along with, compared with those of the Leag of Fiendom.

For instance—suppose that in Sacramento, Marysville, Oroville, Stockton, Livermore, Galt or any other town in California, we figure up the difference between the lowest possible freight and fare and the highest paid by the people of that town for a year. Sum it up and put it down as a drawback to the city's progress: granted. Then with an equally impartial investigation you will probably discover that an amount equal to that yearly loss, has been utterly wasted in the grog-shops of that town every day of that year and beside that, has produced a crop of fires and murders and crimes.

Out upon the hypocrisy of howling about railroad, and land penny monopoly, and silence as to the hundred million a year plundering monopoly which desolates this glorious state and is driving it into barbarism.

PIERCE COLLEGE.

The attention of parents and students is urgently directed to the advertisement of Pierce College, College City, Colusa County. There is beside all its other advantages of thoroness, healthfulness and cheapness that most important feature of its distance of 3 miles at least from the great corrupter of youth and depraver of youthful morals whose snares and traps are set everywhere else thruout the State where a human foot may venture. No grog-shop within 3 miles. Had that been the case with every college the past 50 years, a vast number of wrecks now lost and debased or that have gone down to untimely deaths would have been to-day bright and useful busy workers in the great hive of human industry and ornaments to the fields of learning and philanthropy.

F. M. PIXLEY.

Last Sunday evening the meeting at Silver Star House was addressed by Mr. Pixley on COWARDICE IN POLITICS.

The hall was completely filled and the audience was a very intelligent and appreciative one. The speech will be published and only a very few extracts can be given for want of space.

In a government like this it is a duty of every intelligent man to interest himself in practical politics. It is the duty of every intelligent and patriotic honest man to perform all the duties incidental to citizenship, to the end that only good laws may be enacted, only learned and honorable men may reach judicial position where they can interpret the law, and only honest, fearless and sensible men may reach executive position to administer the law. There are only two kinds of politics—honest and dishonest; honorable and dishonorable; patriotic and selfish; politics for one's country and politics for one's self. It is just as cowardly and wrong to lie in the pulpit, to betray professional confidence, to steal in business, as it is to lie or cheat in politics or steal in office, and no more. While there are but two kinds of politics, there are three kinds of politicians. There are honorable, proud, intelligent, ambitious, honest men who find it their pleasure to devote their time to politics. It is to this class more than to any other that the country is indebted for its progress. There is another class of selfish, scheming knaves more intent upon self-advancement, having always a selfish object in view, sometimes wealth, sometimes power. So instead of classifying the politicians as honest men, knaves and fools, I say honest and honorable men, knavish and selfish men, and cowards; "and, curiously enough, the most numerous and the most successful are the cowards."

In my criticisms I have no allusions to intelligent, honorable and patriotic men who devote their lives to public affairs, but to that large body of men who make of politics a bread-getting industry; who belong to parties not for the purpose of doing battle for great principles, and who fight under party banners for the advancement of human rights, nor do I affect to hold in light regard those humble men who form the rank and file of party organization, and who have the right to the enjoyment of those lesser offices which are formed in all organized communities. For the plausible, oily, popular man who has no enemies, and who is always available as a candidate for office because he has avowed no resentments, I have an unqualified contempt. The man who has no enemies has deserved no friends. The man who has never made a mistake or done a wrong is the man who never had the courage to attempt to assert the right. The man who has never slopped over is like the empty bucket that has had no contents to spill. The man who can truly say that he has changed no opinion and been ever consistent makes the broad admission that he is an idiot who has had no opinion to change. It is better to be right to-day than consistent yesterday.

* * * I can think of no greater damage that threatens this Government than the growing cowardice of the elective judiciary. It demands a courage that oftentimes requires self-immolation, for a judge to interpret the law in the face of a strong and clamorous popular opinion. Courage and daring are often exhibited but are seldom rewarded.

THE INCENDIARY SANDLOT.

The most marvelous exhibition of party cowardice that ever occurred in any country in the world happened in our midst.

Here the sand lot and various other riots and disturbances were referred to and the cowardice of the press and politicians in truckling to lawlessness was scathingly denounced; the Call, Chronicle, Post, Bulletin and Examiner being charged with the most dispicable poltroonery and mercenary fear of losing a subscription.

* * * What I mean to say for myself, and what I hope the Republican party will have the courage to say for itself, is that the question of the production, traffic and use of alcohol is one that has a right to challenge the most earnest consideration of men of the highest intelligence, because it involves questions of the highest political and social importance: I would have the Republican party of the United States of America display the same courage and put forth the same heroic effort to rid the country of this curse of alcohol as it did to rid the country of the curse of slavery. The consequences of intemperance are crime, poverty, disease, death, domestic suffering and insupportable municipal burdens. I would have the Republican party brave enough to take up this anti-Sunday-law challenge thrown to it by the Democracy, and upon the wager of battle risk its chances of success. Let us see and know whether in the interest of labor we may not reserve one day in the week—one day out of seven from the interest of gin; one day in seven from the worship of the devil; on which Christians may be permitted in their own way and undisturbed to worship God. This is not alone a temperance question, and it is not a religious question. It is a moral and scientific and sanitary and labor question. Above all, it is an American question, whether an American observance that has grown into and become a part of our national life and national organization shall be uprooted and destroyed. There is no man, self-respecting and honorable who pays taxes, loves his family and his country, who ought not to join in the effort to restrict the use of alcoholic drinks and rescue the Sabbath from the desecration of unnecessary labor. There is no wife that should not endeavor to influence her husband's vote at the polls. There is no mother that loves her son and prays that he may be rescued from temptation, that should not feel that this is a question involving her happiness and imperiling her fireside.

EVERY body should pay a visit to the Mechanics Institute Exhibition at the Pavilion which is a most attractive affair and should be patronized and prized by every patriotic Californian.

SALOON HARVEST,

The Chief of Police of the City of San Francisco has just supplied the tax payers some very interesting readiug matter. His annual report published this week shows the total number of arrests to be 25,969, an increase over last year of 2,685. Examining the causes of arrests, and giving the saloons the benefits of the most liberal deductions, we find that at the very lowest estimate 19,500 of these arrests were for drunkenness or for causes growing out of it.

Last year the arrests for drunkenness or causes growing out of it, were between 16 and 17 thousand, thus showing that the increase in the total number of arrests over that of last year is clearly traceable to the saloon business.—To illustrate, This year the total arrests for disturbing the peace, and for bad language was 1,513, last year, 1,401—showing an increase for these causes over last year of 112, and so with the other offenses attributable to whisky and beer. Last year the murders were 22, this year 29 an increase of 7, and nearly every one of them traceable to whisky or beer.—Again the assaults to murder and assaults with a deadly weapon last year were 252, this year 294. Again, 97 were arrested for robbery last year, and 108 this year, thus proving again this year, that as drunkenness increases so do the crimes of higher grade. We assert, and will prove, if facilities are given us for a careful examination, that the figures given 19,500 as the number arrested for drunkenness or causes growing out of it are below the actual numbers. B.

MONEY SAVED, MONEY MADE.

ED. RESCUE.—I have just purchased a bill of goods from H. A. Smith, Cash Grocery, 519 Post St. San Francisco amounting to $58.86 which with the freight charges $5.15 made a total of $64.01. This when compared with a bill of similar articles of rather inferior grade purchased near home, showed a saving of $28.24 clear.

This statement has not been solicited by any one from me, but is volunteered for the benefit of other readers of the RESCUE. If any one doubts the facts I can furnish the two itemized bills, and some of my neighbors dealing with the same house have made on other articles a larger proportion of saving than I did. We therefore feel like advising others to go and do likewise. W.

Kingsburg, Aug., 16th.

W. is a subscriber to the RESCUE, and as he has cleared $27.00 on his subscription and that one grocery bill together, he ot first thing to subscribe for a second copy for a friend and work up a club of his neighbors beside, to save $100 or so a year to each of them. The RESCUE and the temperance it advocates have made a wondrous number of people richer and better, and have made many very well to do that were very poor and very miserable. If every family in the State would read the RESCUE and accept its counsels with regard to drink and the drink traffic from this day forever there would be peace and plenty for every one in the State henceforth.

MIXED.—In a church on Mission street, much frequented by railroad employees, whom it is evidently thought best to coddle, political sermons are becoming the order of the day. On a recent Sunday evening every man going into or out of the church had a Republican Club election ticket put into his hand by an usher, and, we believe, was told from the pulpit to vote it. This is mixing up the Lord and the devil pretty thoroly.—Examiner.

How like a case mentioned in Scripture where the devils about to be cast out bore open testimony to the power and presence of the Lord. But the Examiner is mistaken as usual; if the usher and pulpit did what it says, it was to keep the voter from getting mixed up with the devil who has been the head center of the Examiner's politics ever since the San Jose Convention. It is a pity that journal will not evolute upward from the idea that all political work is necessarily a service of the devil; altho free rum and no Sunday is the special watchword of his employees, that is only the last resort of the devil in his extremity.

THAT "PLATFORM."

EDITOR RESCUE:—Many thanks for your article in last week's RESCUE on "Platform." It hit the nail squarely on the head. If the Republican party wants the votes of temperance men, it must do something to get them. The Democracy give their followers seven days in the week to raise the devil; now the Republican party must give its followers seven days in the week to do good, or they wont follow worth a cent. We dont ask the Republican party to assume any responsibility at all, the temperance people will do all that. All we ask is first, that they will submit a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale, as a beverage, of intoxicating liquors; second, while that is pending to vote local option in the townships or counties, and third, the present Sunday law with such amendments and provisions as will make it soundly effective. Let them submit these three things to the people and the temperance people will support the Republican party; not otherwise. The temperance people do not want office, and they will not be humbugged; all they want is laws to throttle the monster of intemperance and if they cannot get them in the present parties, they will have one of their own. There must be no half way work. Those who want our help must hew to the line let the chips fall where they may.

M. C. WINCHESTER.

DR. SHURTLEFF of Stockton and Dr. Wilkins of Napa the very worthy Superintendents of the Insane Asylums there, deserve to be summarily fired out of their positions, if they could not each furnish from among their permanent patients, a dozen or so of more sensible, logical, capable and entertaining newspaper correspondents than some who figure in the S. F. Chronicle notably T. P. O'Connor, M. P. for Galway Borough. In that paper last Sunday, Mr. Tad Pole O. C. thus brilliantly fans his ears:

"The leader of the peace party in the House of Commons is Sir Wilfred Lawson. Lawson is an able man, very conscientious, strictly honorable, and though a fanatic, he has the power of making witty speeches, which please and sustain Parliament. These points in his favor are very strong, but they are not the only ones which recommend him to the House. He is a man of large landed property; is the scion of an old and aristocratic family—in short, a kind of Philippe Egalite of Radicalism. But in spite of all these advantages he is not an influential politician. He is a man of crotchets, crazes and "fads"—or, as I think you style it, he is a man of isms. He is the leader of the fanatical tetotal party, who wish to close all the saloons on Sunday and to make licenses dependent on popular vote. He has always, too, been considered a peace-at-any-price politician, and, therefore, wholly unfit for the rough-and-ready work of daily combat in a world of selfish and wicked aggression. The other chief speaker of the peace party is Henry Richard—a venerable old gentleman with a white beard and a benevolent, though rather hard-featured face; but Richard is regarded even less seriously than Lawson, for he was formerly a dissenting clergyman, and is therefore supposed to know much about the Bible and little about the world. From these facts you will gather that, for the moment, the Ministry have it all their own way, and that the opposition to them is of the flimsiest character."

EMPIRE CITY, Aug., 10.

ED. RESCUE:—On the 27th of July I left my family and home at Newberg in Yamhill county Oregon for a trip to Coos Bay and vicinity in the interest of temperance, and the I. O. G. T.

Called at Eugene and spent a night at the hospitable home of J. E. Houston our very efficient Grand Worthy Secretary, who I found still in feeble health, but able to attend minutely to the duties of his office. He was making preparation for a ten days vacation in the mountains with his family and some friends, a much needed season of rest for him. On the 28th went to Drain and was met at the station by Bro. C. D. Drain who informed me that I was to speak the next evening, and that the Lodge had adjourned for three months on account of a lack of interest among the members. We posted some printed hand bills and did what we could to notify the people of the meeting and were rewarded with a very good audience and after the lecture I requested the members of the lodge to remain a few moments after the audience was dismissed; we talked freely together about the interests of the Order; the members all agreed to meet again at the next regular lodge night, elect officers and go to work with renewed energy. I agreed to deliver another lecture on my way out from Coose Bay. From Drain took stage line for Scottsburg at the head of navigation on the Umpqua river and thence to Gardner by steamer, where I remained ovar night, and then went by steamer and beach road to Empire City and from thence by steamer on Coose Bay to Marshfield; where we have had two lodges in rather a poor working condition for some time. I delivered a lecture and the next day we succeeded in getting the two old lodges to surrender their charters and all unite in a new lodge and on the evening of the 3d of Aug. organized a lodge of forty charter members, composed of the best element of the town, and I have no doubt we will hear a good report from them in the future. There is one saloon for every 100 inhabitants in this place and I was told each one of them was doing a large business. It is to be hoped and expected that the lodge just organized will in some measure mitigate the evil growing out of this large traffic in this busy sea port town. The industry of this place is almost exclusively engaged in the lumber and ship building business.

A large three mast schooner powerfully and handsomely built was being rigged while I was there.

On the 4th went to Sumner a small town at the head of Kitchen Slough where I had a large audience mostly composed of men engaged in the logging business who seemed to be, many of them very much interested in the cause of temperance but I could not induce any of them to take hold of a lodge for the want of time as they claimed to attend to it while engaged in the woods at their business. They gave me a nice collection to aid in the work; and I left them early next morning on a small boat down Kitchen Slough, and on a small steamer up Coose river to a settlement of United Brethren who had invited me to lecture. Had a good audience in a school house, obtained a number of names to our amendment petition made an appointment for religious services next day at 11 o'clock.

Attended the Sabbath-school at 10 o'clock and talked to the people at eleven on the text "Bear ye one anothers burdens."

I did not think best to try to organize here on account of the United Brethren church being opposed to secret societies. From here I went to Coquille City spoke to a large audience, obtained a good list of names to petition, took up a good collection for the benefit of the lecture work; and the next day came back to Marshfield appointed a State Deputy (D. L. Rood) and closed up my business there and came here this morning where I am waiting for the stage to take me over the beach to Gardner where I hope to be able to organize a Lodge.

In a future communication I may give you an account of my trip from here home, where I must go soon to make preparations to serve the people in the Senate of Oregon which meets soon.

ELIAS JESSUP, G. W. C. T. Oregon.

Address; Newberg, Yamhill Co. Oregon.

TYPOGRAPHY. Bro. Powers of the Pacific Greenbacker proposes an improvement by which all the letters used in printing should occupy the same space, a w and an i for instance. Possibly printers would benefit by the change, but what is most wanted is to fire out of our print altogether the idle good-for-nothing useless letters which burden and disfigure our language and without any reasonable cause make it so difficult that perhaps not over one in 250 people here in California are at all accurate spellers. Our written language is entirely lawless, and little more than half way between the hieroglifics on a teachest and perfection.

ED. RESCUE, permit me a word of explanation, and in reply to the Rev. Geo. Morris, and John Woods. The query in my last; What do Bros. Winchester, Morris, and John Woods, think of their prohibition convention? was not intended as an insinuation against any of them. I have the highest opinion of their honesty and integrity as men and prohibitionists and did not think it possible that they approved the action of the convention, and their late articles in the RESCUE show that they did not. Bro. Morris admits nearly all I claimed but tries to gather a little comfort from the declaration of the late Republican convention in Maine. John Woods article showing that license is the policy of the Republican party is a sufficient reply. If a Prohibition party had been in power in Maine for the last 20 years. does Bro. Morris think there would be any question about prohibition being a failure there? certainly not, because the laws would be honestly enforced in all parts of the state, and those in office would not be found coquetting with the liquor men in order to gain votes. As a late Governor was known to do even in Maine. But to offset this action of the Republicans in Maine to catch votes, I refer to the action of that party in Wisconsin a year ago, to their action in North Carolina, and to the action of the late Republican convention in Illinois, where they would not even allow the question of prohibition to be discussed in the convention but referred everything to a committee without debate. There were temperance men on this committee but they dared not bring in a minority report altho urged to do so. Such action would be likely to hurt their party, and their temperance principles had to take a back seat. So it will always be with temperance men who affiliate with either of the old parties. John Woods' article.—"Prohibition and license"—gives me pleasure and amusement. Pleasure to read such radical temperance sentiments, and amusement at the idea advanced that the late convention was not a convention of the "Prohibition Reform Party." Well I hope he is right but the convention was called by the "Prohibition Reform Party," acted in the name of that party, appointed delegates to make propositions to the Republican convention, passed resolutions that proposed to get along if possible by clinging to the old political parties, "without any prohibition party," and appointed as an executive committee, men who are in favor of that line of action. No wonder that John Woods is inclined to deny that it was a convention of the "Prohibition Reform Party."

Bro. Morris says that he does not expect the Republican party to give what we desire. The editor of the RESCUE speaking of American Statesmanship says To-day it has degenerated into the disgraceful traffic of office seeking and the successful trickery of supporting one of two hypocritical parties in power. Now if the old parties are hypocritical is it not foolish to trust to their professions or to send delegations to interview them in their conventions. John Woods speaking of the Republican party says. This party is the real opponent of the "Prohibition Reform party" as Hell is opposed to Heaven. Then is it not absurd for Prohibition conventions to hold councils with the hope of receiving any assistance from the Republican party. JOHN ROBINSON.

IN OTHER STATES.

GOLDENDALE, W. T., after a recent campaign raised the license of their thief schools to $3,000 a year which closed up the factories of pauperism and crime there. The Sentinel of that town takes the side of the "whisky thugs, political jobbers, roughscuffs, ragtag and bobtail machine tricksters and the Rev. R. W. Henderson" who are petitioning to have license to manufacture thieves reduced to $400. It declares with the customary elasticity of the rum organs that since the sale of liquor has been prohibited in Goldendale, its use has increased as 10 to 6 and boy drunkenness has alarmingly increased. It is well known that the use of beer and other liquors utterly washes all regard for the truth out of the drinkers; shall we have to learn that the advocacy of its use produces an invariably similar effect?

KANSAS.—Tho the population is increasing with remarkable rapidity, crime decreases more rapidly, since prohibition has been enacted the commitments to penitentiary which previous to the prohibition era averaged 23 and 24 per month have now been reduced to 13; and six counties rebelling against the law furnish more than half of them, tho formerly their proportion was only one-ninth of the whole number for the State. The penitentiary which had to be enlarged now has lots of room to let.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

TWO DIVISIONS, A and B. Benefits in A, $1.000; in B, $2.000. Entrance fee in A, $4; in B, $5. A member of one joining the other pays half fee; under 49 eligible to both.

Classes: 1st, 20 to 29 yrs; 2d, 30 to 39; 3d, 40 to 48; 4th, 49 to 55; 5th, 56 and upwards.

Assessments. On the death of a member each member of his division shall be assessed, 1st class, 75c; 2d, 90c; 3d, $1.15; 4th, $1.40; 5th, $1.70.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank. S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

E. H. BOSCHER, DRUGGIST,

DONT WAIT.

Our readers need not wait till they have $1,000 to spare, or even $100, to send for goods to H. A. Smith's Cash Grocery, advertised in another colum of this paper, but send for what you need or can spare the money for, if only $10 or less, and it will surely pay you, and that you will have the satisfaction of knowing that you have knocked at least one pin from under the whisky fabric which is struggling and striving for supremacy over every thing that is good or that opposes its rule in this beautiful land.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

THAT PLATFORM.

In another column is an outline of what is expected by the temperance people of this State from the Republican Convention to meet at Sacramento. There is nothing hidden or double-meaning, in the policy proposed. There should be no double meaning, doutful meaning or possible chance of misunderstanding in any utterance of an honorable political, patriotic party.

Prohibition, plain, positive, absolute, is now the paramount issue before the people of America, and it is becoming so in other countries. The greatest and best of the counsellors of the Republican party in this and other States advise a manly, open, decided, unequivocal procedure by that party, as the certain condition of success and continuance in the public confidence.

The agencies of pauperizing ruin have become so emboldened with the respect paid them by politicians in the past that their lawless yoke has become intolerable and will no longer be borne by the people. The liberty to live, to earn a living and engage in any industry or trade is virtually suspended by the thousands of mantraps which deprave and pauperize our labor and make this country a field of violence and crime, where there is no longer safety for life or property, in presence of the multitudes of criminals, tramps, hoodlums, idlers which are daily manufactured by the deadfalls, gambleries and beerdives which have become the principal business and occupation in every town and village of the State.

It is respectfully submitted to the Republican Convention that they have to decide the question of the victory or the defeat of their party. The platform that will secure the former is suggested to you as that which will secure the vote, the respect and cordial sympathy of the moral and better element of the State, the good citizenship of every sect and class. The platform that leads to disaster is that which will secure the adherence of an insignificant and thoroly disreputable faction of European citizens of whom their better countrymen are ashamed—such a procedure will turn away in sorrow that great power in American politics, without whose consent no party can long hold the reins of power—the virtue and intelligence of the American homes.

In conclusion a Political Convention that fails to assert its utter condemnation of the open rebellion of the so-called Leag of Freedom, deserves no countenance nor acceptance, no confidence whatever on the part of good and lawabiding citizens. The failure to rebuke that infamy will indicate a cowardice, a lack of patriotism, and indifference to a brutal insult to the American flag and American people, that should forfeit all respect.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

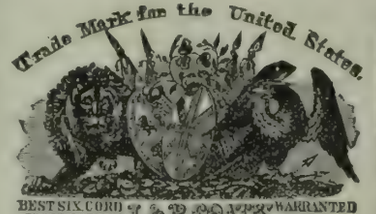
FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.



Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

SPOOL COTTON.

Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G.Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. SPEECHES AT NAPA RATIFICATION.

"We make no objection to the sale of liquor on Sunday. Is it any more of a sin to sell liquor on Sunday than on any other day of the week? It is only a puritanical sentiment that demands the closing of the saloons on Sunday. JOHN DAGGETT.

* * * When I get to Congress I will reduce fares and freights in this State just fifty per cent.; and no committee shall be allowed to sit on my bill either." CHARLES A. SUMNER.

* * * You must not forget that Henley is running for Congress in the Third District, and, when elected, I intend to inqnire into the imprisonment of McSweeney in Ireland who once lived in San Francisco." BARCLAY HENLEY.

Before these parties were nominated, it is to be lamented that a search for better timber had not been made among the Portuguese and Italian boys, in the fish market, who are employed in the rudimentary duties of removing the offal from the sturgeon. Three of the smartest of these boys would do more credit to the ticket and the three speakers above named would dispense a far brighter radiance and find a much more congenial and appropriate sphere in exchanging places with these boys.

THOMAS J. MCQUIDDY, of Hanford, President of the Anti-Monopoly League says:

The Democratic platform is a document that may mean much or little; it is not specific enough. To have fares and freights reduced materially means nothing in particular. There is nothing to seize upon—a mere "glittering generality." When Mr. Fowler introduced a resolution that meant something, that would mean something all over the State, they voted it down. If they intended to handle the corporations as they should be handled, they would have sustained that resolution and nominated a man that they were sure would carry it out.

Now that the act of repudiation, the clause to repeal the Sunday law, to tear down the great pillar on which society rests, to take us back hundreds of years, to give us chaos with all its evils, to add to our already numerous divisions, to array the whisky and foreign element against the religious, moral and temperance people, exposes the people to untold dangers that may bring on a conflict of arms. The Democratic party did once resort to arms to defend and maintain slavery, one of their political tenets, and they are now trying to perpetuate the present system of slavery which is worse than African slavery.

THE New York Herald says: "In the Eastern cities the 'gin mills' are all but supreme. They in a great measure nominate and elect the Congressmen who go to Washington, and the aldermen who control our municipal interests. The spirit and courage of the Republican party of Iowa in endeavoring to emancipate itself from the baleful control of this class can not be too highly praised."

The Hartford Times (Democrat and anti-prohibition) says: "The open and terrible evils of drunkenness seem to be driving men into radical measures for the absolute extermination of the liquor traffic. . . . . The most monstrously fanatical and absurd ideas of the abolitionists in 1846—propositions too extravagantly ultra to excite much more than a passing laugh—became twenty years later a corporate part of the Federal Constitution. And changes are sweeping on quite as swiftly now as they did sixteen or eighteen years ago."

"AN irreproachable set-back to the progress of the State" was an irreparable error of the printer in correcting proof until half of last week's edition had gone thru the press. when the mistake was discovered and corrected.

ARABI BEY has not half as many wives as the Khedive and he might just as well have kept out of all this trouble, and saved thousands of dollars by coming to San Francisco and getting pictures of his whole family taken at the ELITE PHOTOGRAPH STUDIO, 838 Market St. How it would surprised him to see all the little folks taken by the instantaneous process.

TAKE NOTICE.—In Kansas every daily paper except the Topeka Capital opposed prohibition. It was a very small evening paper, but is now a large first class morning and has one of the largest publishing houses. And it has the respect of all good people old and young.

THE TULARE Alliance has just had a lively session; has appointed a test for all candidates for office and put in the field to canvas the county in the interests of temperance, 11 ministers and one layman; the latter Mr. Sam Fowler being a little over 6 ft 8 inches in height, is expected to get in as much work as any one of the ministers. The Alliance and its originators and helpers are entitled to much credit, but they will have a more satisfactory reward than that, viz: the consciousness of having done a faithful duty that will be followed by good results. It would be well for other counties to do likewise.

YESTERDAY I was at the Pacific Grove Retreat, near Monterey, where no saloons, whisky restaurants or whisky drug stores are permitted. The Knights Templars were holding camp there and not one was observed under the influence of drink, but all was quiet, orderly, gentlemanly. But at Santa Cruz, during the encampment of the military companies, the S. F. Call says, that a private under arrest for intoxication escaped, and was recaptured in a saloon after a lively resistance from members of F. and G. Companies, who were having a high old time there. Court martials on charges of drunkenness are called for four culprits who were drunk and incompetent and resisting officers, etc.

Santa Cruz is fast losing its good repute as its saloons gain the mastery over the decent and honest citizenship. W.

GOVERNOR SHERMAN, of Iowa, has issued an official proclamation, announcing the result of the vote on prohibition in that State and calling on all citizens to govern themselves accordingly. The total vote cast was 281,113, of which 125,677 were cast against the amendment and 155,436 in its favor, being a majority of 29,753. The aggregate was seven-eighths that of the exciting Presidential election of 1880, which was much the largest vote ever cast in the State. This fact shows the popular interest in the question, and the decisiveness of the result. What makes it more noteworthy and encouraging is that Iowa has a very large foreign born population, more than thirty per cent of her voting citizens being of this class. The New York Tribune warns Republican politicians in Ohio that "the disposition of the people in respect to free whisky and no Sunday may be quite different from their expectations." In Ohio only twenty-three per cent of the voters are of foreign birth.

CHICO. Bro. Peter Powers in a letter which got mislaid for weeks reported a Union Temperance political club of 60 voters pledged to vote only for temperance men—and these voters are not all Good Templars either. To the Republicans there who say this will give the State to the Democrats, they say that if they will not put up temperance men they ot to lose the State.

While the colored Masons were in G. L. session in Marysville, Cornelia Lodge had a fine open meeting. The Hall was crowded, an excellent impression created and several delegates expressed themselves desirous of having lodges of our Order among their own people in Oakland, San Francisco, etc. Bro. Powers is a worker and a power for temperance.

THE Rev. C. E. Rich has been trying to wake up the people of Danville to take an active part in the temperance cause and help Walnut Creek and Pacheco to clear out the grogshop which is among the people of Contra Costa county precisely what a rapacious wolf is to a healthy flock of lambs. The wolf loves to pick the bones of the lambs.

THY HOLY MEMORY.

[The following stanzas were writen for the Louisville Courier-Journal. many years ago, by a modest "unknown," and won from George D. Prentice this recognition of their merit: "We defy any true lover of poetry to read the following stanzas without exclaiming: 'How beautiful.' "]

My soul thy sacred image keeps,
My midnight dreams are all of thee,
For nature then in silence sleeps,
And silence broods o'er land and sea,
O, in that still, mysterious hour,
How oft from waking dreams I start,
To find thee but a fancy flower,
Thou cherished idol of my heart,
Thou hast each thought and dream of mine,
Have I in turn one thought of thine?

Forever thine my dream shall be,
Whate'er may be my fortunes here,
I ask not love—I claim from thee
Only one boon, a gentle tear.
May e'er blest visions from above
Play lightly 'round thy happy heart,
And the glad beams of peace and love
Ne'er from thy glowing soul depart.
Farewell! my dreams are all of thee,
Hast thou one tender thought of me?

My joys like Summer birds may fly,
My hopes like Summer blooms depart!
But there's one flower that cannot die—
Thy holy memory in my heart.
No dews that one flower's cup may fill,
No sunlight to its leaves be given,
But it will live and flourish still
As deathless as a thing of heaven.
My soul greets thine unasked, unsought,
Hast thou for me one gentle thonght?

Farewell! farewell! my far-off friend!
Between us broad blue rivers flow,
And forests wave and plains extend,
And mountains in the sunlight glow.
The wind that breathes upon thy brow,
Is not the wind that breathes on mine;
The star-beams shining on thee now
Are not the beams that on me shine.
But memory's spell is on me yet—
Cans't thou the holy past forget?

The bitter tears that thou and I
May shed, when e'er by anguish bowed,
Exalted to the noontide sky
May meet and mingle in the cloud.
And thus, my dearest friend, tho' we
Far, far apart must live and move,
Our souls when God shall set them free,
Can mingle in the world of love.
This were an ecstasy to me—
Say, would it be a joy to thee?

THE FACTS ABOUT MAINE.

Ex-Governor Dingley, in a letter dated Washington, May 3, 1882, and endorsed by Senator Frye, effectually disposes of the false statements lately published in the New York Sun and reiterated by the brewers' attorney, Lewis Schade, in the Washington Sentinel. He says:

"In the last number of your paper (a copy of which you have sent to me) I find an 'open letter' addressed by yourself to me, denying the correctness of a statement recently made by myself in a public address, to the effect that Maine has less dramshops, proportionally, than any other State in the Union, and the cities of Lewiston and Auburn (where I reside), with a population of about 28,000, have no open dramshops, and less liquor sold as a beverage, and less drunkenness than any licensed city of similar population.

"You assert, on the authority of an anonymous communication in the New York Sun, that these cities, (practically one) have one liquorshop to every eighty-seven inhabitants, making them the champion community of the world' not only in the number of dram-shops, but also in drunkenness; and you further affirm that Maine 'is fast gaining the reputation of being the most besotted State in the Union,' etc.

"I am surprised that you should have so readily accepted an anonymous statement as conclusive against the declaration of a gentleman who assumes public responsibility for the truth of what he says. I assume, however, that you seek facts, whatever conclusions may be deduced from them, and do not intend to mislead your readers. On this assumption, I ask you to publish the following statistics from the colums of the Lewiston Journal, the leading newspapers in the cities of Lewiston and Auburn, as taken from the r evenue and city reports.

"'There is not a single open dram-shop in the cities of Lewiston and Auburn. Whatever places sell liquor as a beverage do so secretly; and whatever evidence is obtained of a violation of the law, a prosecution and fine, and even imprisonment follow. The places that sell liquor as a beverage are nearly all in secret corners, known only to the initiated, and their stock in trade consists of a few secreted bottles or at most gallons of liquor, which is often discovered and destroyed. Twenty of such places do not sell as much liquor as one open licensed dram-shop.

"'It is, of course, difficult to ascertain how many of such places there are in our two cities. The belief of our citizens is that every one of them, including the regular druggists, pays the special tax on the dealers, as that is the easiest way to avoid the large penalties of the United States laws. Fifty-two dealers—one to every 460 inhabitants—paid this tax last year. But about 20 of the 52 were regular druggists, who claim that they do not sell for a beverage, and who are not known to the police to do so, except in two or threef cases where they have been prosecuted. This leaves 32 secret dram-shops—one to every 875 inhabitants.

"'But arrests for drunkenness show that the use of liquors in our cities must be less than in license cities of similar classes of population. The city marshal's reports of Lewiston and Auburn show 80 arrests for drunkenness last year—3 to every thousand of the population. Not a single city in the Union, outside of Maine and Vermont, shows so little drunknnness. The city of Lowell, with a manufacturing population similar to that in Lewiston and Auburn, reported thirty arrests for drunkenness to every thousand population.

"'In the whole State of Maine there was last year one retail dealer in intoxicating liquor to every 860 inhabitants inhabitants who paid the special tax to the United States; and 210 of these were the regular druggists of the State. No other State in the Union showed so small a number proportionately. Vermont came next, with one to 600 inhabitants; Iowa, one to 425; New York, one to 200; and the District of Columbia, one to 175.'

"I will add nothing to these statistics, except to express my opinion that they are substantially true, and with them I leave the matter to be judged by a candid public. Respectfully yours, NELSON DINGLEY, JR.
M. C. 2d District, Maine.

"I am a resident of Lewiston, and familiar with its condition; and I regard the above statement as a correct representation of the facts.

WM. P. FRYE.
U. S. Senator.

THE PROHIBITION CONVENTION AT CHICAGO.

A RATIONAL PLATFORM.

The National Convention on the 24th adopted the following platform.

All questions not of a national character belong to the party within the several States and Territories to define. Its views and policy and action respecting them should not be inconsistent with this national platform. We declare in favor of the following national principles and measures, to be incorporated in the National Constitution and enforced by Congress and the Government:

First—The prohibition as public crimes of the importation, exportation, maufacture, sale, supply and taxation of all alcoholic beverages.

Second—The prohibition of all tax, license, regulation or legal sanction in any form of them, or any other public crimes.

Third—The civil and political equality and enfranchisement of women. This so far as it concerns the States severally is remitted to the party in those States.

Fourth—The abolition of polygamy.

Fifth—The abolition of executive, judicial and legislative patronage and the selection of all officers by the people so far as is practicable, and civil service reform to be followed in other appointments.

Sixth—The abolition of sinecures and unnecessary offices.

Seventh—The universal and enforced education of the youth of the nation, including instruction in regard to the effect of alcohol upon the human system with ample provision for the support of an adequate and efficient system of free public schools in all the States and Territories.

Eighth—The perservation of the public lands for the homes of the people, and their division in limited portions to actual settlers only.

Ninth—The abolition of all monopolies, class legislation and special privileges from the Government, injurious to the equal rights of citizens.

Tenth—The control of railroads and other corporations, to prevent abuse of power and to protect the interests of the laborer and of commerce.

Singing the doxology greeted the reading of the platform.

A resolution was added as a plank declaring against all proscription on account of color and demanding exact civil and political equality. Education of the Freedmen was insisted on and Congress to be called on to appropriate money for that purpose and to teach in their schools the effects of alcohol.

The Iowa delegation withdrew as there was no need of a third party in that State.

That Convention was one of respectable men and women and presented a pleasing contrast to the gang of drunkards, gamblers and spoil seekers who form such a conspicuous portion of some of our national conventions.

GERMAN BEER-DRINKING IN AMERICA.

No. 50.

If all that is claimed in favor of beer-drinking in Germany were true, it would not follow that the American Government could diminish drunkenness by its adoption. Germans in Germany are very different from Americans, native or foreign, in America. Native American—a composite race in a new world, where circumstances are disciplinary beyond all historic precedent—are, as a body, the most active, nervous, enterprising people on the globe. Only second to them in these characteristics are the foreign Americans—those who were too bold, active, and aspiring to remain amid the conditions of the Old World. The very act of emigrating quickens the emigrant. Once in the land of his adoption, countless new influences reach him—the better reward or labor, the greater abundance and variety of food, the multiplication of wants with increased facilities for their supply, the hope of securing a home, and consequent emancipation from the landlord—all else that is new and distinctive in the New World, under the force of which the activity of every faculty is stimulated. It is plain that the effects of malt liquors upon this active, nervous American people, native or foreign, can not be argued from their effects upon the phlegmatic, steady-going Germans, who are content under limitations that were onerous to the millions who have sought a home in America.

The editor of the Chicago Tribune reports from Germany: "No drunkenness among the Germans; public sentiment would not tolerate it; the habits of the country are all against it." This remarkable statement is quoted in the brewers' essays to show the effect of malt liquors, but it points to a more potent cause of temperance—"public sentiment." What would be the effect of such a public sentiment in America? If society here put an inexorable ban upon intoxication, if positions of public and private trust were forfeited thereby, who does not believe that drunkenness would rapidly disappear?

If it be claimed that the beer-drinking customers of Germany have created that public sentiment, why does it not prevail among the beer-drinking classes of our country? Do they, in any way, frown upon drunkenness in puplic or private circles? When? Where? The marked difference in the police regulations of Germany should also be borne in mind. The force by which a monarchical government preserves order is present in every public place for beer-drinking. The rigor of administration by which order is preserved there, is unknown in America. The fact is, when the characteristics and condition of the two peoples are considered; when those subtle laws that control their customs and activities are studied; when we turn from personal opinions to fundamental facts and principles, it becomes clear to every observing and thoughtful person that Germany is no safe precedent for America.

RAILROAD DEBT, ETC.

The debt of the Central Pacific R. R. Co. due to the United States in principal and interest is over 43 million dollars and it has a funded debt of 54 millions more upon the line from San Francisco to Ogden. The funded debt is secured by a first mortgage, the amount due the Gov't. has a farce of straw security under a second mortgage. As the first mortgage debt is larger than the cost or value of the whole road, there is no prospect of a cent of the other ever being paid, unless Congress makes some provision for its forced recovery in the near future. The Thurman Act is entirely ineffective since the Southern Pacific has been in operation. The Government has been so immensely lavish in its gifts to the C P R R that it can afford to be honest, to pay its debts and to reduce the fares to those of the New York Central in place of keeping them on the average 165 per cent higher, as they were last year. And a company that is worth about 200 millions should be able to scratch out a living without keeping a nasty drunkery on every ferry boat and at every depot, selling rum to boys all day, every Sunday and keeping 600 or 700 thief and pauper factories all over the State open night and day and all the week.

It is suggested that a collection might be taken up on Sunday evenings in all the churches of the State and presented to the Railroad Company on condition that they will shut up their drunkeries and other infamous resorts. In reality the paupers and criminals they make in their man-traps are a tremendous loss to the Company. Thousands of these victims who will never pay a cent of fare or freight would have good farms or business interests and be large patrons of the railroad if these man-traps were all shut.

There is a good deal of building this year in San Francisco; most of it is probably to accomodate business which is driven out of Montgomery, Sansome, Washington, Clay, Sacramento and other streets by the beer-dives and drunkeries and dens that are rapidly destroying the business there and making it only fit for Chinese nests and drunkeries and thief-factories. Every time an honest business vacates its premises a drunkery-den takes its place at once.

THE estimated value of property in England is $44,750,000,000; United States, $39,500,000,000; France, $37,000,000,000; Germany, $30,500,000,000.

And the United States have 370 million bushels of grain and a million tons of meat to spare while Great Britain is short 280 million bushels of grain and 603,000 tons of meat. So says a book by a Mr. J. G. Mulhall.

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

A STEP FORWARD.

Home Protection Monthly.

In unfurling the flag of liberty to the world, our country has taken up a responsibility that can not be thrown aside at pleasure. It is dangerous for nations to step backward; especially is this the case if they constitute the vanguard of humanity.

As Americans, we naturally think that our own people stand first in the onward course of civilization; but we can not claim this exalted place and refuse its accompanying burdens.

If we wish to be greatest, we must pay the price; so it follows that all questions affecting the good of our fellows, are of vital importance to the nation as well as to the individual. And among these questions not one is freighted with more permanent consequences, either for good or evil, than that of giving the franchise to women.

In our country the yearly destruction of our brothers and sisters through alcoholic drinks, amounts to 100,000, and while women are compelled to endure their full share of this anguish, they are not allowed any controlling voice as to its continuation. They are left by the law-makers utterly defenseless against this appalling danger. It is true that in some of the States money is awarded to them if they can prove who has destroyed their homes, which is about equal in reason to a law authorizing one's house to be burned, and then giving the merest trifle in return—"better than no recompense," may be said; but what a law for the nineteenth century!

And if the husband should escape unharmed, the wife may live to experience the agony of seeing her children, dearer to her than her own life, perish by means of the death-traps that the law appoints to catch unwary feet. Besides, there is danger to herself as well; there are families where the mother has been stricken down by this fearful sin, and others where the daughters have learned to love the fatal fascination of the intoxicating cup.

If woman must be thus exposed, both personally and in her family, does it not seem reasonable that she should be permitted to have a legal voice in regard to the cause of this horrible condition of things? If she must share the risk, the suffering and the destruction, it would be only fair that she should be allowed to share the power that controls them.

Again, it is urged that if woman were free to vote, it would produce discord in the family. If husband and wife love each other, they can bear a great deal in the way of discussing matters about which they differ, even if they come to the conclusion of the Irish gentleman, who was a devoted husband, but failing to convince his wife one time in an argument, exclaimed in his vexation, "Oh, these women! there's no living with them nor without them!" but neither his affection nor his wife's was in any degree lessened, because she was not simply an echo of himself. And if husband and wife do not love each other, they will not wait for the enfranchisement of woman to find a subject to quarrel about. The elevation of woman in the United States has been the greatest cause of our prosperity. And we are no exception. Look at any land on the face of the earth, and you will find that nations rise or fall in the scale of civilization exactly in proportion to the place they give to woman. If our countrymen wish to go up higher, or even to stay where they are, they must make woman as free as themselves.—Helen Mar Mackenzie.

WHAT THE FIENDS ARE DOING.

The late Prohibition campaign that has terminated in such a glorious manner in Iowa, was won against all kinds of odds. In the first place it had the liquor element in party, to fight. In the second place it had a solid liquor manufacturing and selling opposition with unlimited means. to fight. In the third place it had a foreign element of not less than 30,000 to reduce, who were naturalized in order to defeat the proposed Constitutional Amendment. Over all these foes it was overwhelmingly victorious.

This Iowa battle has developed the fact that the Liquor League of the United States is using the loose, infidel, liquor elements of Europe with which to fight the Prohibition movement in the several states of the Union, It is a shameful, cowardly scheme, and well illustrates the utter depths of abandonment of all manly, honorable principle that characterizes the liquor element of this country. Saloonists and beer slingers of all nationalities, are now being furnished money with which to send for friends in Europe, the greater per cent of whom under the naturalization laws, become voters in a short period of time; and with this imported vote the League hopes to strangle Prohibition.

This dastardly attempt to govern the United States from direct European meddling, should open not only the eyes of Prohibitionists, but every true American. The watchword —"Eternal Vigilance is the Price of Liberty" now has a new and tremendous significance. We now begin to see the reason for the late unparalleled immigration that is pushing directly into the great battle field of Prohibition.—Claysville Sentinel.

A BALAAMIZED PROPHET.

The Hon? Thos. H. Laine a lawyer of Santa Clara thru the week and a preacher until lately on Sunday was for money hired last autumn to enable the mankillers of this State to defy the Sunday law and prove it unconstitutional, so that vice, crime and drunkenness could be successfuly taut and practiced in the dramshop on the Sabbath.

The conclusion of his argument before the Supreme Court on record in the Law Journals was as follows:

"Only a few (persons) belonging to a single class, namely, temperance people, so-called, in some of the small towns and outlying places are making a clamor about it, a little spasmodic and sensational effort in the matter. But this body of people is in itself small and composed of about four classes viz.

1st. Of people, who about half of the time are found in the gutter, or shrieking with delirium tremens, and the other half shouting temperance.

2d. Of a body of women whose abusive and scolding tongues have rendered their homes a hell and driven husbands and sons to the dram shops and ruin, who to put the world on a false scent and turn attention from the ruin they themselves have wrought, cackle temperance loud enough to rend the skies.

3d. A body of moral reformers, like that of Guiteau, who are moved by the Deity, and are ready to overthrow everything to accomplish their wild and foolish projects.

4th. A few well-meaning men and women who think the world is to be reformed, not by controlling and directing in proper channels the appetites and passions of men, but by breaking down and destroying rum-mills, saloons, etc., forgetting that Noah, the great patriarch, got beastly drunk before there was a saloon or a saloon-keeper on the earth after its great baptismal regeneration."

Verily a man of such ruffian instincts must have been a power in the church and a sweet savor in the pulpit.

TEMPERANCE THOUGHTS.

BY OLD PROHIBITION.

"TEMPERANCE WORK.—It's a work of prevention and cure; a work for the rich and the poor; a work that is slow, and yet sure; a work whose effects will endure."

The great object is to destroy the liquor traffic, and no matter how it is done, whether by a musket shot or a hundred and sixty-four pounder, let the temperance workers strike hands and work.

The most thorough, enthusiastic and efficient temperance workers are those who study every phase of the temperance question, and read all the important literature of the day.

Every temperance worker should have a scrap book. Almost every newspaper contains something on our question worth cutting out and perserving for future use. A temperance scrap book will become a mine of wealth to speakers.

You would not stand idly by like an inanimate thing and see your brother cut down by an assassin, yet you do stand idle and with your hands folded while the cowardly assassin, Intemperance, is cutting down 60,000 of your brothers every year.

The reflex influence of active temperance work in the church is well worth our consideration. The liquor traffic is of all, the worst enemy of the church, and yet so many feel they have weightier work to attend to than that of combating the evil. Why is it readers?

* * * Whisky men may sneer at the temperance cause, but the fact cannot be ignored that the people of this country are looking this question in the face with a fearlessnes of thought never before known, and that workers for the cause are more numerous and more successful than ever before. Men may laugh and jeer, and sneer, and shake their heads, but they have to shut their eyes, close their ears and lose their power of perception not to know these things.

* * * The temperance movement is indestructible. It cannot be suppressod. It will live and triumph.

Its war with the drink curse has just commenced in dead earnest. No quarter will be asked or given. It will never eall retreat, but push on to final victory.

Come to this life-and-death struggle. Hasten from the mountain and valley. Gather from the city and from the farm. Let all enlist in the fight against rum and beer. The hour calls for heroic action. Show your colors, and act the man.

Whether we educate or not, the saloon-keepers appreciate the value of line upon line and precept upon precept. The rum shop has its literature, of which I would not speak. It has its music and its object lessons, fitted to go with its literature. Said a gentleman that had reformed. "In the rum-shop, conscience is a superstition, virtue a jest, the religion of Christ a cunningly devised fable, Christ an exploded myth. The name of God is heard alone in curses there, and immorality is but the feverish fancy of a mad man's brain. There is not a commandment of the decalogue; there is not a precept of the Sermon on the Mount, there is not a rule of life that ever fell from the lips of Christ, the violation of which is not hailed with plaudits in the saloon." So much for the educatton of the rum-shop. When may we best offset it, where and how? We may do this best in childhood, in the home, and in the public school, and especially in the Sabbath-school.—The Truth.

WILL THERE BE WAR?

The man with the red nose, who speaks broken English, declares, that the Smith bill is making slaves of us.

Men have fought, bled and died, but not for beer. Arnold Winkleried did not throw himself upon the Austrian spears because he was ordered to close his saloon at nine o'clock. William Tell did not hide the arrow under his coat to kill the tyrant because the edict had gone forth that the free-born Switzer should not drink a keg of beer every Sunday. Freedom did not shriek as Kosciusko fell across a whisky barrel. Warren did not die that beer might flow as the brooks ripple and murmur seven days a week. The fights around a barrel of whisky do not pass into history; they pass into police court records. Even the battle of Brandywine was not fought that whisky might be free. No clause in the Declaration of Independence declares that a Sunday concert garden, with five brass horns and sixty-eight kegs of beer, is the inalienable right of a free people, and the corner-stone of all good government. The battles of this world have been fought for grander things than free whisky. The heroes who fall in the struggle for the supremacy of rum are usually shot in the neck, and their martyrdom is generally clouded by the haunting phantoms of the james jams. There will be no temperance war. Whisky makes men fight, it is true, but they usually fight each other. And if they don't, the chances are all in favor of the temperance people. It is a poor sober man who can't get away with his drunken neighbor if he can get him drunk enough.—Burdette.

FRANCES E. WILLARD tells a little story that shows in striking contrast, the devilish spirit of the liquor traffic, and the kindly spirit of the Gospel. Rev. Mr. Boone had been largely instrumental in closing up the dramshops in Morillton, Ark. As the good man was leaving the town, when his work was ended, a venomous saloon-keeper came to the depot and spat in his face. Having done this, the miserable fellow took out his pistol and said, "Come on; I'm ready." "Oh, no," replied the good-natured minister, "I should be no match for you in the use of the weapons you have chosen."

THERE are some who tell us that drunkards' wives and ignorant women would not vote properly. Mrs. Livermore tells us that at midnight her Irish washerwoman wished to see her. The poor woman had fled in her night-clothing to escape the blows of a drunken husband. When Mrs. Livermore had comforted her, she said: "Please, ma'am, do you think that we poor women will soon vote?" Mrs. Livermore was puzzled at that question from such a source. "Please God, we women will vote to shut up the whisky shops."

THE Methodist ministers of Massachusetts, in a paper drawn up by Rev. Dr. Sherman, ex-presiding elder of the Boston district, Dr. Cummings, ex-president of Wesleyan University, and Dr. Warren, president of the Boston University, gave a full endorsement of the right of suffrage for women. It expressed "hearty and entire sympathy and cooperation" with our cause, and with the principles we advocate.

GOVERNOR ST. JOHN made the following good point in his Des Moines speech: "If the women of the country had the power of the ballot, there is not a politician who would not walk ten miles through the mud to shake hands with her."

LODGE DEPUTIES ANNUAL REPORTS.—During the present week annual reports from the Lodge Deputies of the following Lodges have been received and properly filed in the G. W. S. office and their receipt is hereby acknowledged:

Nos. 12, 27, 64, 111, 114, 116, 117, 124, 146, 167, 169, 177, 185, 194, 195, 199, 200, 211, 212, 217, 220, 236, 260, 263, 265, 272, 280, 297, 305, 307, 315, 335, 336, 344, 355, 368, 375, 380, 384, 385, 386, 392, 394, 397, 404, 405, 411, 419, 427, 442, 448, 464, 483, 486, 487, 488, 496, 499, and 507.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LODGE DEPUTIES.—Proper recommendations for Lodge Deps. for the next year ensuing have been forwarded and filed in the G. W. S. office during the past week, and their receipt is hereby acknowledged.

Nos. 27 51, 114, 116, 117, 120, 130, 143, 146, 148, 153, 163, 177, 180, 185, 194, 195, 199, 200, 211, 217, 237, 238, 247, 260, 261, 272, 275, 293, 297, 298, 300, 305, 307, 315, 320, 321, 335, 338, 368, 369, 375, 380, 384, 386, 392, 394, 397, 399, 405, 411, 436, 442, 444, 448, 452, 464, 470, 474, 483, 486, 487, 488, 499, 504, 507, 517.

CREDENTIALS RECEIVED.—Copies of credentials certifying the representatives elect to the next session of the Grand Lodge to be held in San Francisco, have been received at the G. W. S. office during the past week, and their receipt is hereby acknowledged from the following Lodges:

Nos. 27, 51, 105, 114, 116, 117, 120, 130, 143, 146, 148, 153, 163, 177, 180, 185, 194, 195, 199, 200, 207, 210, 211, 215, 217, 247, 260, 261, 263, 265, 270, 272, 279, 293, 294, 297, 298, 300, 305, 315, 320, 321, 335, 338, 346, 368, 375, 380, 382, 385, 386, 387, 392, 394, 397, 399, 400, 404, 410, 436, 442, 444, 448, 452, 464, 470, 474, 483, 487, 496, 499, 504, 507, 517.

DELINQUENTS.—A whole month has now passed since the opening of the current quarter, and, despite the fact that all deputies were especially urged to make prompt returns, because of the close proximity of the Grand Lodge session etc., there are nearly one hundred lodges whose returns have not yet been filed. These delinquents will be notified during the current week, and unless immediate responses are received the lodges will be cut off from the active list and so reported to the Grand Lodge. The books, and accounts of the G. W. S. must be closed in a few days and a report prepared for the Grand Lodge. Much work remains to be done in the G. W. S. office, and the delays mentioned amount to a very serious inconvenience.

PERSONALS.—The Grand Lodge office has recently been favored a number of calls from the members of the order among them were P. G. W. C. T., Rev. Dr. C. S. Haswell of Lodi Lodge No. 189, Lodi; Bro. P. Engle of Marysville Lodge No. 25, Marysville; Bro. L. W. Milsap of Yolo Lodge No. 163, Cacheville; Bro. W. O. Clark of Iron Clad Lodge No. 267 Drytown; the Brothers Rhoades of Cosumnes Lodge No. 183, Cosumnes; Sister Mrs. Wm. Sims of Winters Lodge No. 165, Yolo Co. Bro. and Sister S. O. Barker of Pleasant Prairie Lodge No. 429, Yolo Co.

BOULDER CREEK.—Rev. W. L. Stevens L. D. of Santa Cruz Lodge, recently lectured at Boulder Creek under the auspices of Pacific Lodge. He was greeted with a large audience who listened attentively and at the conclusion contributed the handsome sum of $11,25 for the benefit of the Home for Orphans fund, which contribution has been received through the hands of L. D. Bro. J. W. Peery.

WHOSE MONEY?—Two coin packages have been received in the office of the G. W. S. without advices or claimants. One package was forwarded from Stockton and has the name "Lillie" attached as consignor but no correspondent of that name is known in the G. W. S. office from that locality. The other package was sent from Chico without name or reference attached. Persons having made remittances from the offices named per W. F. express, whose remittances remain unacknowledged are requested to communicate with the G. W. S. at once giving particulars as to amount forwarded, for what purpose etc.

GLEANINGS:—Bro. Rufus Smith L. D. of Brentwood Lodge, Contra Costa County writes "The Republicans hereabouts rejoice at the exchange of whiskeyites for temperence men, and well they may. .....Bro. the Rev. Geo. Morris L. D. of Alameda Lodge reports it as "working ahead" and he adds "I must make special note of the entertainment which was recently gotten up under the direction of Bro. F. J. Krauth, for the benefit of the lodge and which will clear, I expect about $100 which will put the lodge out of a financial embarassment and secure it a good financial standing for a long time to come. We are also at work for the Home for Orphans" .....Bro. J. E. Hickman L. D. of Horicon Lodge, which is located on the coast of Sonoma County at Fishermans Bay after writing gratefully of the recent visit of Col. Goulding adds: "Our little lodge is a source of pleasure to such of us as are earnestly engaged in the temperance cause from principle, and hearing of the glorious work being done throughout the State, inspires us to press on, believing that California like Kansas and Iowa, will soon arise in her might and drive the fell destroyer from our land

HALF FARE TO COAST LODGES.—Through the courtesy of Messrs. Goodall, Perkins & Co., agents for the Pacific Coast Steamship Company, half fare rates have been secured for all representatives and visitors who will attend the next session of the Grand Lodge, which convenes in San Francisco October 3rd, next. The arrangement is, that all are to pay full fare coming and at the end of the journey take a check or certificate from the purser of the steamer certifying that they came on the P.C.S.Co. steamer giving the date and name of the steamer. Upon presentation of this check, accompanied with a certificate of attendance on the Grand Lodge, issued and countersigned by the G. W. S., the holder will receive from the agents of the company a FREE PASS to destination over their lines. This arrangement was secured upon the partial promise of a goodly attendante from the Coast Lodges and it is hoped many will avail themselves of the rare opportunity thus afforded to visit the Grand Lodge and the metropolis of the Pacific Coast.

The letter of Messrs. Goodall, Perkins & Co. is as follows:

PACIFIC COAST STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

San Francisco, Aug. 23d, 1882.

GEO. B. KATZENSTEIN, G. W. S.
Sacramento, Cal.

DEAR SIR: Yours of the 21st inst. is received. We beg to say that we will accept your suggestion regarding the delegates to your Grand Lodge, to purchase tickets at full fare from any place on the coast, to San Francisco, receiving therefore a check at the end of the voyage; and by presenting such check and certificate from you, that they attended the Grand Lodge, we will return them to the place from whence they came FREE.

Yours truly, GOODALL, PERKINS & CO.
General Agents.

Thus the coast logdes are made the "favored ones," and it is hoped they will manifest their appreciation by sending goodly delegations of representatives and visitors. This arrangement affects favorably some 75 lodges situated in the coast counties of Humboldt, Mendocino, Santa Cruz, Monterey, San Louis Obispo, Santa Barbara, Ventura, Los Angeles, San Bernardino, Santa Barbara and San Diego.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:
Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

J. W. WEBB.

From Gilroy I went to Gonzales where Bro. Mitchell had interested himself to get a hearing. Mr. Lamb of the Seventh Day Adventists very kindly profered the use of their large and well furnished preaching tent. I was much surprised at the large and intelligent audience, for the town had always been represented as a "hard" place and I had met with no encouragement about lecturing there. Sorry I had not given at least two nights. With more lectures and working persistently it is not impossible that a lodge might be started. I was assured that the citizens would hire a Hall for another lecture at any time. The collection exceeded in amount that obtained at San Jose, Gilroy or any other place during the month.

Mr. D. K. Edwards, R. R. agent and grain buyer, etc., is an excellent man, Supt. of the Sunday school, and ready for any good word or work. He was much interested, subscribed for the RESCUE, and is anxious for a Band of Hope in which he expects help from the lady teacher who is a member of Salinas Lodge. Bro. Crawford, D. D., and Bro. Bartly drove 18 miles to be present and help.

SOLEDAD is another small R. R. town which every body thinks unfavorable for temperance. Yet we had a full house, much interest, a number of signers to the pledge and a prospect for a lodge. Some one ought to follow up these unexpected openings of promise, soon.

Getting no word from Cholame, a long way off the road, I pushed on to San Luis and held three interesting meetings there—the last to a crowded house, on Sunday night, when I delivered my lecture "Nails in his coffin." They were preparing for District Lodge. I reached home a little after midnight, after nearly 2 months absence, but could tarry only till 9 A. M., when I drove my own team 45 miles so as to reach Santa Barbara District Lodge on the day following. We had a large attendance, a harmonious and profitable two days session, and a good public meeting each night. Here a telegram reached me from G. W. Sec. Houston, of Oregon, pleading for three months work there for the Order and to help in the struggle for Constitutional Amendment. My sympathies say "go," but due regard for my home, family and health, (which I am severely taxing tho so far it stands the strain pretty well,) make me shrink, yet I may respond to the Macedonian Cry. At any rate I am off duty for the Grand Lodge of our own State, for how long circumstances will determine. I hope I need not say that I shall miss no chance to help the Order, tho not in its employ.

NEVADA.

As a Temperance Field.

This State is not destined at present to grow in population; her barren wastes, to be seen in every direction, offer an unpromising outlook for permanent homes, at least until other States which blossom in the "wild," are settled. Then perchance man may sink the shaft, not for silver ore in the crude, but to bring forth the sparkling water, which spread out on this soil will yield the silver from the harvest fields of grain and hay. Then will homes be permanent. To-day the population is migratory; people are looking forward to the time when they can remove to a more congenial clime, enduring the absence of society and social life for the one object of making money. The State population is rapidly decreasing, and it has been estimated that in the last two years it has lost over 10,000, the reason for this is the giving out and thus closing down of so many large mines. The great "Comstock lode is a thing of the past; Virginia City is dead; property has no value. Carson, the capital, lives because she must board the Legislature. The R. R. towns, where there are division stations and machine-shops, will always be somewhat permanent, yet the railroad man is as uncertain of his position as a government official, liable to be removed at the pleasure of his superior. Farming interests are a matter of future experiment. Mining interests on the wane, railroad town populations changeable.—With such an outlook what permanency can be looked for in the way of societies?. I learn it is very difficult to keep up other societies such as Masons, Odd Fellows, etc., and as they have no common enemy to battle against, what hope for the church or temperance societies who are fighting an enemy which is so deeply entrenched in the State that there is about one saloon —wholesale or retail—to every 50 of the inhabitants or one to every 12 families.—In some towns, such as Battle Mountain and Eureka one license to every 15 of the inhabitants. And these towns show the effect; crimes of every description are committed in broad day light. The officers turn their backs, the newspapers laugh it off as a joke, that some poor "fellow was compelled to swallow a blue pill, and kick the bucket" because he had taken too much 'O be joyful,' whereby his tongue was loosed and he said unkind things." This is an item announcing the fact that in a drunken row on the streets a father was killed, a wife widowed and three children left to find a home in an orphan asylum, all for rum. There are of course a large class of excellent people in the State and many who believe in doing all the good they can wherever they are, such are the 70 of Nevada Lodge No. 25, located at Winnemucca, an earnest, zealous working band, working to protect their homes. They have a juvenile temple where they are training 60 boys and girls for future work. Carlin Lodge is an old rock of '75, that has stood the storm, and to-day is rapidly paying for a nice hall, to be known as the "Good Templar's Home" of Carlin. The brothers and sisters here deserve much credit for their faithfulness. Wadsworth has hoisted the Templar's flag with 30 charter members of the best of her citizens, and promises much good for the town.—Austin and Reno are living but not active. The new lodge at Genoa is doing good work. My visit thus far has been characterized by hard work but with fair results. Wadsworth, Winnemucca and Carlin lodges I shall long remember, for the welcome they gave me and the "God speeds" on my departure. I now go south and shall soon be in Cala. and attack Bodie. F. J. SOLANO CO., DISTRICT LODGE.

The following resolutions were adopted by the Dist. Lodge at Birds Landing, Aug. 19th.

WHEREAS, There is an organized effort to thwart the best endeavors of the friends of law and order, and to deprive innocent people of their rights as citizens; and seeing that in union there is strength;

Resolved, That we urge upon all friends of Temperance to use their influence and to vote for none but pure Temperance men for any office of trust,

That no true and virtuous lover of his country can afford to be neutral in the great issue now upon us, but must use his might and raise his voice for defense against the rum traffic.

That a committee of three be appointed to consider the relation of the Temperance cause in this county to the present political aspect and issues of the day and refer the same to the lodges under our jurisdiction.

That the chairman of said committee be and is hereby instructed to call a meeting as soon as practicable after the Republican convention.

That the Lodges be urged to promptness in sending delegates to any convention, that may be called by the prohibition party, looking to the adjustment of the temperance interests with the political issues before the people.

WHEREAS, Temperance people are prominent in efforts to enforce the Sunday law.

Resolved, That these efforts should be continued by precept and example, and a conscientious observance of that law upon the part of all Templars, thereby giving weight to the efforts against the rum traffic.

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Aug 19, 1882.

Te day we succeeded in completing the organization of S. L. O. Co. District Lodge with very good promise. There are but three Sub. Lodges in the county, but we expect the addition of Positive and Vesper Lodges of Santa Barbara Co.

We hardly know how to take up any line of work in this capacity, or what is expected of a District Lodge to do. It is to be hoped that there will not be much to do in the line of settling questions of dispute or points of order in Sub. Lodges; questions on appeal or requiring decisions from higher tribunals only serve to distract attention from the real and living issue; and the more the devil can stir up "doubtful disputations" the less of true temperance work will be done.

Another feature worthy of note occurred last week; it was a Rep. convention to elect delegates to the State convention. The convention was very unanimous in their instructions to the delegates to support and strengthen the "Sunday law." They also elected two very pronounced prohibitionists. How prohibitionists can be found in a Rep. party dont appear to me practicable, no more so than for a Democrat to be found in a Rep. party; these two were Hon. Geo. Steele, who is a G. T. and an earnest temperance worker and Hon. Frank Adams, who does not hesitate to speak for temperance and the suppression of the liquor traffic.

The past record of the Rep. party in this State and the nation has not been such as to inspire confidence in the temperance ranks, as their hostility to the traffic has been manifested only in the Quaker-gun style, but there are so many good, reliable temperance men, hoping and praying that their favorite party will keep up to its early record, that we cannot forbid them one more chance; and we can but hope that the party will be all they can ask.

I believe the rural districts are ready for prohibition, and it is in a manner phenominal that the first class temperance men in the country should so excel in valuable temperance sentiment and work the same class in the cities.

I very well know the truism that "the vice is in the city and the virtue in the country;" but I cannot understand why the foremost temperance men in the cities need take rank behind those of the country. Are they more dependent in the cities upon the traffic for bread and butter? it is undoubtedly the case sometimes that men find among their supporters those of "easy virtue" whom it will not do to offend. But surely we want to look for exemplars sometimes to those who have the superior advantage and excellencies of the cities; and I do really wish that metropolitan temperance citizens would take the political question of suppression of the liquor solely on its merits and treat it as it deserves. J. WOODS.

IN OTHER STATES.

PARIS last year had 49,000 arrests 40,000 of them male and 9000 females. Of the first 3 in 8 were boys; of the latter, 1 in 5 were under age. The butchers contributed 387 criminals; the bakers 201; cabdrivers 755; householders 66 and wine-sellers 2000. We had better in America hold on to our homes and part with our winesellers.

TEMPERANCE NEWS.—MISSOURI VALLEY (Ia.), August 25.—Despite the Governor's proclamation the saloons openly carry on business. The Prohibitionists know best whether they can prosecute successfully, since the Legislature failed to enact a penalty. A test case yesterday resulted in a complete victory for the saloon interest. The case was tried before Judge Donaldson,

CHICAGO, August 25.—About 100 German-Americans held a temperance convention to-day. Delegates were present from various parts of the country, the object being to form a German-American Temperance Association. Bishop J. G. Escherman of Chicago was elected Chairman, and a Committee on Constitution was appointed, who, after a brief retirement, submitted a report, which provides that any German may become a member by paying fifty cents yearly; its sessions shall be annual; an Executive Committee of nine shall be appointed; it shall publish an organ, have lectures, found branch associations, and otherwise promote the cause of temperance. The report was adopted. At the afternoon session an Executive Committee was appointed. Bishop Escherman of Chicago, president.

THE HON. WM. REDDECK who has been a warhorse of the Democrats for 40 years in Illinois has divorced himself from them and joined the Prohibitionists. His reason was the insolent demands of the saloonatics and German beerites who joined the Democrats and attempted to destroy the institutions of the Republic. Strange that people whom beer has starved out of one country should fight to establish an empire of beer-pauperism here. Another reason of Mr. Reddecks change was reading Miss Willards writings and speeches.

NEBRASKA. The prohibition campain has got under way in that State and is a very vigorous one. No dout of its winning. The captured States will be rapidly towed up into line now by the Prohibition Tug and anchored in Prosperity Bay.

NEW BRUNSWICK is vigorously enforcing the Canada Temperance Act.

THE REPUBLICAN Conventions of Kansas and Indiana, the Greenbackers of Ill., and the Prohibitionists of Ill. and Ohio have recently declared in favor of submitting a woman suffrage amendment to the people. The world is moving faster.

THE N. Y. Sun laments that people wont settle in Kansas now. But the Kansas people are tickled over getting five good settlers for one that came before and only one jailbird for ten, and one rumselling thief for a thousand that came before. It is surprising what an amount of paralytic intellect is employed on big journals.

THE SALVATION ARMY. Mrs. Booth, the wife of General Booth, made a strong appeal to the Queen of England for a few pennies out of her accumulated 150 million, to enable the army to buy the Grecian Theatre for public use in the reformation of the City of London. An answer came and was read at one of the meetings. It said "the Queen had heard with much satisfaction of your success in your efforts to win many thousands to the ways of temperance, virtue and religion. I regret however to have to inform you that Her Majesty cannot contribute to the fund, etc." The reading of the letter "elicited enthusiastic cheers," but what the subject for cheers is not stated. Probably the honor of hearing from the Queen at all, or the knowledge that Her Majesty was so liberal with her "satisfaction."

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

WRITE OFTEN TO THE OLD FOLKS.

"Write often to the old folks,"
I heard a young man say
Unto the lad who with him walked
One bright and spring-like day:
"I know that my dear parents
Can scarce afford to wait
Until they get the letter long
From me or sister Kate.

"I fancy I am there, Will—
So many miles away—
I see them both, the dear old folks,
With heads so bent and gray;
I see them take the letter out,
And scan its pages o'er—
Will, write a letter once a week
If you can do no more."

Ah! yes, my lads and lasses—
From home so many miles—
Away from Father's kind advice
And mother's loving smiles;
Pray, don't forget the old folks,
They think so much of you,
And write a letter once a week,
Whatever else you do.

And let your words be tender—
With fond expression then—
For well they cherish every line
That comes from our dear pen;
Their days may not be many—
Their journey's almost through—
Write often to the old folks, then;
They think so much of you!

JUVENILE TEMPERANCE WORK.

By Julia Colman. Tract 167.

(Concluded.)

There are those who shrink from the hard work which all this implies. They say, Let it be done in the Sunday-schools, we are glad to have the Sunday-school lend it their sanction, but they can not do much real Temperance teaching, unless the teachers, as individuals, are Temperance workers and intelligent on Temperance topics. They can not well teach that which they do not know, and to which they have paid little or no attention. Beside this, they have not sufficient time for it. The same remarks will apply to the day-school teachers. Some of these may teach Temperance science passably well, though they will not be likely to do that unless they are definitely Temperance workers, and then in many cases they will meet with difficulties almost impossible to overcome. In neither case will they have the opportunity nor the freedom to unite the grand requisites of Temperance teaching as they would have in a distinctively Temperance school. Here we can unite intelligence and religion—too long separated. Here we can set up the standard, and show what true temperance teaching means, and what kind of men and women it will turn out; and this is much better than asking others to set the standard for us. The standard we aim at is an intelligent acquaintance with the nature and the effects of alcoholic drinks, so that the pupil may be able to meet effectively the arguments of their apologists; and then such religious temperance training that where the right and wrong are known, he will stand by his convictions every time. Dear sisters and friends, shall we try for this high standard?

The next question is, How can it be undertaken to the best advantage?

Consider it well, so that you may commence it rightly. The children are to be both interested and instructed, and this can not be done in a mere children's "society" managed by themselves. Get a copy of the "Juvenile Temperance Manual,"* and study the Plan given in the introduction, to see how you can adapt it to your wants and circumstances. Many Temperance schools are now in successful operation on this Plan, with the Catechism in the hands of the children and the Manual in the hands of the Superintendent.

Enlist your friends, and especially teachers and Sunday-school teachers. Give them to read leaflets Nos. 7 and 16, "To the Teacher," and to the Sunday-scool Teacher." Distribute in public audiences, one kind at a time, the tract "Temperance and the Children," the leaflet "Educate the Better Classes," and the tract now in your hand. Pray and work and persevere patiently, wisely, prayerfully. The juvenile work is the purest and most hopeful of any branch of Temperance work, and we may rest assured that it has the blessing of Him who said, "It is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish."

To the parent into whose hands this may fall, we urge the warmest cooperation with any such plan. Encourage your children to come. See that they are ready promptly for every meeting with their lessons well-learned. Take an interest in their progress, and, if possible, attend with them, just as you would in Sunday-school.

To all the friends of Temperance we would say, make yourselves thoroughly acquainted with the nature, the plans, and the prospects of this juvenile work, and enlist teachers so far as practicable. In no other way can you accomplish more throro temperance work for the present and the future. Many gratefully testify that nowhere else have they ever found so many practical suggestions for all kinds of temperance work, as in this Plan, with its helps. Lend a hand, friends, and you will find a blessing, and bestow a blessing upon the work and the world. And if you feel disposed to write to the author for any practical adaptations of the work, she will always be glad to help you if possible. 76 Bible House, N. Y.

CONNECTICUT.

The bible tells us that very early in history men and women told falsehoods when sober. And no dout some sober people have lied and do lie till this day. But it is a monstrous pity that any one should ever do so directly or indirectly, secretly or openly or in any degree.

But the great enemy of truth is the drink. Dr. B. W. Richardson, the greatest of living scientific physicians often tells us that large numbers of physicians in England agree in the assertion that when the appetite for drink is once established, the drinker's power or inclination to speak the truth is lost.

Probably more falsehoods have been spoken in defence of drink and the sale of drink than about all other things else during the last 40 years. Wicked men have declared ten thousand times that where the sale of liquor is prohibited there is more drunkenness, which is impossible.

In Connecticut there are about 3,000 licensed dram-shops and there were 4,332 prisoners sent to the jails last year, beside those sent to state prison and to the Reform schools. All but 200 of these were rum-drinkers. And where there are no grog-shops open or secret there is no need of jails whatever except to take care of the criminals that rum sends from other states. Except in 3 or 4 of the large towns where a little rum is still sold on the sly the jails in Maine are nearly all unused for anything but tramps and strangers.

LOVE THE TRUTH, BOYS.

A few weeks ago a political party resolved to pursue a mean and wicked policy and to betray the people of this State to the Leag of Fiendom, the worst enemies the boys and girls ever had—and they said in doing so, that their party inherited the doctrines of Jefferson and Jackson. They said they were following their doctrines when they agreed with the Leag of outlaws to let them sell rum on Sunday to the boys and destroy the Sabbath, provided the saloons and the drunks, whom they hold as slaves, would vote for them next election. They had agreed to sell the boys and girls of California to the rum faction for a few wicked perjured votes.

Jefferson and Jackson; imagine either of these heroes of American history, entering into a contract with a gang of open rebels and outlaws; selling them the liberties and lives of the American people; allowing them to spit upon the laws and institutions and subvert the time-hallowed usages of this country—all for the votes of a few traitors and ruffians.

Jefferson when his country was in peril manfully risked his all and his life in his country's defence, was the Author of the Declaration of independence and was thru life a vigorous and vigilant enemy of all traitors and treason and of all foes of his country.

Jackson: there was nothing of the Leag of Fiendom or the beer-diver about him. His doctrine was to defend his country from all enemies within and without. As a general he was successful in the field; as a president his course of treatment of traitors was such that there is good reason to believe, he would have strung up every man who would have dared to publish an open defiance of the law, and persist in actual rebellion, as the so-called Leag of Freedom has done and is doing here.

Only one doctrine of these two men has been inherited by modern politicians. That is, "To the victors belong the spoils." That was an unfortunate doctrine of brave, patriotic, passionate, obstinate Jackson; who had failings like other men, but no such failings as traitors have. He believed that those who labored to carry an election should be rewarded by all the offices and their former occupants should be turned out to make room for them.

He of course meant well but erred in judgment, for experience has shown that this doctrine has led to evils incalculable. The new officers cannot properly perform their duties and the scramble to get the salaries of office and to turn out those who hold them, has led to deceit, falsehood, trickery, treachery, and vileness among politicians. The "pure patriotism" which actuated the founders of this republic has degenerated into the despicable principle of "selfish aggrandizement," at any cost to the interests of the commonwealth.

Politics should mean "the art of securing the greatest good and glory of the nation and of all its people." It is a calamity to have it degraded down to mean the "art of self-aggrandizement," regardless or all else. It is a long downward flight from pure patriotism to sordid selfishness and falsehood.

The principal agent of this debasement of politicians and politics has been of course the grogshop, which makes market and sale of Sunday, Christmas, Fourth of July, thanksgiving, election day and elections, to trade them for cion. They have made a universal practice of debauching both the men who have votes and the men who want votes, and they have always worked for the men who would buy them at the largest price. When our boys of to day grow up their votes will not be traded off at a grog-shop for a drunken vomit. They will not sacrifice their mothers and sisters, wives and dauters to the red nosed betrayer of all virtue.

What politicians really should say, when they make a public declaration of principles is, "inheriting the doctrines of Benedict Arnold and Aaron Burr, we do this to get the vote of the lager beer brewers; that, to get the vote of the hoodlums; the other, to get the vote of the city jailbirds which the saloons can buy for a couple of doses of soul poison. Therefore boys, if you should ever be so unfortunate as to do anything mean, dont make yourselves meaner by adding a falsehood to it, and saying it was like Jefferson or Washington or St Paul. Far better own up you did it because it was the devil's doctrine to do wrong.

SOUTH AMERICA.

About 20 miles from Tuquerres we arrived at a town, a great center of trade and industry. From here to Tuquerres there is not exactly a road but an improvement in the trail which permitted loads to be carried on horses, mules, cows, bulls, heifers, any of which could travel there at a slow and careful pace. The idea of wagons or carts had not penetrated the intelligences of these people. But they were very proud of the advance of civilization they had made, from carrying loads on the backs of cattle and horses.

Here the weary traveler could get a breakfast of fresh eggs or chicken and if it was before 10 A. M. could probably get bread before the daily stock was consumed. And after the long walk of 80 miles there was the luxury of riding into town rested. The price of a horse to go the trip was about $1.50 but they determined that a stranger should be honored a good deal more than $1.50 and out of compliment they put up the price of horses to $7.50 for me, while any horse they had for hire was not worth more than $5 to buy him out. And the animal could only be let to go half way. Besides it required a second horse or a man to carry the baggage and an Indian was much cheaper than the horse. So, rather than be fleeced by these cormorants I concluded to foot it to the next station about half way to Tuquerres.

Strangely those people would go a long way and do a great deal of work for a dollar or for twenty-five cents, but they unanimously turned a deaf ear to an offer from me of $4 for a service not worth one third of it; and seemed quite independent about money matters. Next day a "magnificent" horse was procured to go the remaining days travel of about a dozen miles. The animal was stiff on three of his legs and lame on the other and having been accustomed to be discouraged and stimulated with spurs his performance without them was not a success and to overcome that horse's inclination to stand still and study out some new invention in machinery that he seemed to be planning, was a harder exercise than walking. When we came to a place where he had to climb up or down a perpendicular steep the temptation was strong to abandon the conflict and get off and foot it the rest of the journey.

It was a new thing to see a plateau with cattle grazing here and there for several miles. Their food was a kind of wild grass which grows in bunches almost like hills of corn. It seemed that the cultivation of these plains and the introduction of a vigorous grass would produce a five or ten fold amount of pasturage, but it is not likely a sod has ever been turned in these wild fields since the Spaniards planted their language and religion and habits in the country; the first only being an improvement upon the system it supplanted, and the last being a very sad demoralization.

Sometime we passed a farm of one-third of an acre to 2 or 3 acres planted with potatoes, corn etc. The plowing is executed with a single ox or a cow hawling a wooden concern bearing the faintest resemblance to a plow; it scratched up the ground a little, enough for those people to put in their crops. For 7 or 8 miles near Tuquerres there is almost a carriage road but there are no carriages or carts to travel on it. Poles for the roofs of houses are brot into town from the country by two cattle yoked together and one end of each pole made fast to the yoke, the other dragging on the ground.

The houses are built of baked adobe and roofed with tiles of firebaked clay; generally the only light comes thru the open door, but in the better houses there are sliding boards for windows but not a pane of window glass in Tuquerres. Arrived here we are in a busy mart of trade; valuable cargoes of many backloads of foreign goods arrive here for distribution into the farther interior on horseback and many backloads of Peruvian Bark, India rubber etc. intended for Europe and provisions intended for Barbacoas daily sail out into the dense forests and over the mountains from Tuquerres.

It was not an ordinary occasion for a stranger to come to town with letters of recommendation from Barbacoas and an order from P.F.Castilla & Co. on the principal merchant to give him "all the money he may ask for;" so a vacant upper story of a large building fronting on the plaza was fitted up for my use. The only furniture in it on my arrival was a couple of ratholes in the floor and a ponderous door key which belonged to a monstrous lock that seemed to have come over with the early Spanish discoverers 300 years ago. They said they would come soon with the fittings and toward evening, they brot the disjointed fragments of a beadstead which when put together and well tied up was a passable safe thing to get on board of very carefully. This with a calabash of water and a tin basin to wash in and a box of matches completed the furniture. But next day a candlestick was added.

All of this was very kind of these people and well meant and it was an unusual exercise of hospitality. Of course the town restaurant furnished meals to all who called for them at 40 cents a day. And it was considered a feeding place of unsurpassed excellence and variety. Coffee, chocolate, eggs, soup, meats of various kinds and bread were to be had at this Southern Delmonico's.

There was a great number of shops with little 25 cent lots of lemons, oranges, onions and vegetables of various kinds and possibly a few boxes of matches and half a dozen other trifles. But the stocks were generally very low on Thursday and Friday. Saturday, trade was a little brisk in anticipation of the great day of commerce, Sunday.

All towns in Spanish America have a plaza for a market, and every one has got an old fountain which has got out of repair and out of use; as a general thing the human carrier or the donkey with his saddle kegs is less liable to get out of repair than the water pipes; so the law of survival of the fittest prevails there and the fountain gets left. Tuquerres has a fine fountain but in the memory of man it has been unused except as a refuge from a bull that gets loose and scatters his enemies. While there I saw the mayor of Tuquerres make a hasty retreat to the fountain, arriving about 3 feet ahead of the horns of one of those animals who had become suddenly excited and whose excitement was as suddenly imparted to all the spectators in the vicinity.

The plaza, generally unoccupied on other days, is quite a scene of gay activity on Saturday morning; a great many people have arrived from the country during the night and at sunrise are seated around their little stores of fruit, vegetables, sweetmeats, sugar, coffee, tobacco, shoes, alpargates, hats, pottery and about all the productions natural and industrial of the country. As they sell a few articles and get a few dimes in money, the country people go into the shops which surround the plaza and purchase imported goods.

The principal article of commerce in the shops was unbleached cotton which was sold at fifteen to thirty cents a yard; next, the coarse blue flannel or black, two yards of which is a woman's dress from the waist down; gaily colored cotton handkerchiefs are about next in demand and gaudy cotton prints, 2 or 3 yards of which make the upper story of a female dress. Sometimes an aristocratic, well-to-do family from the country would launch out extravagantly in a whole calico dress of 5 or 6 yards, but that was unusual.

Saturday seemed to me the business day till I saw one Sunday, when at sunrise every foot of the plaza was occupied and the crowd projected into some of the outleading streets. It was a gay looking scene, as gay a crowd as could be got up with a plenteous blending of the brightest scarlet, blue, purple, and green in the garments and adornments of the people. They trafficked and sold and ate and made merry all day Sunday, went to the shops and made purchases; looked in and spent a half-dollar at the cockfights going on in town and occasionally one would drop into the church where the priest for an hour or so did his best, with exceedingly bare results, to attract a few interested hearers. The cockfight and the ubiquitous whisky-mill was altogether too much for the church there, altho they were building a new adobe church 140 feet by 40.

My friend Victor Roderiguez, a devout Catholic, and an exceptional believer in the sacred rest of the Sabbath, had his busy day Sunday; on other days he could have done 4 or 5 times the work of his store alone, but on Sunday his educated and talented wife was actively helping him sell and measure off his cotton and woolen goods and his little dauter was also pressed into service to watch that the Indian customers did not nip anything, a habit they attribute to that race of natives.

A CHURCH MEMBER DRUNK.

BY JOHN B. GOUGH.

I remember one man in the very church I attended, as long ago as 1827. He became converted. I knew his antecedents, and I said to him: "Stowell, I want you to sign the temperance pledge." Said he "I would, Mr. Gough, if I was not a Christian." I said, "Why should that hinder you?" "Because the grace of God is able to keep me now and I don't want any temperance pledge or temperance societies. I want to show my young friends that the grace of God is able to keep me without any other agency whatever." Very good idea, but the province of the grace of God is not to prevent drink from affecting a man's brain and nervous system if he drinks. You can poison a Christian to death just as quick as you can a Hottentot; and if a man brimming over with the grace of God and a man who doesn't believe in the grace of God take prussic acid together they will go down together. It is folly to talk of the grace of God preventing physical effects from physical causes.

That man kept a little general store, and drove into the city to get a load of goods. When he got in—it was a drizzling afternoon—he took a glass of brandy and water to keep out the cold. When he got his goods loaded up, he took another—only two. When he came out to the square in the village he got off from the wagon and backed himself against the thills and there he stood. Some one said, "You are drunk." So he was.

There were young men there that did not like church members; they that sneered at the revival. "It was 'nuts' to them; they gathered around him. That is one of them! That's a new convert—converted in the revival! Made a speech in the prayer meetin' last Thursday night! Set him up! Old fellow, now give us some talk!"

That man disgraced the church, they said. So they disciplined him, and it broke his heart. He came to me after giving up that little store and said: "Give me some work on your farm," and I did, and he worked for me eighteen months. "I have given up all business, all hope; they have disgraced me," Why? Because he could not stand two glasses of brandy and water. If he had stood it they would not have touched him, not one of them. He might have drank twenty glasses, and stood it, and the church would have taken no action whatever in the matter. Now I know men in that church who drink more than two glasses every day of their lives. I would like to see the church undertake to touch them. Oh, wouldn't there be a row! Touch me! Anybody ever see me drunk? Don't touch me! He could not stand it, that is all. There are some men who can stand it, and some men who cannot stand it. You say it is because they are weak-minded. I say the mind has very little to do with it. If a man is weak-minded because he yields to temptation, and acquires this awful appetite, what do you say of a man who breaks it? Ah, it requires some nerve, some vim, some force, some decision of character, something of the iron will to break a bad habit.

I attended a lodge recently when two young boys came in during lodge work; I was pleased with the easy, graceful swing they gave to the salutation. There is nothing stunted, mean or weak in our organization, and it is shameful to see how wonderfully like this some salute on entering the lodge room. Give full free play to the muscles, a large liberty to the forearm, and you can't help but make a graceful movement, and one which will help you to steer clear of littleness all the evening.—D. W. HOOKER.

If the drunkard is such an offender and his business the source of all crime why should not the law recognize the fact and punish the rumseller as the great criminal. If the man intoxicated commits murder and is by our law to be hung, we certainly hang the effect and let the cause go. I think I should be in favor of reversing this, and hanging the cause as more consistent with common sense.—FATHER TAYLOR.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

THOSE BADGES. It has been published in the columns of the RESCUE, and also in a circular sent to every Band of Hope, that only one badge is to be given to each member; that if any member loses, or breaks his badge, he is to pay ten cents for the second one; also that the money for these badges sold, is to be sent to this office in postage stamps. Now while many Superintendents report badges sold, very few of them send the money with their report. My dear Supts., can you not see that the money for these badges, belongs, not to your Band of Hope treasury, but to the Grand Lodge. The bills for supplies for the juvenile work have been very large this year, and it is needful that every precaution should be used by Supt's. to reduce them as much as possible. Now if you sell ten badges, that is only $1.00 to be sure, but if every Band does the same, there will be nearly $200.00 to come into the treasury and help pay the large sum that these supplies have cost during the year. Now will you not keep a careful account of badges distributed, and in no case give the second one to any member without collecting ten cents, and remember that this money belongs to the Grand Lodge, not to the Band of Hope.

Those Supt's. who state in their reports, a number of badges sold, and have neglected to send stamps for the same, will confer a favor upon the Grand Lodge and myself, by remitting the amount due at once.

DELEGATES. Every Band of Hope in good standing, is entitled to one delegate to the Grand Lodge.

This delegate must be a Good Templar and have attained honors of W. C. T. or P. W. C. T., or, if a lady, W. V. T. or P. W. V. T. A certificate of election must be made out and signed by the Supt. and Secretary, and forwarded to Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento.

The delegate should be elected by the Band of Hope, at the first regular meeting after publication of this notice, and certificate of election forwarded immediately to the office of G. W. S.

DELINQUENT BANDS. Those Bands who have failed to send in reports, must bear in mind that unless reports are forthcoming, and soon, they will not be entitled to representation in the Grand Lodge, and that further supplies will be denied them.

It is such a small amount of labor to fill out the blanks and return to this office, no Band ought to become delinquent.

Attend to the report at once, if you have not already done so, and secure your delegate a seat in the Grand Lodge, which convenes Oct. 3rd, in San Francisco.

VACATION. This office will be closed for a short time as the Supt. is about to enjoy a vacation.

Those ordering supplies will not think it strange if their orders are delayed a few days.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE PRESS AND THE PULPIT.

Seldom is the Secular Press chargeable with a failure to do its whole duty, in setting the pulpit to rights, whenever a unit of that institution at all traverses the strictest line of orthodox demeanor. Never in all history has there been any other class of men(or women either) so thoroly and enthusiastically virtuous as is the newspaper press of to-day—on the one point of guarding the virtue of the pulpit. To this virtue of the press should be awarded the loftiest praise, from the fact that it is about the only one of its qualities, in every day use, that could be conscienciously labeled a "virtue."

The grandly useful services of the press, in preserving the purity of the pulpit, have earned a weighty debt of gratitude; it being understood of course, that the journalistic example and practice have been as potent in elevating, purifying influences as its daily utterances and its guardian-angelship over the pulpit have been.

The pulpit too should confess a grateful appreciation of its obligations to the press. Seeing that "eternal vigilance is the price" of purity and virtue, as well as "of liberty," the value of the supervising vigilance of the press over the purity and virtue of the pulpit has been inestimable. It is doutful if strict justice will ever be accorded in this particular. Many a daring feat of journalistic virtue, that might have glorified a page of heroic history, may have, in the sweet by and by, to stay out in the lonely desert and in silence waste its fragrance, by the side of the flower that was "born to blush unseen."

Let us imagine a condition of society in which a Hearst or Estee or Harrison, a sugar monopoly, a railroad or a leag of free-rum and no Sunday, could send agents all over the city and State and buy up the pulpits; set each one of them to inventing libels and scandals detrimental and disgraceful to its rival's political bantams. Think of all the pulpits being hired or buldosed to silence as to the sorest and gravest and most grievous abuses; being bribed to charge all modern sins and evils to female extravagance, or to Chinamen or to the tarif; or to magnify and praise the wine and brandy manufacture as the greatest blessing of civilization. Or think of political candidates buying up a string of pulpits, to preach for them exclusively.

We have only to imagine such a possibility for a moment, to appreciate the blessing of being relieved from all danger of it. And who can tell how far the pulpit might or would have fallen by this time, but for the conserving, vigilant oversight of the virtuous press, whose very last living member would gladly sacrifice his all, and throw in his own entire stock of personal and partnership virtues too, to secure the absolute immaculacy of the pulpit.

San Francisco has recently witnessed two touching instances of the affectionate, selfsacrificing devotion, which the press ever manifests toward the pulpit. The Examiner was compelled to enter a tearful protest against a Mission Street church, which it has detected slipping away from the apostolic traditions. It harbored an usher guilty of distributing anti-leag of Fiendom club tickets, and its pulpit was "sus pected" of stepping over the gospel traces into the field of Sunday-law politics. Who shall measure the length and breadth of the demoralization which might have overtaken that church and pulpit, had not the saintly Examiner interposed its purifying, sanctifying offices and summoned the transgressors to instant repentance and amendment?

Then the Chronicle has for more than a year personated the Angel of mercy hovering over the Metropolitan Temple. The shadow of a possible impending calamity of fire on some occasion, when that building is crowded, broods over the office of that journal, dwarfs the sprightliness of its editorials and casts a gloom over its entire being, including its foreign correspondence, notably over its Irish M. P. The Chronicle mournfully insists that the entire safety of that beloved pulpit and its hearers can only be assured by a contractors bill of $5000 more, incurred in making the doors and stairs wider and more numerous. It is willing to see the congregation make that sacrifice to allay the journalistic disquiet. What a loving, watchful, protective guardianship the press is determined to throw all round the pulpit, in spite of every discouragement. What a safeguard to the republic to have its pulpits under such thoroly capable, vigilant, and consciencious supervision.

PLATFORMS.

It is already an indication of a positive forward movement of the temperance reform in this State, that the discussion and treatment of the Sunday law and prohibition question, have awaked and called up into prominent activity a better class of men in both the old parties. In the Democratic, the better class has come out in positive protest against the committal of the party, by the worst of its leaders and campfollowers, to a surrender of our most precious American institutions and heritages, at the summons of a ring of ruffians, malefactors and outlaws whose proper place, according to the laws and usages of all civilized countries, is the penitentiary;—a class entirely of men whose business is altogether destructive to every good interest and is in our better populations declared infamous by law.

In the Republican party which has had the opportunity of more time to study the question and observe the results of the action of their opponents, a better class of men have come to the front to actual work in the primaries and have sent a more moral, temperate, respectable element to the State Convention than has gone there for years—this is more especially the case from the country districts, where prohibition would carry even now by large majorities, if the people could get to vote on it.

At the time of going to press, nothing is known of what will be done in Convention. But it is hoped the old ring of politicians who are the sworn adherents of the Leag of Fiendom, may be made to give place to better men; and the argument discarded that present advancement is due to any one because of his active assistance years ago, in sending a drunken liquor seller to disgrace this State as its representative in the National Capital. It is to be hoped that such claims will be hooted out, and the Convention will select and nominate candidates that can be approved and trusted by the people.

And now that one party has rendered its own success impossible except under the one condition that the other will follow its mad and miserable example it will be silly indeed to the last degree, to throw away the certain guarantees of success for the sake of placating the vote of a pack of traitors, whose following ot to doom any party to defeat that permits it.

It is believed that the better material of that convention will govern the wording of the platform and the choosing of the candidates. For there are some candidates whom to trust on the law of Moses and the sermon on the mount as a platform would have no better result than swearing a Chinaman on a decapitated rooster.

There is one thing that would above all others secure a ring of joyous ratifying applause from the northern to the southern limit of the State; the adoption of an open constitutional amendment platform and the placing of sober, honest, decent, clean, temperance men on it from Governor down. Nothing else would so absolutely and completely ensure the largest majority the ticket ever had. But some of the principal barnacles of the party, the meanest of its parasites, would go out and help to rot some other party, as they have done their present one.

Some few people would be content with a Sunday law promise. But they either have no objection to the sale and use of whisky or are utterly inexperienced and ignorant as to the effect of restrictive laws. It is a farce too silly to notice, the asking for a Sunday law alone as a temperance or moral or possible measure. It is too cowardly an issue to command any respect, and too helplessly imbecile an effort to tempt any one to make it, whose assistance would be of any avail.

Until we can get sufficient help to drive out this devil worship all the week, the nearer the beer barrel gets to the pulpit the better. Until we can decide to destroy the devil worship or declare war against it to that end, we might as well worship that master 7 days as 6. There is no good interest benefited by any open wicked shameful leag with Satan, as a Sunday law and six days license to crime would be and is.

JUST AS GOOD WINE.

The "Scientific American" says:—The loss of vines through the ravages of the phylloxera is forcing the wine makers of France to strenuous efforts to find a substitute. M. A. Deleuil, a member of the Agricultural Society of France, insists that an acceptable substitute has been found in a variety of red beet root, which he describes as "unrivaled in the whole world for its incomparable qualities, which will in time replace all that we have lost in the vine. Beet root produces alcohol of superior quality; why, then, should not its pulp, treated like the must of the grape, produce an equally luscious beverage? In fact, this has been done; the very sweet red beet root produces by fermentation a wine quite as good as many of the "soi-disant" wines of our southern vineyards. It possesses the additional advantage of accommodating itself to all soils, and flourishes in most climates."

That to people who dont know what wine really is seems inexplicable; but it is simply true. The phylloxera destroyed one-third, and then a half and then more than half of the grapes of France, and the people drink a little more every year of the same kind of wine, export just the same amount of the same kind and only import enough more to supply one thirty-fifth part of the deficit. The wine too remains at the same price and all that is needed is made from beets, turnips, potatoes, dried grapes currants, dates, prunes, apples, from rum and whisky and all the refuse of sugar and rotten fruit and vegetables—and the wine is just as pure, just as good, just as wholesome and the same every way as the best wine made from the ruined, rotted, prostituted corpse of the grape.

And it is a truism, however the wine maker in the country may squirm at it, that a clever liquor doctor can make in Salt Lake City or in Esquimalt just the same wine in every respect that is made in Los Angeles or Sonoma counties, and just as pure and wholeseme; with only beets, turnips, potatoes, apples—or from glucose or sugar or alcohol, water and a few harmless drugs—much less harmful than the alcohol.

After he has made it the California wine maker cannot tell it from his own and this wine made from potatoes and turnips will contain just as much of the grape as the other with an infinitesimal exception.

All there is of any kind of fermented wine is alcohol, water, a trifle of sugar and a fraction of a fraction of flavor or coloring from the skin and offal of the grape. All the food matter of the grape is rotted out; there is none of it in the wine. The sugar of the grape is gone and becomes alcohol. And glucose is absolutely the same, whatever made from, as the sugar in the grape; so it and the water are identically the same in grapes or potatoes; and the color and flavor are the same in the grape offal or in the druggists bottles and jars.

To suppose that people are drinking the juice of the grape or any thing related to the vine, when they drink any alcoholic or fermented wine is a most preposterous folly. If a man should go into the Washington fishmarket and standing in the strongest odor of stale fish, take a drink of fiery potato whisky and then tell you he had made a nice breakfast of codfish balls you would laugh at him; but he would be as near the truth as one who drinks wine and says he has used grape juice or the fruit of the vine.

So the man who drinks a glass of corn whisky is mistaken if he says he has just had a nice plate of batter pancakes and honey such as they have at the Quaker Dairy 114 Sutter St.; altho he has drank a liquid poison made from exactly the same material that could have been made into good wholesome pancakes and syrup. And the man who drinks potato whisky and calls it fish balls, who thinks a bottle of Antioch distilled benzine is a loaf of graham bread is not a particle more out of his reckoning than the pitiable simpleton who buys a costly bottle of champagne and thinks it has the least relation to the bunch of grapes pictured on the label, or dreams it is anything more than a pint and a half of well water with four cents worth of alcohol and half a cents worth of other trash mixed in with it.

Wine vineyards down cellar in San Francisco, supplied by artesian wells and alcohol from potatoes or glucose will be profitable to half a dozen establishments of wine fabricators for the few years that fools will be permitted to shelve their carcasses in the alms houses and lunatic asylms and live on the honest industry that pays taxes. But the vineyard men out in the country will get just as much share of the profits of this business, as the orgran grinder's monkey gets for his share of the pennies he picks up during the street performance. An organ grinder's monkey is not considered a member of either the learned or esthetic professions. Therefore when grapes honestly used are going to be the grandest source of agricultural wealth the world has ever seen; and when everybody knows that the prostitution of grapes into liquid poison is not only a crime and a producer of crime and that it always has been, is, and never can help being, the most comprehensive and accursed destroyer of property and the most prolific source of pauperism and general ruin —our wine and brandy makers will cease their mad course of self-destruction and their treason to humanity.

SILVER STAR.

The address of Col. Babcock on Sunday evening last on moderation and prohibition was as usual with him interesting, instructive and well received. He eloquently defined the various gradations between moderation and drunkenness, placing the line of the latter very close to the beginning of the other, so as to include a goodly portion of the field.

He also showed the futility of the effort proposed by some to get a Sunday law sure and let the prohibitory movement wait. Tho to a superficial worker it might seem a step forward or a gain to the cause of temperance it would be of no avail whatever to anything, and very many of the liquor sellers would be willing to make that compromise, knowing that a Sunday law prohibition coupled with a six days license is a farce which they could very easily get away with. Such a sequel too to a season of active temperance work would be a cowardly surrender of the question to which only cowards could think of consenting.

As is usual in California audiences the most radical prohibition sentiments expressed by the speaker elicited the most hearty applause. And the Colonels utterances in confident hope of the coming equality of suffrage and privilege for women were warmly applauded. Mrs. Foltz will address the meeting next Sunday.

FOR THE ASSEMBLY.

To the Voters of Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties.—Gentlemen:

Very kind notices of me, as a suitable person for the arduous and responsible position of Assemblyman, have recently been made in some of the papers and by private individuals, but dislike to enter the political arena made me hesitate. Within the last week, however, so many earnest and apparently well-considered requests to allow my name to be used, accompanied by asuurances of hearty support of many voters of the different parties in both counties, compel me to believe I ought not to refuse at this particular crisis, when there seems to be such a need and opportunity to do faithful and conscientious work for Temperance, Morality, Anti-Monopoly, and economical government. Therefore, with a due feeling of responsibility, I announce myself as a CANDIDATE FOR THE ASSEMBLY, SUBJECT TO THE VOTES OF THE PEOPLE OF THE DISTRICT.

This is a more independent method of announcement than usual, but I am persuaded there never was a time when manly, independent action and freedom from entangling alliances with "rings," cliques, and "machine" or professional politicians was more appreciated. And if THE PEOPLE do not want me for the office, I am sure the office I do not want.

If elected, I pledge myself conscientiously and perseveringly to seek the "greatest good of the greatest number" of the two counties, impartially, and of the State at large.

Respectfully, Your Fellow-citizen,
Lompoc Record. JAMES W. WEBB.

It would afford a pleasure to give a list of reasons why all good citizens, Republicans, Democrats and Temperance men should vote and work for Bro. Webb's election. But it takes less time and space to ask some one to give ONE RESPECTABLE REASON why a good citizen or a bad citizen should not vote for him and work to see him elected. There is not an honest decent interest in the State which could be injured by Bro. Webb as a legislator.

Not one but would be sure to receive justice at his hands. Not a good citizen would be injured or subjected to injustice with his consent. Not a bad citizen but Bro. Webb has always been trying to make better and happier and will always be so employed.

Not a reason why he should not be elected unanimously. But, says some one, he is not the regular nominee. That means he has not conspired to give, in exchange for his nomination, his support to a wrong in Santa Barbara, a scheme in Lompoc, a swindle in Ventura, to help elect a rummy in A—a bummer in B—a scalawag in C—a defaulter in D—and a Leag bird in E—.The fact is he stands unpledged to any treason, unyoked with any party trickery or falsehood, free to do right, with every thing in favor of his being a faithful, capable, active, servant of the State, and with not one incentive or temptation or inclination to be otherwise.

LODI.

Bro. Wilson B. Ellis one of the proprietors of the Lodi Sentinel has received the Republican nomination for Assemblyman from San Joaquin Co. This is an excellent choice and if the Rep. party would make all its nominations as worthily this year, we could do without very much platform. If such a ticket was elected the respectable portion of both the Dem. and Rep. parties would find their interests honestly and wisely cared for. Mr. Ellis will not quite suit the Leag of Freedom, for he thinks a good American home, such as he was raised in himself, is better than any foreign improvements that the European brewers are trying to substitute. He believes a day of rest on Sunday is better than a day of debauchery, drunkenness and riot. He thinks after a hundred years of successful trial our American system is better than the effete barbarisms, which after a thousand years of failure have pauperized and enslaved whole continents. On the question whether the redhanded slayer of the army of beer shall invade at will the homes of our people and continue to destroy the first born of every house, he will take the side of the home against the monster.

And it is to be hoped every temperance man, knowing that all the powers of rum and Satan will be brot against Mr. Ellis, will, irrespective of party and non-essential issues, do their utmost to send him with flying colors to the legislature there to faithfully represent the patriotism and virtue of the whole people.

THE BOYS AND GIRLS AID SOCIETY.

This is an institution that deserves the warmest sympathy and support of the public. It takes charge of helpless children and gives them a chance to do well and find employment and a home. It saves hundreds from being forcibly driven into crime by the 5,000 dens of infamy which in this city are destroying homes, debauching and slaughtering fathers and mothers, day and night and all day Sunday, and doing their utmost to deprave and destroy the boys and girls. This Aid Society is one that pays a hundred fold to the city and to its friends the work that is done and the money and help contributed to it. It always has on hand children for adoption.

Mr. Dooley in a circular of July 15 says (and it is hoped many of the readers of the RESCUE will call and see this most noble charity at 68 Clementina St. after reading it):

"Since May 1st we have rescued more than a score, directly from the courts and prisons, and twice as many beside have we started on more hopeful careers. We have on hand always a number of children for Adoption, and many needing employment, or homes without legal adoption. In every district, the society needs ladies and gentlemen who will volunteer to be correspondents of the society —persons to whom we could look for information in regard to applicants for children, and through whom children placed in their vicinity or other children in distress might appeal to us.

We are always in want of funds for the prosecution and extension of the work and we are always short of clothing for children of both sexes and all ages."

BE SURE to hear MRS. FOLTZ lecture Sunday evening. It is worth $1.50 a head, but admission is entirely free. Come everybody.

ZENA, Oregon, August 17th, 1882.

I am sorry that the Democrats of California have gone hand and foot with the Liquor Leag. I have been a life long Democrat, but if it is going to favor giving up Sunday as well as the other six days of the week to rum, I am no longer one of them, and it is time to form a new party if the two old ones are thus bought and sold by the demons of intemperance. I am glad to say I am not the only one of that opinion here in Oregon. Our Republican friends have a majority in the coming session of the Legislature; we will wait and see how they will stand on this most important of all questions of the day. Have been a Good Templar eight years and our Order is on a stronger footing than ever since I have been in the State. Oregon will e're long stand side by side with Kansas, Iowa and Maine; may California be with us is my prayer. We will not forget the RESCUE. Wishing you success in the coming election. S. S. GIMBLE, S. D., Zena, Oregon.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF PROHIBITION.

The National Temperance Society has just published, from the pen of Rev. Dr. John Bascom, president of the Wisconsin State University, a pamphlet with the above title, of great interest and value. It is a profoundly able statement of the reasons for prohibition as against tne liquor license system. It is an added weapon for the pending campaign for prohibition, in progress throughout the country, which cannot fail to do most effective service. It should be very widely circulated.

THE chances are considered pretty favorable for the formation of a prohibitory party as soon as the Sacramento Convention is over. Many of the delegates are of the opinion that the miserable ghost of a Sunday law painted up fresh will be as much of a liberty as they dare take with the Leag of outlaws. If that is the case the cry will be heard, "To your tents, Oh! Israel."—What portion have we in the Leag of Fiendom?

JUVENILE WORK.

Frank Storer, District Secretary of the S. F. D. L., in his quarterly report to that body on the 11th. spoke as follows in relation to juvenile work:

There are at present organized in San Francisco and holding regular meetings eight Bands of Hope, three of which are under the immediate jurisdiction of Good Templar Lodges. San Francisco presents one of the best fields to be found in the State for juvenile work and in my judgment this District Lodge can make itself master of a supreme opportunity by taking hold of this branch of the temperance cause. I would recommend to this body the expediency of selecting some competent person who has the time and the willingness to assume the position of Destrict Superintendent of juvenile work, whose duty it should be to assist the Bands already organized, and institute new ones. The Superintendent should have the privilege of appointing such assistants as may be deemed necessary and should visit either personally or by Deputy every Band in the District once a month and should present a report of the condition of the juvenile work at each meeting of the District Lodge, together with such suggestions as may present themselves. I would also recommend that all expenses arising from this work be paid out of the treasury of the District Lodge.

It is indeed an encouraging sign to see the young taking hold of this work and thus laying early and broad and deep foundations upon which may be built lives of usefulness and honor, such as shall be a credit to themselves and a blessing to their fellow-men. Formation is better and safer and surer than reformation and the seeds sown in childhood will in after years bear fruit some fifty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold. Early impressions are lasting and a life early dedicated to the cause of humanity seldom fails to be one of great power for good to the end. The hope of the nation lies in the education and training of the rising generation, into whose hands the destinies of the Republic will 'ere long be committed. It therefore behooves those who love this country and would have it grow better as the years roll by, to see that those who are to follow them are trained and educated in the right way. Pledge every child in our land today to a life of total abstinence and within a generation the curse of drunkenness would disappear from among us, the number of prisons, and poor-houses and insane asylums whose shadows darken the land, would be greatly diminished, and freed from these fetters, the procession of civilization, would move onward and upward, "under the white banners of peace to the tuneful measures of love,"

The District Lodge adopted the recommendations and elected Frank Storer D. S. of J. W.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

SPELLING REFORM.

The sixth annual meting of the American Spelling Reform Association was held in Boston, July 13. The English and American societies have about agreed to adopt and to try to induce others to adopt the following improvements:

1. e.—Drop silent e when foneticaly useless, as in live vineyard, believe, bronze, single, engine, granite, eaten, rained, etc.

2. ea.—Drop a from ea having the sound of short e, as in feather, leather, jealous, etc.

Drop e from ea having the sound of a, as in heart, hearken, etc.

3. eau.—For beauty use the old buty.

4. eo.—Drop o from eo having the sound of short e, as in jeopardy, leopard.

For yeoman write yoman.

5. i.—Drop i out of parliament.

6. o.—For o having the sound of u in but write u; in above (abuv), dozen, some (sum), tongue (tung), and the like.

For women restore wimen.

7. ou.—Drop o from ou having the sound of short u, as in journal, nourish, trouble, rough (ruf), tough (tuf), and the like

8. u.—Drop silent u after g before a, and in nativ English words, as guarantee, guard, guess, guest, guild, guilt.

9. ue.—Drop final ue in apologue, catalogue, league.

Drop e in argue, ague.

10. y.—Spel rhyme, rime.

11.—Dubl consonants may be simplified: Final b, d, g, n, r, t, f, l, z, as ebb, add egg, inn, purr, but, bailiff, dull, buzz (not all, hall.)

Medial before another consonant, as battle, ripple, written (writn).

Initial unaccented prefixes, and other unaccented syllables, as in abbreviate, accuse, affair, etc., curvetting, raveler, etc.

12. b.—Drop silent b in bomb crumb, debt,, doubt, dumb, lamb, limb, numb, plumb, subtle, succumb, thumb.

13. c.—Change c back to s in cinder, expence, fierce, hence, once, pence, scarce, etc.

14. ch.—Drop the h of ch in chamomile, choler, cholera, etc.

Change to k in ache (ake), anchor (anker).

15. d.—Change d and ed final to t when so pronounced, as in crossed (crost), looked (lookt), etc., unless the e affects the preceding sound, as in chafed, chanced.

20. s.—Drop s in aisle, demesne, island.

Change s to z in distinctive words, as in abuse verb, house verb, rise verb, etc.

21. sc.—Drop c in scent, scythe (sithe.)

22. tch,—Drop t, as in catch, pitch, witch, etc.

23. w,—Drop w in whole.

24. ph,—Write f for ph. as in philosophy, sphere, etc.

A quiet, substantial progress during the past year has been made, said President F. A. March in his opening address. More educated people are coming to uze the reformd speling and this givs a prestige with the peple. The Utica Herald in sentral New York, uzes the new speling largely; and finds that it is favorably receved by the peple. Advertizers send in their ads in it. The Chicago Tribune and Home Journal uze it frely. The Independent prints occasional articles in it and the Princetown Review still clingz to its "tho" and "altho." Continued interest in the reform is maintaned in England, notwithstanding the trubles of that country in caring for the Irish and the Egyptians, but it has lost a warm frend in the deth of Charles Darwin. In Germany, also, there is a decided spred of speling reform in the adoption of the oficial speling. Mr. Gladstone is now President of the English Speling Reform Association. Tennyson is an ardent speling reformer, becoz by the prezent speling he knows that future generations wil be unable to appreciate the rhythm of his vers, becoz they wil not no how he pronounst his wordz. Many prominent men in the upper classes are warm speling reformers. During the year the subject has been brot to the attention of Parlament for the first time. The only practical step propozed in this country during the past year was the formation of a leag of persons pledged to the use of the reform, but no pledges have yet been made. It is believed that the influence of the leading names which would be sined woud lead many others to sine.

It was voted to make the Home Journal the organ of the association, provided it uzed the wordz appruvd by the committee. After the meting members sined the pledge.—Exch.

140,000 men wanted the 7th of November to vote for a poor old fellow who has owned the State of California since 49 and is now threatened with the loss of his situation.

Rally friends of the penitentiary.
Rally candidates for the chaingang.
Rally the rag tag brigade.
Rally the red-nosed bummer battalions.
Rally the drunks.
Rally for the jail and the poor house forever,
And vote free beer and no Sunday.

THE railways in New South Wales are owned and operated by the Government. In 1881, after paying working expenses, cost of maintenance and all othe charges, a net profit of 5.31 per cent still remained. This gratifying result was achieved in the face of the fact that the charges for carrying passengers and freight were lower on the New South Wales roads than in the United Kingdom or any of the other colonies. The general opinion seems to be that the Government management has been fully as economical as when the roads were under private control. It is expected that still further reductions in freight and passenger charges will soon be made.—Chronicle.

TRY IT.—Send 75 cts. in stamps to 519 Post St., S. F., Cal., and get one pound of Daisy tea, (best uncolored Japan) by mail, and a years subscription to Home Circle, free, a paper giving full quotations for fine groceries and family supplies—good family tea by mail at 50 cts. and 60 cts. per lb.

A few National Temperance Almanacs can be supplied at the RESCUE office; a 10 cent stamp will get one, and that is the cheapest way of remittance. The volume for 1882 is, as usual, full of good matter.

Mr. H. B. Williamson is agent for the RESCUE in Lompoc Renewals and subscriptions can be arranged with him.

MALIGNING THE DEAD.

"The fifth plank in the Democratic platform, says the Ventura Free Press, demands in the name of Jefferson and Jackson that the Sunday law be repealed, as it infringes on the saloon-keepers' "exercise of his own religiotts opinion!"

Imagine Jefferson and Jackson as attorneys and advocates of unlimited prostitution, gambling, drunkenness, wifebeating and theft. Either of those gentlemen would have scorned and utterly repudiated all connection with men or party that would adopt a platform of entire beastliness as was that of San Jose. It affirmed that American homes should be burst wide open to the assaults and intrusions of an army of marauders, thieves and murderers of the grogshops, compared with whose wanton, bloody havoc, the sack of a captured city by a ruffian hostile soldiery was merciful. We dont know yet if the Republicans may not quote Washington, Franklin and Lincoln as having favored universal drunkenness and paganism.

The Hon. Mr. Page M. C. was met at the Oakland station by a deputation of citizens headed by a doggery keeper, a rum-seller, a leader of open out laws and conspirators against the laws of the State and the peace and welfare of the people. Oakland has no regular public hangman as yet or that officer would have been the most appropriate citizen to associate with the leader of the committee—if such men are chosen to do honor to a Republican Congressman.

Judge Greene of Alameda county deserves the gratitude of good citizens for his refusal to issue citizens papers to foreigners who have not learned anything at all of American institutions and cannot use the ballot except in the interest of the traitorous demagog who buys and sells the votes of the ignorant and depraved.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank, S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S. Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

A VERY HEARTLESS FRAUD.

The fraudulent Sunday issue upon which the Republicans base their hopes of hoodwinking the people is being actively worked up in a number of the pulpits. Some of the ministers are doubtless honestly deceived into this fraud. Others are palpably operating under railroad influences. We don't think that the people can be humbugged by false issues and untrue statements, whether emanating from the pulpit or from railroad organs.—Examiner.

It was a shocking invention after all, it seems, that report of the anti-Sunday law and anti-temperance law plank in the Democratic platform at San Jose. First the plank which they adopted was not adopted at all, secondly, the plank they adopted was rejected at the convention, thirdly there never was any plank at all and fourthly both the plank they adopted and the one they rejected, had no allusion to Sunday or whisky selling at all; what it meant was "the old laws about burning witches in Salem; sumptuary means that; it is from the two latin words Sumpo to burn and Tuarius witches." The convention was determined that nobody should be burned for witch craft any more in California, as they used to be in New England in the time of Alfred the great and Brian Boruhm. It would be a pleasure to pepper those preachers and politicians who put up the "fraudulent issue" against that devout, religious and scrupulously moral and pious little company at San Jose, but one might go too far and hurt somebody. There may be another revelation later on. It may be developed that the Examiner in place of being as supposed an anti-monopoly organ, is really one of those foremost and deepest railroad organs. The ways of that sapient corpo are past finding out.

Mrs. B. Burt of Amador, Percy Dunham of Belleville, J. Ratcliff, Angels Camp, Lizzie McMillan of Cayucos. J. O. Brown S. F., Bell Monroe of Loyalton, Mrs. Preston, R. Davis, of Santa Rosa sent correct answers to the Manslaughter puzzle. By the way when another generation shall spell consistently that puzzle will not be longer intelligible.

The Notice of the annual session of the W. C. T. U. came to hand too late to appear in the usual place—one side of the paper having been printed. A good attendance should be on hand in these stirring times of active temperance work.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE
FOR MALES AND FEMALES.
THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.
LOCATION.
The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.
COURSE OF STUDY.
Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.
INDUCEMENTS.
To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

SPOOL COTTON.
Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

J. & P. Coats' Black
WILL HOLD ITS COLOR AS LONG AS ANY FABRIC ON WHICH IT CAN BE USED.
And the Agents will pay Full Price for any of their Thread which may be spotted or injured by climatic influences.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. JOHN Q. ADAMS,
Secretary Reception Committee, 604 Clay St.

THE CONVENTION at Sacramento would have been more profitably employed a part of their time as some very excellent citizens were on Friday last. While the politicians were jubilating the others were at the ELITE, 838 Market Street, getting the very finest pictures. Some of the groups of children taken there will challenge the world to beat them.

IF GUITEAU, about two weeks before he shot Mr. Garfield, had taken the precaution to write that editorial which appeared in the Record-Union of Aug. 28, on "The Prohibition Movement," they never would have once thot of hanging him. He would have been now comfortably enjoying his daily ration of pork and beans in the incurable ward of an idiot asylum.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR has great attractions every day and evening. Be sure to go early and often.

THE SUN will continue to rise before six o'clock for some days yet, in honor of Paul Neumann and the new Sunday law.

READ "About Maine" on page 710, and pay no future heed to the wicked deceivers who say that prohibition is a failure.

Subscribers this week: Lake View, Nev. 1; Volcano, 1; Plymouth, (Mrs. Stevens) 2; Smith River, 1; Valley Ford, 2; Healdsburg, 1; Bodie (Miss A. R. Freeman) 3; Hayden Hill (W. Crowhurst) 4; Calistoga, 1.

MISS ALICE R. FREEMAN rccently W. V. T. of the Lodge at Bodie has removed to Santa Clara where the Lodge and Order will be ever so much strengthened when her card is handed in. Miss F. has been a good friend of the RESCUE in Bodie and it is hoped she will find a hearty welcome in her new home.

IF Gen. Geo. B. McLellan in the Century criticises England's conduct of the war in Egypt there are a good many Englishmen who can gracefully return the compliment by criticising Geo. B's conduct of the "never ready" campaign against Richmond. People who have lived in glass houses 19 years get careless at times.

THE Northern World (Ind.) says seven railroads in the U. S. hire no men but total abstainers; and the railroad dining cars running thru Iowa have been ordered to supply no liquors. People will begin to find out soon that if a man who drinks moderately is not fit to clean lamps and dust the seats of a railroad train, a drunkard is not good timber for a congressman, legislator or State officer.

THE N. Y. WEEKLY WITNESS is universally recognized to be an excellent journal, 8 large full pages and only $1.00 a year. Has the current news and the best quotations from the editorial columns of the leading secular dailies. It is a religious temperance, secular, family newspaper and every family on the continent that takes it a year will be many dollars the better for it all the way thru life; the better fitted to understand and undertake all the duties of citizenship. We have too much whisky and corrupt and horse-race journalism. When you send for the RESCUE send another dollar for the Witness and drop if necessary, a few dollars worth of the dog-fight, horse-race, beer-garden literature.

MRS. CLARA S. FOLTZ addressed a full house at Children's Hall on Sunday evening on the political aspects of the Sunday law. She was frequently and heartily applauded. Her utterances on the beer dives and crime dens were so truthful that our patriotic daily papers dared not reproduce them altho reports were furnished them. Next week some of the salient points will be given. Mrs. F. is coming rapidly to the front as a rising, industrious, studious, accomplished and successful attorney, and her success is one of the most convincing arguments in favor of the entire fitness of good, capable women to take an active part in the professional and political affairs of the Nation in whose welfare they above all others are the most genuinely and sincerely interested.

CON COW VALLEY, Sept. 1st, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—We reached here Monday evening and found the camping grounds covered with tents, and in a short time two more were added by our company. Tables and benches were constructed and arbors raised above them. We were heartily welcomed, and as other parties came in, we in turn welcomed them. Sociability prevails to a degree unusual even at a camp meeting. On Tuesday morning the Convention was called to order. A brief address of welcome by Bro. J. B. Mullen of Con Cow, D D. of Butte Co., was responded to by Bro. H. S. Graves, D. D. of Sutter and Yuba. Temperance songs were sung by the audience led by excellent musicians. Rev. C. A. Bateman, Col. Babcock, Col. Goulding and Sister Stevens all present and are making stirring addresses. Discussions in which Good Templars from Sutter, Yuba and Butte counties took part were the order to-day. The attendance is large and new comers are continually announced. The convention is in every respect a success. Yesterday the regular session of the Butte Co. D. L. was held on the camp ground. Usual business transacted and stirring resolutions adopted favoring the course of the Republican Party in regard to the "Sunday Law" and urging Good Templars to vote as they pray, for temperance men to make and administer their laws. Bro. J. B. Mullen was unanimously re-elected for appointment as D. D. It has been decided to hold a camp convention every year and to make Con Cow Valley a permanent camp ground. The present committee have been selected to take charge of the business and also to engage the services of a District Lecturer for Sutter, Yuba and Butte Counties.

Good Templars are being stirred at this camp meeting as they were never before and not only Good Templars but the whole multitude here present. While temperance is the most important consideration with us, enjoyment is by no means neglected; we have moonlight rides on the beautiful lake, hunting, fishing and music to finish the evening. A number of campers now at 11 P. M., are sitting around our blazing camp fire, singing and laughing, and from all directions the sounds of music and mirth are wafted to our ears. M.

The above sent anonymously to the RESCUE is given a place, contrary to custom, because it is presumed to have been written and sent in good faith.

NEVER in the history of our nation has there been such a movement on the subject oi temperance as at present. Not so much for reformation as for prohibition. The traffic is beginning to be looked upon as evil, and that continually; that there is not one feature of good in the whole business; that the poor inebriate is not the only sufferer, but that good men are taxed almost beyond the power of endurance all on account of this unholy traffic. And they are about reaching a point where they will endure it no longer, but rise in their sovereign might and hurl the monster from his seat, and put the rum-sellers at better business. Several of the leading States have had the matter of a constitutional amendment submitted to them, and have decided for prohibition by overwhelming majorities. And others are demanding of their legislatures the same privilege. Even here in California we feel the effects of this ground-swell. When prohibition shall become universal in our land men will wonder that they endured the evil so long.—Pacific Methodist.

WE respectfully suggest to the League of Freedom that as its business is to supply the Morgue with victims, the Coroner with subjects, the courts with criminals, the prisons with inmates, and hell with ruined souls, that it might do enough of its work in six days out of seven, and leave us one day of rest from its crimes. Does the League of Freedom think it necessary to go on whipping women to death, making hoodlums, paupers, thieves and drunkards seven days every week? Why not stop its gentle business one day in a week?—C. C. Advocate.

DRUNK IN THE STREET.

Drunk in the street!
A woman arrested to-day in the city!
Comely and young, the paper said—
Scarcely twenty, the item read;
A woman and wife—kind angels, pity!
Drunk in the street!

Drunk in the street!
Yes, crazy with liquor! her brain on fire!
Reeling, plunging, and staggering along—
Singing a strain of a childish song—
At last she tumbles and falls in the mire,
Drunk in the street!

Drunk in the street!
What news to send the dear ones at home,
Who're wondering what has detained so long
The wife and mother—yet think no wrong;
The day is waning—night has come—
Drunk in the street!

Drunk in the street!
Drag her away to a station bed!
Helpless, senseless, take her away;
Shut her up from the light of day;
Would, for the sake of her friends, she were dead!
Drunk in the street!

Draw near and look!
On a couch of straw in a station cell
Is lying a form of matchless mold,
With her hair dishevelled—so pale and cold—
Yet tainting the air with the fumes of hell!
Draw near and look!

How sad the sight!
The sunlight streaming across the floor,—
It rouses the sleeper to life again;
But oh! the anguish, the grief, the pain!
As thoughts of the shame come crowding o'er—
How sad the sight!

But hark! a sound!
The bolt flies back, she is told to rise;
Her friends are waiting to take her home.
They know it all, yet in love they come,
But with speechless lips and tearless eyes.
The lost one's found!

Let's reason now!
Suppose 'twas your mother, your sister, your wife,
Who'd stained her soul with liquid fire—
Who'd laid her womanhood in the mire—
Who'd bartered away her bright young life—
Who'd fallen low:

And then, again,
Suppose the fiends you've licensed to sell
Had sought to ruin a much-loved son,
Esteemed and honored by every one,
And were dragging him down to a drunkard's hell
With might and main!

Would you keep still?
Is it nothing to you that such things be?
You who have little ones soon to be men
And women to take your place—what then?
Is it nothing to you if they're bond or free?
Have you no will?

Work, night and day!
Nail up the bars where liquor is sold!
Free your town from its load of death!
Add no more to the ghastly wreath
Of widows and orphans whose knell you've tolled!
Work, fight, and pray.

The end will come!
God help and strengthen us day by day,
And nerve us all for the coming strife!
Our foes are strong—they struggle for life—
But God is stronger than they.
The end will come!

THE WESLEYANS AND TEMPERANCE.

The Rev. Charles Garrett a man much beloved by all good people in England for his temperance energy and faithful labors in the great reform, has been made President of the Wesleyan Conference. A writer in the Scarboro Mercury says "this is not the first time the President of the Conference has happened to be a tetotaler, but this is the first who has made the temperance movement a very distinct and prominent feature thruout his public life and who has received public recognition of services so rendered." The Mercury continues:

What a contrast this to the time when the old school were in power, and when temperance could not be mentioned in Conference without producing disagreable excitement, and when temperance deputations were refused admittance, and temperance memorials were quietly thrown under the table, and resolutions were passed closing chapels to meetings, ignoring Bands of Hope, and insisting upon the ordinance of the Lord's Supper being observed in alcoholic wines! When Dr. Osborn, the retiring President, welcomed Mr. Garrett as his successor in the chair, with the grace, refinement, and good-will which characterised his address, and of which the Doctor, when at his best, is so capable, what a contrast to the days when he was preaching sermons and writing pamphlets against the teaching of the man whom he so cordially took by the hand as he welcomed him to the chair he himself was about to vacate, and which has been filled by the highest intellects and noblest men in the Connexion. The time was when a reference friendly to tetotalism shocked the congregation in a Wesleyan chapel, and when a testimony to its value in a lovefeast brought down upon the offender a rebuke from the presiding minister. Now by vote of Conference Bands of Hope are an essential and recognized institution, and a Connexional Temperance Society a part of the organized and systematic work of the church. This is a wonderful change from the time when a gentleman occupying the chair Mr. Garrett has now the honour to fill, refused to take the pulpit he had been accustomed almost annually to fill, in the interests of the trusts of the building, because the officials of the church a few Sundays before had allowed a temperance advocate who happened to be in the neighborhood on the Sabbath to preach in it. There never was a greater mistake made than most of the churches of this land made in their conduct toward the early temperance workers, and in tabooing, as they did, the organization set on foot for the promotion of the sobriety of the land. Thousands of men have been lost, and lost forever, to the Church by that conduct, and the very frequent reported decreases in the members of the various churches, which have been so painful to all right-minded men during the past fifty years, is only one of the results of that ill-judged proceeding. Had it not been for the marked success that attended the labors of the men in the different churches who were known as active sympathisers with the temperance movement, and earnest workers, bad as in many cases the reports were, they would have been much worse; and few men indeed have helped to balance the account and swell the numbers in church fellowship more than has the Rev. Charles Garrett. He has never faltered and consequently he never failed. A truer friend and a kinder hearted man it would be difficult to find. His preaching is full of tenderness and pathos, while his platform work goes through a meeting like fire among dry stubble. The results are found in a nation's esteem, the churches' love and peoples' admiration. To make Charles Garrett President had become a necessity, and the men who composed the Conference had the sense to see it. They knew what the people wished and the country thot, and tho Mr. Garrett is neither old nor great, they knew he was good and grand, and while his appointment would give pleasure to the people it would be no dishonor to the Church. * * * There can be no two opinions as to the relations of the liquor traffic with the Church. They are as opposite as the poles in their tendencies, and to attempt to harmonize them is as futile as would be the effort to wash the negro white. They have nothing in common, and no amount of sophistry, nor blind custom, nor ignorant practice, can ever ignore the fact that it is not possible to bring a clean thing out of an unclean. Nobody saw that and nobody enforced that teaching more than did John Wesley in his day, and it has been one of the marvels of the past fifty years that the people called by his name should be so slow of heart to believe the truths as taught by the temperance reformers of that period. However, it is never too late to mend, and the people of whom Charles Garrett is to-day the head have done a deed which will bring back to them much of a nation's esteem, and restore to them much of a people's lost love. It is always a gain of lasting value to practically know, as we are taught to believe, that when a man's ways please God, He will make his enemies at peace with him. There can be no quarter given to a system which, though as old as slavery itself, is scarcely less fearful and less terrible in its consequences, and it cannot be wondered at if men who have the iniquity of this mischief burned into their bones, cry out for deliverance with a voice that is irresistible, and denounce with a vehemence loud as thunder that which has marred life's hopes and murdered life's joys.

HANFORD ALLIANCE.

One of the most enthusiastic meetings ever held in this county in the cause of moral reform was held at Hanford beginning Thursday, Aug. 17th, and continuing till Sunday night Aug. 20.

It was the fourth meeting of the Tulare Co. Christian Alliance, and the attendance was good to begin with and augmented in numbers and increased in interest to the end of the session.

The Alliance is an association of Christian ministers and laymen of the various denominations who have joined themselves together for the purpose of fighting their common foes, such as intemperance, tobacco, infidelity etc., and as far as possible to elevate the standard of piety in the Christian ranks.

The motto adopted by this Society is "In essentials unity, in non-essentials liberty; in all things charity"—and on this basis some 36 clergymen and over 400 laymen have thus far united harmoniously and with profit to themselves and to the various towns wherein they have held their meetings.

Our meetings are held quarterly and the exercises consist of addresses, lectures, sermons, essays, reviews and music, the parts being assigned three months in advance and alternates appointed to make the part certain. Our meetings have all been of deep and increasing interest, but the last was by far the best of all. Of course the subject of temperance is the leading one upon our minds at present and this largely occupied the attention of the speakers.

Elder DeWitte gave us a most masterly review of the Sunday question, in fact the most comprehensive it has ever been our privilege to listen to and the effort is worthy of reproduction both in the pulpit, on the stump and in print.

"Uncle Sam Fowler" whom many of your readers will remember as the tallest man in the late Temperance Convention in San Francisco, gave a most telling address on the subject of prohibition, and many who had before been indifferent were aroused. He is a most thoro and earnest worker, and since the convention we have taken a trip southward along the coast counties as far as San Luis Obispo, and everywhere did all we could to arouse the ministers and the temperance people from their lethargy, and he even went into saloons and held discussions, greatly to the discomfiture of his opponents, and since our return to Tulare it is no uncommon sight to see him towering above a motley crowd of men, like Saul of old, and laying down the doctrine of "total prohibition" with no uncertain sound. When such men take hold of a subject something has to be done, and something was done at Hanford.

In the first place our county was districted and at least twelve speakers were assigned their parts to canvass and hold meetings from now till November, and it is confidently expected we shall keep twenty-four men in the field—all home talent, and besides we want a grand lecturer from the Good Templars.

Next we organized a joint stock company for the purpose of publishing a paper in the interests of our Alliance and the cause of temperance.

At present we cant get a good pithy article into any of our county papers because some of the editors are on the other side of the fence and the balance hardly dare to publish, as it might injure their business so we will have a paper that will appeal neither for the advertising nor subscription of the saloon keeper—the company will consist of 25 (or upward) stockholders who will put $25.00 apiece into it to start with. We have already about 400 subscribers.

Elder Motheral of Hanford one of the most enthusiastic and indefatigable workers in our cause was ubiquitous in the meetings and did much to make them a complete success.

He is a "whole team" in himself and no Christian will dare to remain asleep in the part of the country where he speaks.

The saloon-men were all wide awake to our business and had their "spotters" taking notes, and what they thought of our doings was forcibly if not elegantly expressed by one of their number to his companions in a saloon after the meeting was over.

One of our members happened to be passing and overheard it. He said, "These d—— ministers are going to give us h—— this fall."

If he had correctly informed himself of our desires he would have found that it was to save them from that same place that we were striving so earnestly.

Now cant the Christian people of other counties unite in an alliance similar to ours—if they have not already done so—The sympathy of Christian people is all right but they lack energy and well directed effort.

Organization will effectually arouse many slumbering giants whose help is too valuable to be wasted by inertia or indifference.

Let all Christians and temperance people and every one who sympathises with morality and right, join hands and see if we in California cannot emulate the glorious work in Kansas and Iowa.

FRED H. WALES.

TOBACCO:—Senator Ben Hill, of Georgia has just died of cancer in the tongue. He was a man highly respected thruout the nation. Tho a violent partisan in politics, no one of either party failed to respect his integrity, manliness and truthfulness. He was for long an earnest worthy member of the church too and now it is claimed by what seems to be good authority that the cancer which caused him such intense suffering and cut short his useful life was caused by the practice of smoking; an evil habit which seems harmless to those who have thotlessly become its slaves, which is indulged in by many excellent, worthy people but which is doing an amount of injury to the American people which would appal the most careless, if the truth could be truly known.

A BOOK canvasser called a few days ago on business. Seeing the RESCUE he at once pronounced himself an outspoken temperance man in principle and practice. He enlarged upon the woe and misery and crime occasioned by drink, especially by the filthy and accursed beer. But he did believe that in a case of malarial fever, whisky was the best remedy known. How much of it? Oh just one dose. His audience assented that whisky could not do much harm if only used once when a person is smitten with fever which is not likely to occur more than two or three times in ones life. But in the end it turned out that his fever came on every day after canvasing and he used the very best $5 whisky, poor fellow; and our juveniles all know that the $5 and the $8 and the $12 and the $1,50 whisky are all exactly the same.

'THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

HOW ANSLEY GRAY WAS CONVERTED.

Ansley Gray, the temperance orator says it won't do to brand a man as dishonest, simply because he differs with you. "Why," says he "I was opposed not only to prohibition, but to restrictive legislation, until three years ago. I was educated, so to speak, in that direction. Three years ago a high license bill was introduced into the Dakota Legislature. I was a member of that body, and made up my mind to vote against it. A committee of ladies, headed by good old Mrs. Gov. Howard, God bless her! called on me to try and induce me to change my mind. They did not succeed, though I finally promised not make a speech against the bill. Before it came to its final passage a little Jew named Allen, a wholesale liquor dealer, came to urge me to speak. I told him I had promised the ladies that I would not. He urged and urged, and became much excited; finally he said: 'Well, I tell you what is the matter. If we don't look out, it won't be ten years before we will have so confounded many churches and so confounded many schools in Dakota that we will have prohibition.' This opened my eyes. I began to ponder the matter, and became a prohibitionist."—Mount Vernon (Iowa) Loyalist.

LIQUOR REBELLION.

Great political changes, which would otherwise be impracticable, are sometimes brot about by a feeling of resentment. It is in some measure an excuse for the excesses of Granger legislation that they were prompted by the strong indignation that high-handed conduct on the part of railroad officials had aroused. A still stronger illustration may be found in the overthrow of slavery. A large majority of the people of this country had been opposed to abolition. But the insolent and domineering conduct of pro-slavery politicians, and their aggressive acts, led to earnest efforts to restrict the spread of that institution, and when these were resisted by rebellion and war the people were roused to exterminate the system at any cost. It is a question whether the liquor interest has not been preparing for itself a new illustration of this principle. The remarkable groth of the Prohibitory sentiment at the West is certainly due, in no small degree, to the aggressive insolent and law-defying course of liquor manufacturers and liquor dealers. For many years they have been bullying political parties, threatening the slauter of every public man who did not agree with them, domineering over State and local Governments, resisting every reasonable effort to restrain their traffic within such limits as the public warfare demands, and defying and generally nullifying every law for that purpose. In short, their behavior has been exactly like that of the Southern slave-drivers, and like the South they have arrayed themselves in open hostility to law. In effect they are in rebellion against the civil authority, and have thus aroused a feeling which has passed an abolition amendment in Iowa.

In Missouri, notwithstanding its Democratic majority, the same tendency appears. A strong body of voters demands opportunity to settle the question by a direct vote. Ex-Governor Brown, a politician who has more than once anticipated the drift of public sentiment, has addressed a letter to the leader of the Prohibitionists in which he strongly urges the submission of a constitutional amendment to the people. A strong element in the Republican party is demanding a State Convention for the purpose of urging this measure. The senseless intolerance of the liquor interest has been shown nowhere else more frequently or offensively than in that State, and the Republicans may not unnaturally conclude that they have nothing to lose by insisting that the people shall have opportunity to vote on the subject as they please. In Indiana, also, a powerful tendency in the same direction has appeared. Meanwhile the conduct of the liquor interest in Ohio, in the political campaign now pending, is eminently calculated to kindle the same feeling. For that whole interest is not merely in active rebellion against very moderate laws enacted for the regulation of the traffic, bnt threatening, if it can, to defeat the Republican party merely because it is not in favor of untaxed liquor and abolition of the Sabbath.

It would be well for the liquor manufacturers and liquor dealers to consider calmly to what end they are drifting. Already their extraordinary insolence has made hosts of enemies among those who have no theoretical or practical regard for temperance. There is no other kind of business under the sun that has so persistently and indecently dictated to political parties, and no other business has so constantly violated and insolently defied the laws. The people have power whenever they please, to declare that business contrary to public policy, and to make it unlawful. This a majority in most of the States have not seen fit to do. all the time hoping that moderate and reasonable regulations for the protection of the public welfare might be devised and enforced without that restriction of individual liberty which Prohibition would involve. But if the liquor interest resists, and resents any and every regulation for the public good, defies laws, terrorizes over parties, browbeats public officials, bribes voters, and seeks to punish with political death every man who advocates any measure of restraint whatever, how long will it be before the wrath of the people will be aroused to abolish the traffic entirely? Those who hold that this would be unwise and unjust, if they have good sense, will take especial care to see that resistance to moderate regulations is not permitted to prevail.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE RELIGION NEEDED.

"We want a religion that bears heavily on the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and on the exceeding rascality of lying and stealing—that banishes small measures from the counter, small baskets from stalls, pebbles from cotton bags, clay from the paper, sand from sugar, chicory from coffee, alum from bread, and water from the milk cans.

The religion to save the world will not put all the big strawberries at the top and the little ones at the bottom, nor make one half a pair of shoes of good leather and the other half of poor leather; it will not put Jouvin's stamp on Jenkin's kid gloves, nor make Paris bonnets in the back room of a Boston milliner shop; nor let a piece of velvet professing to measure 12 yards come to an untimely end in the 10tn, nor a spool of silk at twenty yards be nipped in the bud at fourteen and one half; nor all wool delaines and all linen handkerchiefs be amalgamated with clandestine cotton; nor coats made of rags pressed together be sold for legal broadcloth.

It does not put bricks at five dollars into chimneys it contracts to build of seven dollar material; nor smuggle white pine into floors that have paid for hard pine, nor leave yawning cracks in closets where boards ought to join; nor daub the ceilings that ought to be smoothly plastered; nor make window blinds of slats that cannot stand the wind, and paint that cannot stand the sun, and fastenings that may be looked at, but are on no account to be touched.

The religion that is going to sanctify the world pays its debts. It does not consider that forty cents returned for one hundred cents given is according to the gospel though it may be according to law. It looks on a man who has failed in trade and who continues to live in luxury, as a thief.—Sel.

All these things we want entirely outside of religion as well as inside of its profession. Not one of the frauds above detailed are a particle more tolerable or respectable in the non-professor than in the professor of religion. The despicable and horrible nature of fraud, falsehood and hypocrisy should be painted up in the most glaring, flaming colors in our public schools, our homes, our halls, and why not too in our churches?

The young should be taut boldly that a cheat and liar in business, no matter how delicately his fraud and theft may be watered out or how it may be gilded over with frills and diamonds and wealth—not only can have no stock in religion but should have no toleration or countenance in decent society; should be avoided like a pestilence and held up to public scorn as a warning beacon to the young.

It would be a good law perhaps that should command the publication in the pulpit and the press of every discovered case of adulteration, fraud, short measure, short weight and false brand—with the name and address of the perpetrator.

WHAT A LICENSE MEANS.

Look now at the ordination of a candidate for the ministry of rum. He stands before the city fathers. He is called to sell rum, has the evidence within him. A congenial brother of the same communion recommends him to the extent of a thousand dollars. He is looked over. He will do. He pays his money; for the ministry can be bought. He puts his hand upon that devil's document, a rumseller's license, and he goes out regularly set apart by the ordination, which means this:

"Take thou authority to tempt men."

"Take thou authority to change them into beasts."

"Take thou authority to stain the streets with their blood."

"Take thou authority to desolate homes, to break hearts, to ruin souls."

"Take thou authority to mark your way through the world with all wickedness, and when you stand before the Eternal Judge—just show him this license."—Cooperstown (N. Y.) New Era.

A WIFE'S BLAST AGAINST TOBACCO.

He sits in a corner from morning till night—
'Tis smoke, chew, smoke!
He rises at dawn his pipe to light,
Goes puffing and chewing with all his might,
To smoke, chew, smoke!

The quid goes in when the pipe goes out—
'Tis chew, chew, chew!
Now a cloud of smoke goes up from his throat,
Then his mouth sends a constant stream afloat;
'Tis chew, chew, chew!

He sits all day in the smoke or fog—
'Tis puff, puff, puff!
He growls at his wife, the cat and the dog,
He covers with filth the carpet and rug,
And his only answer when I give him a jog,
Is puff, puff, puff!

The house all o'er from end to end,
Is smoke, smoke, smoke!
In whatever room my way I wend,
If I take his clothes to patch and mend,
Ungrateful perfume will ever ascend,
Of smoke, smoke, smoke!

At home or abroad, afar or near,
'Tis smoke, chew, smoke!
His mouth is stuffed from ear to ear,
Or puffing the stump of a pipe so dear;
And his days will end, I verily fear,
In smoke, smoke, smoke!

—St. John Sun.

LOOK PLEASED.

Now that wine drinking has been formally restored to the White House, we wonder how those Christians, who refused to vote for Dow and Thompson, because they were afraid to trust the government in the hands of God, without Garfield and Arthur feel.

Wouldn't it have been better to throw your vote away on Dow than to throw away your prayers, by voting to re-enthrone Alcohol as King, in the White House of this republic? Of course you will pass ringing resolutions condeming his act; but you knew all about him and yet you voted for him, wine and all. You clung to party and are suffering from the pestilence. You would have Republicanism and needn't make wry faces because you are given rum in allopathic doses. What if a hundred thousand are killed every year, and what though your own son be among the dead? Did you not tell us you must vote to save the Union? You knew alcohol was the only thing that would preserve such putrescent corpses as old parties, and as you would keep the corpse we urge you to look pleased.—Exch.

A FEW POINTS.—Manufacturers, if you continue to license the grog-shops, where will you find sober, skilled labor ten years hence?

Do you not know that the gin-mills destroy the skill of your workmen and thus decrease your profits?

Have you not learned that a Sunday's debauch impairs the Monday's product of a mill?

Do you not know that the continued use of strong drink, even in so-called moderation, does the same thing?

Do you not know that it not only impairs the quality of the product but decreases the quantity?

Do you not know that if you had only total abstainers in your employ and were to pay the same wages now paid, your profits would be increased twenty-five per cent.?

Well it is true.

Then can you afford to sustain the license system or sanction the drinking customs of the day?—Ex.

SPELLING.

An eminent temperance worker says that he recognizes the utter folly of our system of speiling and thinks it ot to be reformed, but he don't want any change made during his life-time. That must be rather inconsiderate than selfish. It is very unjust to demand that because an injustice has been done to us, it shall be perpetuated upon the young folks to-day. And it is certainly a great injustice to cheat all the school pupils ont of about one year of their school time, puzzling over a foolish and barbarous system of falsehood telling hieroglifics; a system too by which not over one in a hundred of them can ever be a good speller. All good people should think this matter over and unite in a protest against this most utter nonsense; and they should in their own writing rebel against the wretched custom, which so fsw can find courage to assail.

KANSAS people seem to have faith in prohibition; at the State Republican Convention Gov. St. John was nominated by a majority of 212 over all competitors on the first ballot. What a pity the Kansas people have never seen a copy of the Record Union. If they had, Gov. St. John would have been blown up with gas from that great gas emporium.

CREDENTIALS RECEIVED.—Copies of credentials certifying the representatives elect to the next session of the Grand Lodge to be held in San Francisco, have been received at the G. W. S. office during the past week, and their receipt is hereby acknowledged from the following Lodges:

Nos. 32, 107, 124. 126, 150, 161, 165, 176, 179, 201, 225, 242, 244, 246, 273, 332, 351, 369, 379, 398, 405, 413, 421, 428, 443, 463, 497.

DELINQUENTS.—During the past week a notice of their delinquency was mailed to all lodge deputies who had so far failed to file proper quarterly returns from their lodges. An urgent call was made for the reports and it is hoped all will respond without further delay. Next week a list of all remaining delinquent on the 9th inst. will be published and immediately thereafter the delinquents will be suspended from the lodge list and they will be reported, as usual, to the Grand Lodge.

CLAIMED.—One of the unclaimed packages of coin announced last week, as having been received per express, has been claimed by Fidelity Lodge No. 194 of Chico. The package from Stockton, "Lillie" consignor remains unclaimed.

R. W. G. L. JOURNALS OF PROCEEDINGS. The official journal of proceedings of the 28th annual session of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., held at Charleston, S. C., May 23 to 26 inclusive, making a book of 242 pages was mailed last week to the address of each Lodge Deputy within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of California. Lodge Deputies will please bear in mind that the journal thus sent them is for the Lodge and not for personal account. The book should therefor be delivered to the Lodge at once, by filing it with the W. S., so that any member may have access to it. The journal is neatly printed and includes a new and valuable feature in the "Index-digest" which was prepared with great care by Bro. P. G. W. C. T., William P. Roberts, of Minnesota. The journal is a valuable book and should be carefully preserved, as it cannot be duplicated.

BOUND CONSTITUTIONS. The G. W. S. has a supply of the latest 1882 edition of constitutions, by-laws, rules, etc., for Grand, Subordinate and District Lodges, on sale for the benefit of Lodges and is prepared to fill orders in any number. For the benefit of representatives and visitors who will attend the next session of the Grand Lodge a number of the new edition of the Constitution, etc., have been handsomely bound in cloth, and will be furnished with name stamped upon the cover in gilt, at 50 cents per copy. Every representative and visitor to the Grand Lodge should be supplied with an individual bound copy of the laws of the Order as above. To receive attention the amount (50 cents) must accompany the order.

PERSONALS.—During the past week the Grand Lodge office received calls from the following members of our order: J. M. Walling, L. D. of Nevada Lodge No. 201, Nevada county; C. J. E. Taylor, of Weldon Lodge No. 498, Kern county; Muir of Crystal Water Lodge No. 133, Michigan Bluff, Placer county; D. R. GRAND LODGE.—Arrangements for the approaching Grand Lodge session which is to be held at San Francisco, commencing October 3rd next, are being rapidly completed. The indications are that the next will be the largest session ever held. It is hoped that every lodge will arrange for a representation of at least one or more of their ablest and most active members. The San Francisco lodges will tender a reception to the Grand Lodge on Monday evening October 2nd. Let it be borne in mind that the reception will occur this time upon the night preceding the session, this being arranged so as not to interfere with the Grand Lodge work. All intending to be present at the Grand Lodge should arrange so as to be present at the reception, as a better opportunity will be afforded there, than at any other time or place, to become acquainted with the visitors and representatives. The reception will probably be held in Dashaway Hall, which is situated at No. 135 Post street between Kearney and Dupont. The Grand Lodge sessions will probably be held in Laurel Hall, Shiels' building, No. 32 O'Farrell street, which is as near the business center of the city as it will be possible to secure a hall. Hotels, lodging-houses and restaurants abound within two or three blocks of the hall. All street cars going up Market street pass the corner of O'Farrell near which the hall is located. Further and definite announcements will be made by circular to all lodges, within a few days. Representatives and visitors are urged to provide themselves with regalia, as they will not be furnished by the Grand Lodge.

THE DIFFERENCE. Said J. W. Schaffer the ex-President of the League of Fiendom to the committee on Platform and resolutions, appointed by the Republican State Convention: "Abolish the Sunday law, because it is inoperative and bribes a man to do wrong, because the extreme fine is but $50, and if a man by keeping his saloon open can make $60, why you see he can afford to violate the law and make $10 by the operation. Better abolish it altogether and put the people upon their honor for two years and see what they will do. Or if you must recognize the matter and have a 'Sunday law' why recommend something like what they have in Germany. There the stores are closed at ten o'clock on Sunday, when the people go to church, and after church parson and people go out for recreation and all have a good time together. These temperance people are all wrong in pressing this matter. They are in advance of public sentiment and should not do it." Then he turned to Geo. W. Chesley, President of the Sacramento League of F———, the other Dromio, and said, "is that not so Mr. Chesley?" to which the latter grunted assent.

Said the Hon. Henry Edgerton, nominee for Congressman at large, when called before the Convention to define his position, prior to his nomination:

"We demand, and we will have, an orderly, quiet, peaceful, restful Sunday, which will purify, elevate and brighten human life, which will put the church, the galleries of art, the museum, the garden, and the public park out of competition with the saloon one day in the week. [Applause.] We do demand, and we will have, a Sunday law upon our statute book, which, armed by an enlightened, resistless public opinion, shall go down among the acclimatized denizens of the deadfalls, and force them up into the oxygen and sunlight of one day in seven. [Great applause.]"

Mr. Edgerton was nominated by acclamation.

And yet Schaffer and Chesley are not satisfied. Some people are hard to please and would even grumble when being hung.

FOR ONE DOLLAR, Parkers history of the I. O. G. T., authorized by the R. W. G. L., a handsome volume of 311 pages, neatly bound in cloth, handsomely printed and illustrated with full page portraits of all the R. W. G. Templars, and other prominent workers in the Order, will be sold at one dollar per copy during the next thirty days only, after which the regular price of $1.25 will be resumed. This reduction is made to sell out the remaining number on hand, prior to stock taking, before the Grand Lodge. Upon receipt of one dollar in coin or currency, by registered letter or postal order (postage stamps not receivable), the G. W. S. will forward by mail securely wrapped and postage prepaid, a copy of Parkers History, as above described. Order immediately as but few copies remain.

WHO ARE ELIGIBLE. The question has several times been asked, who are eligible to receive the Grand Lodge Degree? The answer is all P. W. C. T's., and all sister P. W. V. T's., together with the acting W. C. T., and acting W. V. T. (if a sister), of any Lodge within the jurisdiction. It matters not whether such persons are Representatives or Alternates or not, or whether they ever have been. The Grand Lodge degree is the past official degree of the Order, hence all above stated are entitled thereto. Those not representatives or alternates desiring to receive the Grand Lodge degree, however ,should procure and present a certificate under seal of their Lodge and countersigned by the W. C. T. and W. S. certifying that they are a P. W. C. T. or P. W. V. T. as the case may be.

CREDENTIALS. Nearly 250 Lodges have filed credentials of their Representatives elect to the Grand Lodge which indicates an unusually large attendance. It is essential that credentials from all Lodges shall be filed with the G. W. S. on or before the 15th inst., as upon that date the roll of representatives will be placed in the hands of the printers. Representatives who desire their names to appear upon the printed roll call, will therefore see to it, that a copy of the Credentials (form heretofore furnished) is immediately filed with the G. W. S., if it has not already been attended to.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

C. N. GOULDING.

Monday Aug., 21st lectured in Good Templars hall Valley Ford before an enthusiastic audience and at the request of Sister Alice Gates visited her school Tuesday and addressed the children. Bro. and Sister Fowler entertained me at their pleasant home, 22nd came to Bloomfield, but some one had blundered, and did not lecture there: at Stony Point a dance had been arranged for Friday 25th which only gave me one night and concluded to give up appointments at Bloomfield and Stony Point until the last of September.

Friday evening 25th lectured in Two Rock Bro. and Reverend W. H. Durden came into Petaluma for me, good audience; Lodge here is doing well composed mostly of young people, returned to Petaluma and lectured there, on the 26th again at 4 P. M. Sunday 27th meetings were presided over by Rev. C. Anthony and Hunsacker and to the surprise of our friends the hall was filled at both lectures. Bro. Anthony is a power for good, is Worthy Chaplain of the lodge and never fails to advocate Temperance.

6 P. M. 27th drove out to Two Rock and delivered my second lecture to an audience that filled the large church, drove into Petaluma after the lecture, Bro. J. W. Thurp accompanied me. Monday 28th went to the City, visited International Lodge that evening. 29th left for this place remaining over night at Marysville and at Sister Stevens request lectured that evening in Yuba City. 30th came to Oroville, remained over night and on the 31st came here, ready for the "Camp Meeting."

Shall return to Sonoma County and continue my work there as announced in the RESCUE, Lodge Deputies will please make no changes in date of appointments without consulting D. Deputy Bro.. D. O. Coon it causes confusion. Concerning Camp Meeting will report in my next.

Con Cow September 1st, 1882.

HAYDEN HILL, Lassen Co., Cal.
September 1, 1882.

Plumas Co. has a few Lodges working earnestly. Our efforts were well received and meetings nearly all well attended. At Greenville, we found Bro. Moses Bull, District Deputy, very earnestly at work for the cause. At Crescent Mills we were met by Rev. Bro. Bateman, traveling missionary of the Baptist Church, and found him working occasionally for temperance. At Prattville we found an interesting meeting being held on the grounds of the Knights Templars of Lassen Commandery, and discovered Good Templars there from Chico and Colusa, as well as from parts of Plumas Co.

In Indian Valley we were well received by the community that initiated us into the Good Templar Order. The "boy" that left them over 15 years ago now returned one of the Grand Lecturers to the town of Taylorville. The town did honor to the "boy" and literally packed the house. Most of our former acquaintances were still working in the cause and Order in different parts of the Valley. As we were initiated into the I. O. O. F. in the same town and left there an initiate and returned a P. G., the Odd Fellows of Indian Valley Lodge were very anxious to have a visit. We had requested an order for the P. W. from Mt. Diablo Lodge, but although the Order was signed on Aug. 5th was not mailad till the 18th the day before the meeting, and hence we had to remain out in the cold while our old Lodge was anxiously awaiting our arrival. So much for "promptness."

Into Lassen Co. we came and organized Susanville Lodge, visited Buntingville and Toadtown, worked with Lake View Lodge, and then came to Hayden Hill and reorganized Mount Hope Lodge.

The halls in Greenville Plumas Co. and Buntingville Lassen Co. belong to the lodges of those places. They are excellent and speak well for the enterprise of the members. They are well fitted up, and neatly furnished. The hall at Greenville will compare well with the hall of any Masonic or Odd Fellows' Hall outside of our cities and largest towns. It is handsomely papered and carpeted, and lighted with ornamental lamps peculiarly arranged. The arched ceiling of Lake View Hall makes their hall ornamental and improves its acoustics. We now enter Modoc County and then "speed on our way" to Grand Lodge. WM. CROWHURST.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

TULARE VALLEY D. L. meets in Grangeville Sept. 7 and 8. All members of the Order invited. LIZZIE A. MOORE, D. S.

TEHAMA Co. D. L., at Red Bluff, Sept. 8. All the delegates expected, and members of the Order invited.
W. B. BALLARD, D. D.

TUOLUMNE Co. D. L., at Sonora, Saturday, Sept. 23, at 10½ A. M. Election of officers and other important matters. Open meeting. State lecturer expected. J. L. COLES, L. D.

DISTRICT LODGE.

The Good Templars of Los Angeles county held a a large and enthusiaitic District Lodge meeting at Compton last Saturday with picnic and public speaking in the afternoon at the M. E. camp ground. Strong resolutions were passed and all resolved to vote as they pray. The following resolutions were adopted unanimously:

1. Resolved, That we heartily endorse the RESCUE; that it is the ablest and most valuable arm of our temperance work; and we recommend that more active steps be taken to increase its circulation until it shall reach every home in California.

2. Resolved, That the bold and fearless stand taken by the Weekly Mirror of Los Angeles and the Downey Signal of Downey, on the side of morality and for the enforcement of the Sunday law merits our hearty approval; and we commend the support of these papers to all law and order loving people in the county.

3. Resolved, That we are in favor of prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage; and upon this question we demand the submission to the people of a Constitutional Amendment.

4. Resolved, That in the coming election our entire influence and support shall be given to those candidates in whom we have confidence and who are in favor of temperance and morality and the enforcement of the Sunday law, and opposed to every organization which is antagonistic to the best interests of the moral and law-abiding people.

The next regular meeting is to be held at Santa Ana, Saturday November 25th.

D. O. DAMON, District Secretary.

ALAMEDA DISTRICT LODGE

Held its annual meeting on Monday last under the auspices of Fountain Lodge No. 193; one of the most interesting for some time. In the absence of Bro. Haile, D. D., Dis. Sect. Storer of San Francisco fraternal delegate to Alameda D. L. was requested to take the chair. Delegates were present from San Leandro, No. 180 Fountain 193, West Berkeley 206, Athens, 286, Brooklyn, 384, Prohibition, 412, Alameda, 470, Perseverance 520, (this lodge is two weeks old). West Oakland or Sinclair B. of H. and Alameda B. of H. The reports from the lodges were very encouraging; the outlook for real temperance in Alameda Co. better than ever before. After the P. M. session the members of Fountain Lodge invited the delegates and visitors to a bountiful collation. L. D. Bro. Naismith presided in the evening. Fountain Lodge invited the officers of the D. L. to initiate four candidates which was done. The officers were then installed by L. D. Bro. Naismith as G. W. C. T. Bro. I. S. Halsey G. Sect. Bro. Scott G. M.

Bro. Fairbanks of 512 was recommended as D. D. for the ensuing year.

Next Session of the D. L. in San Leandro November 25 at 2 P. M. After an interesting Good of the Order the lodge adjourned. JENNIE S. NAISMITH D. Sect.

SANTA BARBARA DISTRICT LODGES.

Met at Santa Barbara Aug. 15, Bro. Jas. Morse presiding. Delegates present from Santa Barbara, Stuart, Carpenteria, Vesper, Seaside, Montecito and Los Alamos Lodges: Rose of Lompoc, Lompoc Valley, Goleta and Positive Lodges not represented. After some business routine it was discovered to be the fiftieth birthday of Bro. Jas. Backus and the 22nd anniversary of Bro. Webb's marriage: hands up accordingly.

Resolutions passed to vote only for temperance men and cautioning the Republican party that a separate ticket will be nominated in the event of their pandering to the whisky vote (as they have now done.—ED.)

Some of the lodges were reported as stationary or declining, and others as flourishing and gaining in influence upon their communities. One lodge reported losses from carelessness of officers in collecting dues and maintaining discipline. Had a successful public meeting in the Presbyterian Church. Next session at Los Alamos, Oct. 25.

"ETHICS AND POLICY OF PROHIBITION."

The National Temperance Society has just published a pamphlet of much interest, entitled "Ethics and Policy of Prohibition." by O. J. Chubbuck, of Pennsylvania. It is a strong argument for the right of prohibition, and a powerful appeal to voters to exercise their rights as electors to secure the suppression of the liquor traffic. It is a valuable document for prohibitionists everywhere, and should be widely circulated. Price 5 cents.

CERTIFICATE ON PETITIONS.

It is important that the certificate on back of our temperance petitions be properly filled out so that the signatures shall be vouched for when presented to the Legislature. In the first blank write whole number of names, in the second number of males over the age of 21 years, and then let some responsible person who has circulated the petition or who knows the signature, sign his or her name with place of residence.

Have all of the Lodge Deputies read the petitions in open lodge and asked the members to sign and actively aid in obtaining signature? The petitions have been sent to them for that purpose; and more will be sent to persons who will aid in this great work. Send postal card to WILL D. GOULD, Los ANGELES, and the return mail will bring blank petitions.

MR. Handel Cossham, at a United Methodist Church Temperance meeting said when prohibition prevails the working class there can put up their wages 25 per cent because their labor will be worth that much more. He talked sense.

HOP BITTERS of the Rochester label have been analyzed in England—and found to be one-fourth whisky, three-fourths water with some fusel oil and a flavor of something like hops. It is nothing evidently but a very wicked and nasty instrument of peddling drunkenness. But no one will attempt to deny that any alcoholic mixture will make either a sick or a hale person feel better, for the time that the partial drunk lasts which it creates.

Juvenile Department.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

A SERMON IN RHYME.

If you have a friend worth loving,
  Love him. Yes; and let him know
That you love him, e'er life's evening
  Tinge his brow with sunset glow,
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
  Sung by any child of song,
Praise it. Do not let the singer
  Wait deserved praises long.
Why should one who thrills your heart,
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you
  By its humble, pleading tone,
Join it. Do not let the seeker
  Bow before his God alone.
Why should not your brother share
The strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling
  From a brother's eyes
Share them. And, by sharing,
  Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should any one be glad,
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh is rippling
  Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it. 'Tis the wise man's saying—
  For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
  By a friendly helping hand,
Say so. Speak out brave and truly,
  Ere the darkness veil the land.
Should a brother workman dear,
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
  All enriching as you go;
Leave them. Trust the Harvest-Giver,
  He will make the seed to grow;
So, until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

ABOUT MAINE.

Our young folks, many of them, have heard it asserted, that the Maine law is a failure. But they never heard a temperance man say so. It is only rum and beer that say so, and we all know they never speak a word of truth, for they are both the instruments of the father of lies. We all know that every argument used in favor of wine, beer, whisky, cider or against temperance and prohibition has been utterly false.

If every body in California believed the Maine Law was a success in Maine, all the better people would want it established here, and would vote for it; and the liquor dealers would vote and fight against it. If every body believed it a failure in Maine and believed there is as much drinking as ever there, nobody would want to vote for it among good people; the temperance people would not want to have it, for it would be no use to us; and the rum-sellers would just as soon have it here as not; it would be far better for them in fact, because they would have no license to pay and they would sell quite as much liquor as before.

But how are the facts? the people whose trade it is to make drunkards and send people to jail are constantly declaring that the law is a failure in Maine, that there is more liquor drank there than before and more drunkenness. Now if they believed that, it would be an excellent thing for them to have it so here; they could sell more drink, pay no license and of course make more profit. And we would not give a cent for such a law. But while asserting this wicked falsehood, they are combining all over the country and raising immense sums of money to prevent that law being passed in any other State. And we are using every exertion to have it passed everywhere, because we know that with honest police and courts we can make a prohibitory law of immense benefit to the State, or rather we can make it prevent an immensity of evils which now come from the curse of drink.

About Maine; it is and has been of late immensely prosperous, altho it is one of the poorest States in agriculture, mines and all resources of wealth except the industry and sobriety of its people. Senator Blaine tells us that:

In 1857 Maine had a property valuation of	$100,000,000
In 1882	225,000,000
In 1857 the money on deposit in banks of issue was a little over	2,000,000
In 1882 it is in the National Banks nearly	10,000,000
In 1857 Maine had eleven Savings Banks with deposits	919,572
In 1882 it has fifty five Savings Banks with deposits	30,000,000
In 1857 Maine had savings bank depositors	5,000
In 1882 it has nearly	90,000
In 1857 half the counties had railroads, now every county has them.

Now that is only what might be expected; every body should know that prohibition must bring wondrous prosperity. During the last 25 years of prohibition, Maine with its cold climate and poor soil might have gone behind hand, as many liquor selling communities have done, but on the contrary the new buildings and better houses and all evidences of wealth and comfort have been increasing amazingly. Any one who has traveled there much, will probably agree that the people in Maine who work for $30 a month have better houses, better food and better surroundings and circumstances, every way, as a class, than people in any rum licensed State in the world do on $60 a month. That the man of $5000 in Maine (on an average) is better housed, fed, schooled and more comfortable and stylish than the man of $10,000 in any rum State or country in the world.

And the young men and young women now growing up in Maine are, as a class, the noblest and best and the best looking and best behaved in the world; because they are under the very best training, see the very best example, are under the best moral influences and are the farthest removed from all those evil associations that produce hoodlums, tramps, rowdies and people of rude behavior.

That is what "The Temperance cause has done for my dear John and me" and all our young folks down in Maine. And let our young folks in California particularly remember all these things; and just one thing more; the people that Maine and its vicinity has sent to settle in California, altho some of them have been demoralized and destroyed here, were when they left their homes the best class of people that ever came here and have been the first and foremost friends of temperance and good citizenship.

AN ANGEL'S TOUCH.

One vening, not long ago, a little girl of nine or ten entered a place in which is a bakery, grocery and saloon in one, and asked for five cents' worth of tea.

"How's your mother?" asked the boy who came forward to wait on her.

"Awful sick, and ain't had anything to eat all day."

The boy was just then called to wait upon some men who entered the saloon, and the girl sat down. In five minutes she was nodding, and in seven she was sound asleep and leaning her head against the barrel, while she held the poor old nickel in a tight grip between her thumb and finger. One of the men saw her as he came from the bar, and after asking who she was, said:

"Say, you drunkards, see here. Here we have been pouring down whisky when this poor child and her mother want bread. Here is a two-dollar bill that says I've got some feeling left."

"And I can add a dollar," observed one.

"And I will give another."

They made up a purse of an even five dollars, and the spokesman carefully put the bill between the sleepers fingers, drew the nickel away, and whispered to his comrades:

"Jist look a-there—the gal's a dreaming!"

So she was. A big tear rolled out from her closed eyelid, but the face was covered with a smile. The men tiptoed out, and the clerk walked over and touched the sleeping child. She awoke with a laugh, and cried out:

"What a beautiful dream? Ma wasn't sick any more, and we had lots to eat, and to wear, and my hand burns yet where an angel touched it!"

When she discovered that her nickel had been replaced by a bill, a dollar of which loaded her down with all she could carry, she innocently said:

"Well now, but ma won't hardly believe me that you sent up to heaven and got an angel to come down and clerk in your grocery!"—Washington Chronicle.

PROFESSOR GARDNER ON HARD TIMES.

As I was walking out in the back yard, began Bro. Gardner, "Mister Darius Green, the white man, came along, and there was a powerful sad look on his face az he leaned over the fence and said:

'"Misser Gardner, this sufferin haz got to come to a cease!'

'"Hez ye got de shakes and chills?' I axed.

'"Wuss dan dat, Misser Gardner. Ize working all de long week for ten shillin' a day, an' whar de money goes I can't tell. De ole woman wants new clothes, de chillin wants dis an dat, de rent runs behin,' an' Ize gettin' despirit.'

'"Shoo! now let's make some figgers on de fence,' I tole him. 'Now den you chew 'terbaccer?'

'"Yes, I chew 'bout ten cents worf a day.'

'"Dat's seventy cents a week. An' you drink lager?'

'"Well, of course I drink a glass now and den—maybe fifteen glasses a week.'

'"Dat's seventy-five cents moah, sah—What d'ye do on Sundays!'

'"Oh, go up to de beer garden.'

'"An' you spen' a dollar at least?'

'"I guess so—maybe two of 'em.'

'"Say twelve shillins' an' dat makes two dollars 'an ninety-five cents per week. I reckon you frow away at least free dollars ebery week, sah.'

'"Frow it away?'

'"Yes sah. Dat money would pay your rent an' buy your flour.'

'"But a feller must have some comfort.'

'"De same, sah. De greatest comfort in de world am to see de rent paid up, de table loaded down, an' de ole woman able to go to church. You frow away free dollars ebery week, sah, an' den you go roun' cussin' de times, de wedder, an' de man who hez saved his money.'

'"Gem'len, dat white man called me an ole black fool an' a dog stealer, but dat didn' alter de case a bit. He is frowin' away one-third of his weekly wages, an' den blowin' round dat he's gettin' desperit an' am ready to head a riot. Doan' let me heah eny member o' dis club spinnin' dat yarn, case if he does dars gwine to be a committee ob investigashun an' dat committee won't whitewash wof a cent!'

A $100 Library for $4 75.—Many schools do not know that from now until October 1st, they can purchase a library of 156 choice Sunday-school books, in cheap but very durable form, at less than five cents each. The same books bound in cloth, and on thicker paper, have hitherto been sold by other publishers at from $1 to $1 50 each. An assorted library of 100 books, which ordinarily would cost $100, will be sent, post paid, to any school for $4 75, or 50 books for $2 50. Each book is numbered, and contains a catalogue of all. A simple system of keeping library, etc., is also furnished, which costs but 1½ cents each, additional. After October first an advance of 40 per cent., as present price does not pay sufficiently for the large investment. A sample book and library system mailed for 8 cents. Catalogue sent free upon application. Send to D. C. Cook, 46 Adam Street, Chicago.

Drink and Prayer.—Miss Edwards, in her book on boat life on the Nile, says:—

"I asked Rais Abdallah the other day why some of the sailors said their prayers and some did not. He said: 'Sometimes if a sailor is young, perhaps he has not begun to pray; or if he smokes hacheesh, or drinks wine, then he does not pray. If I ever smoked hacheesh, or drank wine, I should leave off praying; it would be of no use my doing both; it would be like taking first a step to the east and then a step to the west.'"

The Arab, I dare say, was no metaphysician, but he had a clear idea that contraries cannot very easily co-exist in the same subject—that the attempt to reconcile them will fail. His remarks are a curiously illustrative commentary on the Apostolic words. "Be sober (sober-minded) and watch (literally, drink not) unto prayer." The idea present to the mind of Peter had—without a knowledge of Peter's injunction—commended itself to the Mussulman Arab. S.

Capt. Myers of the Salvation army declared in June that there were 23,000 reformed drunkards enrolled in the army.

Father Nugent has a society of 3500 total abstinence women in Liverpool mostly the wives of working men. He has for years been a successful apostle of temperance.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The only use made of butter in Barbacoas was to have a small slice of toast supposed to have been brot into contact with a buttery knife at the restaurant. It never appeared on the table by itself and where it came from or how was a mystery. But Tnquerres was said to be a butter country and there were cows enough and grazing facilities to make it a dairy region. On enquiry at the one restaurant of the town kept by an Italian sailor, I was told there had "not been any lately," and the matter was dropped. But some days after I tried a dish of what seemed a vegetable of some kind; tried it cautiously, it was not mashed potatoes, nor turnips, nor parsnips; it was as stringy and tenaceous as toasted cheese and the taste of it gave no sign as to what it was. But the restaurant man said it was butter.

It was a fancy restaurant that; nothing to equal it had I yet met with. There was an actual furnace which admitted of three articles being cooked at the same time—in three openings above the fire. The furnace would hold about a gallon of charcoal, which, stimulated with a hand bellows made a quick and hot fire. The proprietor could cook a pot of coffee in one, boil eggs in the second and fry meat in the third—in small earthen pots and ovens which are made by the country people. With such an improvement in culinary facilities this man could cook a breakfast for two or three people at once if they confined their orders to the same articles, whereas in Barbacoas no one dreamed of filling a second order till the first was completed.

It had been a feature too in the Barbacoas restaurants that the barefooted proprietor after getting an order for eggs, coffee and bread would have to go out to the market and buy the eggs and bread, and many a time he returned with a report that one or the other had given out and we could have coffee and eggs but no bread till to-morrow. One man had to be supplied as a general thing with five cents to buy sugar and ten to buy eggs before he could enter into a contract to supply an entire breakfast. But here our Italian was independent; he always had enough eggs and bread and meat on hand to last all day, and there was capital enough in the business to get a whole pound of sugar at a time without getting a loan from the customers.

The people of Tuquerres were delighted at the prospect of a road being undertaken at last. There was a very strong prejudice against the former contractors who had failed to do anything on this and on several other roads they had undertaken. They could not get a mile of it at any price. But they were there and a proposition was very coolly and openly made to me to sell out my partners in Barbacoas and take a larger share in with them and some of the Tuquerres Commission. It seemed in that region such a singular thing that anyone should hesitate to heave his friends and partners overboard when they were clear out of sight, that my refusal was a matter of surprise all round.

It was thereafter apparent that a liberal system of bribery had been adopted and very soon the parties who had been loudest in cursing the incapacity and dishonesty of the former contractors, began to discern and proclaim that they were both good fellows; one of them had adopted a woman of the country and married her religion and both could stand enormous doses of aguardiente. To make it short, bribery carried the contract for them and every body knew it. One of my friends assured me he had done all he could for me and regretted exceedingly that the road had been awarded to the other parties, who would never complete it. Next day he seemed to have forgotton this conversation, for he was very much enraged against the fortunate contractors, who, he said, had agreed to give him a one-sixth interest for his help, and now they denied it altogether, after he had done his best for them and they had succeeded.

The disappointment was not serious as success would have involved a two or perhaps three years' residence among strangers, in the forests and mountains; exposed to heavy rains on 25 of every 30 days, venomous snakes always near, wretched feed, miserable lodgings, and never hearing ones own language. Added to this, the government might at any time pass a decree of confiscation or might defer the payment of their promises for many years, against which there would be no redress.

But the feat of walking over 90 miles of such a road and back again, was one that none of the great heroes and warriors of history are ever credited with accomplishing, and it was an experience that is heartily commended to those whose time hangs heavily on their hands and who have means to gratify a taste for adventure. It should have been stated that the contract to construct the road for $140.000, was awarded fairly to me at the first meeting of the committee, after my arrival, provided satisfactory bonds should be given; but when the bribery commenced, there were no bondmen in the Republic that would do, except those who owned real estate in the town of Tuquerres.

Therefore the outcome of the whole transaction, awakened a feeling of gratitude that altho among my people and my race there are unprincipled men, men of wrecked consciences and bankrupt in morals —open violation of faith and promise, and falsehood to principle are not the general rule, nor are they generally winked at as the inevitable. As an example of their dealings; a high official who had a spendthrift brotherinlaw, heavily in debt, sent him $2,000 of the money on hand to build this road, ostensibly "to send to New York to purchase tools for the construction of the road." When enquiry was made, the money had been applied to his own use as intended and that was all that was done about it. Let all those who belong to the Anglo-Saxon race be thankful every day of their lives for the great privilege of their lineage; and with unbounded brotherhood and charity to all mankind, be sure te ape no foreign airs or habits as improvements upon our heritage of honest, steady, manly principles and let them be proud of a sober, honest ancestry who have served and trusted in the God of the Bible for centuries, and from that Bible learned their code of morals and taut it to their children.

It is very singular that the Africans of Colombia from Tuquerres to the sea coast—who were slaves until 1852 are exceptionably honest in many respects. Their code of morals seemed to be loose about anything good to eat. They were accused of helping themselves to plantains; and when they cook for any one, will supply themselves and friends with about three or four times as much as he uses. And if they borrow a dollar or buy something on credit without a pledge, they are remarkably forgetful many of them, and many are as good and sure pay as the Rothchilds. But stranger or neighbor, any man can travel from the coast, where they are all Africans except a few whites, to Tuquerres where they are mostly Indians, and he may publicly display any quantity of money in his pockets or in sacks or boxes, and there is no danger of his being robbed of a dollar by an African. He can go safely with them up lone rivers night or day, stop at any hut on the shore where the people take care of everything he has, and he can sleep there in perfect safety and without precaution.

The mail carriers on foot or in canoe are known to have always money in the mail, but not one of them has ever been molested any where within the knowledge of the people of that region except one who was robbed and killed by two foreigners who claimed to be Americans. And in no country in the world is there easier escape for a criminal by water than there. To these poor people who work for ten to fifty cents a day the sum of $100 is a huge amount, but any one of those Africans, man, boy, woman or girl, or any dozen of them, can be sent ten or twenty miles to take or bring $100 or $200, unsealed in a sack and there is not a particle of danger that one of them will steal a cent of it.

In no other country could this be said of a whole community of people. But the Indians are credited with stealing a little; those who come from the interior. In Barbacoas there was a boy thief, a deformed and distorted street waif, and an Indian from Ecuador, who kept a restaurant; perhaps there was not another known thief in that town, at least none that needed to be guarded against. In my sickness while up in the mountains for a month, this miscreant got the key of my room, broke into my trunk, stole $255 in coin, my watch and chain, every article of clothing worth taking and cast the trunk with a lot of books in it into the river. Next morning at daybreak, it had only got a couple of miles down the stream, having grounded somewhere, and had not filled yet with water, and an African found it and took it right up to town. It was immediately known to be mine from the books etc, and as Mr. Thief had got the key from the druggist who had it in charge he was arrested. That means he was put in jail at night to sleep and let out every morning. On my arrival four days after, they had never made search for the stolen property, and it was three days more before I could get them to do so. Then of course every trace had been carefully removed. There was a process of making out a list of articles lost, and their value and making oath to it before a judges clerk, and without ever calling the prisoner up to confront a witness, altho the judge and every inhabitant knew he was the thief, the evidence being absolutely complete, the judge sent an order to let him go saying the proof was not sufficient. There was no dout that the thief divided the spoil, and tho he was known previously to borrow ten cents every day to buy a meal for a customer before he cooked it, and now he branched out into trade and had $90 worth of goods bot with my money attached for an old debt, not one of the officers of the law but connived with him and helped to cover up his tracks; not one of these people would have stolen themselves anything of mine, but not one of them would do anything else than screen the thief.

Work for prohibition. Thank God for Kansas and Iowa, and take courage. Law, though, must have public sentiment behind it. Your business is to make public sentiment at home, in the shop, on the street, and in the church of God.

There is not a publican but can take your brother, your father, your son, into his dram-shop to-night and make him drunk in spite of your entreaties and prayers, and kick him out at midnight, and you may find his dead body in the gutter. All you have to do is to take the body and bury it and say nothing about it, for you have no redress or protection. Now, protection is what we want. Come and help us. Vote for prohibition—John B. Gough.

INSANITY.

Dr. G. A. Tucker of Sydney, Australia, late superintendent of an Insane Asylum there is on a visit of inspection thru America and Europe. He recently visited our asylums in Napa and Stockton, highly approved their management, except in the matter of crowding. Thinks not more than 300 should be in one institution. He thinks judicious treatment should restore 75 per cent of those committed. He concluded an interview with the Stockton Independent as follows:

"As to the cause of insanity, which is, of course, the most important inquiry, I find that at least fifty per cent may be traced to the use of intoxicating liquors. I state this ess afact, without any reference to the temperance qu e tion, which now seems to be attracting considerable attention in California and in the other States. It may be stated, however, as a scientific, demonstrated truth, that the leading cause of insanity all over the world at the present time is the use of intoxicating drinks. Science never shows any partiality or prejudice in making up her records. The other causes of insanity are those arising out of business and domestic troubles, exposure, privations, disease, etc., which I need not enumerate."

We are aware that medical men are very cautious and conservative in their statements and when they say 50 per cent of the insanity is due to drink we may feel sure they are far enough within the mark.

INCREASE OF INSANITY.

Wherever the curse and scourge of the grog-shop spreads its horrid leprous influence, there is an outcry about the rapid increase of insanity. At a recent convention at Madison, Wis., it was asserted that there are 100,000 insane persons in the U. S., only half of whom are in the asylums. They have increased from 1870 to 1880, 100 per cent while the population increased 30 per cent, and the proportion of cures is growing less.

And as the cities grow with their grog-shops everywhere, the curse of insanity, its most natural result, marches onward; and it must be remembered that all other evils and crimes which are the fruit of the dram-shop are being more deeply rooted and more widely extended. The States that have most dram-shops have most of everything that is unclean, vile, murderous, cruel, bloody, unnatural and ungodly.

The remedy for insanity. crime and all the glaring evils is absolute determined prohibition of the source of nine-tenths of them all. One-tenth of all our sins and plagues if that remain, will be enough to give ample work for its removal.

Can the boy be saved? What will you say when you hear the facts? A boy nine years old was before a police justice in Chicago, and was discharged on condition that he would go home. On the next night he was arrested at the request of his parents, who complained of his staying out at nights and of his stealing. His brother, two years older, was fined $50. This tells a hard story on the parents themselves, and on the neighborhood and on the Sunday-school agencies in the vicinity. A clergyman said in public lately, in Chicago, that if children in that city can be saved from drunkenness till they are fourteen, they are already certain of future safety. Is it not a fearful thing to have little children engulfed in vice before they reach their teens? Is there not a work for the church to do and every member in it, while her children are being devoured?—Ex.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE PLATFORM.

There are various opinions as to what is meant by the platform recently enunciated in Sacramento. As regards the temperance question it is an entire blank and thereon is acceptable to the Leag of Fiendom and entirely in their interests. As to the Sunday law, the plank is so framed as to bear one interpretation that will be perfectly in accord with the designs of the drunkard and criminal manufacturers, and another that will suit that section of Christian and temperance people who are very much in earnest about temperance and want to do any and everything except to prohibit the sale of rum.

The first and second planks were magnificent in their patriotic declarations as they did not affect any party, person or interest. The others referring to railroads, monopolies, etc. are such as would have been set up by every one of 15 parties in the field had there been as many. Of course they are only to catch innocent votes and wont affect the railroads and corporations any more than a consumptive mosquito could harass a first-class rhinoceros. The railroads under the platforms and candidates of either of the two parties which may carry the election will enjoy the most profound tranquility for two more years and at a very trifling cost compared with a reduction of their tarifs.

The convention had perfect faith in the wisdom of the Arthur administration; that seems to indicate that the convention is not included among those who "fondly cherish the memory of the patriotic Garfield," whose administration must have been abhorrent to those who so much admire one of an entirely opposite principle, habit, practice and character.

The convention manifested an unbounded confidence in Genl. Rosecrans as Congressman, in making a straw nomination against him which renders his election sure so far as the convention could.

It was not a peace offering to the moral sentiment of the State that a lifelong liquor seller should have been called to preside over the convention; nor was it creditable to that body to recognize as American citizens the emissaries of a conspiracy of openly professed outlaws in active rebellion and whose calling and purposes even when in submission to law are entirely and comprehensively infamous. To entertain propositions from them, to trim its sails to suit them was an advertisement of a cowardly surrender of American dignity and patriotism to the assault of the representatives of crime and debauchery.

From the platform temperance men have nothing to expect. There may be hope in temperance men elected upon this platform by temperance people, if any such should be. But the platform indicates that the Republican party respects the Leag of Fiendom and its infernal agencies of corruption, more than it does the virtue and sobriety and honesty of the respectable citizens of the State, intends to obey its orders, and has thrown patriotism and the welfare of the people to the dogs.

We are bidden to see what the Republican party has done in Iowa. It may be new to some readers that they never did anything for temperance but fool it, until after a third party in 1877 had cast 10,600 votes for a prohibition candidate. Then the machine politicians promised "to be good" and the result was a vote next time to submit the constitutional amendment and now it has come to pass, and Iowa owes its present emancipation entirely to the third party of that time.

LAW.

It is time somebody should be employed or something should be done to reform our laws, so as to make them intelligible, and to invent some machinery that can properly try a civil suit or do justice to a criminal.

If we should go to Smith or Henderson the temperance grocers, and pay for a pound of tea, we should pronounce the grocer a humbug, if it took him three weeks or three months to get it sent home, or if he sent a pound of sugar once, and a pound of coffee the second time in place of the tea, and wanted us to pay him $5 for every mistake he made; but that would be good law practice and experience.

If a carpenter was employed to make an oak door 6 feet by 4, and brot you one of redwood 5 by 3 the first time, and one of mahogany 7 by 5 next time, and then none at all and made you pay for the whole three, there would be a fuss made, but the carpenter could plead good legal example and precedent.

A captain of a merchant ship does not spend years in the study of the legal possibilities of his profession. But not one in a hundred of them ever frames or signs a charter party (a contract), and then can not tell by it whether he has engaged to carry pig iron from Wales to New York or coolies from China to Havana. Not one time in 100, does an intelligent one of them sign a bill of lading (another contract), that gets him into a legal dispute as to its clear meaning; because it is a mercantile, not a legally drawn document.

If two seafaring men living ashore, should draw up a contract by which A. is bound to dig a well 40 feet deep by 4 wide for B., and B. is to pay A. $100 for the service when completed, there would be no chance of a disagreement as to which should dig the well and which should pay the $100. But if they employed $25 worth of legal talent to draw up the contract, it might perhaps take 5 years and cost $1.000 to determine those two points.

If a tailor agrees to give us a french beaver suit for $60, we understand it to mean a coat, vest and pants and he never tries to palm us off with a second hand ulster and a pair of socks as verily a dress suit. Because the tailor never studied law.

Any two sober, honest blacksmiths or stone masons, on the same day that Guiteau shot down President Garfield, when they had heard his own confession of intention and performance of the deed, and examined two or three witnesses of the act, could have tried and hanged the miscreant, justly and honestly in two hours and they could have made no mistake. But it took a house full of lawyers, judges, witnesses and perhaps $100,000 of expense to find out whether Guiteau had really done any thing or not, and there was no one sure till the 30th of June that all the trial would not have to be pronounced a failure and be gone over again.

A man coolly choked a woman to death about a year ago under circumstances that not very far back in history would have subjected him to certain death by the cruelest torture; but we have not been yet able to find a court competent to try him. The legal carpenters cant make their five feet door anywhere within three feet of the measure; and the people of the State cannot find out whether it is right or wrong to destroy a sister-in-law and then deliberately murder her at pleasure. Another murderer has had 2 or 3 trials and will pretty surely escape because a California court cannot try him without making mistakes.

It is next to impossible to find out by means of present legal machinery, whether it is an act of deserving heroism or a mere harmless freak or a hideous crime to rob a bank, to cheat and defraud a widow of her last cent, to receive money on deposit and squander it at the gaming table or to commit murder. Again when a law has been demanded by the people, drawn up by the ablest legal talent, scrutinized and amended so as to remove every liability to imperfection, passed thru all the proper channels and placed in due form among the statutes, there is no certainty at all that the will of the people will not be defeated by some legal quibble or by the political bias of one member of the Supreme Court who has a casting vote in deciding upon its validity.

And worse than all when a Federal Judge has dared to render a decision which is simply just and honest—that a laundry is not of itself a nuisance, he is assailed by political enemies, and it is held up to his prejudice that he did not grossly degrade and prostitute his sacred office, violate his official oath and disrobe himself of his manhood and good citizenship.

SWEET PEACE HAS COME AT LAST.

There might have been some disposition to complain that the utterance of the Republican convention on the Sunday law was not as favorable to the American people of this country as to the foreign rum sellers; there might have been a complaint made that the Leag of Free rum was highly honored at the convention and the question of temperance and morality and its advocates kicked out peremptorily; the temperance men and women who had hoped for some action on the sale of liquor on Sunday and on week days too, did feel at first a little craving for something they had lost; but later news calmed the brewing storm and a sweet peace has settled down upon the heart of every genuine temperance advocate from the Oregon to the Arizona line. Every body is enthusiastically satisfied now, and we all sit down to joyously await the coming glory.

PAUL NEUMANN

is nominated for Congress!!! Any temperance man that would demand anything more of a Republican Convention, than the nomination of Paul Neumann to Congress is a firebrand, a conspirator, a nihilist, a dynamiter, a red-handed communist and anything else a friend chooses to throw in.

The Good Templars have been at work for twenty-seven years in this State, but in their highest flights of enthusiasm, they never dreamed that at this early stage of their history they could have succeeded in getting Paul Neumann nominated to Congress.

The Sons of Temperance, the W. C. T. U., the Father Matthews, have been vigorously at work all these years, but not one of them ever expected they could succeed in getting Paul Neumann nominated to Congress to attend to the National Prohibition question and vote there on the Commission of Enquiry.

The Home Protection Party was formed and its agencies sent all over the State, enthusiastic meettings held and ringing speeches made for the protection of our Homes. The object is more than triumphantly accomplished and the eternal security of our Homes assured in the nomination of Paul Neumann to Congress.

The Prohibition Reform Party called a convention and people came from distant counties to attend it. They had anticipations of a reform in Sunday observance, in prohibition, in relief from the tyranny of the rumdoggery, and of other reforms; but the real object of that Prohibition Reform Convention was the nomination of Paul Neuman to Congress; that satisfies the most ardent longings of everyone who assisted on that occasion.

The Prohibition Reform Convention appointed a Committee to present its claims to the Republican Convention, but no such glorious result as the nomination of Paul Neumann to Congress was dreamed of.

The nomination of a Congressman to represent the Leag of Freedom in Washington proves the perfect sincerity and patriotism of the Republican party. The anti-monopolist, the anti-railroad-extortion man, the home protectionist, the greenbacker, the free-thinker, the Mormon and the Oakland "Signs of the Times," who dont go in, heart and soul now, to elect the whole Republican strait ticket on the sole and sufficient ground that Paul Neumann has been nominated to Congress, is a firebrand, a nihilist, a dynamiter etc. The nomination of Paul Neumann to Congress should induce every voter, who has any self-respect at all, to vote the strait Republican ticket for the next fifty years at least.

It is delightful to know that the Lion and the Lamb have at last laid down together in peace and the Lamb has crawled into the inside of the Lion where he will enjoy sweet peace and rest.

Tennyson's drunken carousal song "Hands all Round" was tried in a celebration of the Queens birthday at Sidney, and met with strenuous disapproval.

MR. SHAEFFERS PLANK.

"Fifth—History and experience unite to prove the necessity of preserving one day in seven as a day of rest from labor. Without legislation on this subject the laboring classes might be compelled to continue in unceasing toil. Therefore, we are in favor of observing Sunday as a day of rest and recreation; and while we expressly disavow the right or the wish to force any class of our citizens to spend that day in any particular manner, we do favor the maintenance of the present Sunday laws, or similar laws, providing for the suspension of all unnecessary business on that day."

How grandly meaningless; the laboring classes might be, etc. But we expressly disavow the right or wish, etc., nothing doutful in the disavowal. And the present Sunday laws, or similar laws or some other law or laws about something or some other thing. The suspension of all unnecessary business on that day. No allusion to the grogshop, to the protection of the citizen from the knife and pistol of the rumseller; no allusion to the peace of the American Sabbath; nothing that could possibly endanger the right of the beer garden to sow its pestilential damnation and corruption on Sunday.

Score one grand triumph for the Leag of Fiendom and for every Christian and Sunday law man and temperance man who acknowledges Mr. Shaeffer as his representative before the Republican Convention. And Paul Neumann is two triumphs more.

CHEAP JOHN.

There is no more joyous duty in this world than to prophesy smooth things, believing they are true; there is no more unpleasant task than that of coming up with an evil report. It would be very pleasant to have to congratulate our order generally and universally upon a steady progress from the first, leading to a hope of triumph in the near future; but it is by no means a favorite amusement to assume the role of croaker and to discourse of FAILURE in the past, FAILURE in the present, and to prophesy utter hopeless FAILURE in the future, unless the warnings of our history are heeded, and the cause or causes of failure are removed.

The RESCUE is about the only temperance journal that has fairly and openly met and treated the alarming, discouraging statistics of decadence which as a rule have been for many years the most striking and general feature of our annual reports. Some of our Eastern brethern seem to think the bearer of evil tidings is the cause of them, or that to discuss our failures and misfortunes imperils the welfare of the Order. Some seem to fear it will create unpleasant discussion in our lodges; to try to do anything to avert further calamity might hasten dissolution. It has seemed to the RESCUE that to say nothing about it and do nothing about it would with the most absolute certainty, result in the extinction of the best and most useful Order that has ever sot to bless the world. In early youth the unpleasant but unerring truth was mournfully learned, that when a stock of 10, 20 or 30 winter apples in a boy's trunk were diminished by two every day and no additions made, the day surely came when the apples were extinct. And a series of experiments upon a reduction of one a day and then of one in two days, invariably led to the same painful result, however the system was varied. So when a majority of our jurisdictions are growing less by 2,000, 1,000 or 100 every year and nothing is being done to compensate this loss, that youthful apple-experience reasserts itself with an uncomfortable persistence.

The causes of our decadence outside of California and Oregon have been recounted in these columns, but as all truths in the line of temperance have to be vigorously pounded into peoples' understandings time and again, it is deemed necessary to go over the ground once more, many new readers not having seen the previous indictments of cheap John.

The machinery of this Order was so well planned and put together as it came from the hands of Father Bristol long ago, it may safely be asserted that just as it was the I. O. G. T., was an organization fully fitted to unite and absorb all other Prot estant temperance societies, to render the formation of any others unnecessary, perhaps impossible; it was capable, under wise leadership and judicious management, of carrying the war of prohibition to a triumphant successful issue.

It was so popular and so fully met the necessities of the time, that it extended and gained with wondrous rapidity. Its usefulness and fitness was so apparent that it made wonderful headway for a time and the friends of temperance who united with it, loved it as they never did any other society. But men were ambitious to improve the external nonessentials or ceremonials and to photograph themselves in its rituals. Forgetful altogether of the main objects of the Order, a fruitful bone of contention was introduced in an attempt to abolish every thing which made the order cost a member a cent more than it did the men outside.

In place of using a strong hand to resist these destructive elements, the leaders yielded step by step to changes and innovations and the principal business which has occupied the time of the R. W. G. L. nearly ever since, has been to wrangle over contemptible issues unworthy of a 7 by 9 political spoils club and having not the most distant relation to the temperance reform, except to disgust men with it.

As soon as it became apparent that there was no law, no ruling of the R. W. G. L., which could not be changed and sent up like a rocket to-morrow, Cheap John commenced the systematic course of operations, which he has pursued ever since with such success. When the degrees and signs were changed, it was easy to change and abolish everything else. And ever since we have had a cheap John administration in our R. W. G L., and in most of our Grand Lodges. Next week the results and workings of this most important factor in all temperance work will be reviewed.

A TREACHEROUS PLANK.

Dr. McDonald, of the Pacific Bank, and the Home Protection Association, expressed himself quite freely last evening with reference to the Sunday Law plank of the Republican platform. "I am disgusted with it; it has no backbone, and is too treacherous and unsafe for me to trust myself upon it. It means anything or nothing, just as you may please to make it, in fact it was John W. Shaeffer, the ex-President of the League of Freedom, who fixed that up in the interests of ths League, and the temperance men were sold out, body and boots. We wanted a local option plank, and if we had got that we would have tried for a constitutional prohibition plank; bnt through Shaeffer's influence apparently, more than any other man's, the Committee on Platform would not for a moment consider the proposition to insert a local option plank, and of course we knew it was of no use to talk about constitutional prohibition. Instead of being dissatisfied with Shaeffer's seeming concessions, which really amounted to nothing, the League of Freedom may credit him not only with having staved off a definite and pronounced declaration in favor of sustaining and enforcing the Sunday Law, and substituting this milk-and-water affair, but with inducing the committee to turn a deaf ear to the entreaties of the temperance men for a recommendation of local option. If anybody has reason to be pleased, it is the saloon men; but the fact is, in the attempt to ride two horses and save the votes of both the temperance and liquor Republicans, they will meet the usual fate of unprincipled tricksters and compromisers of principle and fall between the two—satisfying nobody but the conscienceless trimmers and wire-pullers who don't care a fig for Sunday or temperance, but only to carry out their party projects. I am a old Republican," he added, "and hoped to be able to continue voting for and sustaining the Republican party, but when I find them truckling in this way to the liquor and anti-Sunday Law interests it is time for me to draw out—and I think there are a good many other Republicans who will decide the same way. A convention will probably be called very soon of those who are dissatisfied with both parties, and disposed to unite in forming a third party which shall be goverred by principle, and will dare to speak out in no ambiguous terms on these most important and vital issues."—Examiner.

THE JOURNAL OF FREEDOM.

The true definition of LIBERTY by the hero of a London street ballad long ago, was "Freedom to vollop my donkey;" later, among the lowest class of slavery advocates who never had a slave, it was "freedom to whale my nigger;" the rolling years have now brot us to an era when that grand old watchword in whose defence so many millions of martyrs have laid down their lives, has come to mean, "Freedom to beat wives and mothers, turn children on the street to starve or steal; freedom to set mantraps and boytraps and girltraps everywhere, to rob, debauch, deprave and kill my neighbors," and to send mankind to hell here and hereafter by wholesale.

So the "Freedom to kill" party in San Francisco are publishing a "Journal of Freedom and Rights," in defense of the wifebeating business. It finds fault with the RESCUE for showing up the murders, wifebeatings, suicides, stabbings, and unnatural crimes which make this most beautiful country a veritable field of blood and rapine, simply because it is the trade and business of the Leag of Fiendom to entice, entrap, educate and drive all these people to crime and beggary and suicide.

Nolan Bros., are proud when any journal talks about and describes the shoes they sell, if the truth is told; the dentists, carpenters and tailors, pay newspapers at times to give an accurate description of the goods they handle or make or sell. Studebaker & Co., were highly pleased at a description of their factory and carriages and business which appeared in the RESCUE in February last. They would not have got mad if the RESCUE had devoted four pages for three months to pictorial drawings of their wagons and carriages, provided they were correct.

But because the Leag of Freedom gets a kindly, neighborly notice of its successful work in the RESCUE, such as is given to the sewing machine, and photograph, and temperance grocery men, in place of sending to this office a nice boquet, a box of oranges and an order on Mr. Short for a suit of clothes, it gets its back up and complains of injustice. Moreover it goes after certain ministers in revenge. That is a personal kindness that will be remembered while life lasts, to have the Leag revenge itself on the RESCUE by going knee deep into the ministers; this adaptation of the proxy system is particularly commended to all who have any little grudge against the RESCUE. If everything of that nature could be conveniently turned that way, it would make it very pleasant here indeed.

But the Leag in its modesty is unjust to itself; it tells of a Baptist clergyman who insulted a lady on the cars some time ago; but it modestly omits to say that before he did so, he had taken two or three doses of the Leag's inspiration. And of course when a minister interviews the Leag and enters into business relations with it; he is quite as likely to commit any crime as any of the ordinary pupils of the Leag. Noah, David and Lot fell easy victims to the seductions of the Free Leag of their days and there is not a minister, Good Templar, priest or prophet to-day anywhere whom the Leag could not prepare to graduate in a few months for any one of the wards of San Quentin, if he would submit himself to the treatment of the Leag and let it operate on him at will.

That is what the RESCUE has been preaching all along. The Leag has captured thousands of excellent Christians and ministers and even women from the fold of the church, by baiting its traps scientifically, and has manufactured them into every grade and type of criminal and monster, and has dumped them at last into the potter's field of the lost and depraved every time. There is a singular coincidence in one department of the statistics of ministers and Leag of Freedom initiates. There is about 1 a year of 5,000 ministers who gets into some scrape or scandal such as a breach of promise case or an assault, most generally because he took some of the Leag's medicine—and there is just about the same proportion of rumsellers, 1 in 5,000 who by some miscalculation lead a virtuous life outside of the crime of their business. An industrious watcher can find half a dozen serious charges a year among the 80,000 ministers of the Union; and the body can stand that much scandal and get along as well as the 10,000 saloon keepers of New York city can stand the 1600 or so of their number who have not been in the penitentiary as they should have been.

SUNDAY LAW CANDIDATES FOR STATE OFFICERS.

It is gratifying to see the many signs that prove the Good Templars are exercising a grand and growing power in this State. When you see the determined efforts of that law-breaking League of Freedom (to harm and wrong) remember they were driven to it by very fear of the once despised Good Templars and the church people, moral people and dormant temperance people whom the Good Templars have aroused to co-operation. When you see that J. W. Shaeffer, President of that conspirator's League and grand lecturer of the F. and A. Masons has resigned the lead of said Leagues of law-breaking foreign rum-sellers, don't forget that it is probably because the Good Templars have made it so hot and disgraceful that he has been glad to slip out to let another foreigner, with an American name, one Harrison, take his place. Nor should it be forgotten that if the Republicans put a pro-Sunday plank in their platform it will be because of the influence of the Good Templars. And now we see candidates for State officers, proud to avow themselves "law and order" and Sunday men! Two I speak of among the Republicans. F. A. Pedlar, brother of our Dist. Deputy of Santa Clara county, is out for Secretary of State. And what an innovation to have for that office a man who don't drink, gamble or use tobacco, who is a church member and would act so as to merit the approval of God, his fellow citizens and his conscience!

The other is Thos. L. Carothers, for some years a consistent total abstainer and strong temperance man and a Sunday law advocate. He is put forward for the office of Attorney General.

OBSERVER.

A WRITER who has been an unreformed drunkard for 20 years is the very worst timber imaginable to write articles on prohibition. Much better try his hand at describing the various sensations which a human being experiences on his passage from partial sobriety to a first class drunk and then to incipient jimjams. There are some men who write such gibbering nonsense about prohibition that it would perhaps be more complimentary to them to believe they love to write any falsehood for which they are paid, than to attribute to them the infinite degradation of intellect which their articles would indicate, if believed by their writers. There is perhaps a degree of imbecility more hopelessly deplorable than even servile dishonesty.

LYDIA E. PINKHAM has had something the matter with his eye; cataract; he submitted to a surgical operation. His fortitude was remarkable and he is now ready again for biz. His new pictures without the cataract will soon be out.

THE Watsonville Transcript suggests local option on the Sunday law question. Certainly; and let it be also extended to stealing horses; robbing henroosts, burglary, gambling and wife-beating. All these questions, are included and bound up in that of selling drunkenness on Sunday.

OUTLAW rummies made a riot in Augusta, Me., in resistance to the seizure of smuggled beer from Boston.

THE WHISKY POWER.

On a Chicago street-corner, the other day we saw a jam of wagons, cars, and carriages. The policeman ordered this cart, that way; backed up that wagon, that way; ordered progress here; commanded a halt there, and did thoroly the duty for which he was stationed at the street-intersection. Finally he seized the bit of one span of horses, but was instantly paralyzed by the driver's sharp command. "Let go. Keep your hands off, or I'll fix you!" Looking to find what emperor or potentate could thus defy the unity and authority of him who was ordained to keep the streets clear and dissolve the gorge of vehicles—we saw a young boy, driving an elegant wagon which was drawn by two magnificent horses with harness splendid enough for a czar. Meantime, the policeman belabored others, but he paid marked respect to the behests of the boy-driver. Coming closer, in wonder, he discovered that the wagon was heavily loaded with splendid large barrels, and all were marked, "Such and Such a distillery." The wonder grew not, but abated, since we had full proof of the power of whisky over the poor subordinate policeman who would have lost his place had the arrogant boy-driver complained to his master, and had the master denounced the policeman. The little incident illustrates the swing of things very clearly. Whisky can command its right of way in all lines, from Congress to Chicago street-corners. Its chariot wheels roll unquestioned over the hearts, lives, fortunes and peace of millions.—N. W. Christian Advocate.

THE Sacramento Union after giving the Sunday institution all the ridicule it could pour upon it, has come out and strenuously defended the Sunday law for some weeks. It is uncertain whether this course was shaped by the friends or the enemies of Sunday observance. It seems quite probable that the latter procured the advocacy of that paper, knowing its active endorsement to be the surest ruin to any cause it advocates. People have learned to believe the opposite of every principle it asserts and to take the side of any question opposite to that espoused by it.

The sorest thorn in the side of the Union is the success of prohibition. That being a movement in favor of good morals acts like a red handkerchief upon the turkey gobbler. Men of large intelligence on general matters frequently err foolishly when they attempt to issue oracles on a subject upon which they are ignorant. Fools and drunkards laying down temperance law and prophesying in its name render themselves ridiculous: but the Record Union for professional seven times refined idiocy and imbecility on the question of prohibition is equaled nowhere except in its own obstinate mendacity as to all the well known results of prohibition in Maine and elsewhere. But one of the greatest misfortunes that could befall the question of prohibition or Sunday law or any righteous issue, would be to have the help and sympathy of the Record Union. So we are thankful for all the opposition it can bring on.

THE SUNDAY LAW AND THE DEMOCRATS.

Whenever the Democrats have a fair opportunity to carry an election they invariably become so severely intoxicated with the unusual and elating situation that they lose their wits and fall hopelessly into pits of their own digging. The Anti-Sunday law plank in their platform was inserted to cater to what was thought to be popular sentiment; but how miserably did the Democratic oracles prognostigate its effects upon public opinion, and how painful are the efforts of their organs to reconcile the indignant and respectable portion of the party to a measure that can have the endorsement of the whisky element only. The farmer who suffers from the Sunday drunks of his farm hands; the business man who fain would be free from business care one day in the week, but who is denied this privilege by the irregular business customs of his neighbors; the artisan, the mechanic, the clerk and all classes of laborers who are deprived for a like reason of any respite from labor; the order-loving citizen and he who venerates religion and religious institutions, are all ignored by the adoption of this anti-Sunday law plank.—Lodi Sentinel.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the RESCUE 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

Two DIVISIONS, A and B. Benefits in A, $1.000; in B, $2.000. Entrance fee in A, $4; in B, $5. A member of one joining the other pays half fee; under 49 eligible to both.

Classes: 1st, 20 to 29 yrs; 2d, 30 to 39; 3d, 40 to 48; 4th, 49 to 55; 5th, 56 and upwards.

Assessments. On the death of a member each member of his division shall be assessed, 1st class, 75c; 2d, 90c; 3d, $1.15; 4th, $1.40; 5th, $1.70.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

THERE is a movement to establish a Congregational college at Crafton, the "new Riverside" in San Bernardino county. Bro. Craft a most thoro temperance and Christian worker, proposes to donate 40 acres and water right at Crafton Retreat as a start and then ask leading men of the denomination to give it a lift. The place is beautiful, healthful, easy of access and yet sufficiently retired for the necessary quiet, and in the neighborhood there is no saloon nor do I think the good class of people settling there will permit of one. I was delighted with the place, when there and wish it and its people abundant success.

THE Sacramento grogshop politics and press that elected Troy Dye to murder men and administer upon their estates, are still producing similar fruit.

COAL OIL.—Continental oil per case of 10 gals. $2.45; Starlight oil $2.65; fair burning oil $2.00 to $2.20—good time to lay in winter supply—1 cent a gallon less in 5 case lots. Order from cash grocery, 519 Post St., S. F., Cal.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank. S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S. Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

THE LOMPOC people want more land to be opened up for sale in their vicinity. Many more families would be glad to settle at Lompoc if there were homes for sale.

"AND it came pass in those days the people mourned grievously for the loss of President James who was slain by a servant of the Leag of beerdom, but when they heard that the Leag had sent their Paul to Congress, they were comforted for James and put off their mourning."

THE PRINCIPAL qualification to look out for in a member of congress is a capacity to do his share in the whisky drinking orgies at State funerals and anniversary occasions like Yorktown. And to be sure and vote against the Commission of Enquiry into the fruits of the liquor traffic.

THOMAS THORNTON charged with selling a quart of whisky to one Indian, witnesses present, was acquitted in the U. S. Dist Court at San Francisco. A blacksmith who had unfortunately pleaded guilty of selling 3 quarts of wine to two Indians was fined $20 and 30 days in Los Angeles jail. Moral, dont plead guilty in a San Francisco liquor case.

THE nomination of Judge S C. Denson by the Repub. Convention is an eminently good one. He is a man that all good men can consistently vote for, no matter on what ticket he is placed. If all good men will vote for him, his election will be an addition of solid worth and ability and respectability to the Supreme Bench. Henry Egerton is also a worthy candidate and will give his vote and influence for temperance and take rank among its leaders in Congress. We can have no better advocate than he will be.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE
FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

FAST BLACK
SPOOL COTTON.
Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

J. & P. Coats' Black
WILL HOLD ITS COLOR AS LONG AS ANY FABRIC ON WHICH IT CAN BE USED.

And the Agents will pay Full Price for any of their Thread which may be spotted or injured by climatic influences.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G.Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. In all, 100.

NOTICE.—The officers and boards of the Grand Lodge are requested to close their books and accounts immediately after and including the business of the 20th day of September, and at once prepare for the examination thereof by the Finance Committee.

D. K. ZUMWALT, Chairman Fin. Com.

THE most insulting feature in the treatment of the temperance and Sunday observing people of the State by the framers of the Republican platform was the wretched transparency of the Leag of Freedom fifth plank. It is provoking to think that the hatchers of that miserable delusion supposed any temperance man or a Christian over a week old could be so magnificently stupid as to suppose a rat hole means a two story brick house and 20 acres of land.

OREGON. Bro. W. C. King went up to Oregon by the Tuesday steamer to labor there for a time. He has done good work here and invariably left a good report wherever he has been in this State and it is hoped he will receive a kindly welcome in Oregon and find opportunity and field for much usefulness there. He will act as agent for the RESCUE and will report progress from time to time in its columns.

THE Examiner has had two calls recently upon its reporters by inquisitive individuals who wanted to know "who wrote that article." They were accomodated with a larger stock of information than they desired, and it was memorized into them in an effective manner. That is an excellent mode of conveying instruction to some people. There are heads so constructed that the flexor and extensor muscles of a pair of active, vigorous arms will telephone into them more logic and sound conviction in two minutes than a whole circulating library would convey in a year.

THE JOURNAL OF BEERDOM of this city is away behind some of its brother beer advocates. The Liquor Mens Advocate of Pittsburg used to have the most delightful accounts of last Sunday's dog-fights all over the Union; a list of the martyred barkeepers who were affectionately shot by their enthused customers; the horseraces and lotteries and how the money was won; a chapter on the folly of continuing the fanatical superstitions of churches and Sunday-schools to interpose their malignant shadows between the civilization of the "Free Love Beer Garden" and a priest ridden people; the most lively, spirited cockfights and man fights of the week were served up too in the professional idiom of the prize ring. This department every week furnished the reader with a delicious feast of the most exquisite and appropriate Sunday reading. It rendered the Sabbath rest a blessing to the weary, and made his mind a perfect jewel case and store house of sweet rich thots for the whole week. We look in vain in the San Francisco advocate of drunkenness for a cheerful list of the inquests and suicides and the saloons that furnish the coroner with his work should be credited with their workmanship. Especially since the Leag of Freedom and the temperance people have pooled their issues under a Schaeffer and Newmann platform, the RESCUE desires to see its friend the Journal up with the times.

DAVID C. COOK continues to supply the masses with all sorts of temperance literature and at the tenth part of old prices. Dollar books for five cents ot to stimulate everybody to do away with all the miserable literary trash that has done so much mischief.

FROM VENEZUELA Mr. T. Robinson sends to the Alliance News a circular in Spanish which entirely prohibits the sale of spirits all along the railway line and in all places controled by the contractors, and Mr. Robinson states he is not quite a tetotaler.

THE British Government have given their soldiers so many facilities for getting cheap beer that 23,000 men have been punished for drunkenness in a year, of an army of 180,000, and there have been 44,000 punishments, nearly an average of two for each drunk. It seems a monstrous crime to entrap men into crime and then punish them.

THE Indianapolis Journal is not pleased to have it openly published that $3,000 has been sent into that State by the National Brewers Association and placed in the hands of a Republican brewer to aid in bribing the election of Mr. English, the Democratic candidate for Congressman on an anti-American platform. The rummies will not succeed in bribing this nation to consent to be robbed and slaughtered much longer by a class of malefactors and destroyers.

A GENTLEMAN in Scotland writes: "My brother met a man who told him that a distiller said that on account of Moody and Sankey, Murphy and the Salvation Army advances and success, his business was being ruined." Praise God! for that business ruins the bodies and souls of men and women. We saw more respectably dressed people violently or insensibly drunk on one Saturday in Paisley and Glasgow than we do in a month in London.

A MR. Charrington, who about 9 years ago withdrew from a firm of wealthy brewers in England and became a temperance missionary, while recently distributing tracts in front of a drinking hall was painted with red ochre by one of the proprietors in presence of several police officers and they interfered not. Mr. C. inherited his share in the brewery but threw it up, horrified at the cruel murderous nature of the wretched business and is ever since endeavoring to undo its evils.

ACCORDING to a paper lately communicated to the French Geographical Society by Dr. Le Bon, there exists, high up among the Carpathian Mountains of Galicia, in a district known as Tatras, one of the most primitive and unsophisticated communities in Europe. The population of this remote region numbers several hundred thousand individuals. They neither use strong drink nor eat animal food. Riches have no charm for them. Though poor they are content; and though their diet is spare and monotonous, they enjoy perfect health and live long lives.

A CONNECTICUT liquor law began with these words: "Every person who shall sell liquor to a minor." This law was repealed, and a new one enacted beginning with the words: "Every licensed person who shall sell liquor to a minor." The result is that bar-keepers can sell liquor with impunity, because they are not licensed, while the proprietors of saloons escape punishment by denying that they were aware of such sales by their employes to persons under age. It is suggested that the word "licensed" was inserted in the new law to render it inoperative.

HANFORD. It appears that the Lodge omitted to put its seal to the circular which asked assistance to rebuild their Hall; which was an oversight. But Hanford Lodge will not take advantage of that little mistake. It will accept any bodys dollars just the same as if the circular had had the seal of the U. S. on it. So no one need be bashful. A recent report of contributions made showed Lodge No. 182, $5; 223, $2; 136, $1.50; and Nos. 2, 122, 146, 301, 329, 340, 343, 366 and 405 $1 each, and Bro. W. H. Barron $1. In all $18.50.

THE BRILLIANT SALOON.

'Twas the end of the season, when merchant and trader
Their gains or their losses compute for the year,
That a vendor of toddy cast up what he made or Lost on his ventures in whisky and beer.

To judge from his visage the profits were ample.
For he smiled when he figured the sum of his gains,
And he felt that his case was an instance—a sample,
Of the fortune that virtuous labor obtains.

If his outlay was great he had one consolation,
His room was a model of art as it stood,
In gildings and mirrors and ornamentation,
The dollars were placed where they did the most good.

The counter in brilliancy vied with the glasses;
The silver-topped bottles outshone over all;
While portraits of Venus and languishing lasses,
In puris naturalibus, smiled from the wall.

The youth, as he hastened to business or pleasure,
Was stunned with the splendor and glare of the sight,
And vowed to himself that come Sunday and leisure,
He would bask in the rays of that palace of light.

The Sunday is come, and the preacher debating
On morals, discourses from morning till noon,
Which wins in the contest, the youth captivating?
The sober, grey church or the brilliant saloon?

She waits, and divines not the fate that detains him.
Oh, maiden! thy lover is faithless to thee;
A charmer more potent than thou fast enchains him,
Not thou but the goblet, his idol shall be.

Fond mother, where now are the dreams that you cherished!
The castles fantastic you built in your joy?
Alas! like the maiden's fond hopes they have perished—
The brilliant saloon man has captured your boy.

NORDHOFF, Ventura Co.—Mirror.

THE LION AND LAMB.

If report be correct the antagonism of the above named parties, which has existed from time immemorial has ceased. They found their final resting places in the quiet bosom of a Cal. Republican Convention. And strange as it may appear this reconciliation had its consumation in that place and upon that subject of all others the last expected—the California Sunday law. The ex-President of the Leag of Fiendom desired the Republican platform to declare in favor of one day of rest in seven and they were satisfied; he "thought it would strengthen the ticket"—and a representative of the Good Templars "interposed that this was all their side of this question desired.'

Whereupon the Chairman of the Committee on platforms sagely suggested that as the whisky and Sabbath men were agreed they could easily draw a resolution to suit them.

I know that politics brings together strange bedfellows but the coming together in harmony and unison of such incongruous and diverse elements has not happened in my recollection. When "their side" was alluded to, who did it comprise? Not the Good Templars surely for I do not hesitate to say that nineteen-twentieths of them are not satisfied with the declaration of one day of rest in seven. If that is the aim and end of Good Templary then I have greatly mistaken its purport and have little further use for it; the church can do that much better than the Good Templars.

I have read and reread the Republican Platform but am utterly unable to find in the remostest degree anything that relates to temperance. The fifth plank was inserted thru fear of the church which the Democracy thru its imbecility had offended but the temperance element were treated with silent contempt. I was not disappointed at the result for I have long since learned that temperance had nothing to hope for from political parties as they now exist. But many did not think so. In the name of God and humanity I ask how long will temperance people wear the collar of the politicians and do their dirty work? I hope the coming election will determine whether the Good Templars are satisfied with one day of rest in seven. Let the popular voice be heard: For one I am not satisfied.

M. C. WINCHESTER.

THE DRUNKARD makers of England are on the anxious seat. They hold conventions and pass resolutions about their TRADE! killing people a trade!! They resolve that no one has a right to shut up their steam-drunkard-hatcheries because they are property. And they are desirous of keeping the Sabbath by getting the whole population as drunk as possible. One of the licensed poisoners says Sir Wilfrid Lawsons scheme of confiscation if it succeeded would bring as great a calamity upon England as Araby Bey has upon Egypt, and then they gloried that the remarks at this meeting were very temperate as compared with tetotal gatherings. They forget that the latter are arrayed against all the crime of the country and the drunkard makers are at war with all the virtue and have not a jot of accusation which they can truthfully use.

OREGON.

There has been a very active movement made in Oregon for many months in favor of a constitutional prohibitory amendment, which the religious and temperance organizations and leaders have been intelligent to know is the only rational mode of assailing the crime and pauperism problem. The question of submitting the issue to a vote of the people, will be one of the most prominent at the next session of the legislature. Petitions have been industriously circulated and numerously signed and public attention aroused to the importance of this most supreme need of Oregon and of every other State where the murder of its citizens is farmed out by the government at so much a head, blood money.

Fortunately in Oregon the professional drunkard makers cannot yet take the stump as martyrs on the altar of anti-monopoly as they do in California. Fortunately for Oregon no 100 million a year steal by the liquor thieves can hide itself entirely behind a three or five million extortion by a railroad company, and drive its slaves up blindfolded to the polls, and force them to vote for the strengthening of their own shackles and against every step toward freedom, deliverance and prosperity, as is done in California.

The G. W. C. T. Dr. Jessup, of Oregon is a member of the State Senate and will be a valiant, earnest advocate there of this rational and radical method of dealing with the liquor infamy, by constitutional amendment. His sound prohibitory attitude is a tower of strength to the order and a promise of vast moral and financial benefit to his State; it is hoped his constituents and the Good Templars of his State will lend him every assistance and appreciate the excellent service which he renders.

The people of our sister State are to be congratulated upon their good sense in striking at the root of this matter, resisting all the false allurements of half measures and miserable subterfuges, which have neutralized mountains of excellent temperance work for the past fifty years. In many hundreds of places after years of faithful warfare, in which a strong sentiment has been created, some wretched abortion of a counterfeit temperance enactment, has made shipwreck of the whole voyage; and under its delusive influences a new generation of drinkers has grown up, with whom the whole missionary work has to be gone over again from the foundation.

It will be a glorious thing if Oregon can be ready to come into the family of honest free States when Nebraska, Indiana, Wisconsin, Missouri, Ohio and Michigan come into the Leag of Liberty. They will all be there very soon.

And it would furnish the people of Oregon a useful argument for prohibition, to read the article, "About Maine" in the juvenile department, page 710, of this number and hear what the Hon. J. G. Blaine says about the consequences and results of the Maine Law there.

AN HONORED RADICAL.

Dr. F. R. Lees of England, signed the moderation pledge in 1832 at 17 years of age, but his logical intellect speedily led him to total abstinence. That was when the first light was beginning to dawn upon the infancy of the evolution of the temperance gospel from the moral chaos which prevailed everywhere on the subject of unwholesome and demoralizing drinks. June 21, 1836, his logical arguments, (which is only another way of saying radical arguments) overcame the opposition of a strong party of distinguished moderates, at a large meeting in Music Hall in Leeds, and the total abstinence pledge was adopted for the first time in that city.

The ability displayed on this occasion brot Dr. Lees into public prominence and he has been now nearly 50 years a most eloquent speaker and writer on the most important issue of the age. Almost single handed for a large portion of his life, he has defended the truths, (the radicalism, the logic) which he has discovered in the various fields of Science, Philosophy, Scripture, Experience and Common Sense. His antagonists have been men distinguished in the medical profession and some of them have been learned teachers of the church. He has given to the world quite a number of valuable works on the various departments of this reform, most of which have been republished in America.

The highest medical and clerical authorities now agree, that Dr. Lees has in his works anticipated and ably put before the world, every physiological argument that has been adduced by any modern reformer or scientific explorer. And the Dr. is not a member of the Medical Profession. Dr. B. W. Richardson and Dr. Norman Kerr, two men that have attained to the loftiest positions in medical science, scholarship and ability, unite in this testimony.

There is no advocate of temperance to-day, more radical than a "total abstainer." That means course, one who proclaims the necessity of the to disuse of all intoxicants. That is the point of ra calism which Dr. Lees so eloquently advocated that meeting 46 years ago. What an honor it is him to have it recorded everywhere to-day, that all he has said and written since then, he has nev had to retract, modify or amend one radical positi or utterance of his, that has been assailed. It creditable to a man to be sober and right now, th was intemperate and wrong one year ago. It creditable to any one to be radical and consiste now, that was 5, 10 or 20 years ago a blind, obstina and obstractive professed temperance man. B how much more admirable the career of him who his earliest manhood has set up a conscientiou logical, radical, truthful standard of right and dut which as he nears the period of three score and te no one has at all amended or improved.

John Bright was a total abstainer in early life: man who has deserved the high place the world a cords him in its reverence. Doutless he has bee entirely consistent in personal abstinence and as silent friend to temperance. But as to dealing wit the drink question, or bringing any active aid the cause of temperance, he has been all around th compass of inconsistency, and his influence wit opportunities beyond those of any other man of hi age, has been in effect simply nothing—and a nothin with no embellishment or addition to the bar round O. When Heaven's rollcall of the heroes this world is read at the great day of settlement, will doutless surprise many to find the name of D Lees so near the first. There will be no mistake made on that occasion.

KINGS OF SAN FRANCISCO.

The News Letter of Sept. 2 affirms "that there is a clos copartnery between the Democratic boss, Buckley, and th Republican boss, Higgins; that they pool their issues, wor together, dominate both parties, make money, and no mat ter what side wins, the people lose. The past week's exper ience abundantly proves the correctness of that position There was a primary held on Saturday last. It was a Re publican contest for the control of that party's nominating conventions. If Buckley and his cohorts were loyal to the Democracy, they obviously had, of right, no part or lot o that day's proceedings Yet, they were as active as beavers and polled as many votes as though it were a Democratic rough-and-tumble fight, in which the boys are ordinarily in structed to vote early and often. The self-same roughs who carried a number of the Democratic precinct clubs for Buck ley were the active voters and workers at the Republican primary last Saturday. They were not to be mistaken. Those who have watched both events could not doubt their identity. Their peculiar physiognomies were not in doubt for a single moment. We could swear to every mother's son of them. A preparatory study, undertaken for good motives and justifiable ends, during the past four months, enables the writer to single them out as certainly as if they were branded "B" or "H" on their nether quarters. We could tell to what gambling den each is attached, upon what bagino each thrives and what corners of the streets they adorn as statuary. There is a peculiarity about their beetle brows, smooth and untoiled hands, clean shave and hoodlum make-up and cadaverous appearance generally, that stamps them as indelibly as if they were branded with the mark of Cain. Such, C citizens of San Francisco, are your masters! By them are ye ruled. They say how much you shall be taxed, and what shall be done with your taxes. They first determine who is to nominate your Governors, Railroad Commissioners, Board of Equalization, Supervisors and city officers, and such of them as can read and write become deputies, and all this whether Democrats or Republicans win. Higgins is Buckley, and Buckley is Higgins. It is six of one and half-a-dozen of the other. Under the hollow sham of a party name, they rally the voters, beat the tom-toms, set off the fireworks, light the bonfires, march credulous voters in processions, and enthuse the fools of the period into voting the spoils to the firm of Higgins, Buckley & Co. The game has been played right under your eyes during the past week. The two crowds joined hands and carried the Republican primary for "Higgins and honesty," just as they will unite, a month hence, to carry the Democratic precinct clubs for "Buckley and purity in our city Government." That is the result to which "the free and independent voters" of both parties are contributing. That is the Ultima Thule reached by a Gov ernment professedly by the people, of the people and for the people. While the bosses thus run things, there is not a street in the city safe to travel upon, the sewers are a reeking mass of filth and disease, the city's death rate is frightfully high, and there is inefficiency and extravagance all round and all this, too, while we are about the most heavily taxed community on the face of the earth. Yet we vaunt ourselves as the best governed people the sun ever shone upon. Bah! Rather say that we are a race of many fools and a few knaves, such as have never been seen since Noah's flood drowned our like from off the face of the earth."

THE Mankillers Beer Association of Illinois has quarreled with the mankillers whisky association of Illinois. The row occurred because the whisky men proposed to let the wifebeating business rest on Sunday so as to go on with increased vigor the other days; but the beer bloats were strictly conscientious on the matter; they knew that the failure to fall down and worship their master on Sunday was a compromise with principle which they never submit to. The distillers too wanted high license which is also objectionable to the beer thugs.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentiment; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

BOYS AND GIRLS AID SOCIETY.

PRACTICAL RESULTS: HOMES vs. INSTITUTIONS. SIXTEEN WEEKS' WORK.

Since May 1st—sixteen weeks ago—the Society has furnished 884 lodgings and 2582 meals to friendless boys and girls; has distributed to these children 693 pieces of clothing; has found employment for 57 boys and girls in the city, and placed in good homes or otherwise started on more hopeful careers 92 children, 41 of whom were taken directly from the courts or prisons.

It is not only cheaper; but in every way wiser to save children than to punish criminals.

The Boys and Girls Aid Society rescues homeless, neglected or abused children; provides for such in its own quarters until suitable homes or employment are found for them, and continues to look after their condition and treatment; maintains reading rooms, libraries, baths, a gymnasium, savings banks, a school of cookery, sewing school, a class in music, and classes for instruction in other branches; also lectures, entertainments, and a temperance organization. Lodgings are furnished at a nominal cost to working boys and girls who have neither homes nor suitable guardianship in the city. The work is free from sectarianism and depends upon voluntary contributions for its support.

The Society needs money for the prosecution and extension of this most important work.

Homes and employment for children. We have always on hand children for adoption, and many needing employment, or homes without legal binding.

Wearing apparel for children of both sexes and all ages.

"Corresponding members"—ladies and gentlemen in every town, and district, to whom we can look for information in regard to applicants for children, and through whom boys and girls placed out in their vicinity, or other children in distress, may appeal to us. We invite correspondence with any lady or gentleman who will help us in this way.

Please send for our Annual Report. On its last pages you will find a few "specimen cases," which are worthy your reading. E. T. DOOLEY, Supt.

AN ENEMY HARD TO CONQUER.

BY REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER.

There are some enemies that it is easier to keep out, than it is to drive out when they become strongly entrenched. One of these deadly enemies is the habit of using intoxicating drinks. No delusion is so dangerous as the idea that it is easy for a habitual drinker to stop drinking. This week I learn that a very kind-hearted man whom we received into our church several years ago has relapsed again into drunkenness. He had been a hard drinker, but gave good evidence, as we thought, of a change of heart. For some time he "ran well," and then stumbled and fell. We labored with him faithfully and he was restored. Several times since that he has fallen, and once we were obliged to place him in an inebriate asylum. I have known that man to offer the most penitential and pathetic prayers in our devotional meetings, and then stop for a drink at a dram-shop on his way home from the meeting! That man when he drank his first glass became a slave. Often has he cried out of the depths for deliverance; but I very much fear that in spite of our efforts and his own resolutions he will yet die a drunkard. His father was addicted to the vice, and the hereditary taint is in his system.

The most remarkable case that I have ever dealt with was a young married man—of excellent family—who was received into my church in New York twenty-five years ago. He had been convivial in his habits, but we had strong hope that the grace of God had radically altered him and made him a "new man in Christ Jesus." After several years of sobriety he relapsed (under strong temptation) into intemperance. For a long time he remained a pitiable sot. Once, while his lovely wife was lying dangerously ill, I persuaded him to enter an inebriate asylum. But he leaped out of an upper window and returned to his home; the sight of the poor creature at her bedside gave his wife such a shock that she died in a few hours! Even this awful tragedy did not reform him, and he continued to drink as before. At length he was induced to sign a pledge, to attend the house of God and claimed to be converted. He secured an excellent situation, and, well attired and happy, used to speak in our prayer-meetings with great fervor, and declare that "by God's grace his feet were now upon the rock." So encouraged was I by his apparent reformation, that I published (under a fictitious name) the narrative of his "conversion," for the encouragement of others whose cases were as desperate as his had been. But alas! he was on no 'rock" that was out of the reach of the waves of temptation; and after two years he was swept off again into the horrible vortex. He attempted suicide during a debauch, and soon afterward died—a drunken outcast. I might multiply these melancholy examples to prove that when any man or woman forms a habit of using alcoholic drinks he or she becomes a slave. From that horrible bondage even apparent conversion does not always rescue them; for, as Dr. Hodge once said to me, "the thirst for liquor is sometimes a physical mania from which even the grace of God no more saves a man than from the poison of typhoid fever in the system." This is a fearful statement to make, and some may assert that that eminent saint and the writer of this paragraph may be "limiting the power of the Divine Spirit." God forbid! But let us not shut our eyes to painful facts, although we may interpret them erroneously. The incontrovertible facts are that hundreds of persons who have regarded themselves as spiritually converted have relapsed into beastly drunkenness. The published biography of Mr. John Vine Hall (the author of the "Sinner's Friend"), will occur to many readers as a striking example of this.

Are drunkards never permanently reformed? Yes; let us rejoice that a few of the vast number are saved, "yet so as by fire." They are an exceedingly small minority. Out of those who are received into church membership a very large proportion have their subsequent falls, and of these many are never restored to sobriety. I have spent a vast deal of labor upon the attempted reformation of inebriates. Quite a large number of those who have sincerely professed to be "renewed by the Divine Spirit" I have received into church membership. Out of all this number I can recall only one who has never had a single relapse into intoxication since he united with the church. Several have fallen often and been restored. Others have precipitated themselves into hopeless drunkenness, and sunk to rise no more! This is a painful statement to publish, but I do it under a very strong conviction of duty. I do it as a solemn warning to every one—within the church and without it—of the absolute peril of tampering with any and every intoxicant. I do it in order to emphasize the fact that the only absolute safeguard against drunkenness is entire abstinence. No living man, no, not even any minister of Christ, is completely safe from the risk of being overcome who is playing with this treacherous serpent.

I have designedly avoided any discussion about hereditary appetite, or "Bible wine," or the 'removal of the appetite," or any other controverted question. My single aim is to state solemn facts, and let them carry their own weighty argument. They prove incontestibly that strong drink is an enemy hard to conquer. He who lets the enemy in has no assurance that he will ever drive him out. The only sure salvation is never to admit him at all—Temp. Review.

EMPLOYERS AND DRINKERS.

No. 51.

BEER has long been called the drink of the workingman, and in England the employer often furnishes it, or facilities for getting it. Very often it is the stipulation—so much wages and so much beer—say a pint or half pint each day. This is so continually looked for, that now, when better counsels prevail, more money is given if the beer is withheld.

In this country we have no such difficulty to meet, nor do we have the network of drinking customs in the shop to do away with that they have there. But beer is the workingman's special tipple here. He can drink more of it without being "the worse for it," as he thinks, than he can of rum, gin, or whisky. But if he drinks it for the sake of the alcohol in it, he is always the worse for it, as a great many employers find to their sorrow. This is a matter which is beginning to attract much attention in this country, and a few employers are trying the experiment of securing help among men who do not drink. Among those who have tried it long and successfully, we may mention the celebrated scale manufacturers, Fairbanks & Co., St. Johnsbury, Vt. It is not necessary to speak of the reputation of this house, their works being known and read by all sorts of people throughout the world, at least by all who care for accuracy of weight in purchase or sale. Perhaps nicety and perfection of workmanship may at first have some influence upon the minds of the manufacturers, but it needed no long trial to show that every consideration, both for employer and helper, was in favor of the total abstinence system. Hear what the firm says in reply to inquires in this line:

"It has been the rule of this house, ever since its establishment, to employ no man who is in the habit of using intoxicating liquors. That rule is firmly adhered to at the present time. We do not say that a man shall not drink, but we do say that he can not work for us if he does. This is so thoroughly understood, that occasionally we have had a man leave us of his own accord because he could not endure the restriction. Our rule has been the means of reclaiming not a few who have become staunch temperance men, and who, before coming to us, were on the road to ruin.

"The result of this rule is to bring us a company of men who are intelligent, industrious, and frugal. Those who have been the longest time with us have accumulated property, and have comfortable happy homes. Many of our employes are numbered among our very best influential Christian citizens. When a man falls out through want of conformity to our rules, we have no difficulty in filling his place with a sober man who respects himself—which means being respected by others."

The place, within and without, is a model of neatness, as are some other such firms, among which we believe may be reckoned the Corliss Engine Works, which have taken up this rule of action to their great prosperity and satisfaction in every respect. Any employer can easily satisfy himself that the money and the time spent in drinking beer and other liquors is misspent, and that the men who use no intoxicating liquors are by far the most satisfactory workmen; and, if they are wise, they will work up to this rule as fast as possible.

OUR SHARE.

At the time of the Ohio Crusade, who dreamed of the results that would follow? We see them now in woman's organized Temperance work. The devoted hearts and intellects of the women of our W. C. T. U's., have been busy in instituting and executing plans of work, for the spread of Temperance sentiment, until about every instrumentality under the head of moral and religious suasion has been incorporated into our Union work. We control by ballot our kinds and methods of work, while we can only by indirect methods touch the liquor traffic or any evil, which the men of our nation could remove by making righteous laws. Clearly, woman is a legitimate correspondent of man in all the relations of human life.

Especially in reforms destined to lead humanity to a higher civilization, her quick, intellectual, perceptive, moral principle and religious sentiment, eminently ordained her an active co-worker with man.

"It is not good for man to be alone" in the political arena, more than elsewhere. In churches and schools women are coming more and more into direct influence, by the use of the ballot; while multitudes of men, miserable, by reason of degraded habits, are left to help better men make the laws, under which they, we, and our children live. Coffee and lunch tables, sweet exhortations, button-hole boquets, etc., did well for Iowa. Must an equal or larger amount of labor at the polls be performed by the women of nearly all the States, where prohibition is being, or will be sought? Would not the ballot in the hands of women, be a powerful labor-saving machine as well as a surer method of enforcing prohobition? A personal opinion, by our excellent president, comes to us full of the light of love and wisdom. Let us rejoice.—J. F. W., in Our Union.

TALKING with an intelligent physician on the use of alcohol in the sick room, he advocated the use of small quantities in cases of extreme debility and in old age on the ground that alcohol arrests decay. Yet from the same premises he was forced to admit—he did it with the best grace in the world—that what will arrest decay will also arrest recuperation, and hence, in the systems of those who habitually use alcoholic stimulants, there is a mass of dead, useless matter not carried away, and not replaced by the ordinary action of natural functions, ready to be a prey to disease, and affording no basis for cooperation with remedial measures. In other words, life is combustion, or the conversion of carbon into gas by means of its contact with the oxygen, introduced into the lungs by the organs of respiration, followed by the removal of ashes or effete matter. Whatever prevents this process or renders it sluggish, is simply antagonistic to life. Furthermore, our medical friend stated that there is, no doubt, somewhere in nature an as yet undiscovered principle which may serve as a medium as conveniently as alcohol now does without any of its deleterious qualities. May God speedily send us the Columbus who shall pioneer the way to this Arabia Feliv of our hopes.—Our Union.

THIRTY-TWO legislatures are expected this winter to make assaults on the devil's rum barrel and eleven of them will face the Constitutional Amendment question.

THE DIME COLLECTION.—The following circular has been issued and should be read in open lodge at the next meeting. It is here published for the benefit of those who may be absent from the lodge, so that all may unite in a hearty and earnest effort to make the feature a decided success. The lodges should take the matter immediately and vigorously in hand, so that the best results may be accomplished.

At the last session of the R. W. G. L., held in Charleston, S. C.; the by-laws of that body were amended so as to provide for a standing committee on Temperance Literature, and defining their duties, etc.: it was also provided, that:

"The first week in October, each year, shall be known throughout the Order as Missionary Week, and the entire Order, at the Subordinate Lodge meetings held during the week, shall be requested to raise at least one dime from each member of the order, to be sent to the Missionary fund of the Right Worthy Grand Lodge, to be used by the Literary Committee of that body in the circulation of Temperance Literature. The funds raised shall be sent by the Worthy Secretary of the Subordinate Lodge to the Grand Worthy Secretary of the Grand Lodge, and by him to the Right Worthy Grand Secretary. The Right Worthy Grand Secretary shall acknowledge receipt of same, and forward the same to the Right Worthy Grand Treasurer, who shall keep it in a separate fund, subject to the order of the Literature Committee, through their Chairman. The Right Worthy Grand Treasurer shall show in his annual report the amount of this fund, and by which Grand or Subordinate Lodges contributed."

For several years past a dime collection has been taken among our lodges, in aid of various temperance movements and enterprises. It is now proposed that a collection be taken for a missionary temperance work to be conducted under the auspices of our own Order. The funds collected last year, and generously donated to the R. W. G. L. Literature Committee, were employed in circulating temperance literature in Iowa, during the late successful struggle for prohibition in that State, and each contributor to that fund may take some credit for the Iowa victory.

All Grand Lodge jurisdictions propose to enter heartily into the collection, so that a large fund may be realized, for, says the Committee:

"The Committee hopes to raise twenty thousand dollars by this collection.

1st. We want to use at least five thousand dollars in missionary work among the colored people.

2d. We want to have prepared, and print a manual of work for Subordinate Lodges.

3d. We want to print and circulate literature among the immigrant population in America, in their own language, and also to place it in the hands of European, African and Australian Grand Lodges, for circulation in their various jurisdictions.

4th. We want to be in a condition to help various jurisdictions in their struggles to out-law the business of drunkard making."

California has heretofore led all other jurisdictions in its annual dime collection, and I trust that with due notice and preparation, a larger collection than ever may be reported from each of our lodges. The collection should be taken during the first week in October, but the matter need not be delayed until then. Let there be a committee appointed immediately to commence the canvass, visiting those who are not regular attendants at lodge meetings, and giving each member the opportunity of contributing a dollar or a dime, as inclination or ability may dictate. Many persons outside of the Order will be glad to aid the lodge in making a good showing in the amount of their collection; all such should be waited upon and privileged to do so. Let there be a thorough canvass and a generous contribution by all.

A blank letter of remittance is added, to be used by the Lodge Deputy in transmitting to the G. W. S. the amount of the contribution, which, when received, will be credited to your lodge. All remittances should be forwarded before the 15th of October, and should invariably be marked "Dime Collection," and accompanied by the blank letter of advice hereto attached. Hoping for your best effort in this behalf, that our National Literature Committee may receive a competent revenue to be used in the enlightenment of the freedmen, extending aid in prosecuting the prohibitory fight in the various States, and the general dissemination of sound temperance literature, I have the honor to be,

Fraternally yours,
GEO. B. KATZENSTEIN, G. W. S.

HEADQUARTERS.—The Baldwin Hotel, the finest Hotel on the Pacific Coast, has been selected as the Good Templar Headquarters during the Grand Lodge session at San Francisco. By special agreement, the Baldwin Hotel will entertain Good Templar guests during the Grand Lodge session at $2 50 per day for room and board. It is hoped all Good Templars who can do so will arrange to stop at the hotel named, as it is situated within two blocks of the place selected for the Grand Lodge meeting and is convenient and accessible to all. Any of the street cars running up Market street pass directly in front of the Baldwin Hotel.

PLACE OF MEETING.—The Grand Lodge will meet in its next annual session, commencing on Tuesday morning October 3d at 10 o'clock A. M., in Laurel Hall, Shiels building, No. 32 O'Farrell street. Representatives and visitors will please remember the location. All street cars going up Market street pass the corner of O'Farrell, near to which the Hall is located.

DELINQUENTS.—The following Lodges have so far failed to file proper quarterly returns for the term ending July 31st. The Lodge Deputy of each Lodge has been notified officially of the delinquency, but no response has been received. Unless the delinquent returns are immediately forwarded the Lodges will be stricken from the roll of Lodges and be reported to the Grand Lodge as suspended and extinct Lodges:

Nos. 132, 135, 136, 142, 151, 173, 179, 188, 191, 196, 197, 219, 227, 229, 331, 249, 253, 255, 275, 302, 303, 310, 312, 333, 352, 355, 364, 365, 367, 374, 388, 389, 390, 402, 407, 420, 422, 423, 426, 433, 435, 436, 447, 449, 454, 455, 457, 458, 466, 467, 469, 471, 472, 480, 481, 482, 494, 500, 509, 512, 513.

DISTRICT DEPUTIES.—District Deputies are requested to examine the list of delinquent Lodges reported elsewhere, and selecting the Lodges located in their District use their best endeavors to secure a quarterly returns report from them, to be immediately forwarded to the G. W. S. Many of the Lodges are reported delinquent through the carelessness and inefficiency of their officers. As some are known to be meeting regularly this must be the cause. Whatever the cause, having received sufficient notice, they will be surely cut off, unless returns are received at once.

PERSONALS.—During the past week the Grand Lodge office has been honored with calls from several members of the Order, among whom were Bro. W. B. H. Dodson of Red Bluff Lodge, No. 192, Tehama County; Bro. Wm. Sims, P. G. W. C., of Winters Lodge, No. 165; Bro. J. H. Connor, L. D., of Semper Fidelis Lodge, No. 463, Madison and Bro. J. R. Dillon, W. C. T., of Faithful Lodge, No. 431, Blacks, of Yolo county; Bro. Justin Wood of Granite Lodge, No. 451, Penryn, Placer county; Bro. John Wallis and wife of Elizabeth Lodge, Yuba county, and the two Colonels, George Babcock and C. N. Goulding, who were fresh from the field of battle in the valley of Concow! Colonel Goulding sported a Band of Hope badge, having been convinced of the error of his way in the use of the weed yclept tobacco. He will of course "stick" to his pledge and it is hoped the other may "go and do likewise."

SAN FRANCISCO.—The G. W. S., visited San Francisco on Thursday and Friday last on official business, and while there met many prominent Good Templars. Bros. Thompson, G. W. C. T., C. H. Peterson, D. D. G. W. C. T., Frank Storer, D. D. G. W. C. T., elect, C. E. Naylor, W. H. Armstrong and others, also Bros. J. S. Naismith, D. D. G. W. C. T., and Bro. J. A. Fairbanks, D. D. G. W. C. T., elect of Alameda county, all of whom with many others are co-operating to make the approaching session of the Grand Lodge an event long to be remembered. The reception to the Grand Lodge officers, representatives and visitors, will take place at Dashaway Hall on Monday evening, October 2d, and all who intend being present during the session should arrange to come sufficiently early to participate in the reception, as it promises to be a brilliant and pleasant occasion.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:
Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

C. N. GOULDING.

The Camp Meeting at Con Cow has been fully described and enough said to assure your readers that it was a success. A few items regarding the same will not be out of place:

The meeting commencod on Tuesday, 29th Aug. Sister Stevens, Col. Babcock and myself arrived Friday, the 1st; in the meantime Bro. Bateman "held the fort," and the thanks of the order are due him for his earnest and very able lectures during the meeting. As I was sick and the balance of the lecturers were hearty and strong, it was decided that I should talk on Friday. I done so and on all occasions when called upon. Result at present, mustard plasters, cough syrup, etc. Nothing like being accommodating when you can. The meeting closed (punctually) on Sunday evening and all realized that good had been accomplished for the order.

Of the gay and festive crowd of serenaders from Chico, and the very quiet and sedate brothers and sisters from Oroville and Marysville in charge of Brothers Read and Covilland, and that particular crowd, engineered by Hank Curtis from Pentz, of all these I will say nothing, they are "engrafted in memory," long may they live.

It will rejoice the heart of Sister Richardson to learn that C. N. Goulding is a member of Crystal Band of Hope, Brownsville. Two alternatives were presented the brother, to give up tobacco or be talked to death. As he wished to "tarry a while" he surrendered. Any old woman, young woman or middle aged woman that say "tobacco" to Bro. Goulding do so at their peril; a word to the wise is sufficient.

We (Sister Stevens, Col. Babcock and myself) arrived in Chico Monday evening. The brother and sister held forth to a large audience in the M.E. church I presided (introduced the distinguished speakers,) Wednesday evening, 6th, Sister Stevens and myself lectured in Yuba city. Obtained 11 additional names for our order. Bro. King was present and obtained 8 or 10 subscribers for the RESCUE (25 or 30 names were obtained on the camp ground.

Thursday reached the city and have been under the doctor's care since; am in hopes to be able to fill my appointments at Cloverdale on the 17, 18 and 19. Am sorry I could not fill those previous to that date but could not. I trust I may be present at the next camp meeting at Concow.

San Francisco, Sept. 11th, 1882.

MRS. STEVENS.

CONCOW VALLEY CAMP MEETING, was composed of the best brains of Butte, Sutter and Yuba County temperance delegates. Concow is one of the beautiful mountain valleys of Northern California, and combines all the natural facilities for camping, mountain lake trout, fishing, etc. The temperance delegates to that Camp Meeting belong to the no compromise with the drink traffic party, and mean business; therefore the resolutions were of the right ring. District Deputy Graves has been untiring in his devotion to temperance work. The other deputies too, helped to make this first camp meeting a success.

Cherokee lodge sent a representation of earnest reformed men, Bro. Rapp, Bro. Derick and others, whose names escape me. To tell you of the ringing speeches made by Col. Babcock, Col. Goulding and Bro. Bateman would occupy too much space. Every branch of this great temperance work was thoroly discussed and each session was increasingly interesting.

The dedication of the grounds to temperance was most impressive. Oak Temple is the name given to the upland grove, and it was determined to continue these Camp Meetings until this State shall carry prohibition.

ELDER J. W. WEBB.

This gentleman known to so many of the people of this section and of the State, to be a thoroly honest, honorable, patriotic citizen, eminent for his services in behalf of the welfare of the State, foremost in promoting every good interest of mankind, active, industrious and self-sacrificing in his devotion to every benevolent movement,—has been invited by many of his friends and fellow citizens to be a candidate for the Assembly for Santa Barbara and Ventura. And he has signified in an open, manly way thru the press his willingness to accept the position if elected by the people. And now it seems some of the Republican newspapers condem and abuse Bro. Webb because he did not go thru the usual routine to get the nomination. He was in fault there; conceded; but he did the very best he could. Had he put on the regularly authorized role of the aspiring patriot he would have gone to the Leag of Fiendom for their endorsement; he would have been booted there because he is a white man in morals; then he would have gone to the grogshop, and there he would have been scalded because he was a temperance man; he would have gone to the republican machinists and they would have sent him back to the saloons and the leag for his credentials, and some of his children of the fourth generation might have finally got the regular nomination in the year 1980.

Of course it is a new thing; it is ignoring the grog shops and gamblers who have so much capital at stake in politics; it pays no tribute to the local Higgins, Buckley and Robbers Roost who deal in ready made patriotism and have it always on sale, it is a departure from sacred usage, when the people, the farmers, the working men, the householders, the worthy men and women ask Bro. Webb to represent them in the Assembly and he consents to be put in nomination and to be balloted for by the people without running the gauntlet of the saloons.

Who knows but this mode of electing candidates might secure honest representatives everywhere? it certainly would, if the people would trust themselves, in the case of Elder Webb in place of entrusting their most important interests to political machines run for entirely selfish purposes.

OUR GLORIOUS PARTIES.

The following is from the News Letter in a history of "Buckleys Lambs."

"Party names are used to rally the fools with, and only too well they succeed. Though there is not an iota of party in the management of municipal affairs, though wastefulness, extravagance, high taxes, corrupt jobs, and bad city government generally, affect all taxpayers alike, yet such is the stupid folly of the times that they are ready to march to their own destruction, if only the music is set to the shibboleth of a party name. Conventions chosen by the "boys" are convened, public meetings are held, the bonfires are lit, the fireworks are let off, and the opposing forces allow themselves to believe that it is a genuine fight. Poor fools! They are but aiding in their own despoilment. In the back room of a saloon Buckley and Higgins have fixed up the ticket on both sides. No matter which wins, the people lose. The taxpayers do the voting, pay the cost, and the bosses grab the taxes. It is the most transparent game that ever fooled a people. It reverses the old adage and proves, singular to say, that though the trap be set in the sight of the birds, it suffices to catch them. The city knows, to its cost, that it has fallen into the trap, time and time again, but yet it continues to be beguiled by the sirens of the Bush-street and Mint saloons. It has for years past taken candidates from those sources, and every time has sorely suffered for its mistake. It is all the same whether Democrats or Republicans are elected. Buckley and Higgins, Rainey and Gannon, are all original Republicans. In order to put up the game of both parties in the interests of one common firm, Buckley and Rainey were turned over to the Democrats and made bosses of, so that in any event the firm wins, the patronage is divided and the spoils shared. It is a government of the spoils, by the spoils and for the spoils, and not a government, as we have been vainly educated to suppose, of the people, by the people and for the people. It is a monstrous, costly and huge fraud, from beginning to end. Its continuance makes one almost despair of the institutions under which we live. Certain it is that a self-respecting people must change all this, or confess that they are unworthy of the grand legacy of self-government that their fathers fought for, and that has been bequeathed to them as a heritage to be sacredly cherished."

IN MEMORIAM.

At a recent meeting of Excelsior Lodge No. 349 I. O. G. T., resolutions of respect and sympathy were adopted relative to the death of Richard S. Wallace.

Bro. Wallace joined the Lodge as soon as the Order would admit him, and at the age of 14 years and 6 months was killed instantly by the accidental discharge of a shot gun in his own hand, while hunting.

Richie was a young man of great promise, his affectionate disposition and manly qualities won the admiration and love of all who knew him; his example in the Lodge room and elsewhere is well worthy of imitation. Seldom if ever asking to be excused, was found anxious and took pride in aiding the Lodge in every possible way. Good Templars imitate his example. S.

Thompson—Died—in La Porte, Plumas County Cal. August 23d 1882 Fred B. Thompson, aged 24 years and 11 months.

"In the midst of life we are in death." We sadly ask why should one so young be torn from our circle, and a widowed mother mourn the death of her eldest boy? Humanity can give no answer but faith in "Him who marks the sparrows fall" quickly says "He doeth all things well" "Too wise to err, too good to be unkind."

Bro, Thompson was a noble member of La Porte Lodge I. O. G. T. No. 387 even in his dying words expressing such devotion by stating "he considered becoming a Good Templar one of the best steps he ever took." His place is vacant but he has left his influence with us, and we believe others will follow his example by uniting with our ranks. In connection with the funeral services held under the auspices of our Lodge, Bro. Kinzie of Brownsville addressed a large circle of mourning friends, and many were the expressions of sympathy extended to the bereaved family. A patient sufferer for years he has passed away, but we trust he now understands by experience the truth of his favorite hymn, "There is a Gate that stands Ajar." Resolutions of kindest memory of the deceased and of warmest sympathy with the bereaved family were unanimously adopted by the lodge.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

A TRAGEDY.

A little peach in an orchard grew;
A little peach of emerald hue;
Warmed by the sun and wet by the dew,
It grew.

One day, passing the orchard thru,
That little peach dawned on the view
Of Johny Jones and his sister Sue—
Them two.

Up at the peach a club they threw;
Down from the stem on which it grew
Fell the little peach of emerald hue.
Morbleu!

She took a bite, and John a chew,
And then the trouble began to brew—
Trouble the doctor couldn't subdue.
Too true!

Under the turf where the daisies grew
They planted John and his sister Sue,
And their little souls to the angels flew.
Boo-hoo!

But what of the peach of emerald hue,
Warmed by the sun and wet by the dew!
Ah, well; its mission on earth is thru.
Adieu!

BOYS AND CIGARETTES.

The Philadelphia Times makes a vigorous assault on cigarettes, and tell the boys who indulge in them. "The cheap cigarette is a modern invention, and a peculiarly vicious one. To meet the boyish demand, cigarettes are sold now-a-days both cheap, and weak. They are made of mild, often bad, tobacco, and for the most part they are wrapped in ordinary white paper. Rice paper wrappings necessarily increase the cost, and the boy who wishes to prove by the ordeal of smoke that he is not a boy but a man, much prefers the article he can get the most of for his money. Moreover, the boy does not know the difference apparent to the sight between rice paper and ordinary paper; any more than he knows that, while rice paper burns away with scarcely any smoke at all, common paper burns with a foul smoke that cuts like a saw into the chest and throat. So he spends his pocket money on cheap cigarettes, and makes everybody around him uncomfortable, while he smokes himself away into a untimely grave."

"It is strange but nevertheless true that alcohol, regularly applied to a thrifty farmer's stomach, will remove the boards from the fence, let the cattle into his crops, kill his fruit trees, mortgage his farm, and sow wild oats and thistles. It will take the paint off his building, break the glass out of the windows and fill them with rags, take the gloss off his clothes and polish from his manners, subdue his reason, arouse his passion, bring sorrow and disgrace upon his family and topple him into a drunkard's grave. It will do this to the artisan and capitalist, the matron and the maiden."—Northern World.

A row among a flock of sparrows was observed in Kentucky; one of the birds seemed to refuse to help to build the nest they were constructing. Next morning a sparrow was found hanging dead; hanging by a cotton thread about its neck. The idea pretended is that the rest had hung him, whereas if there is any truth in it at all, the confusion of the day before was due to the bird having got himself tangled up and they could not release him. It is a little too much to believe that birds use hanging as a punishment.

BAND OF HOPE.

At Concow Valley, the Band of Hope gained a great victory. Ten of the leading Good Templars joined the Band of Hope, Col. Goulding leading off. Their pipes, cigars and tobacco were laid upon the altar of temperance. At the dedication of the Oak Temple to the cause of temperance, a grave was dug under an Oak tree and the pipes and tobacco were buried; a little Band of Hope boy, "Master Douglass, filled in the grave."

"One of the signers was a Dr. from Chico;" great rejoicing prevailed when he came forward, and dared to do right;" Col. Goulding also made a complete surrender and never made a better or more sensible speech. The tobacco money of these men is hereafter to be used in disseminating temperance literature. It is a comfort to see that the Band of Hope principles are rapidly gaining ground among Good Templars. If our general superintendent had been present she would have rejoiced in song at this great victory.

TO SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHERS.

For $1.30 you can purchase of D. C. Cook, 46 Adams St., Chicago, a Teacher's Bible, containing all the matter of the best $16.00 Oxford Teacher's Bible; over 1,000 pages; concordance, maps, tables, etc., etc.; plainly bound; gilt edges. More expensive bindings if desired

Your Best Teachers.—Learn to observe as you go along through life. You can learn something almost anywhere. "My best teachers," said Hugh Miller, "were the boys with whom I played." Did you ever think of your playmates as your teachers? The things you like in them you can use as copies, and practice them over and over until you can perform equal to the copy set you; the things you dislike, you can, by having their ugliness mirrored before you, the more easily avoid.—Ex.

Iowa Bands of Hope are all to meet in their respective places of meeting in full and hold a praise service in honor of the Iowa victory. Can't our Bands of Hope have simultaneous meetings? Can't we, as well as the "big" Lodges of Good Templars have an Anniversary day? And are we to have a children's Mass Meeting during Grand Lodge?

SOUTH AMERICA.

There are some very singular customs among these people of the South. When the Spanish colonists came over 300 years ago soldiers, adventurers, priests and civil officers were inspired with a greedy thirst for gold. As usual, immorality, gambling, treachery and violent wrong soon became rampant in the land. If injustice was done and complaint was made to a dissolute monarchy in Spain against a dissolute priest or a dishonest officer, it took from 18 to 24 months to hear from it again, if the friends of the wrong doer at court ever permitted it to be heard from.

Therefore with such power to oppress and with so little fear of punishment for wrong doing, it is not strange that a very great laxity of morals should have become the rule all over these Spanish settled countries. Many years before Pius IX was Pope he was sent as a messenger of Rome, to examine into the wickedness of Spanish America. He found such a condition of clerical and public scandal that his report of it led to some kind of a partial interdict or suspension of full communion or connexion with the church of Rome, which, unless it has been lately removed, continues till now, tho probably a dead letter like our Sunday law.

The tax on marriage, or the price charged by the priests for marrying a couple has always been prohibitory as it is to-day; except perhaps in the very ancient days when gold and silver was very abundant. The charge of $16 at one time of the year and $20 another is in Columbia virtually a prohibition of marriage to nearly all the poor; and that means every one there but a very very few individuals. Therefore but a very few people marry tho some of the very poorest do and have expensive wedding feasts in addition to the big fee to the priest. Often the money to meet this large outlay is raised by pawning the family jewelry, with some native usurer, who lends them so many dollars amounting to even ounces of gold dust at $20 or $22 an ounce to be repaid in gold dust at $17 $15 or even $12 an ounce according to the time fixed for repayment. That is a simple easy way of figuring interest.

When people marry they are very prond of it and the wife takes frequent occasion to remind her friends that her case demands special consideration, "for you know I am married." To meet this exorbitant extortion of the church for marrying the poor, the government to which the church is very hostile, and which frequently retaliates upon the church—has appointed a legal marriage by a civil officer and has made it the only marriage valid in law. This is either free entirely or has only a nominal fee of fifty cents or so—I believe it is free. The names of those thus married are registered and published and remain as evidence in case of future inheritance of property.

Those who marry thus sometimes go to the priest also and get him to duplicate the ceremony. But the church condems this civil marriage with peculiar energy. And of course their ignorant adherents despise it as something horrible. I asked an African woman whose first husband was dead and who had a second one, but never could afford to get married, why she did not go to the civil officer and get legally married there; and make her children legitimate. She scorned the idea indignantly and wondered that I should have such a low estimate of her as to think she would pollute her morals with such an infamous ceremony, invented by infidels and barbarians.

It seems strange to us that a church should thunder so against civil marriage, or marriage before a judge or county officer in place of a priest, and keep entirely silent about no marriage at all, in 9 homes of 10 among the poor. But it is because people there have been born into that kind of a civilization, and never saw any other; they are so accustomed to it, that it is a matter of indifference to them. And in that, they are precisely like us. Our people and churches have seen the grogshop from childhood, which is a thousand times more cruel, wicked, devilish and filthy than any other abomination that ever cursed the world, and they calmly submit to it because "it used to be." They make a fuss about Mormonism in Utah and child murder in China, but the seven times worse Mormonism and childmurder in San Francisco and all our cities, is all right because we are used to it. So again we have been educated in a stupid, barbarous, inconsistent, absurd and thoroly crazy system of spelling or rather misspelling—and because we were always used to it, so many people believe it is almost wicked to try to improve it. It looks very absurd to us now to see the old word schyppe which used to spell ship; but the people of the year 1950 will have a heartier laugh when they discover how we pronounced laugh and thr-o-ugh-out.

The church of that country too has litened the burden of the poor by half marrying them for half the fee. For $8 they perform in the church a ceremony called "giving the hand." In this the priest joins the hands of the parties, throws a lasso or noose around the necks of the half mated pair and after some words addressed to them, they are reminded that they are not yet married but must hasten and bring the other $8 and complete the ceremony. I knew quite a number of these half married people, but never knew one of them that went back for the other eight dollars worth or that expressed an intention of ever doing so.

These people on various occasions confided to me their entire disapproval of a system which they said prevailed in protestant countries and of course in the United States; viz: that of getting married for six months. They did not believe in a religion whose priest made of the most holy sacrament of marriage a six months jest. Another instance of how people see a splinter in a stranger's eye but dont see a stick of timber in their own. Their notions on this particular point of marriage were very strict.

Sometimes when one of these people was running down a neighbor who had incurred his ill will, after decorating him with the epithets of "thief" and all the kindred pet names within easy reach, he would wind up, "protestant, jew, mason." A day or two after, I would say to the speaker, "When you were talking about Don Pedro the other day you said Mason, what does that mean? What is a Mason?" Oh they are a very bad kind of people. Yes? What do they do? Oh I dont know, but they are very bad. Well you must know something they do or you would not know they were bad? Well I dont know anything about them, except that they whip the Virgin Mary every holy Thursday, and they are very bad, that is all I know.

Another time I would ask him or some other one who used the same expression; Jew, Jew—I heard you say that word, what is it? Oh they are very bad people. Yes? what do they do? I dont know, only they are very bad. Well they must do something to make them bad? All I know about them is, they whip Jesus Christ every Good Friday and they are very bad etc.

Another day pronouncing and miscalling the word "protestant" in two or three ways to feign ignorance of it, I would ask what he had meant by that word. Oh, they are very bad people. Yes? what is the matter with them? what do they do? I dont know, only they are very bad etc. Finally he would say all he had ever heard about them was, that they whipped the Virgin Mary on Holy Thursday or Friday and were very bad people. Different authorities varied as to which victim was whipped and the day of the whipping, but all united that the whippers were very bad people.

Orders Filled the Same Day as Received WEINSTOCK & LUBIN

These people were of African descent, had been slaves 25 years before; not over one in 100 could read. Somewhere about the year 1852 the same question was for a few weeks in the port of Greenock, Scotland. Went on Sunday to a free church with a family of mercantile and shipping people, well educated, worthy Scotch people. As usual there, the singing in church was heavily weighted with discordant agony. Returning with a dauter of the family to their home we passed a church where the congregation were singing their closing hymn and singing sweetly and with spirit. I remarked that they sang well and asked what church it was—my companion answered, "the Morrisonians." Yes? I never heard that name before, what is their distinguishing characteristic or doctrine? "Oh I know naething at all aboot them, only they are awfu' bad people." Human nature; anything is bad that differs from us.

PROHIBITION WANTED:—Our hearts were made sad last week by seeing the president and vice president of a Gospel temperance organization in a village in New Jersey intoxicated. For years the former has been an active worker in the Gospel temperance cause and a prominent member of the Methodist Church; the latter was a "brand plucked from the burning" thru the instrumentality of his companion. Scores of young men, too, have been saved by their active efforts. Yet, to our astonishment, in an evil hour, they had yielded to temptation, and stood before us lacking sufficient wit to feel their shame. A visit to New York had proved how frail was their power to resist an appetite they once thot was conquered. How the rum element of that quiet New Jersey town must have exulted as the president of the temperance organization reeled thru the streets to the home of his God-fearing parents, who for years had been satisfied that their son was a thoroly reformed man! He told us it should never happen again, and remarked. "A man who has once been a drunkard is never safe!" What those poor unfortunate men need is PROHIBITION. Will the readers of this article in the States of New York and New Jersey do their part to secure that great blessing? We do not give any names, and only wish we had never seen the men in the condition described.—N. Y. Witness.

THE TRAFFIC HIDES.

There's not a single honest business honestly conducted on this continent, but would be rejoiced if Congress should propose a Commission of Enquiry to collect statistics upon the relation of that business to the public welfare. The carpenters, tailors, tanners, farmers, printers, machinists, bricklayers, hatters and all other honest industries would throw open their books and doors and assist in announcing to the government and the people, every possible condition of their business, which is either beneficial or injurious to the public welfare or to the welfare of any individual. Not one of them would at all fear that his industry or profession would be found injurious to any interest of society.

But the professions which subsist on robbery, debauchery and crime—and they alone—strenuously object to be investigated as to their influence upon the public welfare. The burglars would refuse to answer a question, but would assert that their business gives employment to the artisans who make their tools and does a power of good to the locksmith. The brothels would not answer a word. The pickpockets and assassins would creep into their holes and keep out of sight. And of course the worst and most destructive gang of thieves and assassins which the world has ever seen, make a furious protest against a bill which has passed the Senate of four different Congresses and which only proposes to enquire truthfully and impartially as to the effect of selling liquor by retail upon the welfare of the country.

If the millers or bakers or milkmen should object to such a bill regarding their business, we should have the strongest reasons to believe they were perpetrating some villainously iniqutous fraud upon their customers. But of course we all know the rum-sellers would naturally do all in their power to prevent an investigation into the effects of their infernal traffic because they know perfectly well it is all ruinous, pauperizing and murderous and does no good whatever.

But the fact that they resist with all their might every effort to effect this enquiry, is a confession that THEY KNOW their traffic is branded all over with the mark of Cain, that it is nothing but murder and pillage upon their fellow men and deserves no treatment but that accorded to the meanest and worst of criminals. The Leag of Fiendom journal is eloquent upon the prevention of this commission of enquiry. And its demand is attended to by the Republican convention in the nomination of its candidate fpr Congress.

TEMPERANCE.

☞ We have been asked wether this journal is for or against temperance, and we will clear our position by stating that heart and soul we are opposed to the demon of intemperance.

We believe that the whole whisky traffic is the devil's work.

A short time since we were offered a large "ad" by a liquor and bitters dealer, with a large sum for the insertion of the same.

We did and do scorn all such Judas money, and will now state that all the whisky element on earth, could not raise money enough to cause us to prostitute one line of this paper to their use. This journal is devoted to all truly progressive movements, but will wage an eternal war on wickedness. If you are with us in this, help get subscribers, if not then don't.—Musical Science Monthly.

DISGRACEFUL.

Some months ago Senator Logan introduced in the Senate of the United States, a bill which in cool atrocity and savage wickedness, probably never had a parallel in all the attempts at legislative crime, that have disgraced the history of this world. It was a cunningly devised and thotfully concocted document, framed entirely in the interests of the class who live by polluting and depraving our youth of both sexes, and decoying them to lives of shame and crime.

It proposed to reduce the tax on whisky from 90 to 70 cents a gallon and in place of applying the tax to the extinction of the public debt, using it to maintain our public schools. It proposed to donate thus 15 to 20 millions a years to increase the stealings of the wholesale public poisoners; to devote the revenue from the sale of the blood and virtue and lives of the children, to their education and then tax the taxpayers to pay the national debt.

It did not propose to save a dollar to anybody but the distillers, but it was to marry the most disgraceful, murderous of crimes to our public school system; to make the success of our public school which is the dearest of American interests, dependent upon the success of the most atrocious and hateful business of creating idlers, loafers, criminals, prostitutes, farmed out to a syndicate of murderers and plunderers. The bill was warmly endorsed by the Chronicle at the time, as is about every evil and nasty proposition which that utter pauper in morals can hear of; but the bill was so hooted by every virtuous citizen of the Republic that it perished under the weight of maledictions heaped upon it.

But now the Chronicle rakes out the bill from its ashpit and again attempts to argue its adoption. It is more charitable to hope that its action in this matter is prompted by the payment or promise of a heavy bribe from the distillers of death, than that the Chronicle volunteers to undertake such an access of infamous design as the unpaid advocacy of the measure would indicate. It says

"At the last session of Congress Senator LOGAN of Illinois introduced a bill to appropriate the entire revenue from spirits to the cause of education in the several States. This revenue averages $60,000,000 a year. It is a tax on an article which is not only a luxury, but also the breeder of vice. And yet it is a luxury which all nations, all races, in all times, have encouraged. The use of wine, spirituous and malt liquors has been, and is now, as universal in all societies, enlightened or not, as the use of bread. The consumption of spirits, therefore in the United States is assured against all movements of a prohibitory kind; and the tax which is and ough to be continued, will stand for ages to come. We have no tax that is more politic and just than this one. The revenue from it will increase in about the same ratio with the increase of population. If it was $60,000,000 in 1880, it will be $78,000,000 in 1890, and only those who indulge in the luxury will pay this tax. They will pay it without feeling any of the usual burden of taxes."

The theory of being bribed to make these utterances is confirmed by the monstrous intentional falsehoods asserted. "All nations, all races, in all times," have never by any means used whisky; none of them have, but a few centuries; and to a majority of the human race or nearly so, all intoxicating drinks are either entirely prohibited or by them only exceptionally used. And the prophesy that whisky in the U. S. is assured against prohibition is the silly vaporing of fools, if not a wanton malignant defiance of palpable truth.

Discussing this question of the deliberate sale of the rising generation to the tender mercies of the men who offer the price of their blood and life, the Chronicle calculates that the State of California would receive of this blood money $852,000, or a dollar for each inhabitant, San Francisco's share being $120,000 or 50 cents per head, and judging from the motives which govern at least one daily newspaper, it thinks that is bribe enough to induce every intelligent citizen to consent to the ruin and damnation of his own and his neighbors children.

Far better every child of the State should grow up ignorant and unable to read, than to grow up educated and drunken and infamous. There are thousands of children now in California unable to read and growing up in vice—and with the smallest fraction of exception, every one of them owes his ignorance and vice to whisky and beer somewhere. And just as these infernal poisons continue to be more generally used, whether the tax goes to the schools or not, just so much ignorance and crime and vice will increase and flourish.

Senator Logan's bill will go down in history as far as his name goes, and whatever of good repute may go with it, that bill will throw over it a pall of deserved infamy; perhaps the Chronicle's part in it will not much blacken its own record. Again that bill is comprehensively cruel and vicious. Let us wait and see who next has been paid out of the whisky sack to advocate it.

GOT MAD.

An officer of the Good Templars, in Michigan, recently sent a communication to the Lever asking that if not desired for publication, it should be returned. The editor thot best to return it and was probably too busy to write reasons and apologies. The writer flew into a passion and attributing the act to a personal dislike to himself, says: "As you don't want any help to increase your circulation, I bid you good-by and when my time expires stop sending me the Lever and I will take some other temperance paper."

If all contributors to newspapers were to take that action, the papers would soon have hosts of enemies. Sometimes an intentionally offensive letter may be tossed into the fire without any regret, but it is safe to say that to reject or decline any communication, prose or poetry, offered in good faith for publication in a respectable journal, is one of the most unpleasant duties an editor has to encounter. Sometimes a good friend sends something which would do neither him or the paper any credit and if it is declined the editor has quite as good a right to get into a passion because it was offered, as the writer has to get mad because it was declined. But he dont.

It is much more likely that an editor will strain a point to publish an article which his judgment does not quite approve, rather than offend a contributor whose friendship is a little doubtful, than that he will reject one from a feeling of prejudice against the writer. No two men would always exactly agree as to what is the best to publish, but every two men will agree that the average editor has sense enough not to run any unneeessary chances of making enemies of his friends.

And it occurs frequently that articles which are quite acceptable get crowded out or overlooked or belated by accident or by the printer's carelessness or mistake, and without any intention. So after all when one feels a disposition to get grouty on this subject it would be more consistent and manly to consider that if there is one chance that there may be cause, there are ten chances against it. And it would be a weak and puny journalist who would make his personal friendships at all influence his judgment as to the quality of matter offered for publication.

DRUNK:—One Clarence Gray, of Santa Barbara, was opposed by his own county paper when nominated for Dist. Attorney, because of his unfitness, largely due to his past drinking habits. It is believed that he would never have killed the editor if it had not been for drink and drinking associations. It has cost Santa Barbara county tax payers between $10.000 and $12.000 actual cash beside loss of time to jurors, witnesses and of reputation to the community. Now he is granted a new trial because the jury at San Mateo drank 20 gals. of beer, 2 gals. and some bottles of wine and considerable whisky. So Santa Barbara county will have to spend several thousands of dollars more to try him again; after this lapse of time the jury will probably disagree, the popular voice be against the expense of a fourth trial and he be turned loose on society again. Yet the county "had to license the man who sold him whisky, for the sake of revenue." W.

THE MOST probable explanation of the objections made by the Record Union to the Republican ticket, is that it knows that it is the strongest help to any ticket or candidate to be opposed by that paper. Hence it is fair to presume that either ticket, jack or jill is perfectly satisfactory to it.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—WE AIM FOR NOTHING SHORT OF A SWEEPING NATIONAL PROHIBITORY LAW ENDORSED BY EVERY STATE AND TERRITORY OF THE UNION, IN THE YEAR 1885, AND AS MUCH SOONER AS THE CHRISTIAN AND TEMPERANCE MEN AND GOOD CITIZENS OF THE COUNTRY MAY DESIRE TO ACCOMPLISH IT.

TIME FOR A CHANGE.

It is about time now to cease this miserable folly of running a Prohibition Reform Party, a Home Protection Party, 300 Good Templars Lodges, with Bands of Hope, Sons of Temperance and various other temperance organizations and instrumentalities, and consenting at every election time to see the moral influence and the voting influence and all the labors of the past two, four, six, eight, twenty years, bottled up and offered submissively in sacrifice at the feet of the grogshop bosses and machine thieves, and election traitors; at Republican conventions to aid the Republican party to place rumsellers in power in this State and to send drunkards and played out tools of the political machine to Congress to vote there for the legions of rum and satan; to swell the already too numerous section of political prostitutes there, who are frequenters of drunken and gambling resorts and who are purchasable to aid and endorse every infamous project of robbery and corruption introduced by the enemies of the people.

We have held enthusiastic meetings and applauded prohibition sentiments all over the State; we have formed associations pledged to act politically for the enactment of prohibitory liquor laws and Sunday laws; we have passed resolutions and signed pledges and promised not to vote for any but temperance men—and our adhesion as temperance men has been handed in by some volunteer agencies that were not "of us nor for us," to a platform that has no particle of promise for temperance in it and only a hollow impudent mockery of a Sunday law plank framed at the beck and bidding of the worst enemies of the Sunday.

And we are cooly asked to put off our temperance action and add two more years of lying promises and pretensions and betrayed trusts to those of the eight years past during which all the labors of temperance men have been wasted to elect rummies to power.

In Maine, Vermont, Ohio and in various other states, power and rum have corrupted the Republican party as they have here. The following clippings from the St. Johnsbury Caledonian, Vermont, show how temperance people have been treated in those temperance communities, because they were like us, in committing their interests into hands that systematically betrayed and befooled them.

"MR. EDITOR: I rejoice that the temperance element of the county has at last been aroused. I trust that the meeting next Monday will fully satisfy the bosses and their tools that preaching temperance and voting rum has been practiced for the last time in Caledonia county. All that has been wanting for the last ten years was for the temperance people to step out. All honor to those who have done so.

It shakes one's confidence in humanity to see prominent temperance men, Good Templars and others, who will not ordinarily admit their neighbors to be good temperance men if they eat sour apples, when it comes to a political contest like the present "bunk in" with the anti-temperance element and "snuggle" up to red-nosed rumsellers like cooing doves. Truly, modern politics makes strange bedfellows, especially if the fellows see an office somewhere in the dim future.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION.

Whereas, the Republican Convention of Caledonia county, holden at St. Johnsbury, August 16th, has ignored the wishes of the temperance element of said county, therefore, we, the legal voters of said county, who believe in fair deal and honest count, hereby issue a call for a Mass Temperance Convention to be held at St. Johnsbury, Monday, Aug. 28th, at 11 o'clock A. M., to nominate a temperance ticket to be voted for at the next election."

SOME IFS.

Some of our impulsive friends are very fearful that the Democratic party will win, if the temperance people do not perjure themselves or what is the same thing, utterly belie their profession by voting the Republican Leag of Freedom ticket. And the consequences will be awful; the Democrats will abolish the Sunday law they say; but there is no danger at all of their doing so after the fiery protest of all the respectable element of that party has so condemd the action of the San Jose Convention. But the Republicans have not only refused to amend the present law and make it operative, but have threatened in the interest of the Leag to make it a day of "recreation" which means a Beer Garden dance, a general drunk, baseball, cockfights, theater, horse-races and anything else the Leag may chance to suggest, and no business will be decided "unnecessary" that supplies liquor to aid that recreation.

The V. plank is entirely in the interest of the Sunday grog-shop, and is meaner by far than the Democratic one; the latter was open and above board, the former is a double meaning fraud, practiced upon the people and upon the better class of the delegates at the Sacramento Convention.

It is natural for all inconsiderate Republicans to endorse the ticket; it is to be expected that some temperance men who have been promised or have already received a generous slice of the Republican Wedding Cake, will strenuously advise us to stick to the party which has wantonly defied us; will strenuously contend that Good Templars and ministers ought to vote for rumsellers and wine makers and a Leag of Freedom delegate to Congress. Because men who are well paid for their opinions and actions have very strong convictions.

But the real temperance men, who have no axes to sharpen at the Estee grindstone and decline to have their political ticket determined either at the Mint Saloon or by Buckleys "lambs" and who are deaf to the golden allurements of the Leag of Freedom and the Vinicultural Association, will vote a decent ticket which will be assuredly provided for them, endorsing the bona fide temperance men on other tickets and utterly repudiating the rumsellers and Leag of Freedom nominees.

There is one thing to be remembered by the real friends of temperance as well as by the enemies of prohibition, who pretend to be friends of temperance; it is this; if a separate temperance ticket is headed off, if by any means the politicians can succeed in bulldosing the members of the coming convention into a retraction of their promises and a betrayal of their trusts and obligations—it is not a triumph of rum and satan for two years alone, but for four years at least. And that is certain. If the politicians can spurn us now and make us lick their feet like whipped curs, they will have less respect for the same slavish spirits in their arrangements for the campaign of 1884.

Let whoever wants to guarantee "free rum and no Sunday" for four years longer, preach up the ticket that has the brandy maker head and the Leag of Freedom tail. But they will have to face the music of the songs in which their treason will be sung.

THE JOURNAL OF FREE—, ETC.

A fraternal and friendly feeling for a neighbor prompts a hint or two for the benefit of the organ of the Leag of Freebeer. The experiment of sending that paper to the saloons is of little benefit to the business of the Leag. All the owners and barkeepers know how to doctor one gallon of whisky into five; they all know the dodge of having a demijohn half full of a very ancient and costly French brandy about 75 yrs. old, kept for particular high-toned friends, and replenished at $1.25 a gallon at any wholesale ginmill; they all have their scouts and trappers out to rope in the stray miners and strangers that come to town and get on a "time," with money in their pockets; they know how to turn those pockets inside out. And they dont read much any way, this class of people; all the use they have for lettees or figures is to read the V c. on a grog-shop window; so sending your journal to the rum dives is a folly, exactly on a par with the act of the Chinese, who burn paper suits of clothes here, under the impression that when so burned, their relatives in the other world are immediately supplied with a comfortable brand new wardrobe.

That is wasted energy on your part. What you want is to send your journal to every minister and school teacher in the State and on this coast, free. As a starter at first, put a temperance column in it which you can always cut out from the RESCUE. That will tempt them to read a little of the journal. After a while you can shorten by degrees the temperance column and put a Sunday cockfight, etc., in its place, till in about a year you can imperceptibly change the whole column or page into a department headed

SUNDAY READING.

Cockfights, ratpits, Tivoli and Harbor View Sunday recreations would make attractive literature and when you can get the ministers and teachers and Good Templars to reading it, the effect will be immense. The suggestion is made that if you could in a year or two convert the editor of the California Christian Advocate and Revs. John B. Hill, McKenzie and Dille, to throw up their present occupations and run a saloon apiece at the Market St. ferry depot, what a glorious triumph that would be for the Leag. Those temperance books, sold at Mr. Hill's, are doing your trade a great deal of injury and if you could get him to run an emporium of Police Gazettes, lottery tickets, dime novels and Leag of F. literature in his saloon, you might stand a chance of staving off a constitutional prohibitory amendment for 10 or 12 years yet. Another suggestion; send all the ministers and teachers of the State a keg of beer as a present every Sunday; it will cost some money at first and some of them will pretend for a while that they dont like it and are affronted, etc., but that will only advertize the beer and the journal all the more. If the beer is good and wholesome and the Journal tells the truth, the beer and the journal must prevail in the end. And to capture all the ministers and teachers would be worth to the Leag the sacrifice of a million barrels of beer and 10,000 tons of beer inspired literature, and all fear of any pestiferous Sunday legislation would vanish in soothing tobacco smoke.

DOWN WITH THE GREENBACKERS.

This Greenback party is threatening the State with ruin and should be at once suppressed; nipped in the bud. They have made a platform without endorsing the Leag of Fiendom. They have committed the unheard of treason of nominating candidates without patronizing or even once calling at either of the candidate factories of Buckley or Higgins, thus showing their utter contempt for one of the most important, elevating and useful of our California home industries. Diligent enquiry fails to discover that they have ordered a single barrel of beer; thus they ignore the agricultural interests of the State. They did not leave at the saloons as much as a sack of even potatoes or onions to liven up the patriotism of the boys and fit them for the duties of the ballot; thus they have implored defeat. They outraged the vinicultural interests, by not having an officer of the drunkard makers association on their ticket, an offence akin to blasphemy. They ignored the annual State horse gambling and public strap games at Sacramento, the most chaste and enriching home industrial pursuits we have. And they failed to express their horror of the witch-burning, thumbscrew, tar and feathering puritanism which wants to shut up the government grog-shops, the state churches, on Sunday. They have perpetrated the crowning political sacrilege of declaring for Prohibition and as if they desired to invite the last extreme of public indignation, they separated without three cheers, one cheer or even a mention of or for Paul Neumann. The minor outrages of nominating temperance men and honest virtuous candidates for office, might have been forgiven, but these offences against home and native land and sacred precedent, never.

PARTIES who attend the reception to the Grand Lodge on Monday evening Oct. 2, are requested to bring their own regalia. The pasword and ex. will be taken at the door.

Ladies', Misses' and Children's Suits and Dresses Made to Order. WEINSTOCK & LUBIN, Sacramento, Cal.

LEAG OF F——DOM TROPHIES.

1. Stockton Lunatic Asylum admitted 21 patients in August. 13 males and 8 females and altho there were 4 deaths, 5 discharged, and 1 escape there is a net increase of 11 for the month. Present number 1109 in all. No dout many of these and of the thousands that have died there were not sent there by the Leag of F. It is presumable that 5 or 6 per cent of all the cases were entirely due to other causes than drink or tobacco.

2. A WOMAN 52 years old left a water front Leag of F. doggery at 10.30 P. M. and was found drowned. A dauter of hers last week jumped from a window 20 feet to escape from a pupil of the leag, her drunken husband who was threatening to kill her.

3. REV. N. B. Klink, J. O. Watkins and J. A. Day, clerks in the construction department in the Navy yard, are unshipped. They dont visit the national grog-shops for whose special benefit the U. S. Navy Yard is maintained. Such men dont suit the leag.

4. IT IS BECOMING fashionable for the pupils of the leag who live on the wages of their female paramours to beat them cruelly. And as they form quite a considerable colony in this city, the current amount of woman beating is making the Leag jubilant in all directions. This party is a candidate for the first prize gold medal of the Leag.

5. A YOUTHFUL Leag pupil broke his father's arm, beat him freeleagroriously and threw the old man, aged 72 years, into the street. This is a candidate for the second gold medal of the Leag.

JAMES HENRY POOLER a machinist 27 years of age, and a devoted member of the H. O. S. degree of the Leag College (High Old Soakers) was arrested for beating his mother 63 years of age in an artistic manner, and turning her out in her night clothes to spend the night in the cool fog. The president of the Leag should present him with a gold snuff-box.

JOHN HEARST a fisherman in Missouri under the inspiration of the Leag, whipped his 8 year old son cruelly and when his wife interceded, he dashed him on the floor and killed him. It dont say whether it was old Bourbon or the Noble, or the Davenport or the Old Judge whisky; but the brand should be known and its makers credited with the result.

THESE are only a few clippings of a great many similar ones which come to hand in a week. It is another indication of the growing degeneracy of the times that our secular press always fails to credit the Leag of F. with the results of their business. And the Journal of Beer Rights is too modest to take the credit of its successes.—When the RESCUE's party captures a lost victim of the Leag and reforms him and puts good clothes on him and he regains his senses and becomes a good citizen, the RESCUE crows about it.

But when the Leag takes a good man and puts its inspiration into him and takes him up to the Tivoli Garden and the Fink's debauchery corral and educates him to beat his mother, kill his wife and go to the penitentiary for life, the Leag Journal is as silent as if it felt no genuine pride in the glories of its clients. Why dont the Journal advertize its biz and get out a few pictures of its work?

Five divorces last Monday in San Francisco added fresh and budding laurels to the blushing brows of the leag. They triumphantly ask could all the churches of the State combined produce five divorces in five years; one days work of the Leag.

THE CANDIDATES.

There are some men on the Republican ticket who are in no wise to blame for the capture of the party by the Leag of F. and whose election it would be a misfortune to the State to prevent.

Mr. Pedlar for Secretary of State.
Judge Denson, Judge Hunt } for Judges of Supreme Court.
Mr. Waterman for Supt. of Public Instruction.
Mr. Egerton for Congress.
And whatever other men are equally worthy.

As for the Judges above named, their defeat would pretty certainly elect Judges Sharpstein and Ross, whose success might be calamitous, to the last degree, to the welfare of the State, as a similar election which years ago defeated local option and has chained this State to a career of unbridled drunkenness and crime for the last eight years—from which at least three-fourths of the State could now have been redeemed if he had been defeated. It is to be hoped a similar calamity will be avoided this time. The office of Justice of the Supreme Court is as sacred a one as that of high priest and no man whose moral qualifications do not fit him for the one office should be chosen to hold the other.

THE candidates to be nominated by the coming Convention will be men for whom Christians and temperance men can vote without violating the obligations of good citizenship. Two of the Governors already in nomination are liquor makers and sellers; members of a dishonest and voracious monopoly—which robs the people to a greater extent every day than the railroad and all other monopolies and corporations can do in six months. It makes not a particle of difference to the honest people of the State whether the Mint Exchange or any other grogshop is run by a Democrat or a Republican—Nor does it make a particle of difference to them whether a Leag of Freedom anti-Sunday anti-temperance Governor is Democrat or Republican.

MORE REASON; LESS IMPULSIVENESS.

Under this heading the Yolo Mail, in kindly courteous language and with the best and purest motives, regrets that the Editor of this paper and Dr. McDonald seem to be educated "more by impulse than cool judgment," in their attitude toward the treatment bestowed by the Republican Convention manipulators upon the temperance citizenship of this State. It says, if not getting all we desired from that party, we advocate a separate ticket, we will commit a serious blunder and "work for the success of the Democrats whose banner is inscribed with the motto of the Leag of Freedom. Down with all Sunday laws and up with unlimited whisky on Sunday."

It seems to us that the honest members of that convention which cheered the adoption of the Sunday plank" and the thousands of honest, virtuous Republicans in the State who heartily rejoiced at the news of its adoption and the parties who are now satisfied with it, are those who "act from impulse and not from the dictates of cool, deliberate judgment and reason." We admit that they thot we had gained a victory for the Sunday law advocates and the friends of morality, and their rejoicing had some justification, were its source not a myth and a delusion.

We are firmly convinced that the Vc. plank was intended and planned with consummate craft and patient study to CHEAT both parties—first the temperance and church people; to defraud them into a belief that the Republican party dared or wolud be permitted by its ginmill bosses, or that it desired to do some thing in the line of Sunday legislation that would be displeasing to the Leag of drunkard makers; second—the adherents of the law-defying conspiracy; it intended to assure them that the party would secure them against any danger to their present vantage ground of free rum and no Sunday. A Los Angeles delegate Mr. Williams proposed to test the meaning of the plank with this Amendment.

"That the Republican party is opposed to the repeal of the Sunday law and in favor of the enactment of such laws as will secure its enforcement."

But it was VOTED DOWN instantly and vehemently. It was the very smallest expression that could be asked for as a promise that they intended to do anything to save the Sabbath from its entire prostitution to the purposes of debauchery and depravity, a condition of things to which the Republican party of this State has given its unqualified assent all along, as it did at the Convention.

The real, logical, cool, reasoning, observing, studious advocates of temperance here, have acted the part of truest friendship to the Republicans of this State. They pointed out to them the self-evident fact that the Democrats had a fair chance to carry the State, not thru their own good deeds, but because of the misrule of the Republicans, and that they had foolishly thrown away that chance, when they hoisted the piratical plank of the Leag of F. Time and again they reiterated that the Republicans would be sustained, if they took an opposite course and stood up for decency and temperance. And those true and only friends of that party declared as often, that they would NOT support it, if it followed the course of the San Jose Convention.

While this was going on the false friends of that party so sacredly dedicated to virtue—were closeted in this city with strikers and schemers, buyers and sellers of votes, traders in offices, political buzzards and traitors in the ginmills, establishing centers of bribery and corruption right and left, corrupting primaries, employing hirelings in every discoverable market of political rottenness, high and low; plotting with the Leag of F. and doing and planning every possible thing which the temperance and christian people had so often and solemly declared, would drive them into a separate party—and the two individuals named by the Mail cannot help themselves, from protesting against this sale of the party to the anti-Sunday and anti-temperance faction; they can find no loop hole of escape from the charge of falsehood and dishonor if they remain silent.

We fail to see the necessity for the continuance of a Republican or any other party, which consents to betray the people to the legions of rum, their worst enemies, delude them with false issues and lying pledges. We indignantly disclaim allegiance or countenance to any party that heads its ticket with a rumseller who boasts of making better wine than Christ did.

We dont consent to be governed by the President of an association whose business, the ruin and slauter of his fellow men, would send him to the penitentiary, if pursued in better civilized states. We have no part in sending drunkards to Congress to vote for whisky ring frauds and the Logan bill and the nominee of the Leag of F. at that.

The Hebrew system and civilization was a necessity once; it had a period of glorious history—but when the time came that its best talent was devoted to stoning the prophets and crucifying Christ, its dominion ceased, and after long struggles a better has succeeded it and the world still moves.

The Republican party had a glorious history to a certain point; when it became the hireling accomplice and tool of a horrible business which fills this beautiful State with crime and slauters 3000 or more human victims in this State every year—the two defendants in this article will ask to be relieved from the plea of guilty when the demand is made "who slew all these?" If the Republican party should perish this fall, it would only be the sinking of the barnacles and parasites and gin-depraved camp-followers and vermin, who have been murdering that party for a dozen years. A better one composed of the honest men now in both Republican and Democratic parties would occupy its place and rid the country of its woes and plagues.

And if the Democrats should carry the state now because of the folly of their opponents, they would not dare to harm or weaken the present Sunday law. They would be as likely to make its enforcement easy as the Republican double-dealers would be or intend to be.

CALL.

STATE PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

A meeting of the committee appointed by the Prohibition Convention in July last, was held on Tuesday evening, and adopted the following:

"The emergency provided for by the State Prohibition Convention of July 11th, held at Y. M. C. A. Hall, in San Francisco, having arisen, the committee appointed for that purpose hereby reconvenes the said convention in Y. M. C. A. Hall, San Francisco, Sept. 28, 1882, at 10 A. M."

Attention is called to the terms of the original call, as follows:

"A State Convention in the interest of Prohibition and Reform will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, 232 Sutter St., San Francisco, on Tuesday, July 11th, at 10 o'clock, A. M. The attendance of delegates from every part of the state is desired. To this end, every lodge of Good Templars, every branch organization of the Home Protection Association, every division of the Sons of Temperance, every Loyal League, every W. C. T. U., every Band of Hope, and, in fact every temperance organization favoring prohibition will be entitled to one delegate each.

It is earnestly hoped that every temperance or political organization in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic will send its duly elected representative to the Convention, as very important matters for the interest of the cause will be discusssed. Ministers of the Gospel, Protestant and Catholic, in good and regular standing are also invited.

By order of the Executive Committee of the PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY."

Organizations not represented in said convention, which are entitled under terms of the original call, are also requested to send delegates.

REV. W. R. GOBER,
W. G. SWAN,
R. H. MCDONALD,
R. THOMPSON.

GEO. MORRIS, Sec'y.

CAUTION.

Friends of prohibition are earnestly desired to send reliable delegates to this convention. They are reminded that the enemies of prohibition and political action, who boasted of having sold out the former prohibitory convention, and who will desire to make the coming one either a failure or a recruiting office for old rotten whisky parties, will use their utmost strength against the objects of the convention. And real temperance men must be on hand to render treachery abortive. None but prohibitionists have any right to appear in this convention. It is now a contest between the PEOPLE and two organized bands of spoilseekers, the two old parties, both owned, headed and run by the Leag of Freedom. The call for a clean ticket and platform is almost universal. We shall have it, and the chances are good that it will carry the State.

THE GREAT AMERICAN OPPRESSION.

It is not strange that the American people to-day are groaning under the heaviest oppression of their history, and yet endure it with scarcely a protest.—George the III. never thot to burden us as does the liquor Oligarchy of the present. We are sold as a nation to this tyranny, by a tribute of eighty millions to the U. S. Treasury. The rights of the liquor traffic are our wrongs. What are the rights of this gigantic trade purchased? The liquor dealers as a privileged class, have the exclusive rights of their business. All other trades are open. This is farmed out to a stipulated number. It is the largest business of the land. It yields the largest profits. For every dollar it pays as tribute, the nation is taxed at least eight dollars in paying for the outrages, the losses, the laziness and the nuisances which it breeds. Every great city must have regiments of policemen, whose principal business is to stand around the doors of the saloons and groggeries night and day, and see that order is preserved and the peace kept.

Fellow citizens, you allow the tribute of the dealers, but you bear the financial burdens which their trade engenders Such a direct tax upon you from any other source, you would resist to the uttermost. You are in fear of this gigantic oppression. Many of you who are business men, fear to antagonize the system, lest it and its friends shall withdraw patronage from you. You feel the oppression, but have not courage to protest and declare against it. We unhesitatingly pronounce the licensed traffic the greatest financial oppression of our times, and we are led to ask, where is the spirit of "seventy-six?"

Fellow citizens, you are under the domination of this oligarchy politically. The two great parties tremble at its nod. It dictates party methods. It is hard to say which party courts it or fears it the most. Let not the Republican party any longer claim to be a temperance party. Its mask is torn off. It will not, it dare not stand against the oppressor. The air is now tremulous with agitation. A new revolution is at hand. War is declared against the Oligarch. We have no other great political question on hand. Mason and Dixon line is no longer the frontier of battle. There is peace along that border. We have a new fight. We need a new Patrick Henry to sound the warcry, and we need a new Jefferson to write the declaration.

Shame, that the American people sit down so tamely, and demurely and pay the bills of the oppressor, allow his altar fires to burn in all our city corners, look every morning into the morgue, and see its midnight terrors fiercer than the Thugs of India, and yet make no protest, and even plead and vote that the oppressor ride on in purple and scarlet.

Is not the time of a new departure come, and shall we not carry consternation into American politics as we shall arise and hold ourselves steadily to our direct work, in a square issue in the political canvass? Let us show ourselves to be men and freemen.

—Dwight Williams, in Living Issue.

IN OTHER STATES.

Leag of Free Crime, August 28.—"Professor R. B. Welch writes from Topeka that his life is in danger from the liquor men there, because he is United States District-Attorney. He has been prosecuting the violators of the State law. They have within a day or two cut his buggy to pieces, disfigured his horse and threatened his life. He had to call a meeting of the citizens to prevent being mobbed."

These murderers are the same everywhere.

The Chicago Liquor Dealers had a big picnic recently by which they raised thousands of dollars to fight law and temperance; they had a big drunk of course, and the City Government furnished them with a large police force to keep them from committing murder and violence in their amusements.

Dr. A. Carpenter says: "When intoxicating liquors are taken to assist an imperfect digestion, to relieve neuralgic conditions, or to attain an artificial and delusive warmth, the relief is obtained at the expense of a paralyzing action set up in the watchful sentinels of danger. The organic and sensitive nerves, which are danger signals, are put out of gear, and the train goes on heedless of the mischief which is there, hidden from feeling and personal observation. By these means again, diseases arise in the different organs of the body, and life is shortened in a way which is little thought of."

A Congressman, just before the adjournment, said that a bill affecting the maritime commerce of the country would have been passed had not an intoxicated member objected. "He was drunk this afternoon," said he, "but to-morrow, when he is sober, he will not object to my bill, for I happen to know he is in favor of it." The member referred to as being drunk has a national reputation.—Signal.

If ever the Rescue can get authentic intelligence of a Congressman getting drunk at the capital, his name if known will be given in capital letters. We dont suppress Tim Flanagan's name when he gets drunk, and it is much more an imperative duty to expose every Congressman, legislator, judge and officer who is seen and known to be drunk. To conceal their crime is to be a partaker in it.

The Repub. State Convention of Michigan has placed in the platform an open honest plank for the submission of a Constitutional Prohibitory Amendment to the people; its adoption was more applauded than any other of the 13 planks of the platform. But it must be remembered that the Republican party has betrayed the temperance people and all the people of Michigan and sold them out and lied to them for many years, has filled their prisons with the jailbirds of their whisky confederates and built new prisons to accommodate their pupils; they have become pious just the other day, because there is a prohibition ticket of decent, sober, honest men in the field, headed by D. P. Sagendorph, candidate for Governor. The Republicans however seem to have nominated the old stock of political acrobats for State officers.

Bro. Culver reports three good meetings at Reno 22 additions to lodge and a Band of Hope with 51 members; he is probably now in Mono county.

The Leag of Freedom in England recently had posters out quoting the Bishop of Lincoln as denouncing total abstinence as unchristian and impious etc. The Bishop pronounced the thing a falsehood. And then the journals which had commented on it were rebuked, but one of them produced the following extract from one of the Bishops sermons several years ago which was evidently the foundation of the affair.

"But it is a very different thing to invent for ourselves and for others a new vow, such as the total abstinence pledge, which has no warrant from God, but contravenes His Word; and which, therefore, has no claim to grace at His hands, in order that we may keep it, nor for pardon if we break it . . . The total abstinence pledge is a near approach to the ancient heresy of the Manichæans and Encratites, who said that wine was a creature of the Evil One; and thus they made two Creators and two Gods instead of one, and in that respect they were even worse than Deists. . . Others whose consciences are more tender and scrupulous, having taken the pledge, naturally fear to break it; and it sometimes happens that they thus sacrifice their health. . . and perhaps they become a burden and a grief to their friends."

But it is pleasant to know that the Bishop is an advocate and friend of the Ch. of Eng. Temperance Society now. Better a good deal to have been very wrong five years ago and right to-day than to have been nothing and remain so.

The British Medical Journal, commenting upon the report of the committee of Spelthorne Savatorium for the reformation of intemperate women, says: "Formerly, the proportion of the sexes in criminal classes was seven men to one woman; now it is three men to one woman; and this increase is chiefly due to the growth of female intemperance; for the classification of 'drunk' and 'drunk and disorderly,' the proportion is only two to one; and, in Diverpool and London, the women had sometimes exceeded the men. In 1878, 15,357 women were committed for drunkenness. One woman had paid upwards of 200 pounds in fines; and two hundred certainly could not represent the number of times she had been admitted to Clerkenwell."

That is a grand success of the Leag of Fiendom. Happy day when it shall send up 15,357 drunken women a year to jail in San Francisco. What a grand thing it would be for the express wagon trade to cart all those drunks to Limbo. And what an impetus it will give the beer business to get those 15,357 half dollars into their tills when the expressmen have got thru their little job.

Folly:—"Our friends the teetotalers have wonderfully improved their tactics during the past few years. The aggressive denunciations of the old-fashioned temperance lecturer—earnest in aim, though coarse in expression—have in a great measure been abandoned, and the "better way" of adopting substitutes for the attractions of the public-house has been practised, with the result of a reduced drink bill. * * * Here is a field for development on the part of abstainers. Give a thirsty public something cheap and non-alcoholic, and King Alcohol will lose his courtiers. Grumbler."

That is a clipping from a London religious journal. It would be a pleasure to be able to say with truth that the religious press had improved their tactics and abandoned the practice of so frequently admitting to their columns such puling nonsense about temperance as the above. It is illimitably stupid to suppose that any better way has been adopted by teetotalers, or that any enlarged results have come from these substitutes. The "old-fashioned temperance lecturer" and worker, whether he was learned or ignorant, rich or poor, coarse or fine, eloquent or simple, if he was an honest genuine sample has always been God's prophet and priest and the most useful laborer of his day in God's vineyard; his work has produced the mightiest results for the elevation and salvation of humanity that have been accomplished for centuries.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

Coal Oil.—Continental oil per case of 10 gals. $2.25; Starlight oil $2.65; fair burning oil $2.50 to $2.20—good time to lay in winter supply. Order from cash grocery, 519 Post St., S. F., Cal.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the Rescue 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the Rescue will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank. S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S. Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

THIS statement may surprise some people. It was made by Mr. Woodford at Lake Bluff, in his lecture on Liquor and Wages. "In Marseilles a manufacturer one Saturday paid $700 in crisp new bills, which had been secretly marked, to his workmen. Monday afternoon $450 of these identical bills had been deposited in the bank by the saloon men. The workmen, startled by this fact, leagued against the saloons and made a no license town of Marseilles." It is but another version of the workingman's loaf of bread. A slice to the municipality; a more generous cut to the county and State government; a greedy three-fourths of the loaf to the brewer; more than half of the thin piece remaining to the saloon, and a few stray crumbs to the family.—Signal.

THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE IN ENGLAND.—"The report of the Temperance Committee stated that the temperance organizations of Methodism are constantly increasing, and that there are now in Great Britain 2,345 Wesleyan Methodist Bands of Hope, with 225,160 members, and 177 Wesleyan Methodist Temperance Societies, with 10,912 members. Then the Conference laments that the grogshops are open on Sunday there and that nothing has been done to close them. They recommend that on the second Sunday in December, in the Wesleyan churches and Sunday-schools, special reference shall be made to the appalling extent and dire results of British intemperance. If the scarlet fever was killing one person for a hundred that rum kills they would make it a special subject every Sunday. But the dire results to which we are accustomed every day make little impression upon us.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE
FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

THAT V. PLANK.

Ed. Rescue:—The evident attempt by the Republican press to put the Temperance people in a false position, because of their refusal to accept their fifth "plank" on the Sunday law and support a ticket one-half of which at least is known to be radically opposed to temperance reform legislation is clear to every candid man. That this "plank," in and of itself, is unsatisfactory to a large number of honest and intelligent temperance people is evident from the controversy that has already been had in regard to the true meaning of the resolution. I insist now that the interpretation and true intent of that "plank" shall be ascertained by the same rules as were applied by the Republican Press, the clergymen and the temperance people to the fifth plank in the Democratic platform. Whether true or false, we have insisted all through this canvas that the issue raised by the Democratic party and the Leag of Freedom is a great moral, as well as political issue, and it will not do just now to resort to artifice or sophistry to induce the people to accept a plank of doubtful meaning under the hypocritical pretense that it may be interpreted in favor of temperance. In the first place politicians should understand that the temperance people are in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic on Sundays and that no plank in any platform which merely declares in favor of "rest and recreation," is a plank which by any fair implication can be made to mean any effective restriction upon the liquor traffic on Sunday. The whole issue, has not been as to whether we should have a Sunday law or no, but it has been whether we should have a Sunday law which would be operative and effective or no. We have a Sunday law now which has been a dead letter ever since it was enacted and it would remain so forever without further legislation. To declare in favor of "the maintenance of the present Sunday laws or similar laws," means that matters shall remain in statu quo, and the declaration is not made one particle better when to it there is added "providing for the suspension of all unnecessary business." The meaning of the words "unnecessary business" is to be determined from the words "rest and recreation," which are declared to be the objects of the Sunday law. Whatever, therefore secures or tends to secure "rest and recreation" or either of them would be construed to be "necessary business." Pool, billiards, ten-pins, seven-up, whisky poker, or a dance down in a beer dive is recreation to a very large number of persons—the meaning of the word recreation being "diversion, amusement."

But with the mere verbiage of this "plank" I did not intend to take issue. I insist that we shall deal with this plank in the same manner that we did with the Democratic plank.

On the second day of the Republican Convention between 12 and 1 o'clock the Committee on Platform reported. A motion was immediately made that the platform as a whole be adopted. This was not carried; but a motion was made that 1000 copies of the platform be printed, and that the Convention take a recess till 3 o'clock, so that "the members of the Convention could have ample time to consider it." This motion was carried, and the secretary announced that the platform would be printed by 2 o'clock, and each member supplied with a copy. When the Convention met again, after a full hour of consideration, Mr. Williams, of Los Angeles, moved the adoption of the following resolution.

"Resolved:—That the Republican party is opposed to the repeal of the Sunday law and is in favor of the enactment of such laws as will secure its enforcement." Now this was an honest and fair attempt to commit the Republican party to the policy of enforcing the Sunday law. It must be presumed that every man had carefully read that fifth plank, and that when the question was thus fairly pressed every man acted upon full deliberation. That a large number of delegates did not understand the fifth plank meant the enforcement of the Sunday law is shown by the cordial manner in which the resolution of Mr. Williams was received by them. If the Convention had desired to act fairly, courageously, in favor of a "judicious" Sunday law with proper provisions for its enforcement, can any one doubt that a majority would have made haste to remove all doubt on the subject? The resolution of Mr. Williams was defeated however, and now the temperance people are criticised for refusing to accept that very interpretation of the plank which the Convention itself refused to accept or adopt. Mr. Williams in presenting his resolution stated what was obvious then and what has since become objective. He objected "on the ground that the plank was not sufficiently clear. Such a question should be met plainly, positively, earnestly. The section favored similar laws to the present one, which if carried out, would take the law into the courts and keep it there for ten years. What the people wanted who demanded the Sunday law were such changes as would make the present law operative." The gist of all this controversy about the Sunday law has been precisely this—no more no less. The Convention refused to declare in favor of Local Option—refused to declare in favor of submitting the question of Constitutional Prohibition, and I ask any intelligent man disposed to be honest and fair, what substantive, clear, positive declaration in favor of a Sunday law worth the trouble of retaining or enacting he can find in this Republican platform. I am aware of the fact that a "smart" man can explain this plank very satisfactorily, but if the Convention had determined to be frank on this issue a resolution like that offered by Mr. Williams, would have reached the intelligence of the common people, who are honest if not "smart," and saved the "party of progress" from defeat. The great trouble now is with men who lead in politics, that they presume on the ignorance of a class of people, who are their equals in culture, and infinitely superior to them in all those qualities of heart that go to make a man a good citizen.

The Examiner, the leading organ of the Democratic party, is squarely out in favor of a day of "rest and recreation" Here is what it says!

"The necessity of one day of rest in the week has been upheld by all thinking men. The Democracy has insisted upon it and always will. Sunday must be maintained as a day on which every citizen can seek recreation according to the dictates of his own conscience. The Democracy will so maintain it."

This is the position of the Leag of Freedom, and so the Republican Convention has declared. On which platform do the temperance people choose to stand? If there is any Judas in the temperance ranks who has taken a contract to deliver the temperance votes—not to say the Christian votes of the people, to any political party in the country, I wish to be present and take an inventory of the chattels.

G. B.

LEAG OF FREEDOM PLANK.

The following is the text in the plank critisized in the foregoing article. The sweet pill was concocted evidently by the Leag of Freedom delegates and assented to and approved by the delegates of the betrayed temperance organizations.

"Fifth—History and experience unite to prove the necessity of preserving one day in seven as a day of rest from labor. Without legislation on this subject the laboring classes might be compelled to continue in unceasing toil. Therefore, we are in favor of observing Sunday as a day of rest and recreation; and while we expressly disavow the right or the wish to force any class of our citizens to spend the day in any particular manner, we do favor the maintenance of the present Sunday laws, or similar laws, providing for the suspension of all unnecessary business on that day.

Gilroy, Sept. 11.

Well, the great Republican party has spoken, and the question now is "What are we going to do about it?"

While the plank we most needed, local option or submission—is conspicuous by its absence from the platform and the Sunday plank is decidedly weak, the question arises, Can we organize and combine a sufficient number of temperance voters to teach the dominant party a good wholesome lesson or will party devotion silence conscience and lead temperance voters like sheep to the slauter? Being a radical by birth I may be pardoned for saying that I am in favor of a third or temperance party and the sooner we organize the better.

Yours for war, C. W.

That is a letter which does honor to its writer; he has a near relative on one of the best places on the Republican ticket; but that does not make him desirous of selling out the temperance and Sunday issue for four years to the Leag of Freedom, for a mess of family pottage.

Woodland Sept., 11, 1882.

Ed. Rescue:—Much anxious inquiry is being made here, just now as to what the temperance people intend to do, since their claims to recognition were substantially ignored by the Republican Convention. Ever since the Temperance Convention of July 11, those who have been most prominent in the controversy have in their speeches, letters etc., unequivocally and emphatically assured the temperance voters of the State, that in case the Republican party failed to declare in favor of a judicious Sunday law and in favor of Local Option, then in that event the convention of July 11th, should be reconvened and nominations made. I refer here to Babcock, McDonald, Thompson, Winchester and others. Now it is rumored here that we are to have no nominations—in fact that efforts have been made to prevent the calling of that convention—or if called that these pretended friends of temperance will endeavor to prevent any nominations or other political action. Temperance Democrats who abandoned their own party are hardly prepared to accept the weak and meaningless Sunday law resolution of the Republican party and vote that ticket. It has been understood from the very begining that we were to have an open, fair, emphatic declaration in favor of an adequate Sunday law and Local Option. Col. Babcock on several different occasions addressed large audiences here, and was quite clear and emphatic in saying that no party which failed to do both of these things deserved the support of temperance people. Now it is said he is willing to accept the Republican ticket, and abandon the high and honorable position he has held before the people of this State. If these men or any of them go back upon their own declarations, eat their own words, so to speak, they will not soon be forgotten. Let us hear both from them and you.

C.

[They will hear from Col. Babcock and Mr. Winchester in this number of the Rescue. The others can speak for themselves.]

At the weekly meeting of the Congregational ministers of San Francisco on Monday, the Rev. Dr. Cummings opened the discussion on the question of sustaining the Sunday plank of the Republican Platform. He showed that voting the Sabbath a day of recreation was in effect voting it a day of amusement, pleasure-seeking, baseball, cricket, racing, dancing, etc., or any other way which a vitiated taste may impel one to gratify. Can we do this consistently? "Having been a Republican for more than forty years, and labored long and hard to lay the foundation, and then participated in the first organization of the Republican party, and stood by it until the present time, I do not wish to abandon it even temporarily for a slight cause; but when compelled to vote the Holy Sabbath a day of recreation, or refuse to vote a Republican ticket, I cannot long hesitate as to which to choose, or where the path of duty lies. It is not an alternative of our own choosing, it is forced upon us, and the responsibility must rest where it belongs. It is now fast losing its prestige and its power by yielding to the controlling influence of truckling and aspiring demagogues and corrupt men. We cannot commit to it the keeping of our consciences. It needs reforming. It has crowded us from its platform to make room for "recreators" and recreants. It must take the consequences.

As we cannot vote

THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET

Without voting to sweep from our statute books all Sunday laws to protect ourselves, our homes and our churches; at the behest of the Leag of Freedom, alias the liquor dealers, alias the foreign whisky bloats and beer guzzlers; as we cannot vote the Republican ticket without giving unbridled license to Sunday recreators to accomplish a similar acsult, and as we are Amsrican citizens invested with the elective franchise to aid in electing rulers to fill the legislative, judicial and executive departments of our Government; and thereby made to share with others the responsibility of a good or a bad Government; we cannot throw off that responsibility and be guiltless by a voluntary omission of that duty on that day of election; consequently, there remains for us but one course to pursue, and that is to unite with the Temperance organizations, the Home Protectionists, call a State Convention, make our own platform, step upon it, unfurl our banner, and stand by it until the needed reform be accomplished, or the world come to an end. We must vote as we pray. Having prayed daily for more than fifty years. "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is done in heaven." I, for one, do not propose, at this advanced stage in life, to go up to the ballot-box on election day, and vote all those prayers out of heaven, by voting to change God's Holy Sabbath into a day of recreation."

Dr. Beckwith, Rev. E. Kimball and Dr. Williams concurred with the address, the latter saying that the Republican regine promised a worse Sunday than ever.

The Cable Railroad from Montgomery Avenue seems to be almost for the exclusive purpose of hauling people up to the debauchery dens somewhere near the Presidio. Beside the big general drunkery at the far end there are a number of new deadfalls going up to get a share of that custom which is hinted at on the cards "private rooms for families." A family that goes to such places means very often, two people that dont belong to one family. Speaking about these dens that have been built there a citizen said they reminded him of mushrooms that come up thickly and suddenly out of the ground, and if you examine them in 24 hours after, you find them full of crawling vermin; just so with these dens said he, in 24 hours after they are ready for business. To permit such infamous doggeries is infinitely more beastly and criminal than anything that creates such a howl as occurring in Mormondom under Mormon auspices.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AT THE CONCOW CAMP MEETING SEPT. 4th,

Recognizing the importance of the publication and distribution of accurate scientific and statistict information in regard to the nature and effects of intoxicating drinks, and recognizing the great good already accomplished in this direction by Dr. R. H. McDonald of San Francisco, We, the temperance people of the counties of Sutter, Yuba and Butte, unite in this expression of our warmest appreciation of the discriminating zeal and generosity he has shown in the preparation, publication and distribution of temperance pamphlets, circulars and song leaflets throughout the State. And for the favors to this convocation in this respect we extend to him our special thanks.

WHEREAS, The Temperance Convention held in the city of San Francisco on the 11th day of July, adjourned to wait the action of the Republican Convention to be held in the city of Sacramento on the 30th day of August, in the hope, if not in the expectation that the said convention would:

First, Pledge the Republican party to a judicious Sunday law; with proper penalties to secure its observance.—And,

Second, That said convention would pledge itself to enforce all existing laws restricting the sale of intoxicating liquors—particularly the Sunday-law, and secure the passage of such other laws as would sup press the existing criminal conspiracy known under the name of League of Freedom.

Third, To pledge itself to carry into effect that provision of the constitution known as section 11, Art. 11.

Fourth, To pledge itself to favor the submission of the question of Constitutional Prohibition to a vote of the people, as soon as the same could legally be done; and,

WHEREAS, The said Republican Convention has done neither of these things, and has nominated candidates known to be hostile to the temperanue cause, therefore be it

Resolved, That, in our judgment the highest interests of the temperance cause, as well as our own self-respect demand that we should repudiate both the platform and nominations and that the same authority or persons who called the convention of the 11th of July should at once call another convention and make nominations for State officers.

Resolved, That, in case of such nominations being made, we pledge ourselves to vote for such candidates and work for their election.

Resolved, That hereafter we will not affiliate or vote with any party which ignores the vital principles of temperance.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED AT A HOME PRO TECTION MEETING AT MARYSVILLE, SEPT. 6, 1882.

Whereas, The Republican party has failed to declare in favor of the enforcement of a judicious Sunday law and utterly ignored all the essential claims and principles of the temperance people of the State and

Whereas, We believe that these claims and principles are more important to the interest, security and happiness of the people than all other issues presented by the Republican and Democratic parties, therefore be it

Resolved. We repudiate both the nominees and platforms of these political parties and declare in favor of independent nominations upon a platform which shall express the moral and religious convictions and interests of the people of California.

Resolved. That should such nominations be made upon such a platform we pledge to them and it our most hearty and undivided support.

ABOUT THE REPUBLICAN OUTRAGE.

PLYMOUTH, Sept., 4, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—We quote the following from the Record Union: "The proposed local option plank failed to receive any recognition at the hands of the committee on platform and was not brought before the convention. The local optionists who so boldly declared for a local option plank or an independent ticket, will now have an opportunity to show whether their ultimatum was an empty threat. It is the prevailing opinion that they will not make nominations." Yes, and that is the reason that they ignored us; they thought and (judging the future by the past) they had a right to think so, but it is hoped that the temperance people will show them that it was not an empty threat and that they will proceed immediately to put a ticket in the field; it was not enough for them to ignore us but they insult by nominating the president of the wine-growers association and a man who is largely interested in the drunkard making business for governor; a man whom no true temperance man can vote for without stultifying himself; and now that temperance Republicans on all hands say that they had as soon vote for Shaffer, president of the Leag of Fiendom, as Estee, the president of the wine-growers association; they hold up both hands in holy horror and say, why you will burst the republican party. But we hope that every temperance man will vote according to the dictates of his own conscience without regard to who it beats or who it elects; without the temperance vote the republicans cannot win and they know it, and they had fair warning that they could not have that vote unless they acceded to certain things, and now that it is too late, they see their mistake; they flattered themselves that the Sunday law plank would be a panacea for all our demands; the Sunday law is a mere bauble and does not near satisfy the wants of the temperance people and prohibition is the only thing that ever will enforce the Sunday law; we were at the convention two days, there was a strong temperance element there but they did not put forth their efforts in the right direction; there were a large number of delegates there that were temperance men but they seemed to be more anxious to get a ticket that would win and out herod the democracy, on anti-monopoly than to get a temperance plank in the platform; the only real temperance work done was put in by outsiders for Blake and had the professed temperance delegates that voted for Estee voted for Blake he would have been nominated. The convention undertook to carry the temperance vote on one shoulder and the lager whisky vote on the other and are apt to lose both, especially the former and when I say this I think that I simply voice the sentiment of every true temperance man in Amador county, so let us have a temperance State ticket as soon as possible. OLD PUB.

OAKDALE, Sept. 5, 1882.

Considering the unsafe condition of the Republican Platform can we not make a State ticket straight for Prohibition? We can perhaps endorse some of the candidates already nominated, but for heaven's sake let us show the people that we are men, and had rather suffer defeat than surrender principle to a rum-enslaved party, as they proved themselves at Sacramento

Mr. Sanford C. Baker has leased the Oakdale Wheat Grower for one year. F. A. SAWYER.

Glad to hear from Bro. Baker, and wish him every success.

TURLOCK, Sept. 5, 1882.

It seems to me there is urgent necessity for the immediate calling of a Prohibition Convention, through the columns of the RESCUE.

The action of the recent Republican Convention at Sacramento, was not an entire surprise to me. Anyone might have known it would not give us the temperance legislation we desired; the idea was absurd that they would respect our wants merely because we appointed a committee to wait on the Convention. I hope those who favored that move so strongly in the Prohibition Convention, will equally favor the immediate calling of another to nominate an independent temperance ticket. I know of at least 8 voters in Turlock who are in favor of such a move.

Altho it is a late day for such action and the canvass will be necessarily a short one, we can still make it interesting.

Wisconsin on a 19 weeks canvass last year, polled some 16,000 votes and if we do one-fifth as well, we will make ourselves felt, and come out with the satisfaction of voting to maintain our principles.

P. R. MCCABE.

CALLAHAN RANCH, Cal., Sept. 5, 1882.

I would express my sentiment in regard to the Republican Convention by saying that I am disappointed. I was in hopes to still be able to follow and support the Republican party as the leader in true reform and advancement of the people. We have asked bread of the Convention and they have given us a stone—many of the best citizens of this section would welcome a chance to go out of the Democratic and Republican ranks and help elevate the only principles that will keep the ship afloat. An early call for a State Convention (in time to make County nominations) to meet immediately after the Grand Lodge, would be one of the best means of uniting for Law and Order, the Temperance, Christian and conservative element of the State, and if it does not win all it will ask for will be in a condition to hold the balance of power and command the respect of either party at our next election, it is now time to try the strength of right principles at the polls. I think the result will be greater than we think for.

I thought best to give you an idea of the standing in this section in regard to a third party movement and think it will work, if good, able men are put up. Will write you on the condition of the cause in a short time. F. H. LORING.

The cry of not being prepared for prohibition is nonsense. Bro. Loring's section calls for it and it is probably one in which less temperance work has been done than in almost any other. (ED.)

OUR DUTY.

DD. RESCUE:—It is the duty of temperance people, as well as of others, to maintain their principles, and be consistent in their course. In Convention assembled, many temperance leaders recently held out the inducement of their support to the Republican party if the latter adopted a sound Sunday plank and affirmed the right of local option. This Convention virtually said also that they would nominate a ticket, if these wise things were not done. Now, the Republican party has pronounced for a certain kind of unmeaning Sunday law, but they have utterly ignored the whisky question by precept, while by example they furthered the interests of intemperance. Our duty is plain, in the premises: We should keep our word, and preserve our self-respect.

Yours truly, W. G. SWAN.

Healdsburg, Sept. 7, 1882.

THE REPUBLICAN PLATFORM OF KANSAS.

Here it is, the whole of it: an honest manly utterance that any honest Christian Democrat can and will conscienciously endorse in preference to any Democratic whisky favoring platform. This with Gov. St. John at its head, nominated by 289 votes of 368 will secure the largest majority ever made in Kansas. And a similar one for constitutional prohibition with fairly acceptable candidates in this State would have received the greatest majority ever known in California: whereas it is hoped the miserable rigmarole of hypocritical dishwater adopted in Sacramento will bring merited disaster to all but the few respectable, sober, honest, candidates nominated upon it. There is no reason but political rascality and treachery why this State should be in the darkness of heathenism while Kansas is out in the sunlight of a pure civilization.

"WE, the republicans of the State of Kansas in delegate convention assembled, affirming our faith in and adherence to the principles of the Republican party, hereby express confidence in our present national and State administrations, and we pledge ourselves to their support, and announce the following declaration of principles:

Resolved, That we declare ourselves unqualifiedly in favor of the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage, and pledge ourselves to such additional legislation as shall secure the rigid enforcement of the constitutional provisions upon this subject in all parts of the State.

Resolved, That we demand the enactment of such laws as will prevent unjust discrimination by railroad companies and will provide for such freight and passenger tariffs as shall fully protect the interests of the people.

Resolved, That we request the next legislature to submit such an amendment to the constitution of the State as will secure to women the right of suffrage.

Resolved, That we request our delegation to Congress to secure such an amendment to the revenue laws as will prevent the issuing of receipts or stamps to sell intoxicating liquors to any persons other than those authorized so to do under the State laws."

IT is pitiable to notice the driveling imbecility and utter stupidity which has possessed the Democrats in Iowa, Kansas, Indiana, California, Nebraska and many other states, who have been clinging all along to the miserable besotted cry of "free whisky, free crime;" wherever the corruption and misconduct of the Republicans have disgusted the people and given a chance of success to the Democrats, the latter have instantly hoisted their old pirate motto "free whisky, free crime," and so plainly indicated that they intended to be worse than the others, that they have forfeited all claim to any trust or respect. It reminds one of an old story; a man who lived on the West side of a high mountain fretted so angrily and long because the mountain prevented his view of the sunrise, that he set about removing it with a wheelbarrow. His friends after a while, unable to divert him from his purpose, had him confined in a lunatic asylum. After a year or two he was found to be entirely sane and was told that he was at liberty and could return home. "Ah," he replied, "I shall get that mountain wheeled away after all." And the politicians will get the mountain of American virtue and principle and common sense and respect for Sunday all wheeled away—in the sweet far away.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. GREEN B. RAUM Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the experimental Moses of the liquor traffic has been stumping the State of Maine for the Republican party.

PLEASE read with particular attention Neal Dow on Maine on page 746—John Russell's speech. Mrs. Stevens' letter, P. R. McCabe's advice and all the rest of the paper except the new advertisement of Taber, Harker & Co.; dont look at that, it might cost you a $500 bill of goods.

THE REV. Joseph Cook, of Boston, is expected to arrive here on the steamer from China, on the 28th September. One of the best men and purest patriots of his age. California should do itself the honor of giving him a hearty welcome. Such a man is worth forty generations of the political popguns, whom it is the custom to meet with brass bands and adulatory addresses.

FROM all quarters come glad messages commending the third party Convention. It is hoped there will be no weakness there. We don't want any more milk and water experiments or half measures: Nothing in the world but prohibition by Constitutional amendment. After we get the amendment, and the liquor traffic drowned out, then we will give our friends all the help they want to try on crazy crochets—they can do no harm then.

PUNCTUAL. Everybody entitled to receive the RESCUE is informed that the city papers shonld be delivered on Thursday morning; those for Southern California are mailed in time for the 9½ A. M. Thursday train; and the last copy is mailed by 11¼ A. M. every Thursday and there are no mistakes made in mailing. Therefore if any one misses getting the paper regularly and punctually every week please notify this office.

FOOTPRINTS OF THE LEAG OF F. "Hog stealing has become very prevalent on Roberts island lately. During the past year one rancher lost from 250 to 500."—Chronicle. And the Journal of Freedom dont crow a word about it. It looks as if a pupil of the Leag would have to steal at least 2000 hogs before he could get a complimentary notice from the organ of his University. When an Oberlin or Princeton College graduate writes a poem or publishes a new Hebrew Dictionary, there is no end of flourish about it in the College journals. But here is a deserving fellow who patiently and ingeniously gets away with 250 if not 500 stolen grunters, and the Journal of Free etc., dont even mention his name or tell us how many pounds a piece the hogs averaged. Thus true merit goes unrewarded.

The Tulare Times holds, that because the Democratic candidate is assessed for $8,889 and his opponent the Rev. F. H. Wales is only set up at $1,050 the former has eight times more interest to represent his country well than Mr. Wales. That doctrine carried to its logical conclusion would make Leland Stanford and Ch. Crocker by all odds the best men to be Governor and Lieutenant Governor of this State for all time. But then lots of people won't believe it.

THERE IS a probability that the prohibition convention will be well attended by patriotic people; there is a strong desire on the part of all good citizens thruout the State, to get a chance to vote against rum and its political machinery; the old parties have forfeited the affection of all their adherents except the few who hope to harvest the spoils; they are as loyal as ever. But when the good citizenship of this State gets one chance to vote against two rum-selling governors and against the sovereign despotism of the beer hell, they will astonish many a sleeper who now is sweetly dreaming of a downy official couch that will be his in the sweet never.

VERMONT.—Sick of the duplicity and villainy of the Republican party in Vermont the prohibitionists on the 28th August nominated a full State ticket. And they had no Paul Neumans or brandy makers put on them either by the Republicans.

JUNCTION CITY, Oregon.—An envelop is received with two small scraps of paper only. One is the name of this paper cut from the top of a page. The other has some initials, "Junction City" and refer to Hon. W. R. Dunbar in pencil. It is presumed the sender accidentally left out what he most wanted to enclose. Further light is awaited.

MR. ESTEE addressed the Republicans on Thursday evening last at Platts Hall. He was eloquent on the Sunday Law; he is going to have the tired laborer relieved from his wearing toil on Sunday; the clank of machinery is no more to disturb the Sunday RECREATION. And he was particular not to say anything about arresting the clink of the beer glasses, the blaring of the brass bands and the howling blasphemies of the Sunday beer garden. Nor did he say the saloon keepers were all willing to shut up their own dramshops on Sunday as well as the stores and factories. That suits the latitude of Napa among the winemakers, but it would forfeit thousands of votes to say that in San Francisco.

F. H. Loring owns one of the two stores at Callahan's Ranch in Siskiyou Co., Cal. His home is in the midst of a wild mining region where temperance has few followers. Bro. Loring's store is one of the few in northern California that refuses to do business on Sunday. There is a struggling Lodge of Good Templars at Callahan's and no one has done more for that lodge that Bro. Loring. At present the only available place of meeting, except the hill-side, is Bro. Loring's store. When the time for Lodge arrives, Bro. Loring locks his door, hangs curtains at the windows and arranges the floor for the Lodge.

How many men in California will do as much? We wish there were 100,000 such men in California.

PERU.—Every mail that comes from South America tells of shocking barbarities practiced by the Peruvian soldiery and freebooters upon their own countrymen. The stories seem incredible but they are not unlikely. Those who have had good opportunity of seeing Peruvian soldiers and observing their habits, know that if they are not at any time drunk, that fact is due to an empty pocket. Before the war, if a coasting vessel discharged a cargo in any of the outports, it seemed to be the rule that two-thirds of it was rum of some kind. If a troop of donkeys carried general merchandize into the interior the same proportion of it was English ale or gin or brandy. Peru with its three million people has long been a magnificent country for the production of wine and brandy and before the late war which has desolated it, the wretched drunken people had drank, wasted and gambled away in not many years a thousand million dollars derived from their guano, nitrate and minerals and had run their country in debt nearly 300 millions beside.

MARIPOSA. Brothers Marsh and Healy of Buckingham Lodge, called in last week. They claim to belong, in some very important particulars, to a high up banner Lodge. They have been in existence about a year, have about 75 members, many of them formerly hard drinkers for many years, and not one member has left the Lodge or violated his pledge or visits a saloon or place where liquor is sold. That is a very noble record indeed; and it is to be hoped it will so continue. That Lodge should be placed away up at or very near the head of the roll of honor. Let us have another year of the same report and something will have to be done at Grand Lodge session to honor such a rare instance of fidelity. To signalize it so far, their delegate to Grand Lodge will find a Mrs. Hayes picture at the RESCUE office, to hang up in their Hall as a practical sermon on fidelity to principle.

The report that General Wolseley ordered a hundred guns and a bonfire to celebrate the news of Paul Neumann's nomination turns out to be a baseless fabrication. They were only firing at the Egyptians as usual.

CALIFORNIA'S CURSE.

There's a demon in the country, known by names a hundred fold,
He is found in many houses, and he's often bought and sold,
But he's fastening a deathly curse upon this land of gold,
While our cause goes marching on.

Shall we let this monster rule until the State is all confused?
Shall the fruit that God has given be thus tortured and abused?
Shall the product of our vineyards be for death and ruin used,
While our cause goes marching on?

Let us gather all our forces of our trusty Templar Band,
And we'll smite the ugly monster with united heart and hand,
And we'll fight him and pursue him till we drive him from the land,
As our cause goes marching on.

He has gained a hold among us, and his strength increases fast,
He has slaves to do his bidding—he has blown the trumpet blast
And they gather for the conflict, but we'll surely win at last,
For our cause is marching on.

REV. JOHN RUSSELL'S SPEECH.

At the Chicago Convention Rev. John Russell, of Marquette, Mich., an old teacher in the school of temperance reform, was next introduced and spoke on "The Necessity of a Prohibition Party." We need, he said, a political party for the accomplishment of our work, for our work is essentially a political one, having for its end prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants by national legislation. That is essentially a government work, not differing in this respect from other branches of politics. The goal at which the temperance people aim is the complete legal suppression of the traffic in liquor. It was assumed by some that this can be done by a public sentiment brought to bear upon the traffic without political intervention. This idea the speaker thot a most unreasonable one. It was true that was needed, but it was necessary also to have some medium through which this sentiment might work. It was necessary to have a new party, for the work was of a radical kind that must be done by a political party, and could not be done by any of the existing parties. The Republican and Democratic parties, it was true, could repress and license the traffic, but that system was a mischievous one, involving many inconsistencies. The voters in the existing parties will not agree to the prohibition measure. They are divided on the question, and if either party will make prohibition an issue, it will involve the departure from that party of many of its members. Objections are raised to this, and Iowa and Kansas are pointed out as examples of where one party had secured prohibition. The speaker admitted that prohibitory statutes have been secured by one or the other of the parties, but in nearly all of these states they have repealed these statutes under the predominance of the Republican party; and, with rare exceptions, it was always the case that states and parties were changeable on this question. Some of the states executed their prohibitory laws to some extent, but found it impossible to enforce them in the large cities. The reason was that the party in power in the municipal offices were timid to vigorously enforce the law, fearing that the liquor people would leave them and join the other party. So the liquor people held the balance of power and could weigh down the scale on any side which may be favorable to them. This is the reason for the cry that Prohibition does not prohibit. In Kansas, the temperance people asked the republican party to take extreme prohibition ground, thus committing the republican party to prohibition. In doing this they admitted the need of a party of prohibition, conceding the necessity of having prohibition the foundation of a national party, with a prohibition platform and prohibition officers.

The speaker called to mind the tenth resolution of the Philadelphia republican convention, of which Herman Raster was the author, declaring that the party was opposed to all temperance and Sunday laws. This was conclusive proof that the republican party could never be the party of prohibition.

In the second place, the speaker asked if a prohibition party was practicable. He answered in the affirmative; for the reasons that such party would have an issue more worth fighting for than either of the other parties, and because it would proclaim the truth, which both democratic and republican parties shrank from telling,—that the liquor business is subversive of true liberty and in opposition to the principles of political economy. A party which was afraid to give voice to a truth so potent as this deserved to die—and die it would. [Applause.] It was of no use to ask these parties to take up this measure, nobody expecting either of them to embrace it.

The speaker illustrated his faith by narrating the story of abolitionism, which had to make a third party to carry out its ideas, because both the old parties had in them both anti-slavery and slavery men. Abolitionism stood in the same relation to the whig and democratic parties as does prohibition to the republican and democratic parties, and the result must be the same.

It was alleged, said the speaker, by members of the old parties, that the prohibitionists were

A PARTY OF ONE IDEA.

He considered this a compliment, coming from the source whence it did. "They credit us," he said, "with one idea more than they have." But the new party had other ideas—one was woman suffrage, another was the election of national officers, as president, vice president, and senators, by a direct vote of the people. But it had one paramount idea. The republican party had only one idea when it started, and it did splendidly with it. With half the length of life of the republican party, the prohibition party would not leave an unfranchised woman nor a dram-shop in the land. The speaker made a scathing denunciation of the republican party, once "the party of God and morality," with an idea that was divine and moral; but now fallen from its high estate and become the guardian angel of the dram-shops. "I am asked," said he, "if the democratic party would not be a guardian angel of the dram-shops. I answer: Yes, but the democratic party is not in the angel business just now." The idea of a republican party was to have an issue, a mission. The present parties had no living issues. They lived by tearing open the old wounds of twenty years ago, but they were now both dead and should be buried, in order that the national prohibition phenix might rise from their ashes, to obliterate the old lines, wipe out the old prejudices, and unite the country together as brothers, and elevate people to a higher and nobler condition than is possible for them under the existing order of things. Mr. Russell's speech was an eloquent one, full of remarkably pat and apposite illustrations, which kept the audience good humored while it had to swallow what was to many an unpalatable pill. He was interrupted many times by questions, but answered them in so convincing a manner as to fully carry the opinions of his audience with him. —Chicago Times.

AUGUST REPORT. ABSTRACT OF WORK.

Meetings, etc.	Attendance.
31 Days Reading Room	512
23 Noon-Day Meetings	171
5 Wednesday Evening Meetings	68
4 Sunday P. M. Gospel Meetings	110
4 Street Meetings	175
Total.	1036

Through the heated "vacation month" of August, it has been no easy matter to maintain the regular operations of our association, nevertheless, the few workers who have remained in the city have done faithful service, and not suffered the "altar fires" to die out. Every feature of the work has been kept up and the results tho not great as yet, are encouraging. Jail work has been continued, the inmates having been visited every Sabbath and supplied with suitable literature. A growing interest and attention have marked our street services. The Sunday P. M. meetings for Christian workers in the hall have been seasons of great profit. About 4000 pages of religious and temperance literature have been given away during the month. We have had one full meeting of the Board of Directors. Association affairs are on the whole in good condition.

We expected our Gen'l Sec.—S. D. Fuller to assume charge Sept. 8th. but regret to say that circumstances have somewhat delayed his coming. His reception is now definitely fixed for Sept. 29th.,

Respectfully Submitted, ANDREW J. HANSON.

THE idiosyncrasies of the English language are no better illustrated than in the following lines which are sailing round the newspapers:

Remember, though box in the plural makes boxes,
The plural of ox should be oxen, not oxes;
And remember, though fleece in the plural is fleeces,
The plural of goose is not gooses nor geeses;
And remember, though house in the plural is houses,
The plural of mouse should be mice, and not mouses.
Mouse, it is true, in the plural is mice;
But the plural of house should be houses, not hice.
And foot, it is true, in the plural is feet,
But the plural of root should be roots, not reet.

TO ACTING VICE TEMPLARS.

The time is approaching for another Grand Lodge Session and I desire a word of appeal to my Sister Vice Templars in behalf of our official Organ the RESCUE. It is well known that each acting Vice Templar is the appointed agent of her lodge for the RESCUE and now at the close of the Grand Lodge will you not, dear Sisters, make a renewed effort to increase its circulation, with earnest effort on the part of each Vice Templar three thousaed new subscribers might easily be obtained. One of the chief misfortunes with which we have to contend is the indifference of honest people to our cause. To arouse our indifferent friends we must ask subscriptions.

Usually men and women are good natured if approached in a proper spirit, and while they will assure you they take so many papers they will end by subscribing for the RESCUE not only to oblige you but because the paper is deserving and the price a trifle.

In our canvas of the city Sister Richardson made count of those who were brusque and disagreable and the number who were in the least rude, was so absurdly small that it was not worthy of mention; sufficient to say three of that number were under the influence of drink and a few more were directly interested in the traffic; you will remember we obtained seven hundred subscribers and we were most kindly and considerately treated on our mission of love; many good words come back to us, showing the temperance seed sown. Said one discouraged wife of a drunkard, the RESCUE "is my rainbow of hope" oh thanks for your kindness in obaining my husbands subscription I would never have dared to ask him. In his sober moments he reads the paper and I trust to the seed sown for a harvest. A gentleman who subscribed for sixteen copies said "I have boys. I desire to see the traffic suppressed and to circulate the paper, I consider it a good movement for the future, and so the RESCUE was sent to homes where good results might be hoped from its visits.

Dear Sisters, the State we love, is wine cursed. The barbarous and imported art of beer drinking is fast sinking our Cal. homes into immorality, vice and crime.

The twenty thousand boy drunkards in cities and towns speak to the heart of mothers, wives, and daughters to "save the boy."

Every home into which our paper enters is being blessed by enlightenment and education, on this question of growing importance.

Think of the earnest work for six years of the women of Iowa in steadfastly sowing temperance seed, and their glorious harvest of victory.

The measure of our sincerity in this temperance work is the amount of sacrifice and effort we will hazard in its defense.

They who rely on the future of their cause, and who believe they can conquer will succeed. Dont think you can fail, and you will not fail. The effort to solicit subscriptions may be unpleasant, but pain is superficial. After the first brave trial sacred courage will bear you company and faith in a beneficient Power will insure your victory.

Think of the great missionary power of the Press. A speech arouses momentary enthusiasm, our paper comes like a messenger of wisdom into the calm precincts of the home life there, to quietly engraft its truths fifty-two times in the year.

Society to-day is foolishly weak in its fondness for wine, and so the disgusting vice of effete foreign civilization threatens despair and death to our young pure and high republic. Good Templars indeed are a standing army guarding the very threshold of our homes. Ours is a high responsibility. Ours the work of formation as well as reformation.

Dear Sister Vice Templars, I appeal to you in this work of temperance seed sowing. We may not see the harvest, but under the bright sunshine of Cal. skies will the sheaves be garnered, and the work means so much more than we think it means; a complete revolution of the weak vices and silly traditions of a foreign past; it means an incoming of a purer civilization. It means uprooting of the ruinous social drinking customs.

There never was a better time than now, a more golden opportunity. There never was a greater danger than the present. We who have seen the wrecks in our fairest homes, know where the danger lies.

Upon us as Vice Templars devolves a sacred trust. Shall the end for which we work be attained?

By our own undivided effort and the upbuilding of sober, virtuous California homes shall our State as a model of purity, virtue and sobriety become dear to history. E. P. STEVENS, G. W. V. T. of Cal.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

WOMEN'S TEMPERANCE UNION.

The Women's Christian Temperance Union met at the parlors of the First Congregational Church, Oakland, Thursday morning. Mrs. P. D. Browne, the President, presiding. It was resolved to hold the next annual meeting in San Francisco. Reports were read from the branch organizations in Alameda, Oakland, Grass Valley, San Jose and San Francisco. After a recess of one hour, at noon, the meeting reconvened, and the children of the kindergarten marched into the room, headed by their teacher, singing a temperance song. Interesting papers were read by Mrs. Dr. Buckle and Mrs. Varney upon the subject of temperance and the immense taxation caused by the liquor traffic. Mrs. Field of San Jose read a paper upon the influence of the press on temperance, and was followed by Miss Katie Van Arsdale, who sang a temperance song. Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Sanford made remarks upon the work of temperance among children, and was followed by Mrs. Griswold and Mrs. Sadler with papers upon the methods of making home attractive for boys and young men. The following were elected officers for the ensuing term: President, Mrs. Dr. E. H. Gray; First Vice-President, Mrs. P. D. Browne; Secretary, Mrs. M. E. Congdon; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. H. H. Havens; Treasurer, Mrs. Charles Chamberlain; Auditor, Mrs. Thomas Varney. The Convention then adjourned sine die.—Chronicle.

RICHARD T. BOOTH.

This temperance revivalist has been at work in England two years with surprising results. In the cities and towns he has visited, more than 900,000 people have adopted the blue ribbon; since Sep. last a separate account has been kept of new abstainers of whom 240,000 have been received. In Leicester he pledged 11,000 new recruits in 3 weeks and they have since increased to 52,000—including probably older abstainers. There 3 of the largest breweries have failed; two with liabilities of $250,000 and $200,000. In Bristol Mr. Booth has 30,000 converts, Stockport has 30,000 abstainers in a population of 60,000 and the revival here has been only since February of this year: At a mass meeting at Birmingham 50,000 people not previously abstainers signed the pledge and are at work for temperance. At Newcastle it is estimated 200,000 took part in the rejoicings at a temperance festival.

These reports are from the program of a temperance festival at Leeds August 12.

SET THE DRINK ON FIRE.

No. 52.

The traveler, De Vaillant, had a monkey named "Kees" whom he had taught to drink brandy. The poor abused beast sat at the table with his taller brethren, whom he did his best to imitate; while they took theirs in glasses he had his in a plate, but he had learned to like it as well as they, and he fairly licked his lips for it in advance. His master knew there was fire in the stuff; Kees did not—he drank in confiding innocence. "What other men did, he could do." But one day the fire demon was brought to light literally. Just as Kees was about to seize the drink that had been assigned him, his master dropped a lighted paper into it and the brandy blazed. Kees screamed and chattered, and ran away to his bed. Fear had taken such complete possession of him that he could never be prevailed upon to taste the liquor again.

Now there are a great many men as ignorant of the real nature of alcoholic drinks as poor Kees. They see others drinking, and they are as much bent on imitation as the monkey. Moreover, whey they drink a little it makes them feel good, and then are persuaded that it does them good. They can see the fire in other people's cups, in the cup of the excessive drinker, but that does not frighten them. They merely say that the other has drank too much, and they will never do that. With all our temperance work, our scathing of the man that sells, and our scorching of the man that gets drunk and abuses his family, and wastes his time and his property, we seldom succeed in setting fire to the cup of the moderate drinker, and so he goes on until he slips into the ranks of the drunkard and gets burned and charred till there is hardly a semblance of the original man left, and he is rarely fortunate if he escapes the everlasting burnings.

What can we do about it? Why, simply show the man the alcohol there is in his cup, whatever the alcoholic liquor be that he uses, and set fire to it. If the man drinks beer, show him what beer is, and how it is made, and the alcohol there is in it, and what the alcohol will do to him if he takes it. Better still, take a community, and there are communities that drink beer plentifully, and discredit the drink in their eyes. Instead of begining with the saloon-keepers because they are giving the people a drink which the latter want, get the people to understand the drink, and hate it, and fight it.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

The largest, most intelligent, most enthusiastic, most determined national temperance convention ever held in this country was held last week in Farwell hall, Chicago. About 400 delegates, representing nearly every state in the union and nearly every nationality that finds a home on American soil, were present. The proceedings were harmonious. For the first time in the history of the temperance reform, radicalism and conservatism have met and shaken hands good humoredly. There was a commendable disposition on the part of all, a very few extremists alone excepted, to organize on some common platform.

The platform adopted contains 11 planks, with every one of which we are in hearty accord. We believe that the liquor traffic is a monstrous crime and ought to be prohibited, and that every law which in any way recognizes this crime as legitimate, ought to be considered as infamous, and at once repealed. Around these principles the loyal temperance people of this nation will rally with a zeal and enthusiasm which knows no measure.

The suffrage plank elicited a very lively discussion. There was no difference of opinion in regard to the merits of the case. We doubt if there was a man or woman in the convention who would not hold up both hands to give the ballot to woman if occasion offered. While every member of the convention strongly favored the ballot for woman, not one was disposed to ask for the ballot for woman as a temperance measure. The convention did not declare in favor of the ballot for woman on questions relating to the legalizing of the liquor traffic only. There was not a word of this kind of nonsense in the convention, so far as we heard. The convention declared in favor of the civil and political equality and enfranchisement of woman. In the estimation of the Chicago convention the intelligent women of this country ought to be made politically equal to the villains who are running the saloons and debauching the sons and daughters of the women. With this sentiment The Lever is in the heartiest accord. The only difference of opinion in regard to the suffrage plank was a difference which related wholly to the methods by which the suffrage principle is to be made a part of the constitution of the state and nation. In states where the suffrage movement will in any way embarrass the temperance question, it is to be left out until after the temperance question has been carried to a successful issue.—Lever

HEARTRENDING BUT TRUE.

The following is an extract from one of the lectures of J. J. Talbot, who died lately at Elkhart, Indiana, from the effects of a drunken debauch:

"But now the struggle is over, I can survey the field and measure the losses. I had position, high and holy. The demon tore from around me the robes of my sacred office, and sent me forth churchless and godless, a very hissing and by word among men. Afterward I had business large and lucrative, and my voice in large courts was heard pleading for justice, mercy, and the right. But the dust gathered on my open books, and no footfall crossed the threshold of the drunkard's office. I had moneys ample for all necessities, but they took wing and went to feed the coffers of the devils which possessed me. I had a home adorned with all that wealth and the most exquisite taste could do. The devil crossed its threshold, and the light faded from its chambers; the fire went out on the holiest of altars, and, leading me from its portals, despair walked forth with me, and sorrow and anguish lingered within. I had children, beautiful, to me, at least, as a dream of the morning, and they had so entwined themselves around their father's heart, that no matter where it might wander, ever it came back to them on the bright wings of a father's undying love. The destroyer took their hands in his and led them away. I had a wife whose charms of mind and person were such that to see her was to remember, and to know her was to love. For thirteen years we walked the rugged path of life together, rejoicing in its sunshine and sorrowing in its shade. The infernal monster would not spare me even this. I had a mother who for long years had not left her chair, a victim of suffering and disease, and her choicest delight was in reflecting that the lessons which she had taught at her knee had taken root in the heart of her youngest born, and that he was useful to his fellows and an honor to her who bore him. But the thunder-bolt reached even there, and there it did its most cruel work. Other days may cure all but this. Ah me! never a word of reproval from her lips; only a tender caress, only a shadow of a great unspoken grief gathering over the dear old face; only a trembling hand laid more lovingly on my hand; only a closer clinging to the cross; only a piteous appeal to heaven if her cup at last were not full. And while her boy raged in his wild delirium two thousand miles away, the pitying angels pushed the golden gates ajar and the mother of the drunkard entered into rest. And thus I stand, a clergyman without a church, a barrister without brief or business, a father without a child, a husband without a wife, a son without a parent, a man with scarcely a friend, a soul without hope—all swallowed up in the maelstrom of drink."

GOVERNOR ST. JOHN FOR PRESIDENT.

We are glad to see the favorable reception, in many quarters, of our suggestion of Governor St. John, of Kansas, for next President. He is, we believe, a Christian, a tetotaller, a hard worker, a statesman, and a thoroughly honest man, and what better qualifications can any man have? He has also shown his ability and pluck by rising from obscure poverty to his present high position. It may be said that he is not prominent enough in politics, and has not filled a sufficient number of high offices to be proposed for President; but what prominence had Polk or Pierce or Hayes, or even our grand Presidents Lincoln and Garfield, before they were nominated and elected? The fact is, the men who have been prominent in political life in Washington are just, for the most part, the very men we do not want for President. It may be said that Hayes's claim to the presidency was his election for three terms as Governor of the great State of Ohio, but it may be that St. John will have a similar distinction after next Fall's election. Certainly he has been elected twice for the great State of Kansas, and has nobly filled the office through the trying times both of the negro exodus and the Constitutional Amendment campaign. He is unquestionably a good man for the office, and where in the whole present generation of public men can we find a better?

It is unnecessary to add that the Witness has no interests to serve but those of morality and the people. A paper reaching 400,000 intelligent readers weekly, possesses a power that no public office, however exalted, could give. We have no ambition to gratify or interests to serve, except to conduct, with Divine aid, this great engine of influence and power in the best manner for the service of God and the public. —N. Y. Witness.

THE Chronicle rejoices that a clergyman of this State who was engaged to marry a woman and married another without consent or release from his first love, has been found guilty of conduct unbecoming his profession. That journal rejoices in the result, as "one convicted of duplicity, untruthfulness and lack of good faith, has no right to stand in a pulpit." The RESCUE lost a subscriber last week and has felt rather dull over it, but is now entirely sustained and comforted under the affliction, seeing this new instance of the Chronicle's faithful guardianship over the purity of the pulpit. The culprit if suspended from his position in the pulpit, as he should be, if the evidence was genuine, will clearly see that he has mistaken his vocation and should at once hunt up a position on the daily city press, where there is no annoyance from vexatious and narrow moral corsets. Failing there, Congress and the Republican ticket remain as a last resort for the display of the qualities unfitting for the pulpit.

PROCEEDINGS EXECUTIVE CNMMITTEE GRAND LODGE I. O. G. T. CALIFORNIA.

LICK HOUSE, San Francisco, Sept., 8,1882.

Pursuant to the call of the G. W. C. T. a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the Grand Lodge was convened at 8 o'clock P: M.

There were present: Robert Thompson, G. W. C. T; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, G. W. V. T., I. S. Halsey, G. W. T., Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S.

Absent Will D. Gould, P. G. W. C. T., Henry S. Graves G. W. C.

The minutes of the previous meeting held July 31st were read and approved.

In the matter of the granting of a charter to certain applicants for the institution of a new Lodge at El Monte, Los Angeles Co. the following formal protest was presented and filed.

At a meeting of the District Lodge I. O. G. T. of Los Angeles oounty, Aug., 16. 1882, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted.

I. Resolved: That this District Lodge tender its congratulations and thanks to El Monte Lodge, No. 258 for being the first to enforce the Sunday law and the first to own the Lodge Hall, and we pledge them our hearty support in their combat with intemperance.

II. Resolved: That the best interests of our Order and cause forbid the institution of a second Lodge at El Monte, and we earnestly protest against the action of the Executive Committee granting a charter therefor under any circumstances and especially to an organization that is opposed to enforcement of the Sunday law and the present Lodge existing there.

III. Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our G. W. S. with the request that he obtain a revocation of the action of the Executive Committee in the matter of granting charter for second Lodge at El Monte.

A. O. DAMAN, Dist. Sect.

WILL D. GOULD, District Deputy.

The G. W. S. reported that immediately after the last meeting of the Executive Committee he had communicated with District Deputy Gould, relative to the organization of the new Lodge at El Monte, and that he had expressed his willingness to institute the Lodge. Whereupon a communication was addressed to the charter applicants, through E. C. Miles their President, under date of August 8th, announcing the readiness of the District Deputy to institute and requesting a remittance of the amount of the charter fee to complete the application. That no reply had been received to the official communication although four weeks had elapsed, until since the filing of the protest of the District Lodge, and that the charter fee had not yet been received.

After further consideration of the matter, it was decided to revoke the previous action of the Executive Committee in granting a charter to certain applicants for a new Lodge in El Monte and their petition was denied.

The G. W. S. reported having opposed the following by laws since last meeting.

AMENDMENT TO BY LAWS APPROVED.

Aug. 11, Mokelumne Lodge 348 allowing all members to vote upon all questions irrespective of age. Requiring one half the amount of the initiation fee to accompany each proposition, to be returned in case of rejection or forfeited to the Lodge if the applicant after election fails to appear for initiation within four weeks.

Aug. 16, Clipper Gap Lodge No. 154 fixing the quarterly dues of females at 25 cents per quarter.

21, Lodi Lodge No. 189 requiring a deposit of the initiation to be made with each proposition for membership etc.

Aug. 31, Soulsbyville Lodge No. 341 fixing dispensation fees for initiation of females at 25 cents.

Aug. 31, Burneyville Lodge No. 503 amending "Order of business" so that Good of the Order follows immediately after initiation.

The G. W. S. reported having secured Laurel Hall No. 32 OFarrell street, Shiels building, for the Sessions of the Grand Lodge, and established head quarters at the Baldwin Hotel, which had agreed to entertain officers, representatives and visitors to the Grand Lodge at $2.50 per day.

Also that he had been unable to obtain satisfactory bids for the printing of the journal of proceedings etc., in San Francisco, wherefore arrangements had been made for the printing of reports etc., as usual, and that a daily printed journal would be issued during the sessions in San Francisco.

Upon motion the action of the G. W. S. was approved in each particular.

Upon motion the G. W. S. was requested to prepare and present to the Grand Lodge, a complete list with the accompanying facts of admission, discharge etc., of all the children who have been inmates of the Good Templars Home for Orphans from its first opening to date.

No further business appearing at 10-30 P. M. the Committee adjourned.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

Can a lodge ballot for more than one candidate at the same time? Yes. If enough black balls appear to reject one, then the lodge must proceed to ballot for each separately.

Can one who has been a member of a lodge and has taken the degrees, but has lost standing in the order, take the degrees as well as be initiated by merely taking the obligation? He can.

Who calls the Roll of Officers on opening the lodge? The W. F. S. if present, and if not the W. S.

Has the Executive Committee of the District Lodge the power to levy a per capita tax on the Subordinate Lodges? No. That must be done by the action of the District Lodge itself.

Has a lodge the right to rent their hall on their regular lodge night, so to hold lodge meetings at irregular intervals, when their hall happens not to be rented? No. Such a proceeding would soon destroy the lodge.

What is the true construction of the "two-thirds vote" in the latter part of Section one, Art XI, Subordinate Lodge Constitution, as found in the clause, "and so continue until some order of punishment is agreed to by a two-thirds vote?" It means two-thirds of the members present.

Would it be a violation of our rules for a Good Templar to engage in raising grapes for sale to a winery? Yes.

If a delegate to the Grand Lodge resigns, can the lodge fill the vacancy? Yes.

Can a member who has violated Art. II of the Samples and Catalogues, with 800 Illustrations, Free on Application. WEINSTOCK & LUBIN, Sacramento, Cal.

Constitution, be re-obligated in any other than his own lodge? Yes, on request of his own lodge.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

C. N. GOULDING.

Sickness prevented my filling the appointments in Sonoma county. I had written Sister Winder at Geyserville, and Bro. Clark at Cloverdale that I would certainly be with them on the 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th; the doctor, however, quietly "vetoed" the trip and I am still waiting. Trust our friends will accept the will for the deed. From present appearances I shall not be able to do much before the meeting of the Grand Lodge.

San Francisco, Sept. 19, 1882.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

Placer Co. D. L. will convene at the M. E. Church, in Auburn, Friday, Sept. 22, at 10 A. M. Open meeting at night, and if practicable a session on the 23d. Our R. W. G. T. expects to be present, and we look for an interesting time. Let every Lodge be fully represented. Let us devote this time in devising something for the practical good of our Order and mankind. Come early and prepared to remain both days. Geo. D. Kellogg, D. D.

Tuolumne Co. D. L., at Sonora, Saturday, Sept. 23, at 10½ A. M. Election of officers and other important matters. Open meeting. State lecturer expected. J. L. Coles, L. D.

Contra Costa D. L. meets at Nortonville, Saturday, Sept. 23, at 11 A. M. Grand Lecturer to be present.

W. H. Tubbs, S. D.

Sonoma Co. D. L. Annual Session meets at Two Rock, Friday, 10 A. M., Sept. 29th. Full attendance requested. Public meeting in the evening. Delegates will be entertained over night. H ward Andrews, Sec'y.

Santa Clara D. L. will meet in its first annual session at Mountain View, Friday and Saturday, Sept. 29 and 30, at 10 o'clock A. M. A full attendance is desired.

Chas. W. Pedlar, D. D.

Santa Barbara Co. D L. will hold its Thirteenth Session at Los Alamos, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 25 and 26. All Lodges expected to be represented. All members of the Order cordially invited, especially those of San Luis Obispo Co. Good speakers and good entertainment guaranteed.

Jno. J. Steele, D. Sec.

CALAVERAS D. L.

The annual session of the D. L. was held at San Andreas Sept. 2nd. Delegates and reports were presented from the nine following lodges, No. 105, 179, 231, 343, 345, 348, 361, 407, and 478, aggregating 282 members. Four lodges not reported as follows: Nos. 212, 121, 389, and 312. Membership not known.

Value of property (including cash in treasury) of the nine lodges that reported $1776.55. There are 10 Bands of Hope in the county, with a membership of 365.

The following brothers and sisters were choosen as officers for the ensuing year. John Sinclair, D. D. Creighton Duffy, D. S. Mrs. E. Davies, D. V. T. Miss Ida Frasier, D. M.

The attendance was small—a number of the active workers being out of the county. The next session will be held Nov. at Murphys, with No. 361 when it is expected every lodge in the county will be represented, and that a G. L. will be present to help wake us up.

Yours Fraternally,

Creighton Duffy, D. S.

Angeles county, Sep., 1882.

Tehama Co. Dist. Lodge met at Red Bluff Sept. 8th, 1882, with very liberal attendance five lodges being represented as follows: Red Bluff, 19 delegates, Paskenta 5 Paradise 3 Henleyville 4, Ivy, (colored) 3, representing 357 membera in good standing Elkhorn, Hercules and Tehama lodges not represented and no credentials filed with the D. Sec. These lodges probably number 85 more members making a total membership of 442 members. The Band of Hope of Red Bluff was reported as not having met for several weeks on account of extremely hot weather, but there will be an effort made to revive the work with the children in a short time. A County Central Committee was appointed to arrange a Temperance county ticket for the coming election, said Committee to meet at Red Bluff Saturday Sept. 16th at 1-30 P. M. for general work thruout the county and legislative district. We are anxiously awaiting news from the Bay City before legislative action. As per telegram of 7th inst., nothing short of an efficient Sunday law and a prohibition amendment will satisfy us. I am happy to acknowledge the presence of the delegation from Ivy (colored) Lodge and also of Sister Geiger from Samaritan Lodge of Chico. May their presence continue to be greeted with applause and their remarks never be forgotten. Next Session in Red Bluff Friday December 1st A. D. 1882 at 10 o'clock A. M.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE OF CALIFORNIA.

The defiant resistance to law by the liquor dealers of this State, their attempted aggressions for the destruction of our most sacred laws and highest interests, together the subserviency of the Democratic and Republican parties to those law-breaking and law-defying liquorites, have forced upon us an issue of the greatest importance to the State, which should, yea, which must be met with determined courage and intense devotion to the best and highest interests of the people.

This great issue transcends in importance every other before the people. It is really the temperance question in which the Sunday law accidentally and incidentally appears. The people, as a whole, are earnestly and emphatically in favor of the Sabbath Rest-day. The liquor dealers want, for themselves alone, the repeal of the Sunday law, that they may have unlimited opportunity and uncontrolled power to sell liquor and destroy the people. The liquor dealers desire the Sunday law enforced for all but themselves, that all others may have this special day to worship at their shrine and fill their coffers.

Hence the great question forced upon us by the saloonists is not principally the Sunday law, but the Temperance question, and this we are now determined fully and energetically to meet. The Democratic party, at the dictation of an organized league of conspirators, has declared in favor of the repeal of the Sunday law.

The Republican party has a so-called Sunday law plank, couched in the exact words, "rest and recreation," used by John W. Shaeffer, of the so-called League of Freedom. The plank proposes recreation. That means and implies low theatres, picnics, processions, brass bands, beer gardens, etc., with the accompaniments of unlimited larger and whisky.

Before the Republican committee, Judge Tyler introduced and urged a resolution, which amongst other things, prohibited "noisy and barbarous amusements on the Sabbath," but it was rejected.

A resolution was offered to the convention, "that the Republican party is opposed to the repeal of the Sunday law, and in favor of the enactment of such laws as will secure its enforcement." The convention immediately rejected this, thus showing beyond all question, that they did not desire either the enforcement of a Sunday law, or a law which would prohibit "noisy and barbarous amusements."

The so-called Republican Sunday law plank is, and evidently was intended to be a snare and delusion. The Democrats only ask for the repeal of the Sunday laws, the Republican party votes Sunday a day of recreation. They thus propose to desecrate the Sabbath in any manner that whisky-lovers and whisky-sellers desire.

It is absolutely impossible for any Christian or temperance man to consistently vote a ticket which dedicates our Sabbath Rest Day, to recreation and the saloon. To vote such a degradation and prostitution of our Sacred Rest-day, would be a crime against ourselves, our principles, and the general good morals of the community.

We, therefore are compelled to take the course we now do, to give the voters of this State an opportunity to preserve this Rest-day, and express themselves by vote in regard to the discontinuance of the licensed liquor traffic. We propose to give the voters of our State an opportunity to vote for upright, honest, moral, clean men, unpolluted by an appetite for intoxicating drinks, and pledged to work for the best and highest interests of this State and people.

The Prohibition convention assembles in San Francisco, on September 28th, and will doubtless meet all necessary requirements for any other issues that need attention in the interests of the people. M. C. Winchester.

San Francisco, Sept. 14, 1882. P. O. Box 2237.

The C. C. Advocate warns us that the nomination of a third party ticket of temperance men will ensure the success of the Democrats. If the advocates of the policy of electing the president of a drunkard-makers association for governor of Cal. are really afraid of the success of the Democrats, they can avert all danger of it by voting the third party decent ticket, in preference to either of the Antichrist and Free-whisky tickets. The temperance party will offer every inducement to every Christian, temperance, virtuous citizen to cast his ballot; there is not a single objection to it. The old parties have vied with each other in snubbing and affronting every Christian, temperance, virtuous citizen and bidding for the votes of the rum fiends and their dupes. If Stoneman & Co. are elected their success will be due to the respectable voters who are willing to sell the lives and souls of 3,000 of our citizens every year, to the drunkard-makers, are willing to throw overboard the American sabbath and their religious and temperance principles—all for the sake of electing a champion of whisky and Antichrist, with a Republidan tag hooked to his coat-tail—a tag as venerable and valuable to honest people as a stuffed last years toadskin.

The Pacific Christian Advocate says:

In regard to the matter of prohibitory law, "it is the question of the hour in this State, and will not be permitted to be put aside for any other subject. * * * It is decreed that party and partisanship shall no longer stand in the way of the protection of our homes from this destruction.

The Pacific Methodist says on the political issue:

So far as we can see there is little or no difference between the two great parties as to their policy of government. In this state they are both vehemently "anti-monopoly" and "anti-Chinese." If the men on the two tickets are honest men, then there is no choice between them so far as these issues are concerned. But the thing which is arousing fear in the minds of thinking men is the insolence of liquor manufacturers and liquor dealers who resent any and every regulation made in the interests of society which seems at all in the way of their traffic. They defy law, terrorize over parties, bribe voters, jurors and witnesses, and seek to punish with political death any man who advocates any measure of restraint. There is no other kind of business which has so persistently dictated to political parties, and no other lawful business has so constantly violated and insolently defied the laws. They are the men who have forced this Sunday law issue into its present prominence. They forced the Democratic convention to trade the church for the beer hall. And the Republican convention, though well aware of the design of these men in advance, have been entrapped into a milk and water assertion of independence.

We have been taunted with the absence of good men from conventions and primaries. Well, in the present state of affairs good men stand a hard show at such places. If they do go, they must go with their pockets full of brass-knuckles, slung shots and six shooters, or they are not much respected. We candidly confess we are in a dreadful dilemma as to our politics. But one thing is certain—we will try and vote as we pray.

THE DIME COLLECTION.

Why the Committee of the R. W. G. L. found it necessary to change the name and purpose of the National Thanksgiving Dime Collection for temperance and make it a Good Templars collection on the first week in October is only known to themselves. It would have perhaps been better to have let it remain as it was planned six years ago but it is perhaps fortunate that the Committee did not entirely render it inoperative, as Committees of that body have commonly done with anything they have handled.

The (Thanksgiving) Dime Collection was launched with a strong assurance that with a hearty co-operation a fund could be raised to carry on a national work for prohibition amounting to $20,000 or $100,000 just as diligence should be used in putting the method into practice. With only a few weeks notice and a few circulars to the Lodges of California $600 was contributed by them, thus giving promise of the correctness of the anticipations formed as to its success.

For three years following nothing was done to follow up the enterprise; but now the experiment is under trial again and it is the duty of all friends of temperance to try to make it a success; whether pleased with the change or not, the dime collection may be made of immense utility to the cause. It costs nobody anything appreciable, but the dimes of everybody make millions, and if this thing were worked up zealously and judiciously we could raise a larger sum than the liquor sellers could bring to bear against us.

The first week in October is a particularly unfortunate time for this State, being our Grand Lodge week, but let us all try to make the collection of California far ahead of that of any other State as usual. Our example will stimulate others and perhaps if we should do little or nothing, other States will continue to do nothing.

CONCERNING TEMPERANCE BOOKS IN SCHOOL LIBRARIES.

At the recent Teachers Institute held at Santa Rosa, James Faulkner, one of the candidates for the office of School Superintendent, introduced a resolution that the teachers of this county reccommend that at least ten dollars of each district library money be expended annually for the purchase of books that are exclusively of a temperance character. The resolution was referred to a stated committee the majority of whom sat down upon the resolution. The Committee on resolutions well knew that the majority of the teachers, and we believe the great majority of the patrons of the schools, were in favor of the resolution, but the committee, it seems, thought that this year, the resolution was a political question and should not be discussed before the Institute.

Prof. C. S. Smyth, the present Superintendent, when in a strictly temperance district, recommends that even fifteen dollars be expended for temperance books, but he is not willing to come out and advocate temperance literature to any extent. The temperance people should and will support James Faulkner for Superintendent. He has been a faithful worker of the Order for years, has recently borne the entire expense of taking a boy to the Good Templars Home at Vallejo and his whole influence is in favor of the right.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

DR. SNOWDEN'S PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN!

"Go work."
When?
"To-day."
Where?
"In my vineyard.
What vineyard?
"In the heart, the family, the Sunday School, the church, the world, everywhere." "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields for they are white already to harvest. The most valuable thing on earth is the human soul. The noblest work is that of saving it. The time for accomplishing it is brief indeed, and we should improve each golden moment as it passes by. If we would have gold we must work for it; if precious stones and costly diamonds, we must grind and polish them; so if we would properly train the children and have them grow up lovely in manners and symmetrical in character, to become noble men and women, "able to stand against the wiles of the devil," we must see well to it that they "put on the whole armor of God." And "take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God"—and be unceasing in our labor of love, to thus mould them.

"LIVE TO-DAY,"

Was the advice of Mr. Wesley to Sophia Cook. This pointed address greatly encouraged her to work with increased zeal for the Master. Soon after she met Robert Raikes and said to him: "Let us teach the children to read and take them to church." It struck him favorably, and led to the organization of the Sunday School, and the adoption, in time, of the international lessons which are doing more for the spiritual wants of the children than any other agency known among men.

THE SABBATH DAY.

We are commanded to "Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy." If the sacredness of the Sabbath is destroyed, the life of the nation will be imperiled, and the church, as a visible organization among men, cease to exist. Should we happily live to see the day when the Sabbath is universally observed, and its sacred duties and privileges delighted in, then the horrible plagues of intemperance, lust and crime, which are undermining society, and destroying millions of our race, would be blotted out, and a day of universal joy and peace reign instead. To the laboring classes the Sabbath is an unmixed blessing; it replenishes what the six days' labor has exhausted, and supplies strength for the coming week's toil. On that day the farmer quits his plow, the merchant his store, the blacksmith his anvil, the children the labor and confinement of the factory, the miner emerges from the bowels of the earth into the brightness and glory of the hallowed day, and the toilers in every department of life's busy scenes, rest their weary limbs, drink in the invigorating air, commune with nature and nature's God, catch a glimpse of the Celestial City, and with fresh inspiration and renewed strength press forward.

THE FREQUENCY OF SUICIDES

May well excite alarm and arouse parents and friends of the youth from the apathy which seems to have overtaken them. There must be something radically wrong when the strong vitality and love of life which characterize the young, give way before the bitter despair and deep-rooted melancholy which bring about an end so dreadful and lamentable. A want of sympathy and love, the indifference of friends and cruelty of parents, and a hereditary taint, may have much to do with precipitating the fatal issue, but the main cause is a lack of moral force. Losing their balance of mind, they are easily wrecked. To remedy this suicidal tendency and fortify the young against it, is a work of momentous importance. The head and heart, the mind and body, should alike be cultivated. The great truths of the Bible, faith in God and man, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and love should be systematically taught and deeply impressed upon the mind and heart of the child; and thus armed and equipped, he will be fortified against all the ills and temptations of life, and come off more than conqueror in the end.

CHARACTER

Does not develop in a day, it is slow in maturing It is made up of thought, feeling and action. If these are pure and good, the soul will sparkle with beauty and glow with happiness; if they are impure and vicious, it will be deformed and wretched.

As the children of God are co-workers with Him in every good thought, word or action, so the children of the Evil One are workers together with him in all the works and fruits of sin and sorrow.

THE TIME FOR WORK IS SHORT.

No one understands this better than Satan. Hence he is always in the field, and ever on the alert. He reaches out for the young—if he gets them he knows that he will have little trouble in holding them when old. He therefore allures them from the fireside, the Sunday School and Church. He entices them to the field, the canyon and seashore on the Sabbath; leads them to the ball room, the saloon, gambling table, race course, and place of sin—whose "house is the way to hell, going down to the chambers of death." He ensnares them by evil habits, poisons by vile literature and obscene pictures, until they are engulfed in a maelstrom of vice and crime, and ruined forever.

A SMALL BOY

Was arrested for some misdemeanor, and an officer was carrying him off to prison. The little fellow was a picture of despair and wretchedness, his garments were seedy, his eyes sunken, features pinched and general appearance haggard; with tears and entreaties, he cried: "Oh, don't take me there. I never had anybody to tell me how to be good; I never had any bringing up; nobody ever cares for me." The officer's heart was touched, and kindly administering a rebuke, he released him. Alas, no one to tell the little fellow "how to be good;" to help him form "a good name"—which is rather to be chosen than great riches—to lead him to Christ and Heaven! With renewed energy may we all work in God's vineyard—lift those deformed by passion and stained with sin into a life made beautiful with love and holiness, and prepare them for the joys of earth and the raptures of Heaven.

PERSONAL.

Will you help us in this great work? Will you do it now?

If you have no Sunday School, will you take steps at once to organize one? If so, children will rise up on the Day of Judgment and call you blessed.

SAN JOSE, Cal., September 4th, 1882.

The above is willingly published by request of the author. Perhaps the advice to work everywhere might have better included the temperance societies and Bands of Hope; seeing that the grogshop and the family beer and wine are now the only formidable enemies of the Sabbath and the children. Where the Sabbath and Christianity are unknown and there is no strong drink, suicide is almost unheard of. It is simply and solely a consequence of alcohol and tobacco 99 times in 100. The most suicide, murder, Sabbath desecration, cruelty to children, pauperism, theft and crime of all kinds, are found right where there are most churches, Sabbath Schools and religious opportunities and advantages. Not because any of those things at all lead to sin or crime, but because more grogshop, more beer, more wine have opened their batteries of evil, right under the shadow of the church steeples, where the respectability and business and wealth of the community resort than anywhere else.

And perhaps the recompense of sin falls heavier upon the people of Christian communities, because with open eyes the Pulpits and Sabbath schools have been so silent upon this vital matter; have permitted the citadels of Satan to be raised next door without protest. At the present day there is nothing standing in the way of the grandest and fullest success of the gospel and the Sunday school, but the sins and crimes which spring from our tolerance of the grogshop and the indifference of Christian people to the self-evident fact that in times past, the best and fairest of the children of the church and Sunday school, were virtually raised up with tenderest care to become human sacrifices on the altar of rum—because they were not warned against this greatest danger of their lives. Suicides and murders are sometimes not direct results of rum or tobacco; sometimes they are hereditary consequences of them; sometimes they occur because drink and tobacco have made murder and suicide so common and familiar as to remove all repugnance to them. So they are the causes after all. And Sabbath desecration is in the same proportion due to rum and beer and the indifference of the churches to their continued ravages.

The death of Jayman Taylor, a guide and fisherman on Lake George, is accounted for by finding four whisky-bottles in his boat, with only a single drink left.

Step by step, step by step, steadily pressing forward—that is the way we took the ugly battery on the hill. Temperance victories will cost some such effort. Remember that it is a step-by-step process steadily kept up. Take one step now.

There is nothing like a snug farm that is yours. Temperance is the friend trying to get it for you. Let the wind roar down the chimney! There is plenty of wood on the ffre. Let the feet multiply under the table! There is food enough for every plate.

Weeds, weeds, weeds! Nothing grows like them. They survive tornadoes and live on neglect. Give them frequent doses of hoe. The alcoholic habit—that is poison weed, a death-weed. How it grows! At it, with all your strength, and in the might of God, root it up forever!

Nobody has a very happy time putting up the bars when the cows are out of the corn-field, having foraged among the sweet cornstalks all they wished. And a sorry time the temperance people have paying for the ravages of alcohol among their young men. Shut out the rum-fiend at the start and bring up the young aright and for their sake drive out the saloon. Who would let a cow's stable stand with open door in a corn-field?—Our Young Men.

Have you started right? When you set out a tree near your house, you make sure of good soil. You take up the gravel and you replace it with earth in which the tree will flourish. Did you do a like thing when you began a life of temperance? Good soil for the starting of this life is prayer. Be sure that you put in plenty.

It is said that Garibaldi's body showed the scars of ten gun shot and bayonet wounds. What have you to show as pledge of your fight with intemperance around you? Don't talk of your war-record until you can show a scar, and then let it be somewhere else than in your back.

What a comment on the unsatisfactoriness of worldly pleasure was given by the German poet, Goethe who, at the age of eighty-three, after having drunk his fill of all the wells of sensual enjoyment, said that he had not had three weeks of real happiness in his whole lifetime!

Temperance is likely to put broadcloth on the back and roast beef on the table. But what if one should die ragged and hungry? The great thing in this world is to make character; and temperance will do that. Be content with that, though you have nothing more.

TOBACCO.—Physicians have said 20,000 die yearly in this land from this poison. As an emetic tobacco is said to excel in promptness and violence of action.

So intimately is the alcoholic vender's interest identified with the prevalent use of tobacco, that alcoholic beverages at the present day almost invariably contain tobacco as the chief element of their adulteration, because tobacco's effect is known to demand the greater use of alcohol, hence the prevalence of delirium tremens. Thus the victim, doubly deluded, is made still more and more hungered, demanding continually more of the accursed compound.

Dr. Alcott, in his treatise on the physical, intellectual and moral effects of tobacco says that its use [illegible]v originates disease but aggravates existing not on[illegible]. MORAL COURAGE.

In every school the difference is clearly marked between the boy who has moral courage, and the boy who is mere pulp. The one knows how to say "No." The other is so afraid of being thought "verdant" that he soon kills everything pure, and fresh, and manly in his character, and dries up into a premature hardness of heart.

Five lads were once gathered in a room at a boarding-school, and four of them engaged in a game of cards, which was expressly forbidden by the rules. One of the players was called out. The three said to the quiet lad, who was busy at something else—

"Come, take a hand with us. It is too bad to have the game broken up."

"I do not know one card from another."

"That makes no difference," exclaimed the players. "We will show you. Come along."

Now that was a turning-point in that lad's life. He nobly said—

"My father does not wish me to play cards, and I will not disobey him."

That sentence settled the matter and settled his position among his associates. He was the boy who could say "No"; and thenceforward his victories were made easy and sure. I well remember the pressure brought to bear in college upon every young man to join in a wine-drink or to take a hand in some contraband amusement. Some timber got well seasoned. Some of the other sort got well rotted through with sensuality and vice. The Nehemiahs at college have been Nehemiahs ever since. The boy was father of the man.—Ex.

P. R. McCABE TO YOUNG MEN.

(The duties of young men in the impending conflict.)

Webster defines conflict as a contest or struggle, and considering the work and institution to which we belong, we are to understand that the contest we are to engage in, must be and is the contest of Temperance vs. Whisky.

The temperance forces by prohibitory legislation and other kindred measures, are to curtail and if possible exterminate the liquor traffic throughout the United States—if possible through one or the other of the two leading parties, where expedient, but if ignored by them through independent political action.

Now, the question for us young men to ask ourselves is, what part are we going to take in this contest. Are we going to take a backseat with our arms folded and wait for others to push this work ahead? Or are we going to be among the foremost? I am afraid that too many of us are already in the backseats with the determination to stay. Now why should this be so? Some may urge as a reason that they do not understand what is required of them to do and they do not want to take a part for that reason. None should make such a plea in this day and age; when the opportunities are so many and varied for becoming acquainted with the methods of organization.

The trouble with young men of the present age is, that they do not take the interest in the questions of the time that they should. They give themselves up too much to matters and things of a trivial nature, neglecting to educate themselves to higher thoughts and aspirations and being a "common worm of the dust" as it were, all their lives, led by every Tom, Dick and the Devil, by not having a mind of their own.

Show me a young man in the temperance work who takes and reads the temperance papers of the day, and I will show you a young man who cannot be taken by the nose and led wherever his leader wants him to go. Why? Because he is educated in the right and knows the wrong and knowing the right knows how to maintain it.

Look at John B. Finch of Nebraska, and think of the power he is in this conflict. He is not yet 30 years old, but is recognized all over the United States, as the best temperance political agitator in the cause. There is not one of the opposing side so far dare engage him in debate, for the reason that they do not want to be made appear ridiculous under his scathing language, and though his thorough knowledge of the prohibition question. We need not go outside of this State to find powerful and influential workers in this cause; for I am personally acquainted with young men who could hold this audience spellbound by their language and knowledge of this question.

Now, how did they become so thoroughly acquainted and educated on this subject? You will all agree with me when I say, it was not by their spending their leisure hours around saloons and like places. I suppose the most of you heard Hon. Chas. A. Sumner when he was here a few nights ago, and how many of you doubted his sincerity on the "railroad" and postal telegraph questions. How many men in this State do you think could debate those questtons with him and expect to convince people that he was wrong in his assertions? Wherein lay his power? Was it not in the evidence he had at his command? Just so with John B. Finch and other temperance advocates. They have the facts and figures at their command and can always present them when necessary, thereby leaving no doubt in any ones mind of the truth of their assertions. Editorially, the Record Union made use of the following language after the recent convention of Prohibitionists at Chicago: "This movement appears at least to be inspired by a great deal of resolution." Inspired by a great deal of resolution," Yes, I think the convention was so inspired, and furthermore, I think it intends to accomplish something by them. But the question I intend considering is, what induced the Record Union to make use of such sneering language in reference to that convention. Was it not because the conventions of the same character have been mere resolving bodies and not accomplishing or carrying out their resolves or in a great many instances not even making the attempt? And does not this apply with equal force to too many connected with the temperance work in this State to-day? More particularly to us young men.

San Rafael, Sept. 13, 1882.

Ed. Rescue:—My father has been in receipt of your paper for more than two years, snd as a matter of course, we have often had occasion to canvass the views expressed, and the arguments advanced by you upon the question of temperance. Permit me to offer for your consideration some views of the question, which have presented themselves to my mind. As a general proposition; the bar room is the place where the habit of using intoxicating drink is formed, and it grows mainly out of what men call being sociable; for, I am fully persuaded that a large share of the liquor which is dispensed across the retailer's counter, would remain untasted but for the custom of clinking glasses "here's luck," etc.

Men drink oftenest in pairs, trios, etc. It is only he, who has formed the uncontrollable habit of using strong drink, who visits the barroom alone; hence, if we can by some system of legislation prevent men from drinking together, in my judgment half the battle is won. Experienco teaches us that however desirable, it is impracticable in California, at this time, to procure the passage of a prohibitory liquor law. Too many men are thoroly imbued with the idea of personal rights, and personal liberty, and all that sort of thing to assist us in the passage of a prohibitory law, even tho they should be willing to concede that such a law would be for the best interests of the country.

Under our law, now existing, and in view of public opinion as it must exist for years and years to come, intoxicating liquors are articles of merchandise, and men have a legal right to buy and sell the same, and since there is no law which prohibits a man from being a fool, he has a legal right to drink that which he may lawfully buy. If I am correctly informed, it is precisely the principle of the law just stated, and other principles necessarily underlying them, which have been found most troublesome in every attempt which has been made, here to-fore to frame a law preventing, or limiting the use of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

Now, I am persuaded to believe, that the Legislature of the State is fully empowered to make by enactment, all necessary and needful police regulations and all regulations in the interests of good morals, so long as they do not deny, or infringe upon the rights of individuals. If this is true, as matter of law, I may concede that the individual may lawfully buy and drink, when and where he pleases without injuring another, but wherein exists on his part any right to hold out inducements to another person to drink with him, and, why may not the Legislature in the interests of social morals, prevent him by law from so doing?

Just this principle has been upheld in many cases. As instance, the law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors to minors, to Indians, etc., and this brings me to the suggestion I started out to make, which is, to procure in the next Legislature the passage of an Act, making it a misdemeanor punishable by fine, or imprisonment, or both, for any person, in any bar room, hotel, or public place, to treat or in any manner to procure or solicit any other person to take a drink of any intoxicating liquor. I am inclined to think that the passage of such an Act or law, might be procured by proper exertions; and in the event of success that the law, if properly framed, would be held by the Courts good, and that the enforcement would be the means of closing up at least three-fourths of the bar rooms in the State.

Respectfully,
F. J. Bowers.

It is the most natural thing to suggest some palliative or partial remedies for the evils of the grog-shop. It has been tried for over 40 years. Such propositions have been made all along not by inexperienced or weakminded people, but by men of brains and ample capacity to deal wisely with everything but the dramshop. Laws prohibiting sale of liquor to children, drunkards, Indians, against selling on Sunday or after certain hours or less than a quart or gallon, winding up with the bell punch in Virginia and an anti-treating law in Nebraska have all been heralded as the long desired cure for the dramshop; but they all turned out to be nice, nourishing, wholesome food for drunkenness under which it grew and flourished and extended its roots and branches. Even the Maine law was fruitless as long as it let the dramshop stay; prohibition itself was only efficient there, when it took possession and shut up the criminal who sold the liquor, the criminal liquor itself, the whole criminal outfit and left no dramshop.

The experience of fifty years of active work with this crime in our midst, has disclosed the utter futility of any law which does not abolish the dramshop. If any scheme short of that could shut up three-fourths of these pest houses, the labor of closing the other one-fourth would be as great as closing the whole and till that is done, the evil will be but little abated.

It is always a gain to the temperance cause when people are induced to discuss the question as our correspondent has done. It is the only way to get at the truth, which those who have most labored in the cause believe to be the utter extermination of a crime which can offer no excuse for its existence, save that it has been tolerated in the past. The dramshop never did, never can, never will do good to any one; it does nothing but produce idleness, poverty, vice, crime and misery and therefore has no right to a moment's toleration.

Ed. Rescue:—I wish to say a few words to the Lodges who have been sending in donations to our building fund.

Dear brothers and sisters. Our hearts are overflowing with gratitude for these expressions of your fidelity, proving to us substantially that "A friend in need is a friend indeed."

Up to this time I have received one hundred and twenty-one dollars from sixty-seven lodges, and so many cheering letters of sympathy that I regret not having the time to answer each one separately with words more expressive of our true feelings than a mere receipt for the amount received. But even this takes a great deal of time and we hope the lodges will not think it is a lack of gratitude that we send such brief replies. Several lodges have donated five dollars, and Faithful Lodge sent us six dollars and twenty-five cents, the result of a collection taken up among its members. A brother in our lodge remarked when the report was read, "Faithful Lodge is well named."

Some lodges regret their financial inability to help us more, and others send the one dollar asked for and say "if more is needed call on us." May you each have peace and prosperity, and be encouraged to do heroic work in the great prohibition army that is now being marshaled against the foe.

I will state the progress we are making with our Hall in a future issue if permission is granted.

Mrs. L. E. Cheadle, L. D., of Hanford Lodge I. O. G. T.

Hanford, Tulare Co. Cal., Sept. 11, 1882.

Fully two-thirds of the suits brought in the Superior Court each day are actions for divorce.

Judge Edmonds of the Superior Court has severed the marriage existing between Elizabeth J. Perry and Joseph H. Perry, on application of the former and because of the husband's failure to provide and his intemperate habits. Divorces have also been granted by Judge Edmunds to Mary Ann Delaney from James Henry Delaney and to Hannah Elder from James Cruikshank Elder, in the former case on the ground of failure to provide, and in the latter because of desertion.

Judge Evans has granted Annie H. Mhoon a divorce from James G. Mhoon, on the ground of failure to provide the common necessaries of life.

Judge Waymire has dismissed the divorce suit of McLaugtlin vs. McLaughlin.—Chronicle.

The breweries and the new beer gardens on the cable roads are doing a lively business. Selling beer is the largest mercantile business of this city and taking care of its effects is the principal employmont of our courts, police, doctors, jailors, grave diggers and the Tax Collectors.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THOSE PETITIONS.

The petitions for Constitutional Amendment and Sunday law sent out by Bro. W. D. Gould, acting for the Grand Lodge, should be vigorously pushed from now till the session of the legislature. Members of the Order should all be active in procuring signatures to them. There are few good citizens who would refuse to sign, if given an opportunity. If every W. V. T. and L. D. of our lodges would see to have the petitions circulated, we could get more than half the population to sign them. There will be an immense difference in the moral effect of these petitions signed by 10,000 or 100,000 or 200,000 people. Signed by a few their effect will be insignificant; with 100,000 names they would be irresistible.

There should be a most active movement now at every point of the army of temperance. Prohibitionists, Home Protectionists, Good Templars and all others who respect the temperance flag, should be as one man and work with utmost diligence for immediate submission of the prohibitory amendment to vote of the people. Let us demand immediate action of the coming legislature whatever may be its complexion. That vote of the people cannot be had till it passes two legislatures; so there is little dout now, if we work industriously and faithfully this time, we shall carry our point triumphantly all thru and have a free State in 1885; free for ever.

Our beautiful State and its vicinity, set on fire with the poison of the California distillers and brewers and sellers of the deadliest disease and plague that ever afflicted mankind, is the most cruel slauter pen of all this world. A State that but for these monsters of cruelty and wickedness, would be a paradise of peace, abundance and prosperity, is of all this world civilized or savage, the most horrible den of crime and blood and vice. There are over 4000 human slaunter houses in San Francisco and a proportionate number all over the State, morning, noon, night, Sunday, breeding a constant leprous stream of rottenness and crime, producing a daily harvest of murder, insanity, cuttings, shootings, wifebeatings, divorces, debaucheries and refinements of crime that are unmentionable for the atrocity of their vileness.

We have new beer gardens and beer cellars growing up like mushrooms every day and like them swarming with the new vermin they produce as soon as they are completed. These are the infamous dens intended to supplant our churches and Sunday schools; these are to afford the recreation for the laborer under the new Republican Sunday law; and these are the most pernicious breeders of crime, lust, filthiness, pauperism, blasphemy that the world has ever known. The petitions demand the removal of these cesspools of depravity, ten thousand times worse than any Chinese or other leprosy.

Brethren and sisters, let us have no more dallying and fooling with this matter; let us be heard making a demand in earnest by our petitions and by our ballots cast for none but sincere temperance men. Let be our watchword and our aim. Let us listen no more to the nonsense of hollow and useless half measures, suggestions of satan and used by him to capture the weak and incapable and incompetent.

Since the defeat of the local option law in 1874 by a sad mistake in electing a party judge of the Supreme Court, an enemy of temperance—the temperance political power has been entirely wasted, and unless a change is made, we shall never advance at all. Let us abandon the milk and water and do-nothing policy; let us drop all side issues and go in and destroy this infernal, murderous, poisonous nuisance, put an end to the butchery of our people and bring peace to the land. No more homeopathic doses of temperance legislation.

LODGES CANT GO INTO POLITICS.

If Good Templars were allowed to use a political influence as a body, what a temperance party Maine might have and a ticket that would command our votes might be nominated.—Good Templar Record.

Yes, if such men as T. R. Simonton, H. A. Shorey and several others that might be named would allow the order to vote its principles, we could not only have a temperance party in Maine, but we could have a total abstinence and prohibition party, and the ticket that was nominated at Augusta, June 1st, and is worthy the earnest support of all Good Templars and all good citizens would command our united votes.

As matters are, we see no way but for each individual to pay no attention to wire pullers, but vote in accordance with the fundamental principles of our order; this will be straight national and State prohibition.—Prohibitionist.

It is about time that very diminutive and silly argument was abandoned. It has done the Order an incalculable amount of harm; next to cheap john it has been the chief obstacle to its progress.

When the I. O. G. T. was started there was no idea that prohibition would become a political issue. It was at a time when a Democrat and a Republican could scarcely be safe under one roof. For some time it grew worse! the two parties were enemies; it was for years very difficult indeed to maintain the existence of a lodge which had in it members of those two parties.

That time has gone by, let us hope, forever; where there is no crazing drink, men of the two parties can meet and be friends and joke one another about their respective parties or candidates, without in the least disturbing their kindliest relations. And now there is nothing whatever to embitter the members of the old political parties against each other; save only the office seekers of each, who do the scheming and lying to cheat each other out of the spoils. The others have nothing to quarrel about.

That Good Templar Lodges cannot exert a political influence as a Republican, Greenback, Granger or other party unconnected with the temperance issue, is of course admitted. But that a lodge, a Grand Lodge and the whole Order should not be instructed to use their political influence in favor of a prohibitory party or when there is none, in favor of voting for only those candidates who are total abstainers and true prohibitionists—is a manifest inconsistency.

If our constitution can be interpreted to prohibit our acting as a political prohibition party, it ought to be at once cured of such a fatal defect. In 1859 the principle of prohibition of the traffic was nailed to the mast, but we were not advised that it was to be accomplished by holding sessions of the R. W. G. L. once a year to caution us not to meddle with politics.

By the way some of the leading spirits in the R. W. G. L. and in some of the Grand Lodges have exhibited an extraordinary amount of statesmanship, originality and executive ability in devising, proposing and agitating improvements in the signs, ceremonials, ritual charges etc.; the last outburst of legislative Solomonism was an effort by the vote of the entire Order in sub-Lodge to substitute for the regalia a tin whistle badge or something of that kind, which its skilful inventor perhaps thot would scare the saloonatics out of their business.

But it never occurred to any of these near-sighted statesmen, that there was any necessity for a reform to make our Order an effective agency for the suppression of the dramshop. Therefor when we who talk of prohibition, want to do something to prohibit, we are told to form ourselves into a Home Protection or Deliverance or P. P. P. Party where we can do something practical.

There was a man a long time ago who enjoyed getting drunk. The way he had been taut to get tight was to drink three tumblers of water and then take a tumbler of whisky. He innocently pursued this for some time but at last discovered that the water did not help at all to fetch on the drunk. Thereafter he commenced with the whisky first and discarded the useless adjunct.

Just so, many excellent patriotic men if they find their wings clipped in the Lodge and find that they can only talk there and must join another Order to act, will altogether avoid the inactive branch as has been the case in many instances heretofore, and we shall find our Order left high and dry on the bank of the stream. It was fitted out at first to stand all weathers and with proper adaptations to meet the varying conditions of its surroundings it was capable of fully achieving the purposes of its organization.

No one proposes to meddle in the Lodge with any political work beyond that of enjoining the duty of Good Templars to avoid the traps of political hypocrites, to avoid the crime of voting for rumsellers and drinkers moderate or immoderate, and to vote only a temperance ticket or for the prohibitionists on a ticket when we have no exclusive prohibition ticket.

The only reason why political and sectarian discussions were prohibited was because of the quarrels that might ensue and the discomfort which would arise to those who did not quarrel. No one is at all likely nowadays to get affronted or hurt, because the Lodge advises its members to be Good Templars more and politicians less; to be Good Templars and remember their obligation especially at the ballot box; to cast an honest virtuous vote for home and country and to forget the miserable party divisions which have in the past kept up a constant civil war thruout the land and have been a fester sore of corruption and vice and crime unfathomable.

It is time for the removal of whatever disabilities there may be in the Order, to prevent us from being and doing, collectively and individually, any and all things which good citizenship demands and that are necessary for the destruction of the plague that ravages the land.

THE COMING CONVENTION.

A week from to-day a Convention meets to take measures of more importance to the welfare of this State than have ever occupied the attention of a California Convention of any complexion. The purpose is to begin in earnest a practical warfare for the prohibition of the one infernal traffic, that curses every other business, and makes every industry and enterprise in this noblest and best domain of all the world, a comparative failure, plunges thousands of families into misery and has converted this fair land, with all its glorious privileges and opportunities, into a veritable field of blood and violent crime; the brewery and winery and distillery and their ten thousand dens of infamy and pollution, networked all over the coast to entice, betray, debauch, rob and kill American citizens, to destroy homes, fill jails, manufacture lust, theft, hate, riot, pauperism, suicide, murder as a trade—have gone their full length; their cup of debauchery, blasphemy, crime, blood and human misery is full and now this Convention meets to take the first practical and effective measures to stamp this piratical, monster infamy and cruelty out of existence.

This is not a Convention to discuss whether we had better have a third party etc. That has no place with us now. It is a Convention of Prohibitionists to nake nominations in the interest solely of the temperance reform. Whatever may help or hurt Estee or Stoneman is not a consideration with us. Our businesss is to put up a prohibitory, patriotic platform and elect our candidates if possible without any regard to the success or defeat of other parties, which are matters of no account whatever except to spoil hunters and selfseekers. Doutless any prohibition candidates found on other tickets will be endorsed and the candidates for the Supreme bench opposed to Mess. Sharpstein and Ross will be adopted.

It is hoped the friends of prohibition will be on hand; the enemies of rational temperance procedure have no right to appear there. To have a plan cut and dried to capture the Convention, to fill its offices with anti-prohibitionists and make it an instrument for the election of Mr. Estee, as was attempted at the last Convention, will not get any show at this one. If proxies are sent, it is probable the Convention will demand to know that they come from prohibitionists and are entrusted to prohibitionists and not to be used against prohibition.

In future prohibition Conventions will probably be what they profess to be; to work for prohibition, not against it.

CALL.

STATE PROHIBITION CONVENTION.

A meeting of the committee appointed by the Prohibition Convention in July last, was held on Tuesday evening, and adopted the following:

"The emergency provided for by the State Prohibition Convention of July 11th, held at Y. M. C. A. Hall, in San Francisco, having arisen, the committee appointed for that purpose hereby reconvenes the said convention in Y. M. C. A. Hall, San Francisco, Sept. 28, 1882, at 10 A. M."

Attention is called to the terms of the original call, as follows:

"A State Convention in the interest of Prohibition and Reform will be held in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, 232 Sutter St., San Francisco, on Tuesday, July 11th, at 10 o'clock A. M. The attendance of delegates from every part of the State is desired. To this end, every lodge of Good Templars, every branch organization of the Home Protection Association, every division of the Sons of Temperance, every Loyal League, every W. C. T. U., every Band of Hope, and, in fact, every temperance organization favoring prohibition will be entitled to one delegate each.

"It is earnestly hoped that every temperance or political organization in favor of the prohibition of the liquor traffic will send its duly elected representative to the Convention, as very important matters for the interest of the cause will be discussed. Ministers of the Gospel, Protestant and Catholic, in good and regular standing are also invited.

"By order of the Executive Committee of the
"PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY."

Organizations not represented in said convention which are entitled under terms of the original call, are also requested to send delegates.

REV. W. R. GOBER,
W. G. SWAN,
R. H. MCDONALD,
R. THOMPSON.

GEO. MORRIS, Sec'y.

CAUTION.

Friends of prohibition are earnestly desired to send reliable delegates to this convention. They are reminded that the enemies of prohibition and political action, who boasted of having sold out the former prohibitory convention, and who will desire to make the coming one either a failure or a recruiting office for old rotten whisky parties, will use their utmost strength against the objects of the convention. And real temperance men must be on hand to render treachery abortive. None but prohibitionists have any right to appear in this convention. It is now a contest between the PEOPLE and two organized bands of spoilseekers, the two old parties, both owned, headed and run by the Leag of Freedom. The call for a clean ticket and platform is almost universal. We shall have it, and the chances are good that it will carry the State.

REPUBLICAN TEMPERANCE.

A good many innocent worthy people think the Republican is a temperance party and has made prohibitory laws; but they are entirely mistaken; the bulk of the temperance men have been in that party and if they could have controlled it, the liquor plague would have been abolished. But it has been controlled in nearly all instances by the whisky and beer rings, and its policy towards temperance has been that of the hyena toward the lamb. It has never passed a prohibitory law, but it has destroyed prohibitory laws by wholesale. It has had an anti-temperance plank in its national platform the last 10 years. It was forced by overwhelming public opinion to let the people vote themselves free in Kansas. In Iowa it fooled and cheated the people for 20 years and never did anything else till in 1877 a third party was formed and polling 10,630 votes, the Republicans had to let the people vote again or be beaten. So the Iowa Amendment is due to the work of that third party which forced the Republicans to submit it.

In Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Vermont, Mass. and a great many other States the history of the Republican party action toward temperance has been one of treachery and hostility almost without exception. Where they found prohibitory laws they have made them useless or repealed them. Where they have promised to enact a law, to get the votes of the temperance people, they have conspired with the rummies either to make the law entirely idle or to defeat its enforcement. Perhaps as many as a hundred times they have promised some legislation to temperance voters and as many times have they been faithless.

The reason of this has been that the politicians, by talking taffy to the preachers and moral and temperance Republicans, promising them something good, a little at a time, by and by, next century—and making them quake with the awful conundrum, "are you going to let the Democrats win?" have always been able to gerrymander the temperance vote and cast it for the rum interest. They could not succeed in fooling the rum-sellers that way, but they have fooled the temperance people, or a majority of them, that way for thirty years. And here in California there are many of this class begging to have one more chance to get fooled and kicked by the Republican party, and they would continue to do so a century if they lived so long.

The Maine law was enacted first by a Democratic legislature—after its repeal it was reenacted by a separate prohibition party.—And the Republican party has all but ruined itself there by its treacherous attempts to render that law inoperative and prevent its enforcement in the cities. And even now its treachery has led to the formation of a separate prohibition party there. This is not a Democratic deliverance. For 20 years at least the Democrats have been open enemies of temperance and have thrown away every chance of coming into power.

A LAW making railroad contracts a penal offense in this State is one of the urgent demands of the people. The County Conventions in this State should not fail to pledge their nominees to the Senate and Legislature to vote for the passage of such a law.—Chronicle.

A law proposed in a whisky elected legislature will never pass, if the railroad corporation dont want it to pass. There would be reason and justice in limiting freights and fares to something like the tarif of the Eastern lines; it might be done if we could get whisky out of politics. It will not be done till then The proposal "to make railroad contracts a penal offence in this State" is a piece of ignorant fanaticism that would discredit the intelligence of the raggedest loafer that hangs on the outskirts of the crowd at a sand lot oration. If there gets into our next legislature one individual so utterly brainless as to propose or consent to such a transcendantly silly measure, Barnum should be notified at once and Jumbo as a novelty would be soon retired. The author and inventor of that sublime piece of donkeyism should be publicly ornamented with a sheepskin medal presented in Platts Hall and made large enough to cover the whole person, wool side out. The very best measure that could be employed to deal with the railroad would be a measure of "brains."

SILLY TALK.

It is reported that a threat has been made that if the temperance people nominate a third party ticket, the advocates of the "Sunday law only" will put the cause of prohibition back ten years, by refusing their assistance to it. One or two persons have made that threat. People often make very foolish remarks under the influence of sudden anger: it is to be hoped that no one would be guilty of such a deliberate purpose. Such a threat seriously made, would be simply fiendish.

We are accused of not helping the church people with their Sunday law issue: deserting them in their fight after they have helped us so much: hence the threat, which was doubtless an unconsidered ebulition of ill-temper.

There can be no more silly idea than that in working for temperance, any body is helping us or placing us under obligations. It is equally everybody's work, everybody's interest. The Sunday law and prohibitory issues are equally everybody's business. The temperance people brot both issues to the front, and in place of deserting anybody, they were bposed by a number of parties who went to the Convention to work for a Sunday law and not for temance.

Some of these parties took particular pains to assure the delegates that it was not necessary to give us anything but a Sunday law—and any kind of a law at that. The temperance people could be bulidosed into voting the Republican ticket as usual. And by the treachery of these men the opportunity for either Sunday or prohibition was lost. But good will come out of evil after all; we shall have an honest ticket now.

DURING Grand Lodge week in former times the RESCUE used to have a holiday and skip one number. It is proposed to do so this year and the 4,600 friends who receive it will have to brace themselves up to endure the misfortune of going without their favorite paper from the 28th inst. to the 12th October. It is hoped they will all cheerfully consent to this indulgence, the first in two years.

MEXICO.

Hon. George Barstow will lecture before the Chautauqua Literary Society, at the Hall of the Y. M. C. A., 232 Sutter St., on Thursday evening Sept. 21. Subject: Mexico, its history, mines, vast wealth of the M. Roman Catholic Church, domestic life, Juarez and the progressive party, railroads, the Indians, Reciprocity, and the importance of a knowledge of the Spanish language to the youth of both sexes in San Francisco. Seats free.

It is hoped the Lodge Deputies will submit the Convention circulars to their Lodges.

THE REPUBLICAN Vc PLANK.

RECREATION EXPLAINED.

It was hoped that the Republican Fifth plank would have differed from the Democratic, but it did not at all in spirit. Both planks were dictated by the wifebeaters Leag. While the San Jose plank was about the only paragraph of either platform that was not a bumcombe delusion to catch votes, the cut above represents the true end of the whole of both platforms—the fullest liberty to the Leag of Fiendom and its 10,000 slauter traps and thief dens, to sink, burn and destroy our people, to fill our penitentiaries, asylums and graveyards, to curse the State with a continuous pestilence worse than war, famine and plague combined—as a condition of keeping alive either miserable party which the Leag of marauders may be induced to vote into power.

The Prohibition Reform party will root out the nest of political vampyres who neither pity nor spare, who laugh to scorn the idea of protecting the innocent and weak against the vile and powerful. What can honest voters expect from either of two rotten corrupt wifebeater parties?

NEAL DOW ON MAINE.

At Hamilton, Canada, Mr. Dow made a grand speech of which the following is the closing part:

Those people who go up and down in Canada in the interest of Canadian liquor sellers, say the Maine Law is a failure. I say that if it were a failure you would not hear a word from these men. They would say, "Go on with your Maine Law, who cares? But they oppose prohibition here in Canada vehemently, because they say it is a failure in Maine. Do you believe that the liquor sellers are trying to defeat prohibition because, as they claim, under prohibition there is more liquor sold in Maine than under a license law? Is it likely that they would oppose it for that reason? The very statement shows that they are liars, and know they lie. In five months after the passing of the Maine Law the jails of Penobscot, Kennebec, Franklin, and York counties were nearly empty. I live in the populous county of Cumberland. Within four months, under the enactment of the law, there were but five prisoners in the county jails, and three of them were liquor sellers. The workhouses, too, were nearly empty. Plans had been prepared for a large new workhouse for Portland, but within four months under the law, there was room enough and to spare in the workhouses already existing. Yet there are men who tell you the Maine Law is a failure.

THE TRAFFIC SWEPT AWAY.

We had seven great distilleries and two breweries in Portland, and they are all swept out. Large cargoes of rum from the West Indies were unloaded at our docks; now there is not a puncheon of rum imported into the city. What does come is smuggled in barrels of sugar. I have seen it packed in dry-goods boxes, and marked "Glass, right side up, with care," or marked "Eggs," and once they undertook to smuggle some liquor into the country in a coffin, but the officers discovered the trick, and confiscated the liquor. Now what is the result? Intemperance is largely swept away. But the people of Maine used to spend in liquor an amount equal to the total valuation of their property in every twenty-three years. We don't spend now one twentieth part as much as we did then. I will give you an illustration which will show the whole position on this matter. I was riding in a railway carriage in England with a clergyman, an educated man. He said to me that he thot this proposition of the temperance men to suppress the liquor traffic was the most arbitrary and despotic of anything he had ever heard of. In any city or town, or any other locality, if a majority dont want to drink they would not let the minority drink. "That is not it," said I. "We say that if in any place a majority of the people are opposed to grogshops there, they shall have no license." He said it amounted to the same thing, and asked if there were no licensed grogshops where were the minority to get their drink? I said, "That was no affair of ours. They could get the drink and pay their own bills. At present they got it, and sent their bills to us to pay, and we didn't propose to stand it." This whole question is one of balance between good and evil. I cannot see how any honest man can side with the liquor traffic, on the score that it does more good than evil, and if it does more evil than good it must go. In England the amount of money the people spend yearly in drink has been increasing four times faster than the population, and if this keeps up, then the vision of Lord Macaulay in which he saw a New Zealand artist sitting upon a broken arch of London Bridge and sketching the ruins of that magnificent city, will become a veritable fact much sooner than Macaulay thought; for will anyone now be kind enough to tell me what good comes from the liquor traffic? You cannot do it. This is a matter of life and death, and one not to be lightly spoken of. Now we will come back to Maine. In three-fourths of our territory the liquor traffic is entirely unknown, that is to say in the rural districts. It still exists to a small extent in large towns because of some defects in the law which we shall have remedied by the next Legislature. It has been said the Maine Law is a failure, because we have had it amended, but every amendment made has been suggested by experience, and has made the law stronger and more stringent than ever. Before the enactment of the Maine Law there was no part of the United States where the people drank more in proportion to the population than Maine. What a change now! Now the share of the national drink should be about $13,000,000, but we generally call it $1,000,000, tho it is about half a million, part of which is the cost of liquor smuggled into the State in defiance of the law.

PROSPERITY UNDER PROHIBITION.

Our country is prosperous; we have money to lend, and do lend it to the Western States. Everywhere we go through the State we see neat houses and fences where before there was ruin and decay. At the time of the financial depression some years ago a writer in the New York Sun stated that as a result of prohibition Maine had lost money from her revenue, and Portland had lost a great deal of business, because the liberal merchants would not deal in the city, as they could not get a glass of liquor to drink in the city if they wanted to be social. I went to the First National Bank and inquired of Mr. Gould as to the truth of the statement in the Sun. He said, "The trade of Portland has never been so satisfactory as it is now. In the very height of the financial crisis, when it was dull all over the country, some branches, such as the lumber trade, were depressed, but generally our trade is better than ever before, and our traders will tell you the same. I went to Mr. Walker, of a large wholesale warehouse, and he assured me trade had never been better with him, and he had satisfactory payments from traders. Now, before the Maine Law we had no wholesale trade in Portland except the wholesale liquor trade. Now we have wholesale dry-goods and other houses on a large scale. That is the way the Maine Law has worked in Maine. We never hear of repealing that law. The sentiment of the country is for it, and a resolution in its favor has made a plank in the Republican party State platform yearly. When the Republicans first made prohibition a part of their platform, the Democrats, who were not then in power, said, "We will take up the license;" so they resolved that the Democratic party had always been the true temperance party, and that the true way to promote the interests of temperance was to adopt a stringent licence law. When they came to count the votes at the last election the votes were not there, and they learned a lesson. At the next Democratic Convention the Committee on Resolutions would not report a resolution favoring license, and when in Convention a lawyer arose and offered a resolution in favor of a licence law, and the vote was taken by rising; only fifteen men rose for the affirmative, and when the negative was put the entire Democratic Convention rose against licence. So we have the Republican party in favor of prohibition, and the entire Democratic party emphatically opposed to the policy of licensing the traffic in strong drink, and virtually we have the whole population of Maine committed to a policy of prohibition. Liquor is sold in some of the large cities, but it is hidden away in cellars and boxes, and in holes in the wall, which are constantly discovered, in Portland, for instance, by the four officers we keep continually on the watch for law-breakers. In Iowa a constitutional amendment has been passed embodying the principle of prohibition, thus settling the question in that State for ever. In Maine the Republican party are in favor of submitting to the people a proposition for a constitutional amendment on prohibition in the near future. In Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, and some other States, we shall have constitutional amendments prohibiting the liquor traffic. We are determined to stamp out the traffic entirely in Maine, and show the world one community which is free from the curse, and whose people are prosperous and happy. Men and women of Canada, this is the work in which we ask you to engage This is the object for which we ask you to labor and to carry this work against the liquor traffic until at last this land shall be delivered from its tremendous evils.

ENFORCEMENT.

How to secure the enforcement of Prohibitory and Sunday-laws in cities the authorities of which refuse or neglect to act, is a problem that now engages the attention of the friends of law and order. Cincinnati, Ohio, and Topeka, Kansas, are two towns in which the question is now a living one. In Cincinnati it is also a great puzzle. For Topeka, the Kansas Methodist suggests two solutions, one of which seems to be quite simple and feasible. It is for citizens near the saloons to bring suit against the authorities for damages for permitting a nuisance. If the local court proves also to be infected with the whisky influence, persons whose business is injured, could take a change of venue. Another solution, which appears not quite so practicable, because it would have to be reached indirectly, is for citizens to combine and refuse to pay any further taxes into the treasury, on the ground that no equivalent is rendered. It believes that the matter could be so clearly put before any righteous judge and jury that citizens would be sustained under the circumstances; but this would require an equitable construction which the court might not be ready to grant. Other solutions are in order; for the liquor men must not be allowed to defeat the people.—The Methodist.

Glorious American liberty saloon keepers say they have liberty to ruin and devastate the country and no one dare to molest or make them afraid. Some of our church members tell us that one man should not interfere with another man's business; it depends upon what that man's business is; if it is robbing my chicken roost, I would interfere. If it is setting snares for me and my children I should interfere, if it is eating up my honest hard earnings and he himself loitering in laziness and crime I think I should interfere but the saloon business is to do all kinds of meanness and turn it off with a joke;if any one makes their robery, crime and murder come out in a true light they howl "you are interfering with our liberty, I thought this was a free country."

HANSON.

Forestville.

If a man wants his vote to count for prohibition he should vote the prohibition ticket.

Certainly neither of the other tickets represent the principles of prohibition or even total abstinence; and why should any good temperance man throw away his vote on these petty issues between the rival parties or candidates? Vote prohibition and have the satisfaction of knowing all through the year that you did your duty at the ballot box.—Prohibitionist.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

Coal Oil.—Continental oil per case of 10 gals, $2.25; Starlight oil $2.65; fair burning oil $2.50 to $2.20—good time to lay in winter supply. Order from cash grocery, 519 Post St., S. F., Cal.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the Rescue 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the Rescue will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1.00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

Officers of the State Association: Otis Gibson, Pres. 916 Washington St. S. F.; Dr. R. H. McDonald, Treas., Pacific Bank, S. F.; Geo. Babcock, State Supt. R. S. Wade, State Secretary, 76 Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

Directors: Stephen G. Nye, J. L. Lyon, E. Wadsworth, Joseph A. Fairbanks, R. Thompson, George Babcock, Geo. T. Hanly, Otis Gibson, Will D. Gould, Geo. B. Katzenstein.

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

THE Chronicle a week or two ago had a letter from a correspondent in Germany, describing the orgies at the beer gardens and giving a picture of the brightness and sweetness of a pagan drunken Sunday as compared with the American day of rest. Last Sunday the same writer portrays the semiannual graduating celebration at the Berlin University. About 500 students there and gray professors all the way up to one who had graduated 62 years ago. They must have drank fifty glasses of beer when the visitors left them in full blast at 2 A. M. We better hear nothing at all from Germany if that is the best they have. If aged professors and church members lead the young students into habits of the most swinish and abominable drunkenness, and have not got yet beyond the heathen orgies of ten centuries ago, the less we hear of them the better, except as a field that holds out a plea of the strongest necessities for missionary effort.

THE temperance people of California and thousands of farmers and other citizens who are not members of a temperance organization are rejoicing in the prospect of an opportunity to cast a vote for the downfall of the rumgod. From all quarters comes a cheer for prohibition and a release from the infernal tyranny of the dramshop.

THE Leag of Freedom are alarmed lest they should lose the ownership of the 80,000 working men in this State whose weekly wages they receive. They are afraid that Estee or Stoneman will be defeated and the favorite fun of wife-beating and coroner's inquests come to an end.

THE secret is out at last. The reason Babylon and Nineveh and all the perished cities, kingdoms and nations have disappeared is, they had no Republican party and no Higgins and Buckly machine to run their politics, and no Leag of F—dom to make their platforms and Sunday laws.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

SPOOL COTTON.

Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

J. & P. Coats' Black

WILL HOLD ITS COLOR AS LONG AS ANY FABRIC ON WHICH IT CAN BE USED.

And the Agents will pay Full Price for any of their Thread which may be spotted or injured by climatic influences.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. Reception to Grand Lodge.

THE R. W. G. T. GEO. B. KATZENSTEIN AND THE Grand Lodge of California (Officers and Representatives) I. O. G. T. will be tendered a Reception,

Under the Auspices of San Francisco District Lodge,

.....AT.....

Dashaway Hall,

139 POST STREET, (Near Dupont),

On Monday Evening, Oct. 2d, 1882.

All Members of the Grand Lodge, and Visiting Members of the Order, are cordially invited to be present.

All Lodges within the jurisdiction of San Francisco District Lodge are requested, and those of Alameda Co. invited. to be present in regalia, at 7 P. M., prompt.

Only members of the Order in good standing admitted. The P. W. and E. required at the door. The W. C. T., W. F. S. or L. D. may vouch for their members. Members will bring their own regalia if practicable.

JOHN Q. ADAMS,
Sec. Recep. Com., 604 Clay Street.

VACATION.—The RESCUE will not be published Oct. 5th; not till Oct. 12th.

BOYCOTTING.—During the session of Grand Lodge the delegates expect to make an exhaustive raid on the ELITE Photographic Studio, 838 Market street. They will endeavor to keep the whole establishment working full time during the session.

VISITORS to Grand Lodge can save enough money to pay for all their reading matter for two years by looking at the list of advertizers in the RESCUE, and making their purchases there. Anything, from a whole set of furniture to a box of matches, can be found for sale by first class dealers.

R. T. BUELL has settled certain litigation troubles with which he was involved; this will enable him to put 12,000 acres of land in the market for small farms. This will doutless be sold with a no grog-shop proviso and good people will wish Mr. Buell the fullest success.

AN advertisement was offered this paper last week of a half dozen medicines calculated to cure about all human ailments from the teething troubles of children to the baldness of extreme age. But all such things are declined for two reasons; (1), the readers of the RESCUE are not sick people; (2), the RESCUE dont want to make them sick with such advertising rubbish.

The prohibition party was a necessity. It has been organized. It will stand. It will grow. It will gather strength. It will accumulate influence. It has become a power in the land. It is based upon the purest and most righteous of principles. It is thrilled with the loftiest, loveliest sentiment. It seeks not spoils for itself, but salvation for others. Its opposers are many, but it has one Friend who is mightier than them all. It is a great cause because it is the cause of humanity; it is a glorious cause because it is the cause of Christ. Its march has been slow, but in its very foot-falls there is the sound of victory. It can afford to be despised, ridiculed, persecuted; it can afford to wait for its triumphs. They are sure, for behind them is the showing and shining of Omnipotence.—National Prohibitionist.

PARTY.—The political party that to-day takes sides with whisky and beer, is inviting its early destruction. The political party that will make and administer law against the rum curse, so as to dry up the tears from the faces of innocent children and broken-hearted wives, is the only party that has an assured future. Ere long the parties confronting each other in these United States, will be the Whisky and No-Whisky parties. To this consummation all things are drifting.—Atlanta (Ga.) Southern Templar.

FAILURE of prohibition in Iowa. The tramps which flourished abundantly in Iowa, are leaving the State in droves, utterly disgusted with the lack of beer and whisky. If they can only reach California they will be all right for 3 or 4 years yet. This State is lagging behind the general march of the world's progress, just for want of more of that useful class of citizens. The tramps can absorb an unlimited quantity of wine that would make the drunkenest Frenchman howl with envy. What we want is a large immigration of porous tramps to consume our pure wines and brandies. An appropriation should be made by the legislature to pay their fare from the other States to California. (Chas. A. Morewet.)

The North American Review for October opens with an article on "The Coming Revolution in England," by H. M. Hyndman, the English radical leader, giving an instructive account of the agitation now going on among the English working classes for a reconstruction of the whole politico-social fabric of that country. O. B. Frothingham writes of "The Objectionable in Literature," and endeavors to point out the distinction between literature which is per se corrupting, and that which is simply coarse. Dr. Henry Schliemann tells the interesting story of one year's "Discoveries at Troy." Senator John I. Mitchel, of Pennsylvania, treats of the rise and progress of the rule of "Political Bosses." Prof. George L. Vose of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, contributes an article of exceptional value on "Safety in Railway Travel;" and Prof. Charles S. Sargent, of the Harvard College Arboretum, contributes an instructive essay on "The Protection of Forests." The Review is sold by booksellers and news dealers generally.

GENERAL Wolseley is a specimen of a tee-total general. His defeat of Arabi Bey and capture of Cairo turned out just as he had planned and predicted it, and just at the time he had weeks before notified his government it would take place. In 1870 he commanded a military expedition to put down an insurrection in Red River. The journey was about 1,500 miles, much of it up and down rapid streams; the boats had to be carried, and all their contents packed around falls and rapids and across land from one stream to another. It was a most arduous campaign, but under tetotal Wolseley it was accomplished without the use of any kind of alcoholic liquor, without the loss of a man, without any accident, without a growl or murmur of the men, with scarcely an hour of any one on the sick list, and with complete success in every respect. Every movement entrusted to him has been entirely successful. We are just as proud of the achievements of the tetotalers Havelock, Napier, Wolseley, Livingston, Foote, &c., as the Leag of Free &c. is of Guiteau, Booth, the train robbers, Chas. Wetmore, and the chap that stole the 500 hogs this summer at Roberts' Island.

HENRY EGERTON was not the author of Philosopher Pickett's anathema of foreigners. He is acquitted of the sin of saying something about the Irish 22 years ago, and would be fit timber for an American Congressman only for another disqualification. When he was at school about 9 years of age, he had a row with a boy who snatched an apple from him, and Henry slapped him in the face; that was an Irish boy. No true American can think of harboring any sympathy for the perpetrator of an atrocious national outrage like that 44 years ago. If a boy would do that at 9 years of age, what would he do now if he had a chance? Campaign papers should attend to this at once. If any doubt of the authenticity of this story should arise, the old cabin can be shown in El Dorado County yet, where the miner lived who had heard the story in Ohio. That is a clincher.

RUGBY, the temperance colony of English people in Tennessee, which was set back very much by fever and therefore gave great joy to the "bottle-nosed" press as a temperance failure, has taken a fresh start. A good many Germans have gone there to settle. Latest news, a $1,700 building is being erected for a library and 10,000 volumes are secured for it.

IN the British Association for the promotion of science, a discussion occurred on maritime accidents and losses of ships. One side held that they were largely due to intemperanae and the other party (of scientists!!!) held that the trouble was bad liquor, and good rum and good whisky only should be used at sea. Nothing done in an idiot asylum has ever beaten that except the attempt of the poor fellow who thot he could swallow himself whole with his boots on.

THE VILLAGE FIRE.

[Minn. Record.]

Hark—hark—tis the cry of the watchman—
Fire, fire, fire, fire!
The fire bell too is ringing,
Fire, fire, fire, fire!
In the silent hour of midnight
These sounds of terror came
To the peaceful sleeping village
With the roar of angry flames.

And quick from quiet slumbers
The startled sleepers sprang
Men speedily donned their garments
While the bell still wildly rang,
Then rushed to the scene of action
Ready to do and die.
For a fire was in the village
They saw by the flame lit sky.

And their shops and stores are in danger
Their treasures of hard earned gold
They must rescue these from the fire fiend
With courage true and bold.
So they work and toil like heroes
Till the fire has been subdued
None thinking of self or danger
Till all had been rescued.

But an enemy worse than "fire fiend"
Is scourging our village fair
And blighting its present and future
Yes, poisoning the very air
For the fire of hell is burning
The lives and souls of men
At many points in this village
Where the serpent has found a den.

And men are hourly bitten
By this monster in his lair
Who robs of health and manhood
None are too old and none too young
Nor gentle youth nor age will spare,
For this demon waylays all
And our darling sons our pride and joy
May be the next to fall.

* * * * * *

Men say they are not the keepers
Of these tempted fallen ones.
And vote at the polls for this Moloch
Who may yet destroy their sons.
For their business that might suffer
Or some publicans vote might lose
If the call of God and humanity
They did not thus refuse.

Oh! brothers where is your manhood
That you thus ignore the cry
Of the helpless and the fallen
Who now look for aid on high,
To a God of power in Heaven
Who will crush this cruel wrong
Yes sweep from the earth this traffic
That has cursed our race so long.

He well plead the cause of the widow
He will answer the orphans cry
And rescues and saves the fallen
Whom this monster has doomed to die.
But you faint hearted brothers
What must your sentence be?—
In as much as ye did it not to these
Ye did it not to me

Prohibition.

MODERATION.

The Rescue, published in this city, the leading temperance paper of the West, and a creditable production is very bitter against the Republican party, and the Sunday law plank. The Rescue aims at nothing short of absolute prohibition. We hope that it will attain its end, but in the meantime we would counsel that moderation which is born of reason. The Republican party has done more for Temperance than the Democrats. To the temperance people we must look for aid and assistance. We read the papers, we are observant. We know that intemperance is the monster curse, the gigantic evil of this coast, and of our country. Whenever called upon we will assist by our work and means to decrease the sale of liquor on this coast. The merchants pay more every year in taxes, and directly, for whisky than for fares on the railroad. It seems as though the fall campaign will be passed without much temperance agitation. The Sunday law will not be much of an issue on account of the weakness of the platform. We are willing to refuse our votes and influence for any member of the State ticket who is a known drunkard. We want temperate men in office. Everybody is tired of the whisky cry. Let us rally around a temperance banner. The temperance people should organize. We know, of a certainty, that if we had been the representative of a temperance people at Sacramento, a firm plank would have been inserted, instead of the present one. The Rescue should not endanger its interest and ours by throwing odium on the Republican party. The Prohibition party will hold a convention on the 28th inst. A ticket will be nominated. Not one-tenth of the temperance men will vote for it. The result will be detrimental to the interests of the cause, better work for influence with the Republican party. The tidal wave of temperance will cross overland to the Pacific Coast, and as the party recognizes temperance legislation there, so will they here, if the cause is properly advocated.—Vanity Fair.

The advocates of temperance will be grateful to Vanity Fair for its sympathy with our party of justice and mercy. The Rescue aims truly at nothing but absolute prohibition; that once accomplished it will go for extreme moderation in speech, act and feeling. But we cannot be content with any moderate treatment of a plague which is sending 3,000 a year of the people of California to slauter, after leading them and their families a life of torture and misery. The best friends of the Republican party, are those who want to cleanse it from the guilt of all this blood which rests upon it. Our friend is mistaken as to the Republican party ever doing anything for temperance. It is the main bulwark of the whisky business to-day. The surest way to make it more so next year and every year, is to vote for its Leag of Freedom candidates upon its Leag dictated platform.

It would be the best possible thing for this State to utterly destroy its Republican party this fall, if from its ashes a Reform party would arise, purified from the barnacles and parasites which now paralyze whatever is good in it. Their constant assaults upon it brot to life the Democratic party which was dead and almost buried in 1872 and have fed and kept it in full vigor ever since. And it would have come into power but for its own parasites who made it always sing "free rum" and led the people to fear its wrongdoers more than they did the Republicans.

Perhaps there will be a very large vote for the prohibition candidates. Perhaps they will be elected. But whatever may be the success of the ticket this time and whatever time it may take, two years or twelve to get successful prohibition, the action of the prohibitionists this month have shortened the life of the rum-traffic for either two or four years. The movement of a separate party was the only one that could under any circumstances be of the least service to the effort to put a stop to this curse of rum and crime. It is to be hoped Vanity Fair, its readers and all good citizens will vote for the clean, honest temperance ticket and let the political ticket and its associated drunkenness and wife-beating issues take their deserts.

OUR DUTY.

BY REV. GEO. MORRIS.

The following resolutions were passed by the Prohibition Convention held in San Francisco July, 11, 1882.

1. Resolved, That no exigencies of a political campaign, can release a citizen from the obligations of truth, honor, loyalty and public decency.

2. Resolved, That we hold the supremacy of law and the perservation of the laborers' rest day as paramount to party fealty and the hope of political victory or the fear of defeat; and no partizan consideration whatever shall induce us to cast our ballots for a party or a platform which ignores our religious rights, fawns on conspirators or proposes to rob laboring men of a law which protects them, one day in seven, against the oppression of power and the exaction of greed, nor will we support any nominee of any party who is disqualified by a debasing appetite for alcoholic drinks.

3. Resolved, That we will vigilantly await the platforms and nominations of existing parties in the hope that we may find ourselves able to vote like honest and loyal men without the necessity of separating ourselves from the parties which now divide the State. But should no party take the proper steps to protect an efficient Sunday law and favor the plan of referring the question of license to sell intoxicants to the people, then we will meet and take such steps as shall give the voters of our State an opportunity to express their views on these two important questions.

4. Resolved, That we hail with gratitude the triumph of local option in Arkansas and of constitutional prohibition in Kansas, and more recently and more gloriously in Iowa, as a presage and prophecy of victory over the impoverishing and demoralizing liquor business destined ere long to be achieved in every State in the Union, the actual results of these beneficient measures having refuted the calumnies of their adversaries and reassured the faith of their friends, all of which encourages us to believe that public sentiment is now ready for prohibitory legislation in this State, and we shall consider that no party or any candidate on any ticket that is opposed to permitting the people to vote upon the question of the discontinuance of this traffic is entitled to our support.

A Committee was appointed to place the preceding resolutions before the Political Convention.

They waited upon the Republican Convention and all that the Republicans would give was the following weak, wishy-washy generalities.

"History and experience unite to prove the necessity of preserving one day in seven, as a day of rest from labor. Without legislation on this subject, the laboring classes might be compelled to continue in unceasing toil; therefore we are in favor of observing Sunday as a day of rest and recreation, and while we expressly disavow the right or the wish to force any class of our citizens to spend that day in any particular manner, we do favor the maintenance of the present Sunday laws, or similar laws, providing for the suspension of all unnecessary business on that day."

This in no particular meets the requirements of the resolutions passed by the Prohibition Convention so that the Executive Committee of the Convention has no other course left than to call the Convention to reconvene.

Can a Christian vote the Republican Ticket? No.

Why not? Because the Republicans are in favor of observing Sunday as a day of rest and Recreation. Recreation means picnics, processions, brass bands, beer gardens, theaters, races etc.

God's law says "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it Holy." How then can a Chriatian vote a ticket which violates this and declares the Sunday a day of rest and Recreation? No Christian can consistently do so. He sins against God's commandment if he does.

Can a Temperance man vote the Republican Ticket? No.

Why not? Because the so-called Sunday plank is simply in favor of providing for the suspension of all unnecessary business on Sunday. Every body knows that on the plea that men must eat and drink every saloon will be kept open as a necessity. No Temperance man can be caught in such a trap.

Remember the Republican Convention voted against the enactment of such laws as will secure the enforcement of the Sunday law.

Christians and Temperance men, dont be deceived but vote our Ticket. "The Tempehance and Sunday Law Ticket.

Occidental, Sept. 16, 1882.

Ed. Rescue:—Having read the Rescue through I find that temperance men cannot agree in everything as to fighting the enemy of temperance. I see you do not like the Sunday plank in the Republican platform. But you construe it in its worst view, with the supposition that those who are to make the laws will belong to the Leag of Freedom. Now I feel that it is the duty of temperance men to vote for temperance men to make and enforce our laws, and if there is a party powerful enough to help us it is our duty to make use of it, and the Republican party is placed in that position to-day. History but repeats itself. As you can recollect when Lincoln run the first time the Republican party, altho opposed to slavery, could no more have been induced to put an abolition plank in its platform than the same party to-day could be induced to put a prohibition plank in its, but still it did abolish slavery. And that I feel is its position to-day with regard to intemperance, as it merely opposes the encroachment of the whisky power so it will have to abolish that slavery also. The old abolition party did not have the power to abolish slavery, neither does the prohibition party possess the power to abolish the whisky traffic. Many voters do not like to throw away their votes but would like to vote for good consistent temperance men, and that is just the way I feel.

At Azalea Lodge at its last regular meeting a motion was carried to accept the offer of the Rescue and will take twenty monthly copies of same for one year.

As to there being whisky men in the Republican party so there are bad men in every party, church or organization, but I am willing to say and act on the proposition that we will not vote for any man connected with the whisky business.

D. N. Craig, L. D.

This is given a place as well as those on the other side; but we about agree after all; we don't want to vote for whisky men and therefore a third party will be run, and that is the only step that can ever help us to win.

The promoters and instigators of the Nation's crimes and miseries had a recent convention in Illinois, and propose to send out lecturers like the Rev. C. C. Burnett to lecture in their interest and make drunkenness and wife-beating respectable.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

STATE CONVENTION W. C. T. U.

The State Convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union met Wednesday afternoon in the parlors of the Frst Congregational Church, Oakland. The rooms were crowded.

The opening address by the president, Mrs. Browne, was directed to the methods that could be brought to cause the downfall of intemperance. This grand result is to be brought about in two ways, the one growing out of the other. The first way is to influence public opinion, and the second is by direct legislation. The manner by which public opinion is influenced was ably pointed out in the address. Public opinion, said the speaker, is formed by the poet. For example of the opinions of the poet, read the grand poem of Longfellow on drink. Public opinion is also formed by the authors of prose. Chas. Lamb's address to young men shows the sentiment of the writer. Public opinion speaks to us on the Sabbath morning from pulpits of the churches. A recent sermon of Rev. W. J. Smith of San Francisco tells the feeling of the clergy. Public opinion is formed by the Press. A writer in the London Times gives the statistics of the crime caused by liquor. The record of a recent week in San Francisco shows a ghastly chapter of red crimes of uncontrolled madness, the result of a business licensed by the Government to prosecute its nefarious calling. There is something stronger than public opinion—that is the strong arm of the law. Every effect has a cause. What is the cause of a great deal of the misery in this fair land whose virgin soil teems with abundance? Ask any patriot and any statesman. The answer would be in one word, intemperance. In this gathering let us be wise to devise, fearless to execute, and with an ardor born of conviction. May we go forth to the conflict inspiring by other means than by words. If there be a Prometheus to snatch from the high heavens the eternal fires to light the pyre of intemperance, let there a Vesta to guard the home circle. A country where the Sabbath is devoted to Bachanalian revels will soon cease to send its beacon light to other lands. Defeat would be a step downward. Let us wrap around us the panoply of faith and prayer, and putting on the armor of God go forth to victory.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. Mary E. Congdon of Mariposa, was read by Mrs. J. B. McChesney. The treasurer, Mrs. Charles Chamberlain, read her annual report. Each report indicated progress and success in the temperance work. Mrs. Sanford delivered an address.

A committe was appointed to request Miss Frances Willard, president of the national society, and her private secretary to visit this coast.

Reports were read of the prizes offered by R. H. McDonald for essays of school children upon the "Twin Evils." It was decided to continue to offer the prizes during the coming year, and a committee was appointed to attend to the matter in the country towns of the State.

A Committee was appointed to confer with the Catholic priests to endeavor to have them work in unity in the movement.

Mrs. Gray of Oakland was elected President and Mrs. M. E. Congdon of Mariposa reelected Secretary.—Examiner.

DRUNKENNESS IN CHICAGO.

The Chicago News gives a painful account of the alarming prevalence of drunkenness in that city. It says: "Among women in the highest walks of life in Chicago, liquor-drinking and drunkenness are fearfully common." It adds medical testimony as follows: "Dr. Duncan says that he could count twenty such cases, first and last, in his practice. He says that the women living in fashionable hotels and boarding-houses are in a shocking number inebriates. In many cases they have completely broken up their homes and gone headlong to ruin * * * Dr. Lingley says that drunkenness in its very worst forms will be found in some of the first families in the city." This is a very bad state of affairs for Chicago, and there is too much reason to fear that, to a greater or less extent, the counterpart thereof may be found among the fashionable women of all our large cities. The social-drinking customs still in vogue in a certain section of what is conventionally called "good society" cannot but result, in many cases, in the unhappy fruition described by the Chicago physicians. Total abstinence is the only safeguard against such untoward conditions.—Temperance Advocate.

HOW THEY ADULTERATE CALIFORNIA WINE.

It has been supposed that in the land of grapes there was no occasion to make wines and brandies out of poisonous drugs. Mr. Eli Johnson tells us how that is, in the following letter:

Dear Friends:—In this glorious Golden State, with its delightful climate, magnificent scenery, immense trees, grand mountains, awe-inspiring geysers, go-ahead men and beautiful women, I find quite as much of the adulteration of liquors as in any other part of the world. In Sacramento, Oakland and San Francisco, I have found large quantities of drugs for compounding drinks, with every variety of books containing recipes for making intoxicating liquors. In each of these cities and in San Jose and Napa City I have addressed immense audiences, especially in San Jose, where the good people treated me like a king, giving me three very large meetings in their best churches.

The beautiful Napa valley is largely given over to the raising of grapes, which are converted into Devil's drink in great quantities. As a natural consequence, the churches are rapidly losing their spiritual power. Rev. A. J. Wells, of the M. E. Church, and his devoted wife are doing all in their power to stem the tide of wine and brandy, with fearful odds against them.

The wine and brandy growers of Napa valley have been expelling some of their members for adulterating their liquors. One of the members who has been very active in expelling others owns a wine cellar and distillery; passing by it and finding the doors open, I entered and went through without a personal attendant. I searched the establishment from bottom to top and found abundant evidence that he too had been making "Drinks from Drugs." Just as I was leaving the establishment a little daughter of the proprietor, who was playing on the porch, saw me and ran into the house crying, "Mamma! mamma! man! Mamma, man!" This brought mamma to the door, and I took my departure.

Next month I expect to be in Honolulu while the Legislature is in session which is to vote upon the question of total prohibition of the liquor traffic in the Hawaiian Islands. The temperance workers there are expecting me to aid them in their battle.

Eli Johnson, in Saloon Curse.

Santa Rosa, Cal.

POSTED.

BY REV. C. M. LIVINGSTON.

Always have a reason for your faith. In this temperance war you'll make poor headway if your head doesn't back up your heart. Many a one, zealous but ignorant, has harmed the cause by talking about what he didn't know, or by not talking when he might have talked well, if he had informed himself.

Now there are daily opportunities when words fitly spoken for temperance are like "apples of gold in pictures of silver." A temperance soldier should have his quiver full of nimble and sure arrows, and one on the string.

"They lie who say that rum causes half of the crime. Who in the audience will stand up and try to prove it?" Thus boastingly spoke a rum lecturer.

"I will," said a gentleman.

"What do you know about this matter?"

"I know from examination of the police records that eighty-one per cent. of our city crime is traceable to rum."

The rummy was speechless. But what if some one hadn't been posted?

A saloonist once asked me for an hour to prove that beer was a blessing, and so overcome my opposition. I asked him to meet me at 2 P. M. Meanwhile I "posted up" on beer. He came and we "had it." But he never sought another interview. Thanks to that posting.

I had a friend who heartily believed the Bible to be a temperance book. But he had not prepared himself to defend that position. On one occasion he was pressed for proof, but could not command one conclusive verse. But his adversary (like one of old) skillfully quoted several verses that seemed to point the other way, and then rejoiced over my friend, or rather over the temperance cause.

When one is thoroly informed, I pity him who tries to prove to such a one that rum and the like are "good creatures," etc.; that Bible wine is always alcoholic; that the pledge is unscriptural; that prohibition is a failure; that beer is wholesome; and much more of the rum argument.

A fully equipped temperance soldier need never fear all the rum champions in battle array. And this equipment will not come by an occasional reading of a temperance paper or tract, or hearing often temperance lectures. One must study up the whole subject for himself and keep up the study and its discussion till you know.

Mr. D. C. Cook, Chicago, can furnish you the needful documents.—Church and Home.

LEGISLATING ON MORALS.

"The evil of divorce is to be met and subdued, as intemperance, and all other moral evils must be, not primarily by legislation, but by the cultivation of a better public sentiment on the subject of marriage."

So says a contemporary. Of course such evils can not be "subdued primarily" by legislation; no sensible person imagins that they can be. There must, first, be a public sentiment which will approve such legislation before the laws can be made effective or even put in force. This has been often demonstrated. But secondarily, legislation supported by public sentiment is an immense advantage. Liquor dealers, gamblers, keepers of vile resorts, appreciate this so much that they will spend hundreds of thousands to prevent what they call moral legislation. If prohibition does not prohibit, as some claim, why are the liquor men so desperate in their hostility to prohibitory law? The fact is simply this, that no amount of public sentiment is of any avail to suppress the tyranny of vice while it is unsupported by the laws. Give the "better public sentiment" the advantage of the law and it becomes overwhelming. —N. Y. Observer.

A QUIET Sunday is so allied with the saloon question that the temperance army has got to fight on both lines. At any rate, the saloonists are ranging themselves in one solid phalanx as regards prohibition one day in the week, and prohibition for the entire seven days. In Wisconsin the Sunday phase is foremost, and will soon be in politics. At Racine, the second largest city in the State, the combat between saloon-keepers and order-loving people deepens daily. The W. C. T. U. and all the city churches petitioned the common council for an enforcement of the State law regarding Sunday, and their action was probable and imminent whereupon the saloon-keepers became aroused and turned the tables by vowing to close every other place of business if an attempt was made to close them, and immediately began boycotting all interested in the movement, from the bankers to liverymen, merchants, and others. They threatened to close every livery-stable, and cause every book-keeper, manufacturer, or anyone else caught laboring on Sunday, to be arrested if the matter is pressed. The common council is afraid to act in the matter, and the utmost excitement prevails. Reports of a similar state of affairs are received from other cities in the State. Now what the country needs is men—not quibblers or politicians —men who will stand by their guns, and look the embattled liquor traffic squarely in the face, and, if need be—fire!—Chicago Signal.

PRESIDENT Arthur has to travel East to get the malaria of the White House out of his system. Somebody recommends having a new cellar under the Presidential Mansion, to clear away the noisome vapors which have such an unwholesome effect upon the health of some of its occupants. It would be a cheaper and quicker method to clear the whisky and cigars, and poisoned wines, &c, out of the present cellar. Under the regime of Mr. Hayes it was all right.

THE REV. C. C. Burnett of Iowa, a discarded clergyman of Iowa, has been appointed chaplain and lecturer for the drunkard-makers who have decided to make their business respectable. The appointment of Mr. Burnett is eminently judicious policy, for although he is a traitor and a castaway and a publicly convicted liar, he is the most respectable article the liquor traffic has among all its properties, or could borrow or hire to take service in their man-killing, wife-beating, jailbird confederacy.

CLOSED.—The fiscal year of the Grand Lodge closed, by order of the Finance Committee, September 20th, since which date the G. W. S. office has been busily engaged in closing and balancing the accounts of the Grand Lodge for the year, to the exclusion of all other business. Hence if a few days delay is experienced by those ordering supplies etc. they will know the "reason why." The years record shows an immense volume of business transacted, all of which it is hoped will be in readiness for a complete exhibit to the Grand Lodge which assembles next Tuesday at 10 o'clock A. M., at No. 32 O'Farrell street as previously announced. Quite a number of Lodges are delinquent for last quarters returns, hence they will not appear in the list of live Lodges to be presented to the Grand Lodge, but will be recorded among the delinquent Lodges. The years business foots up nearly $40,000.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb and Hugh R. Hughes.

J. W. WEBB.

HOLLISTER.—By some strange mischance, no report from me has appeared in the RESCUE, of the above place. I feel sure I wrote one and that it must have miscarried, for I have the most lively appreciation of the kind and generous treatment I received there as lecturer. Ample arrangements and good advertising prepared the way. A committee of reception went to the cars to meet me; the best of hotel accommodations were secured and the Lodge saved Grand Lodge all expense by footing the bill. When I went to San Juan, Bro. J. K. Allen and others came over for me in a most comfortable covered carriage kindly furnished by one of the brethren whose name I now forget. The people turned out well, listened very patiently and gave us over 20 names for membership. On Sunday night the churches held a union meeting and secured a full house. I think the Lodge now numbers over 200, including a number of very influential people and some noble trophies won from the ranks of hard drinkers. Bro. R. M. Shackleford, the able W. C. T. is a most efficient worker. They show great enterprise in renting a Hall for their exclusive use which they are gradually furnishing, buying a fine organ etc. I obtained a number of subscriptions for the RESCUE and sold many of D. C. Cook's books. The Lodge is undoubtedly exercising a great influence for good. Their last noble work was to erect a public fountain and water trough on the Main street. The subscription list was passed round town one morning and soon over $100 was subscribed. I think a reading room will soon follow with such a successful status as they now enjoy and such earnest workers I don't see how the Lodge can fail. They are worthy of all help and I trust the Grand Lodge will not forget to send them a lecturer as often as possible. I hope to meet a full delegation at Grand Lodge.

H. R. HUGHES.

EDITOR RESCUE:—After resting for a season I took a short run through "Old Tuolume,"—found there 10 lodges in good working order, and delegates from eight lodges met in Sonora to "Consider the political interests of the county."

Soulsbyville Lodge, Table Mt. and Quartz Mt. lodges own their own halls and furniture. Confidence Lodge have secured the lot and lumber, and are building their hall, and Bald Mt. Lodge, under the leadership of Bro. Coles, are working for a hall fund (have quite a sum on hand) and intend to go to housekeeping by and by.

Tuolumne Lodge, at Cherase, which I was not able to visit, are having quite a boom, taking in members at every meeting, they have worked hard and are deserving of success. I have not been in the county before for over a year, and with the exception of ten days work by Bro. Goulding, in a rain storm, last Nov., that county has had no outside help—and considering that all but one were new lodges, they have done better than any county that I know of, excepting Mariposa.

Organized a Band of Hope at Confidence (got 18 to join who were members of the lodge) Mrs. E. W. Smith, Supt., and their faithful L. D. John D. Williams, Assistant. This brother has renounced his besetting sins, so as to lead a good example for the mountain boys to follow A flourishing B. of H. has also been organized at Somerville.

The Columbia Band of Hope, under the leadership of Mrs. Dealy, and her faithful son turned out in full force to the lecture. I wish all our B. of H. workers would follow the example, and get the children out to the temperance meetings, so that they may be encouraged to go forth as workers, for they are the best little missionaries in the world. My traveling companion C. Duffy succeeded in introducing some excellent temperance books, into several of the public school libraries as well as into the homes of the people.

As I am on the independent line (by the pleasure of the powers that be) I have been calmly surveying the field in which I have toiled for the past two years. And while there is much to discourage and much to be done, yet there is an abundance of visible results, and great reasons for encouragement and gratitude to God for the blessings attending such feeble instrumentalities.

Every day I have strong expressions from leading men, that denote the drifting current of public opinion. And the very prominent part that Sunday and sumptuary laws are playing in our State and county conventions. And the heated discussions in the press and on the platform are leading men to consider and think as Californians have never done before. And when the smoke of the battle is over, I hope that many of our champions will be victorious, and the cause of humanity will come forth untarnished and undefiled, if not entirely triumphant at the present election.

NEVADA.

After writing my last, I spent three nights in Reno, where I received 22 names for the Lodge and organized a Band of Hope with 51 members. On leaving here I started south, stopping a few days with Bro. and Sister Ewing P. G. W. C. T. and G. W. V. T., whom we found to be old friends and coworkers, in the State of Nebraska, from here we went to Dayton, where we found a live progressive lodge. The Bros. and Sisters know how to do things in a royal way, good audiences greeted us each evening. At the close of the last lecture, the Good Templars were invited to Bro. J. L. Campbell's, where Sister C. and the others had prepared ice cream etc., thus I had an opportunity to become more personally acquainted with the members; from here went to Mason Valley by rail and stage 60 miles, where we found a staunch lodge of some 90 members old and young, the parents believing that if temperance was good for their children it is good for them, so once a week the year round, the Good Templars light is trimmed and burning and may be seen all over the valley. For the past year the Lodge has had a hard battle with traitors within and foes without, but the traitors have been discovered, and soon the Lodge will have rid itself of them and then be able to make a more aggressive warfare upon the enemies ranks. This little town in the valley has long been known as "Pizen Switch," so called from the amount of whisky sold in it, but the G. T. propose to redeem it from this stigma by removing the dens of sin and let the surrounding country know that Greenfield is the name of the valley. With many a well-wish from the good people here I left after three days visit for a 90 miles' trip, 50 by rail and 40 by stage to Aurora. Here I found one of the dead towns of Nev.; a town that was but is not now, once a population of 8000 people, to-day 150. Lectured one evening to a very fair audience for the place, and on the morning of the 7th, visited the school taught by Miss Clara Gregory of Sacramento who allowed me ten minutes to speak to the school. As I closed having explained the Band of Hope pledge, I asked how many would be willing to take such a pledge, every one of the 32 scholars raised their hand. I then arranged with Miss G. to institute a Band to which she gladly consented having the promise of assistance from several of the ladies in the town. Then satchel in hand set out on foot for Bodie 12 miles away, but fortune favored me and I was overtaken at the end of two miles walk by a Bodie butcher, and thus I took my departure out of the Silver State with many pleasant memories and much experience. F. J. CULVER.

General Outfitting Establishment. WEINSTOCK & LUBIN, 400, 402, 404 406 and 408 K St., Sacramento, Cal.

The M. E. Conference passed the following resolutions at its close.

First—That while we, without qualification, consider constitutional total prohibition in the nation and States the ultimate end of all our efforts, we are of the opinion that the people of California are not yet ready for it, and that any attempt on the part of its friends to organize at the present time a political party to enter the field against other parties will prove abortive and delay its final triumph.

Second—That the present profound conviction in favor of more stringent temperance laws, the grand success of the campaign in 1874 resulting in the redemption of thousands of our citizens from the curse of drink and the financial ruin of many who were engaged in the sale of alcoholic liquors, lead us to believe that judicious counsel and united, vigorous action will secure us a local option law, and we hereby pledge ourselves to use all of our influence to obtain it and to work for it.

Third—That the origination of the present agitati on of the Sunday law is largely due to the I. O. G. T.. whose thoughtfulness in publishing the State laws on temperance. and whose courage and fidelity in seeking their enforcement merit, and are hereby tendered our hearty thanks.

It is nobody's business to criticize the acts of that body until they trench upon foreign ground. It is now suggested that it would have been consistent to add one more, viz.

Fourth—"That while we, without qualification, consider that the kingdom of Satan ot to be overthrown in California, and this should be th e ultimate aim of all our efforts, we are of the opinion that the people of this State are not yet ready for it—and any action of this cl u ch which would bear any unfriendly interpretation to Satan and his interests would be unwise as it might be abortiv and delay HIS final triumph."

It is a new thing for an M. E. Conference to pool its issues and unite its efforts with the leag of Freedom and the dramshop, to subscribe to a confession of faith on the Sunday question, engineered by Mr. Schaeffer, and to act as the armor bearers of the drunkard-makers, who have, for the present, obtained the mastery of political parties.

Many people who know something of the M. E. Church and its ministers will believe that this was an expression of that body, wrung from them under a tremendous pressure, brot to bear by a few of its politician members; it is the least creditable, the most inconsistent manifesto we ever remember to have come from a Methodist body in America.

The friends of temperance will be sorry to have the originators of those resolutions opposed to us in the fight for prohibition; but we are thankful to know who are our enemies and who our friends. And we shall be very careful to avoid the advice of those who promise to cast their votes for drunkard-makers and the tools of the dramshop and the anti-Sunday beer leags. And they may as well understand that the day of prolonging the Kingdom of Satan by delusive half measures, is past in this State. Prohibition is the first measure the temperance people will go for.

The circular referred to as published by the Good Templars was compiled and published by Dr. McDonald of the Pacific Bank, to meet the emergency created by the attack of the Leag of Freedom on the Sunday law.

POLITICIANS ON RADICALISM.

Gath reports in the Cin. Enquirer a conversation which he had in August with William H. Mickham, who was Mayor of New York under John Kelley, in which among other things Mickham said:

RISE OF RADICALISM.

The abdication of moral ideas by the Republican party accounts for the rise of the Temperance party in the West. In every Anglo-Saxon State is the old Cromwellian spirit, of the government of God upon this earth. It is ever moving forward to clear the earth for the coming of God. Unpopular as its zealotry and social interference is, we owe to it amid great temptations of wealth and luxury, war and license, the preservation of our society. Like a rock it has withstood the inrolling surges of emigration and of Eastern worldiness, rooted in the great valley of the West, with its Puritan and Presbyterian traditions, and perceiving that the Republican Administration at Washington has set up the sideboard and the midnight caucus, and invited all Milesia in to apportion the great honors of the Commonwealth, the old Cromwellian party, no longer directed by a Vane, a Milton or even a Fairfax, is finding out short cuts towards the kingdom of God in the State platforms, and it indulges in the vast dream of a State everlastingly free from drunkenness, where pauperism will be unknown and crime and insanity rare as political candor now. In several of the Southern States a similar movement has been locally successful.

Nothing is clearer than that the only reform force which can cope with political machine organization successfully is the religious forces of the country. They are constantly organized. The merely moral forces are never well organized. I read in Carl Schurz's paper only yesterday his own editorial, doutless, that total abstinence legislation could not be administered. He, a Civil Service agent and Free Trade apostle, believes that you can break a man of committing an imprudence, but not of a crime. The religious forces in this country have no such German cowardice; their ancestors cut off the head of a King who told lies and kicked all the office holders of another King out of their continent, and stopped the stealing of a fellow-man's labor, and still they are ready to move on the impossible and make it possible.

THE RECENT lecture by Mr. Wetmore was addressed to an audience that heartily applauded every slur cast upon American customs and American people. The lecturer enlarged much upon the superiority of the imported drunkards and drunkard-makers over the American stock who build churches and schoolhouses, and who found colleges and libraries and benevolent institutions. He appeared to be somewhat ashamed that he was of New England parentage, but he may rest happy in the confident assurance that the passion is mutual, and New England is heartily ashamed of her recreant son, and with abundant reason. His suggestion was well received too, that we want a large importation of foreign drunkard-makers to crowd out the American sober and Christian classes. They do get crowded out of the wine districts pretty fast, it is said. Few American families can continue long to live in such neighborhoods as those where tho wine manufacture has cast its deadly blight.

WHAT IS WANTED.

We are unable to see wherein the temperance question enters into politics this year under the issues raised by the Republican and Democratic parties. The Republican platform does not raise a direct issue on the Sunday law question. The Republican party only favors the maintenance of the present Sunday law or a similar one. The Democrats want it repealed because it is an unjust law, and in its present form cannot be enforced. As the Sunday law now stands on the statute books, druggists and tavern keepers are permitted to sell intoxicating liquors on Sunday, while saloon keepers are required to close up their places of business. The law in this respect, is so manifestly unjust and discriminating, that juries will not convict a saloon keeper for keeping open on Sunday. The law is plain enough, but juries will commit perjury before they will find a verdict of guilty; and this is wherein the juries are all wrong. The question as to whether the law is a just one or an unjust one, is of no concern to the juries; and when the evidence in a case of this kind is plain and direct, and a jury acquit on the gronnd that the law is unjust, they are guilty of rank perjury. Therefore all the money used in the present campaign by the temperance people to elect the Republican ticket, and continue in force the present Sunday law, is money used in the whisky interest, and only tends to corrupt the morals of the people. What we want, is a law absolutely prohibiting the sale or giving away of any spirituous liquors on Sunday. We do not believe in allowing a tavern keeper or druggist to sell liquor on Sunday, while a saloon keeper is made to close up.—Tulare Times.

It is news if temperance people are spending money to elect the Republican ticket in this State. Don't think they will do such a crooked thing. The Times is right in saying there is no temperance question between the two old parties. They both fly the broad pennant of the Leag of Fiendom and the skull and crossbones ensign of the dramshop. They have both agreed that the slauter of 3,000 citizens of this State by rum and beer every year shall continue and that the beer garden and other brothels and ginmills shall make laws and Sunday for the people. It is hoped our good friend of the Times will vote the prohibition ticket and work for it like a man. It goes for just the law desired.

REFORMING ADDLED EGGS.

The Prohibitionist says: "A political party once having accomplished the work for which it was organized and become corrupted, cannot be reformed and purified; it is an impossibility and all history so teaches.

Repairs and patches may hide its corruptions and retard its dissolution, but thoro reform is as impossible as "putting a new soul into an old body."

The history of the Democratic party for 21 years past confirms this assertion. All this time it has had a chance to reform and recover its lost power. For the last 14 years especially the Republican party has been so corrupt, that it might have been easily supplanted by a party that evinced a particle of virtue or penitence. But the Democratic party has been all the while manipulated by the most corrupt and unprincipled of its adherents and its better partisans kept in the background. It has kept right along reaffirming the errors that destroyed it, as of old, fighting prohibition, shouting free rum, putting it into the power of the Republican leaders when any would be reformer or bolter objected to their evil deeds, to terrify them with the cry, "What! are you going to let the Democrats into power?" and the fear of that alternative was sufficient to force everybody to put up with a lesser evil rather than incur a greater one. Those who shall attempt to reform the Republican party will have a sickly time. One reform sets up Estee and when he is beaten, Paul Newmann will boss the next reform; then Booth will be the Moses; but it won't cross the Red Sea.

SMITH RIVER, DEL NORTE CO. CAL., Sep., 15, 1882.

ED. RESCUE; In looking over the "Directory of Lodges" I see only one credited to Del Norte County, whereas there are two; be it known that "Del Norte Lodge, No. 512, I. O. G. T." meets regularly every Saturday night, at Smith River, and is steadily growing, having a membership of about 70 and is doing a good work.

The Republican Convention has treated "the Sunday question" very gingerly, and there is just about as much faith (or lack of it) in their "Sunday plank" as in that of the Democratic, it seems to me the opportune moment has arrived for the honest Temperance people of this State to start out "on their own hook," and nominate their own officers in the organization of a third party, known as the Temperance Party; and I fully believe, that with judicious selection of officers to fill the various positions, and a moderate effort to arouse the people to the necessity of the movement, the day might be carried for the cause of Temperance. Suppose we should nominate for Governor W. H. BARNES, of San Francisco; the present head and leader of the A. O. U. W, in this State; than whom there is no stronger advocate of Temperance on the coast; whose character is above suspicion, and whose abilities are unquestioned; a fearless advocate of what he believes to be right.

The Order of A. O. U. W. was so well pleased with his administration that he was unanimously reelected to the position of Grand Master Workman of that Order in this State, and I believe it safe to say, if nominated for Governor on the Temperance ticket he would be supported by at least 15,000 votes of members of that body; and add those of the Order of I. O. G. T. with what outside assistance so well known and highly esteemed a man would be likely to receive, and I feel confident that he would be elected, if the minor officers could not be carried. Then do our utmost to send to legislature none but Temperance men, and the battle against intemperance would soon be won. Shall we make the effort? Let us "strike while the iron is hot"! Hurrah! for prohibition!! O. V. WALLACE, Lodge Deputy.

CHICO, Sept. 19, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—I am glad to see the convention of July 11th, is to meet again on the 28th. I see no reason why the candidates endorsed won't come in away ahead, and no reason why the straight ticket should not stand a good chance of success. At least the next Democratic and Republican conventions will have something to say in their convention platforms on the temperance question; and if only that result is obtained, it will be an improvement on being led by the nose, to vote for old whisky bloats as in the past. I know your time and good nature are tried by receiving so many communications from all sources; but this was not intended for publication, only to let you know that one more temperance man has bolted the Republican party, and "seconded the motion" on the Prohibition party side, and I know 65 men pledged to vote Prohibition here. We have just organized a Home Protection Association, and it is composed of the no-surrender, under any circumstances, material, and in November its shot will tell on the "Free Beer, No Sunday," and "Recreation" parties. IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.—Forbestown Butte Co. California, Sep. 11, 1882, Mrs. Henry E. Vail, aged 38 years 6 mos., 5 days.

Mrs. Vail was W. C. T. of Taylor Lodge No. 222, an active and faithful member, an earnest worker in the cause of temperance, a willing zealous helper in the Band of Hope, the Sunday school and in every work which had the welfare of humanity its purpose.

The family, the community, the Lodge deplore their loss and tenderly cherish the memory of the departed. The Lodge passed the usual mourning ceremonials and tendered resolutions of kindliest appreciation of the noble record of the departed and of warmest sympathy with the family bereaved.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

HE GETS DRUNK.

"Oh, well, he's the smartest young man in our class."

"Yet, but he gets drunk."

"Oh! but he's so fine looking, so noble and talented withal. His composition yesterday was the very best in our division. He writes spendidly! They say he's writing for a magazine, and not out of school yet!—won't he be a great man, though, some day!"

"No, I don't think he will."

"Why not?"

"He gets drunk."

"Oh! that's nothing; a good many smart men get drunk. Every young man has his wild oats to sow, and because a fellow gets a little boozy once in a while I wouldn't condemn him forever. Quite likely he'll outgrow it when he gets older and sees the folly of it."

"More likely that will outgrow him; and as to his getting a little boozy, I'm afraid he was a good deal so when the boys found him beside the walk, the other night, and had to carry him to his room, dodging around street corners and skulking through byways, so that none of the professors would see him. I tell you a person who drinks at all is not to be depended on. The only young men that I have any confidence in are those who let intoxicating liquors entirely alone."

"Well, I don't care, he's good aud smart, anyhow, and I like him."

"I dont; he gets drunk!"

So the conversation ran on between two schoolmates who were just ahead of me. Ah! how those words, "He gets drunk," kept ringing in my ears! Possessed of a noble manhood and a glorious intellect; blessed with the best and greatest of God's gifts; having the love and approbation of teachers; admired and looked up to by associates; the pride and hope of a fond father, entertwined in the heart and life of a doting mother, united in close and tender bonds with brothers and sisters; holding in his hand the honor and good name of the institution with which he is connected; of the soicety in which he mingles, and yet he "gets drunk!"

GET RID OF THE SALOONS.

The Cedar Rapids Times, in discussing the amendment question, says: "The fact is, there is a general desire all over the State to get rid of the saloon. The average saloon keeper has violated every pledge, has broken every law restricting him, and made himself so generally and particularly obnoxious, and has proved himself such an adept at evading the law, such a willing payer of fines, and so equally willing to pay up and go ahead again in the same way that the people generally, outside the saloon interests, directly, are anxious to see him suppressed."

It is no doubt right to have as much charity as possible for the man in the liquor trade. And the most charitable thing that could be done for him, would be to either persuade or compel him to abandon his business. There is no vocation that so degrades a man, none that so blasts and blackens his soul for time and eternity; no business that so degrades his family, and places the wife and children within bad surroundings; and the person who by fair and legitimate means, compels a man to cease selling liquor, does him and his family a kindness, whether they appreciate it or not.

Warren F. Spalding, Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Prison Commissioners, states that of the 50,000 persons arrested for crime in Massachusetts the past year, ninety per cent. were habitual drinkers, and that seventy-five per cent. of the 60,000 persons aided by the authorities of the cities and towns of the State, were brought to their condition of poverty through the instrumentality of strong drink.

Stop that man! You won't stop him? But he is running out of your field, a bag of your potatoes on his back and a chicken in each pocket. Stop that man! He is running out of your house now, your money jingling in his pocket. Stop that man! He has taken the jacket from your boy's back, the shoes from your boy's feet. Has he gone? You will face him the next time you stand at his counter and ask for ale. Stop him, or rather, stop yourself.—Saloon Curse.

"A Bill to Make Idiots."—A writer in the New York Herald thus designates Mr. Post's bill to reduce the internal revenue tax on cigaretts. Here is his indictment: "Mr. Post must be an enemy of the human race. He could not, if he tried, hit upon a more certain method of killing off a large portion of the rising generation and of making idiots of the one that is to follow it. The cigarette actually kills thousands and thousands of children and young men, and those whom it does not destroy physically, it mentally ruins. The tax on it should be increased, not reduced. It would be well to place it so high as to put these poisonous packages beyond the reach of the small boy."

Can the Boy be Saved?—What will you say when you hear the facts? A boy nine years old was before a police justice in Chicago, and was discharged on condition that he would go home. On the next night he was arrested at the request of his parents, who complained of his staying out at nights and of his stealing. His brother, two years older, was fined $50. This tells a hard story on the parents themselves, and on the neighborhood and on the Sunday-school agencies in the vicinity. A clergyman said in public lately, in Chicago, that if children in that city can be saved from drunkenness till they are fourteen, they are almost certain of future safety. Is it not a fearful thing to have little children engulfed in vice before they reach their teens? Is there not a work for the church to do, and every member of it, while her children are being devoured?—Prohib. Banner.

A Man in Illinois, who is chairman of a license board, heard his own ruined son say recently, after a fit of delirium tremens, in which he tried to kill himself:

"Now, father, what sense is there in your argument that we must have the license money to keep up this town? Here I earned $148 as a hod-carrier, because I've wasted myself so that I'm fit for no better business. I then went on a spree and spent every cent, of it in one of those saloons, and am now in debt fifteen dollars more to the proprietor. Is there much money in that for our family firm?"

But his father could not see it, and still believes in "regulating (?) the family traffic!"

His mother sees clearly, but neither she nor the other women in the community can help it. Beautiful scheme!—Signal.

General Harrison and Wine.—A Pennsylvania lady tells that when General Harrison was running for the Presidency, he stopped at the old Washington House, in Chester, for dinner. After dinner was served, it was noticed that the General pledged his toast in water, and one of the gentlemen from New York said, "General, will you favor me by drinking a glass of wine?" The General refused in a very gentlemanly manner. Again he was urged to join in a glass of wine. This was too much. He arose from the table, his tall form erect, and in the most dignified manner replied: "Gentlemen, I have refused twice to partake of the wine-cup. That should have been sufficient. Though you press the cup to my lips, not a drop shall pass the portals. I made a resolve when I started in life that I would avoid strong drink, and I have never broken it. I am one of a class of seventeen young men who graduated, and the other sixteen fill drunkards graves—all through the pernicious habit of wine-drinking. I owe all my health, happiness, and prosperity to that resolution. Will you urge me now?"—Ex.

There is one perfectly sure remedy for intemperance, and that is total abstinence. There is no sure remedy except that, and what I will not recommend to myself, I will not recommend to others. I have been a total abstainer from birth. I rejoice that I was early taught to abhor even moderate drinking, and that what I suppose to be sound principles as to temperance were inculcated upon me from the very outset of my preference as a child. Let us bring our offspring up by our example rather than by our precept. Let us set in our household such a blazing light before our children that when they come into temptations of great cities that they shall be strong in advance of their period of trial. Let us put the school and the press on the right side. Let us make the church a great pillar of fire, through which God can look in the morning watch, and trouble the host of his enemies, and take off their chariot-wheels.—Rev. Joseph Cook.

DONT GO IN.

"Young man, that is the gateway of hell," said an earnest Christian woman to a young man loitering on a tavern step. He started, turned and went out—began to reflect, to pray, to be a Christian. That saloon door is the gate to perdition. For your life, for your soul, dont go in! Oh, don't go in! it is the top of that incline plane which is "smooth as glass, slippery as ice," and ends in the blackness of darkness.

In there are the bad company, the vulgar talk, the idle game, the drink of poison fire, the beginning of the horrible, treacherous, deadly appetite, which will bind your soul with fetters of brass and hooks of steel. Dont go in.

That saloon is a net laid to catch your unwary soul; it leads to the castle of Giant Despair, out of which you will never come again into the sweet sunlight. God is looking down from heaven; your soul is hanging in the balance. For the sake of the dear ones you will ruin, the life you will blast, the heaven you will lose—dont go in.—India Watchman.

A mad dog roams the street. Children are going up and down. They are warned. With the bold curiosity of youth they venture near. One says, "He doesn't look cross; I'll handle him." He is bitten and dies in the arms of his father. Some people say, "It's a shame; the dog ought to be put off the street." Others say, "No, the children should have kept away and they would not have been bitten."

Is the street designed for mad dogs or children? Kill the dog and let the children run.

So the rum-shops. Society is for the people, not for those who prey upon the people. Instead of asking that people should avoid the rum-shops, we should demand that the rum-shops avoid the people.

The streets are for the citizen: if any one has to vacate let it be the alien and the enemy.—Crusader.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

In summing up the reports for the year, there are many encouraging features.

So many of the letters are full of cheer. I quote from a Southern California letter:

"We are all very proud of our Band, and so far it has done a great deal of good here. I heard a mother say: "The Band of Hope has done more good here than anything we ever had. Why, my boys used to swear at everything that vexed them; now I never hear an oath from them." When we first began only two boys belonged, and people said: "What is the use of the Band of Hope? Only girls belong, and they dont swear or use tobacco anyway"; but boys are bound to respect what the girls do, and when they find that the girls respect neither tobacco or profanity, or those who indulge in them, they join the Band of Hope, and, as a result, we have as many boys, and young men too, in our Band as girls."

The writer of this letter has hit the nail on the head.

Dear girls, you have it in your hands to determine not only what the future of the Band of Hope shall be, but also that of the "coming man." Whatever you respect he will try to be. If you show by your words and actions that you respect only clean, pure men, the boys will aim to be pure and clean; but if you wink at vice in its various forms, if you will accept attentions from a young man who smokes, swears, or drinks, you are exerting a bad influence, not a good one.

Draw a line and put on one side young men who drink, smoke, and swear, and associate only with those who do neither. You can make what you like of the coming man.

Another Supt. writes that in a school of 70 pupils only one is known to use tobacco, and he is a boy who has lately come there.

That is a good showing for the Band of Hope, isn't it? And so the cheering reports come in from all parts of the state, and even from Prescott, Arizona, the word comes that the Band of Hope no longer satisfies, but a Good Templar's Lodge must follow.

From Caspar, Mendocino, a letter comes full of good reports from the Band of Hope, but setting forth the difficulties in the way so strongly that I must quote. "From Gualala to Westport, on the coast line, a distance of 80 miles, there is a saloon, on an average every mile and a half." With all these enemies to fight no wonder that the friends of Temperance are in earnest. The army that is surrounded by the foe is ever vigilant, never off guard, but always ready for the conflict.

But however our foes may rage, it is all in vain, for "He that is for us is mightier than he that is against us," and the Lord is on our side, and eventually we must prevail. M. E. RICHARDSON.

P. R. McCABE TO YOUNG MEN.

(Concluded.)

How many are there who have not noticed numbers of young men going into Good Templars Lodges, and taking a solemn pledge;a pledge that is morally just as binding as one taken in a court of justice to abstain from all that will intoxicate, and to do all in their power to banish the cause of intemperance, as long as they live. Yet with the least possible regard for their honor they most wantonly violate their obligations

Members do not violate their obligations as regards drinking, but how many violate their principles by their actions. In speaking of some members of difierent lodges to outside parties, the latter would be surprised to think such persons were members. Why? Because the said members were habitually hanging around the saloons. But this saloon question is nothing in comparison to their actions when asked to vote, as all temperance members should, as they pray. You will see this same pledge violator on election day when approached by a temperance worker, scorn him and in all probability walk off with some whisky politician and vote to support the very men who are opposed to every principle he has pledged himself to maintain.

When, O when! will the young men of the present day rise and dare to maintain the principles they advocate, and refuse to be led by such shallow cries as; "Why do you want to vote that ticket, (meaning the temperance ticket)" and "you are only throwing your vote away, there is no chance to elect your man" etc. I know what such cries are for, I have have had the same tactics used to influence my vote during the last Presidencial election, when I dared vote as I prayed and in answer to all their sneering remarks I would say, that I was voting for principle not policy. Suppose that when the slavery agitation was begun when a half a dozen or more determined men,met in a little out of the way church in the suburbs of Boston and organized the Anti-Slavery party. to maintain and advocate their principles, were while speaking in public treated with ancient eggs and even dragged through the streets by the hair. Suppose they had given up their principles, would the question have been settled as soon as it was? No, most assuredly not. It was their determination to stand by their principles in spite of everything else that won them their cause. And today we have a slavery question to fight by our ballots; but it is not of white or black but of all classes and caused by the liquor traffic. And the question for us young men to decide is, are we going to give our voice and hearty support to the organizations that are in existence for the purpose of banishing this slavery.

If all the young men of this country to-day were to use their influence with the temperance prohibitory organizations I do not think that either of the old parties would have a ghost of a chance for success. And why not use your influence in this direction and not let our opponents be continually jeering us with want of backbone in not maintaining the principles we pledge ourselves to support. Although few of you may be aware of it, I can assure you that there is in this country to-day a greater sentiment in favor of prohibitory legislation than ever before. There is not the least doubt in my mind that before another decade will have passed away a temperance ticket will sweep the United States. How many young are there here to-day who would not be proud of helping to accomplish such a result?

Now is the time to "fall in." Do not wait until it becomes popular, before you maintain your principles and vote as you pray. In conclusion let me urge on all young men present, the necessity of taking decided action on this question. Let us each and every one resolve here to-night that we will not hereafter support any man for office unless he is an avowed temperance man. When we take that stand you will see a lively change in the views of a great many of our present politicians.

Address to Turlock Lodge.

IN OHIO the Sunday beer garden republicanism looks very sick. Christian and temperance people have been mocked and sold out regularly for twenty years, and many of them want more of it.

MOTHER DON'T KNOW.

Walking along one of the streets of Boston, last evening, we met two plainly dressed boys carrying the basket of clothes which their mother washed. One might be thirteen and the other nine. Both were smoking. As we said, "Good evening, boys," they put down the basket and took their cigars from their months. "We have a boy about your age," addressing the elder, "and so we are fond of boys." Their faces brightened. "We should feel badly to have him smoke as you are doing, because we think it would weaken his mind and his body, and you know the mothers depend upon their boys for very much in this world. How much does your cigar cost you?" "Three cents, and I smoke three a day."

"And that would make over thirty dollars a year, which would buy clothes or books. How long have you smoked?" Since I was eight—five years; and Tommy, who is nine, has smoked for a year." "Does your father smoke?"—for if he has the habit, there is little use for precept usually. "He is dead." "And what does your mother say? 'My mother,' said the boy, with a downcast look, 'she dont know I smoke.'

A smoker for five years, carrying home the clothes she had worked hard to wash, deceiving her all the time, his conscience seemed touched. We patted the delicate-looking boy on the shoulder as we said, 'Remember the talk we have had,' and we went on thinking, alas! of so many mothers 'who don't know.

And why don't they know? Partly from the mother love that blinds them, possibly; partly from their absorption in other things beside the immortal souls given to their care; partly because they have failed to keep the symyathy of their child, and partly because they do not watch as well as pray. Mothers 'dont know' what their boys and perhaps their girls are reading. what conversation they are having day by day, whether they are on the streets at night, what promiscuous attentions they are receiving or giving; and it is their business to know. —Congregationalist.

BRO. WEBB writes that he has given a number of temperance lectures, aided by his magic lantern, and succeeds in drawing out many to look and listen who will not go to ordinary lectures. Especially does it attract children and parents. It is a grand auxilliary to Band of Hope work.

GOOD FOR NEW YORK.

The State of New York has a revised criminal code which comes into effect on the first of December. Among other things it makes profane swearing an offense punishable by a fine of one dollar. A person swearing in the presence of a magistrate may be summarily committed to jail for ten days. The law against Sabbath-breaking is continued, and all manner of unnecessary servile labor is defined to be Sabbath-breaking. Shooting, fishing, etc., and all noises disturbing the peace of the day are prohibited on Sunday, and all persons aiding in operatic, theatrical, minstrel or other stage-shows on Sunday, are, on conviction, guilty of a misdemeanor; and this includes the owner or lessee of buildings which may be let for such purpose. All processions and parades on Sunday are forbidden, except funeral processions for the actual burial of the dead. Sabbath-breaking, generally, is punishable with a fine of not less than one dollar nor more than ten, or with imprisonment, or both. For the violation of the sections concerning processions the penalties are doubled. In addition to the general penalty of misdemeanor, the violator of the section for Sunday shows is subject to a fine of five hundred dollars. Such a protection of the sacredness of the Sabbath, outside of New England, is something unexpected at this day.—Interior.

That is where the anti-Sunday law conflict must end if continued. A man may plead a right to drink one glass of beer or brandy any day if he wants to; but if to maintain his right to that indulgence in folly, we have to sacrifice 100,000 human victims every year,have a million thieves and criminals always in prison and enjoy no security for life or property anywhere, for anybody—we have a right to abolish this drink business root and branch.

Just so, the right to spend the Sabbath as one may choose. without detriment to others, is generally conceded. But if those who desire to go to church or Sunday-school, to a neighbors house, to the field or seashore, are compelled by this law of liberty to be choked with tobacco smoke flavored with beer and tainted sausage, their ears saluted with blasphemy, to be jostled by the maniacs and ruffians crazed by the Leag of Freedom, and to have their liberties and peace destroyed by the agencies of that ruffian conspiracy—the result must be a restriction of the liberty of the lawless and vile which they now enjoy, to make the Sunday rest a day of intolerable penance, unrest and unusual peril to life and person, for the honest, sober, respectable citizenship of the State.

SPEAKER KEIFER ON SUNDAY LAW.

THE Republic, Ohio,gives a speech of the Hon. J. Warren Keifer delivered Sep. 4 in which he thus alludes to the Sunday law. (He differs a little from the Journal of Free etc.)

"SINCE Sunday was ordained and made holy by God, speaking through Moses from Sinai, to the present, it has been wisely kept, not only for religious observance, but as a day of rest, when wearied humanity could peacefully cease its toils and take quiet pleasure or recreation.

Only one class of persons in our State ask to ply their occupation on Sunday—the dealers in intoxicating drinks. The ordinary law against common labor on Sunday is not sufficient to stop,on that day, their occupation—while it closes the merchant's store and the butcher and the baker shop. Clothing, meat and bread cannot be sold. Is whisky a necessity on the day of rest?

The Smith Sunday law was passed to give more power to the authorities to stop the liquor traffic on Sunday.

I will not now discuss the question. To do so would impeach the good sense, the christian character and wisdom of an orderly and religious people. This Sunday law will never be repealed, unless to give place to a better and more stringent one.

Sunday will be reserved for the Sunday School, etc., and not as the saloonist's day.

The large cities of New York and Baltimore, though Democratic, the city of Washington, and most others, enforce a rigorous Sunday law."

THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

The Republican party in California has fallen from its high estate. It has degenerated. It has no longer a high and honorable purpose to achieve. Its most influential and active leaders are men who make of politics a profession, who seek offices for the money that is in them, or because of the opportunity for plunder. Within the Republican party there has been organized a ring of professional politicians, who make politics a money-getting industry. This we call the machine. It has its bosses and its gang of workers. It organizes office-seeking. Its head-quarters are in San Francisco. It looks out for contracts. It has its lookouts for the game at Mare Island Navy Yard. It contracts for supplies of hospitals, asylums, and the House of Refuge. It is at the State Prisons and all other public institutions. It is a street-sweeper in San Francisco. It steals offices and divides salaries. It has its friends among the police, and it runs the Fire Department, and demands percentages from appointees. It is the lobby in the Board of Supervisors. In that Board, when opportunity offers, it forms a ring, every act of which it sells. It is the lobby at Sacramento. It blackmails corporations. Its headquarters are in a whisky saloon or bunko-room. Its chiefs are men of brains. Its dupes are men of small ambitions. Its deputies are always in subordinate positions. Its working forces are the thieves and criminal element. It bribes, coaxes, begs, and bullies. It is an organized political conspiracy to steal. One of its tricks is to put up a prominent, popular and respectable man to lead the ticket, that it may make merchandise of the balance. It endeavors to choose for such leading candidate a man whom it can use, who will promise official appointments and patronage to the machine; or else some man of easy morals and further ambition, whom it can surround, and use, and influence. Such a thing is the San Francisco machine. Its instrument is Morris M. Estee. He was nominated by fraud, violence, and pollution of the primary ballot-box.—Argonaut.

THE Gridley Herald unites in the hym of mourning sung by some other papers and laments that the temperance people should be misled by "hot-headed zealots" to forego the luxury of voting for a rum selling Governor, nominated by the Leag of Fiendom on a platform promising to sell the Sabbath out entirely to the grogshops. It prays us to go up like men and vote for free rum and free Sunday, and is at least consistent with a similar admonition in the next colum, to "drop in and drink at the fountain of perpetual youth at the Fountain saloon, the best and only first class resort where the bar is always stocked with the best wine, liquors and cigars." Temperance people it is hoped will estimate both items of advice as equally valuable.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—WE AIM FOR NOTHING SHORT OF A SWEEPING NATIONAL PROHIBITORY LAW ENDORSED BY EVERY STATE AND TERRITORY OF THE UNION, IN THE YEAR 1885, AND AS MUCH SOONER AS THE CHRISTIAN AND TEMPERANCE MEN AND GOOD CITIZENS OF THE COUNTRY MAY DESIRE TO ACCOMPLISH IT.

LABOR.

Truth, is the name of a city weekly which champions the cause of labor. It demands 40 separate items of reform in the interests of labor and of the masses of the people. But it makes no mention of the great monster grievance which hangs about the neck of labor like a millstone, pauperises the masses so that they are powerless to help themselves, ravages the home of labor as a wolf does the sheepfold. The grogshop entraps the laborer, robs the laborer, debauches the laborer, starves the laborer, steals his food and clothing and his children's bread, makes the laborer walk in rags, puts the laborer and his children in the police court, the jail, the penitentiary, the madhouse, the poorhouse, the morgue, the potter's field.

Whatever hardship and wrong and cruelty the slave has ever suffered from the slave-owner, the laborer has suffered, from the thief of the dramshop, wrong and cruelty fifty times intensified. Whatever of good the slave has received from his master, the laborer gets nothing from this tyrant to whom his life and soul are mortgaged. The slave owner fed the slave and kept him hale and vigorous and prolonged his life; the rum-seller gives his white slave neither food, clothes or medicine, but rots him to death in the prime of his days.

If railroads, corporations, banks, capitalists, tyrants, usurers, have robbed the laborers of this State, in any given time, of one hundred dollars, or have underpaid them one hundred dollars for their toil, they have all furnished the laborer employment and a chance to become independent. And for every one hundred dollars which we allow the laborers to have been wronged, the leag of brewers, distillers and gin-millers have robbed the laborers of the State in the same space of time, of one hundred thousand dollars at least, and given them nothing in return, furnished them with no employment, except making bricks in the penitentiary and playing cards in the dram-shops.

Wherever labor is employed on a wharf, on a ship, on a farm, in a factory, a printing office, a sawmill, a fruit or fish cannery, an orchard—wherever labor can find a chance to earn a dime or a dollar, the grog-shop thief has planted his trap there to steal that dime or dollar the moment it is earned. For every penny that "grasping, grinding capitalists" have underpaid labor or overcharged labor, the grog-shop thief has picked a thousand dollars from the pocket of the laborers he has made drunk and has stolen another thousand from the laborers he has beguiled to drink and then try their luck at his gambling swindles.

It don't starve or hurt a man much to give him a days work worth $1.50 and pay him only $1.25; there is no excuse or palliation for that 25 cents of wrong; but it is not consistent to make a fuss about it and say nothing about the beer-shop thief who watches him do that work and then steals the $1.25, and sends the laborer home crazy to beat his starving wife and children—and who steals three-fourths of all the earnings of a great many families of the laborers.

If we could have a Congress of the wisest laborers and they should make and the nation should assent to a thousand tons of the wisest laws to protect labor, it would never help the general crowd of laborers a particle, as long as the grog-shop thief is the slave owner of the laborer.

If it were possible to furnish every man in this State who is willing to work, with constant employment six days of every week, and make the lowest wages, $5 a day in money down, the one laborer in 50 or 100, who uses no alcohol or tobacco and saves money now, would accumulate some property; all who visit the grog-shop thieveries would be worse off than ever, if the present grogshop were permitted to continue; more laborers would go hungry, more would be made to steal, more get drunk, more fight, more kill, more commit suicide and ten times more go to the penitentiary, mad-house, poor-house and morgue.

That is not a guess; the gold fields of this state, the silver bonanzas of Nevada, the rich mines of Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, Idaho, Montana—have all devoted about nine-tenths of their treasures to the dramshop manufacture of criminals, paupers and mad-men—whereas but for that infernal pest and poisoner of everybodys peace, the rumseller and his circus of male and female thieves, this whole western half of the Continent might have been a beauteous paradise of peace and plenty, stained with no track of blood, marred with no crime of wrong or violence, disturbed with no plaint of dissatisfied or discontented labor.

To talk of doing anything for labor, until the pirates who live by robbing labor have their infamous labor-traps blown up, is the thinnest and craziest of all vain empty nonsense. To give labor all that belongs to it, all that sober, honest labor will ever demand, is only to obliterate the dramshop; it needs no bill of rights, no further legislation. Till that is done not one inch of progress will be made nor could any be of service.

WHERE SHALL WE GO.

THE REV. F. W. FEATHERSTUN in the Pacific Methodist asks where those Democratic voters can go, who threaten to leave their party on account of its hostility to sumptuary and Sunday laws. (Of course no one douts that their meaning was Sunday and anti-liquor laws.) He very properly calls attention to the fact, that there were in the San Jose Convention 168 Democratic delegates who voted against the godless Vc. plank, whereas there was only one, (Mr. Williams of Los Angeles,) who voted that the party should oppose "the repeal of the Sunday law and favor the enactment of such laws as will ensure its enforcement." He therefore holds that our chances for a Sunday law are 168 to 1 better in the Democratic party than in the other.

Whether the worthy Presiding Elder is exactly accurate in the mathematical feature of his proposition or not, he has put the case well and forcibly. There was a lively, earnest protest in the San Jose Convention against the obliteration of the Sabbath and 168 persons endorsed that protest. But in the Sacramento Convention only one voice was raised against making Sunday a day of bacchanalian debauchery, free sale of rum, abandoned drunkenness, vice and crime.

There is something more which Mr. F. might have added. The religious and moral adherents of the Democratic party united, all over the State, in a vehement rebuke and repudiation of the Anti-Sunday action and sentiment of the San Jose Convention, as soon as its infernal purpose was reported. But when the Republican Convention concocted a miserable, treacherous subterfuge, at the dictation of the Leag of Fiendom, purposely and carefully worded to appear to contain a crumb of promise to a simple and ignorant Sunday observer, who cared nothing for temperance, while it was a valid guarantee to the rumfiends that their traffic should be unrestrained on Sunday—when it was unanimously declared that nothing should be done to secure the enforcement of any Sunday law at all—the religious element of the Republican party very largely cried out, "Great is Diana" and endorsed the outrage.

It is not intended to imply that they are in favor of the destruction of the Sabbath, but they were so blinded by party devotion, so afraid of Democratic supremacy, that they cheered lustily when they saw the word Sunday in the Vc. plank, and never examined it to see that it was the most triumphant victory possible for the Leag of drunkenness and crime. Many of them are now seeing thru the wretched trap set for them by the obedient vassals of Mr. Shaeffer and the Leag, and are indignant at the fraud attempted.

Mr. Featherstun's question, where the Democrats are to go, will be answered this week by the prohibition party. Had the Republicans honestly espoused temperance and morality and put up temperance candidates, they would have swept the State by an unprecedented majority; but after what they have done, they deserve the most ignominious defeat. For a Democrat to leave his party on the Sunday law issue and vote the Republican ticket, would be repeating the experience of the farmer, who, fearing his miller took too much toll, carried his grain to another miller who stole the whole of it and swore him out of the sacks beside.

There will be now a platform and ticket presented to the people, which all christian and moral men—all good citizens can vote without a single disturbance of any conscientious scruple. There is no principle or other element worth preserving a moment in two vice-rotten parties which have equally declared there is no God, no Sunday, no patriotism and that the American home, the American citizen, mother, wife, sister, child have no rights which the ruthless murderers of the brewery and distillery and drunkery are required to respect.

Somebody will object that because there is a chance for the decent ticket to be defeated, his vote would be thrown away; if nobody made that objection our ticket would be SURELY ELECTED. Every vote cast for those two parties of spoils and moral depravity is thrown away and worse; it is a vote for the adoption of the devil as our God and the dethronement of the God of our Fathers and our country. Every body who voted against the crucifixion of Christ thru away his vote, and the three or four women who mourned at his death, threw away their sympathy—exactly as the voters and laborers who advocate the temperance ticket will lose their vote and sympathy; if the cowardly counsels of weak men prevail.

The attempt made by some Democratic papers to assert that the "sumptuary laws they alluded to did not mean Sunday and prohibitory laws, is too contemptible a falsehood to notice. The attempt to charge that the Republican V plank means any thing than the sale of the American sabbath to the Leag of Fiendom for a grand gala day of drunkenness and harlotry is too shallow a hypocrisy, too mean a lie to answer.

Mr. Featherstun closes as follows:

There is another fact I wish to call attention to, and it is this: All of the whisky men were out in full force at the Republican Convention, and not one of them opened his mouth against the so-called Sunday plank. Now the question is, will the whisky men vote for a Sunday law? We know they will not, and yet they did vote for all the Sunday law the Republicans had—which is none.

LIES ABOUT WINE.

Mr. Wetmore is a truthful man in one way. He is a champion of drunkenness and of the most heartless crime of drunkard-making. All men who enter into that business do not defend it. Many of them candidly own that it is the lowest, meanest and most wicked business ever known. A German saloon keeper and brewer from Virginia City told the writer on the U. P. R. R. cars going East in 1874 that his "was the vilest business on earth; said he had helped to send probably 200 people to hell,' and he would quit it when he returned. That was just what he said with a swear word here and there to give emphasis to his declarations.

But whoever sets out to defend the business of destroying homes and peopling jails and madhouses has to occupy a peculiar attitude toward the truth. If truth can be represented by the central point of a circle, the defender of rum will well represent the circumference which is at the furthest possible distance from the center at all times.

Mr. Wetmore has achieved a happy notoriety, in his advocacy of the use of wine and brandy; for keeping consistently as far from the truth as the circumference of a circle is from its center. The Bible says that all men are fools who use wine; it says so very emphatically if not in those exact words; but it would be surely more charitable to suppose Mr. Wetmore attempts to deceive people intentionally than to believe he can be so comprehensively and superlatively brainless, as to be sincere in the monstrously ridiculous hash of absurdities, he presents when he speculates on the ignorance of his hearers, and talks about the wine and brandy avenue to the jail and poor house.

Mr. Wetmore at a public meeting called by a society of drunkard-makers gave an address on the relation of wine to temperance, in which he almost out-did himself in assertions of monstrous absurdities too puerile most of them to merit notice. There is no meaner and more miserable hypocrisy than to reassert the old thousand times exploded lie, that the use of wine can conduce to anything else than drunkenness. The advocates of drunkenness used in early days to assert here that the use of pure wines would drive out whisky and brandy and make people temperate; strong drinks they asserted were dangerous and devilish; they knew all the time that the use of pure wine, before brandy and whisky were known, had steeped whole nations in such debauchery and filthiness as destroyed them from the earth.

When drunkenness began to abound in the wine valleys of the State on the pure wine made there; when man, wife, son, dauter were found in many instances all drunk in their own house on their pure wines, this doctrine was abandoned; they were ashamed of it. But in course of time it came up again modified. Mr. Wetmore who can always dextrously manufacture any missing history or statistics that are wanting to prove that getting drunk is a virtue, came out a few years ago with the discovery that some kinds of California wines were extremely dangerous, almost as bad as brandy, ot never to be touched etc, while another kind probably the kind he had for sale, was almost indispensible to maintain honesty in men and virtue in women; but the other kinds were wicked and unfit for use; they should be sold to our neighbors with brandy and other blessings to poison them.

Now he comes out with another new doctrine, one entirely of his own invention, which he supports by alleged statistics from the same source. It is that beer and whisky make drunkards and paupers but California and French wine and brandy dont have that effect. Mr. Wetmore says, the most advanced political economists admit that pure cheap wine diminishes the use of poisonous and spirituous liquors; unless those most advanced people are the drunkard makers society of California; that admission by any body but the most advanced idiots is pure imagination. It is altogether the reverse of all experience and common sense and Mr. Wetmore knows it well.

Everybody of common intelligence should know without being told that Spain, Portugal, Italy, Sicily, Greece, Hungary, the oldest wine countries, whose people have not been rotted out entirely by wine, are the most hideously pauperized people of the world, and after many centuries of the enriching and ennobling effects of wine making, most if not all of them are the most degraded, ignorant, immoral, played-out peoples of the civilized world.

The only obstacle to universal continued drunkenness on the part of most of these people is their utter hopeless poverty, which renders it difficult and rare to get the three or five cents necessary to produce a drunk. These nations have made wine enough to buy a good part if not the whole of Europe, but the result was, nations of drunkards and paupers. And these races began their wine career as the first nations of the world.

France with the most industrious, economical, patriotic people in the world, the largest wine producer now of the world, imports nearly as much wine as she exports; is short of 200 million dollars worth of bread every year which has to be purchased with gold, while the wine lands are wasted. France to supply the appetite of her own people, for wine, brandy and the sharpest chain lightning poisons, has utilized her beets, turnips, patatoes, raisins, rotten fruit, and has thousands of people in Germany, Holland, Belgium, England grinding up thousands of tons of the same material to make whisky and brandy for her millions of drunkards and to make pure French brandy for America and England to be sold at $5 to $25 a gallon—worth $1 00.

Because of the excessive use of alcohol and tobacco in France (this is not quoted from any mythical authority like Mr. Wetmore's, but from Dr. Depierris, an eminent French physician and statistician now in this city) there is such an unusual mortality of children that the population hardly increases at all. When at 21 years of age the young men are called by conscription to military service half of them are physically unfit. They therefore have to take all the young men who are fit, and owing to their degeneracy the stature of French soldiers has been sensibly lowered.

After the French Prussian war the Congress o France enacted a law against drunkenness and sell ing liquor to drunkards and minors. In the debate on its enactment, a member said, he "represented one of the light wine districts of France and not a soldier went from his district, who would not drink till he fell down helpless under the table if he could get the drink, and he added, gentlemen, I represent as sober a constituency as any of you do." All this is history, not Wetmore.

The French people one of the finest races ever produced, are on the downhill rapid road to destruction and extinction, simply and only because of intemperance, vice, immorality and physical decay which is the only result that wine ever did, ever could, ever will or ever intended to produce—save one, that of enriching a few unscrupulous dealers in the virtue, lives and blood and souls of the victims they can entice into their snares and send stripped of their property and their manhood to perdition.

SUPREME JUDGES.

It is to be hoped the Prohibition Party will nominate Messrs. Denson and Hunt for Supreme Judges; and it is a pity the Greenbackers did not, as there are very grave reasons why the election of Messrs. Sharpstein and Ress should be defeated; not at all from party motives, but it is the interest of good citizenship to exercise every precaution to secure an unpartizan and efficient Supreme Court, whereas it is a favorite object of the Leag of Fiendom and other criminal elements of society to render that honorable body a court of injustice.

Possibly many of our voters are unaware that the election of Judge McKinstry several years ago, swept the local option law from the statute book, and has probably doubled the burden of drunkenness, murder, suicide, crime, and insanity ever since the year 1874; but for that, the dramshop and all its withering curses might have been driven from more than half the State; and he has been re-elected, the liquor sellers some time ago having sent circulars all over the State to their slaves, to secure his return, because "he stood by them in the local option affair."

It should be also remembered that the two judges now on the Democratic ticket have declared the Sunday law unconstitutional, and in doing so, virtually asserted that in the Supreme Court of this State, the American citizen has no rights which the rumseller, tho an outlaw, need respect. There can be little dout that Mr. Shaeffer and the Leag of outlaws who secured the no-God, free-rum plank in both the old party platforms, procured their nominations because of their willing hostility to American and Christian institutions.

Should these two men be re-elected, we shall have for many years to come, three judges of the seven who will declare unconstitutional any and all legislation that may be enacted favorable to temperance or opposed to the Sunday dramshop. Should one of the others die or resign, we might then have for ten years a Supreme Court which would nullify the will of the people in every law enacted for the protection of the Home, or in the interests of morality and humanity.

In 1884 two more judges will be elected; the terms of two of the gentlemen who gave a decision on the Sunday law in accordance with justice and all good precedent, will have expired. If these two or one of them should be subservient to the Leag of Fiendom, all temperance effort will be choked from successful results for many years.

And it is suggested to Antidebris and Greenback voters who value virtue, temperance, and Christianity, that it would be one of the gravest dangers to every good interest of the State to have a Supreme Court capable of rendering an unrighteous, incompetent, or ungodly decision upon any matter which may be submitted to them. The office of a Supreme Judge is a very sacred one.

CAUSE OF WITHDRAWAL.

Glasgow Good Templar.

SIR.—I regret to find that friends who ought to know better are not stating correctly why I have withdrawn from the I. O. G. T. I withdrew from the I. O. G. T. because I was and am of opinion that the Grand Lodge has for several years prepared, published, and advocated certain measures or schemes for dealing with the licensing of the liquor traffic to a less extent than its prohibition. I am of opinion such action is not authorized by the principles or platform of the Order. I have tried all constitutional means known to me to remedy what I thought to be wrong in the policy named, but all my efforts were frustrated—chiefly through the eloquence of a few high in office. Until I see more harmony between the policy of the Grand Lodge and the "platform," I must remain outside the I. O. G. T. JNO. CONCHAR.

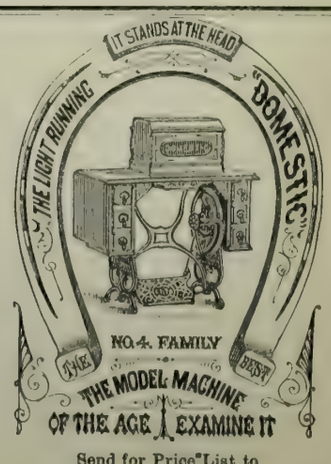
The editor adds: We all seek the same end. Mr. Conchar thinks, that his method is the only one by which to reach the end, and would tolerate no other. The Grand Lodge takes a different view, and finds room for different methods. Much as we regret the withdrawal, we should have regretted far more the adoption of different action by the Grand Lodge. The Grand Lodge has set in this matter a good example, which unfortunately all have not followed; "In things essential unity, in things non-essential diversity; in all things charity."—ED. G. T.

It would seem that Bro. Conchar, in withdrawing from the order, abandoned his last chance of reforming the abuse of which he complains. But this toying with the infernal liquor serpent on the part of the leaders of the order, hoisting the flag of prohibition and firing upon its advocates, preaching "down with the liquor traffic," and coquetting with high licence, civil damage, local option, Sunday closing and other bansheeisms in this country, where the subordinate lodges and the farmers and lots of drinkers are way ahead of the doctrines and acts of our Grand Lodges, disgusts thousands from our order and repels more thousands from coming in. Writing prohibition on paper and voting for rumsellers and drinkers and Leag of Fiendom platforms and toying and trading with whisky-owned political conspiracies, is a fashion which will very early find its continued votaries left out in the cold

BENEVOLENT.

The Journal of Free etc. etc. has such a long name that it should think of changing it like the other whisky advocates who hold sacred the doctrine that wife-beating is a commendable and healthful recreation. In Canada the wife-beaters conspiracy has had several long names; one after the other: (it is always necessary to change the name when its odor becomes so obnoxious that nobody will touch it,) and now they have called themselves a BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION. Now the Benevolence Journal or the Benevolence would not be too unwieldy to handle, and the leag has so many benevolent objects that the name would be entirely appropriate.

The Leag provides all the tramps and beggars which beg their 3 meals a day and give the whole community a chance for the exercise of their benevolence.



The Leag provides that class of tramps who set fire to barns, churches, stores and to the towns of Susanville, Chico, Lodi, Stockton etc. That gives work to people to build up these places, and the leag gets the wages of the workmen employed in this benevolent work of reparation.

The Leag fills all the jails, asylums, poor houses etc., with their customers and friends and affords a splendid field for the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., gives benevolent ladies and societies an opportunity to dispense any amount of charity. So that Benevolent Society would be a most appropriate name for the Leag.

The Leag furnishes all the nice literature for our morning papers in murders, fights, divorces, abductions, burglaries, wife-beatings, thefts etc. The Leag furnishes all the suicides who jump over the wharves, hang themselves and take poison and furnish the inquests and help the poor undertakers. That is a most benevolent work. By all means let us call it the Journal of Benevolence.

Attention is requested to the public reception at Dashaway Hall next Monday evening. Strangers arriving in the city can be landed very near there on the Market St. cars. It is on Post Street and not far from the Palace Hotel. A very splendid affair is promised.

DONT THROW AWAY YOUR VOTE.—That was what the people said when they voted the strait Barabbas ticket. There was not one of them lost his vote.

WHAT ARE THE GOOD TEMPLARS DOING?

(Read at Riverside Lodge, under Good of the Order, by Bro. T. B. Stephenson.)

The above question is asked, not only by outsiders, but by our own members. I shall attempt to answer it. Let us see first what we are doing for those who do not belong to the order. We tend to keep alive the growing thought that intemperance is a bad habit, and unbecoming a man; hence unbecoming a community, and only to be tolerated because that sentiment is not strong enough as yet, to induce mankind to abandon it entirely. How do we do it? you ask. By the mere fact that the Riverside Good Templar Lodge exists if no other. Our quarterly dues that are sent to the Grand Lodge are used by it largely to keep lecturers in the field. Through the instrumentality of these lecturers other Lodges are formed and the thought that intemperance is evil and only evil is being spread in another community and by us, who while enjoying health, wealth and happiness, can do a little without much inconvenience, to convince our fellowmen that woe, want and disgrace are caused by drink. Then let us come to Lodge cheerfully and do all in our power to increase its prosperity. Second, let us see what we are doing for ourselves. We are upholding and our arms are around about those who otherwise would be spending their time and money in saloons and who, perhaps unknowingly would be on the road to a drunkard's grave, if any such there are among us. Those solemn words of warning used at every initiation can not but sink deep into the hearts and minds of those who hear them. Ladies, let me ask you to make a little special effort to be present at all of our meetings. Without you our lodge would not long exist and in porportion as your numbers increase in our lodge we shall prosper. For your society the gentlemen forsake the companionship of those who frequent saloons; your influence is anti-saloon or should. It is generally conceded that if every lady would say, I will have nothing to do with any man that drinks; a generation hence no lady would have occasion to make such a remark. Ladies there is a grave responsibility resting upon your sex in this matter. Let us each do what we can on entertainment evenings, and not because we can not do as well as we would like, say no, to the committee who wait upon us to contribute something. We can if we will, make this a school where each of us may gain something in the way of literary attainments and at the same time make all of our entertainment evenings pleasant and profitable.

HANFORD, Sept. 19, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—I am glad to see a call for the State Prohibition convention in the last RESCUE, and only regret that I cannot be there. But I hope that they will give us a straight temperance ticket for there never was a time when there was so much need of a ticket as at present. All the better class of Democrats are disgusted with their party action and treatment; and we must confess that the Republicans are no better, for they have only added insult to injury as far as the Christian and temperance voters are concerned, by their rotten white-washed Sunday plank. And if the Temperance people will now put up a decent ticket that all Christian and temperance voters can support, it will poll a very large vote if not carry the State. Besides, by so doing we will teach the old parties that we are not to be trifled with any longer; that as American citizens we have quite as much intelligence as our liquor opponents, to whom they show so much respect. Let us come to the front at once; it is forced upon us and if we now back out we are unworthy of the name of Good Templars or Christians, and will be treated in the future, by all political parties, as a set of cowards, and all the petitions and talk we will make will be as sounding brass and tinkling symbol. While on the other hand, if we bring out a State ticket, if we poll but 5,000 votes, they will respect us in the future, and when we send a petition to the Legislature they will respect it.

I believe Tulare county will cast a good vote for a Prohibition ticket this year if they have a chance; for the Temperance people are wide awake and will have a full county ticket in the field with an extra good prospect of electing it, and there are many both Democrats and Republicans, that are disgusted with both parties and will vote for any good man that the Temperance people will bring out.

My brothers and sisters let us not miss this golden opportunity; it will do more to educate the people and bring prohibition, than five years temperance work in other ways, but let us strike for liberty at once. If Tulare county is not represented at the convention it will be on account of press of business on the part of those that should go; but be assured that you can depend on us doing all we can if you will give us a ticket of good men, as we have a county paper devoted to our cause beside a large force in the field canvassing for temperance and our county ticket. The last session of District Lodge was unanimous upon the question of supporting temperance men for office; I presume you have received a full report of our proceedings from the secretary by this time as there were strong resolutions passed and a large amount of important work done in the two days session.

Yours for Prohibition, J. M. MOORE, D. D.

FRESNO. Sep., 18, 1882.

ED. RESCUE, at our last session of the District Lodge held at Kingsburg Fresno Co. (near line of Tulare Co.) the attendance of delegates was fair in numbers and extra in quality. A county committee had been appointed by the lodges 3 months before, it was found that there were 300 voters in the lodges of the county, and in an informal canvass by members of the principal points in the county something over 700 temperance votes could be depended on for a temperance ticket, had they the privilege of doing so. The report so enthused the members of the D. L. that resolutions were passed (with cheers) calling a Prohibition convention into existence to meet Aug. 26. 1882. The notice was short, the convention was held; twenty-eight delegates being present (representative men). Strong resolutions were passed, a ticket nominated some of the Democratic ticket, some of the Republicans and others some of our own not on either of the others. It was our misfortune to be in ignorance of that which has since transpired, none of us were aware at that time that the State Republican Convention would go back on us, as is the fact. A number of us old lifelong Democrats had made up our minds and had so stated publicly that we would vote the Republican ticket if they would give us a Sunday law plank, with a guarantee of their nomination of men to carry said plank into execution. The Legion of Fiendom had their will, we were left out. We may vote for some of the men, not the ticket. We as temperance people are encouraged to remain on the aggressive and wish a ticket of our own from the known hostility of the leaders of the old parties, to our rights as citizens expressed time and again.

It rejoices us to see the call of and for a State Prohibition convention. If we are not with you in numbers from this section, on the 28th it will not be for want of sympathy for the cause. We are satisfied that those who do come will do us justice.

* * * * * * * * *

If we are victorious in November we certainly shall claim the honor of having not only broken the jaw bone but the back bone of the legion of Fiends, the chances are certainly with us. One long, strong, firm pull together in November will give us a victory that will lay the demon low, and enchane him for another 1000 years.

As far as heard from eight delegates will attend the Grand Lodge session, more would attend, but the lodges refuse to bear any part of the expense. So each fellow has to pay his own, and unless there is other business to call one to the City, it is rather expensive and few here are in a position at present to stand it, I am sorry that it is so, there are a number of talented members in our lodge that I would like to see exhibit at large some of the talent shown at our open lodge meetings. Some of our best workers will remain at home. Our lodge is increasing fast in number, 4 initiations last Friday night, about the average number of each night. Something over 100 members now, quite an increase since report to Grand Lodge, over half of the increase in number are voters (formerly drinkers) other lodges heard from doing fully as well. The County Tem. Prohibition Com. have started a small campaign paper, head quarters Selma. It is doing a good work and meets with lively encouragement from outside temperance people. The Temperance Alliance of Tulare Co. have gone to work systematically and are helping us in this county in stirring up the Christian element to temperance work. The Methodist Christians are deserving of a great deal of credit for the stand and attitude they have taken in regard to temperance work, and will most certainly obtain that rest, (as Tillotson writes) Religion gives part of its reward in hand.....The present comfort of having done our duty, and, for the rest, it offers us the best security that Heaven can give. "Religion, is purified Temperance." R.

PASO ROBLES, Sep., 17, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—Seeing many accounts of the workings of whisky in your paper, I will give you an incident of what happened thru the whisky ring to a saloon keeper here. Sold to a man of known drunkenness who while intoxicated committed an offense against the State; the party who was injured applied to a justice of the peace, a saloon keeper. A warrant for his arrest, being issued laid in his office 7 days, then sent to a constable of drunken habits; thru this operation the man that committed the offense seemingly had due notice and escaped the officers. MRS. M. A. FRICK.

THE V. PLANK. A gentleman of high standing in the Republican party, who defended the Sunday outlaws recently when the attempt was made to enforce the Sunday law, was asked a few days ago if the present Sunday law could be enforced in the State. He said positively, no. Then said his questioner "you had much to do in shaping the Republican platform in its relation to that feature; now was not the V. Plank inserted because it was believed the Sunday law could not be enforced? Yes, was the answer, "you have hit it exactly." But the plank was so openly a free rum, no Sunday plank that it needs no explanation.

COAL OIL.—Continental oil per case of 10 gals. $2.25; Starlight oil $2.65; fair burning oil $2.50 to $2.20—good time to lay in winter supply. Order from cash grocery, 519 Post St., S. F., Cal.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the RESCUE 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

THE best missionary work that can be done for the heathen will be that of persuading the Christianized men of this country and England to no longer send their rum to the heathen. The rum-barrel has on all instances so closely followed the missionary and the bible, that to the heathen it looks as if the introduction of Christianity is a curse, which portends the destruction and extinction of his race. Cetewayo, when asked to prevent the sale of liquor in his country, asked to have the whites prevented from bringing it.

WOOD.—Some reports have appeared concerning a lecturer of the Good Templars, who was recently arrested, drunk near Sacramento. There may have been somebody arrested, but there is no such person known as a lecturer of the Good Templars, or in any way connected with the Order.

IN place of obliterating the Sunday law, the temperance people will try to have business and labor closed on Saturday at noon. When the dramshop is shut, both laborer and employer can well afford to take half holiday on Saturday, for a good time at home or elsewhere.

IT is expected the coming Graud Lodge Session will be a very interesting one and well attended.

THE Convention of this date is expected to be a largely attended and successful affair. A good platform and honest, sober candidates will be presented.

THE TELEGRAPH has been loaded this week with accounts of murders, crimes, and fires, instigated by the Leag of Fiendom's merchandize.

THE NEW beer shops of high-finish in this city are hanging obscene pictures in their windows as a special attraction.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE
FOR MALES AND FEMALES.
THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education, of both sexes upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.
LOCATION.
The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.
COURSE OF STUDY.
Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.
INDUCEMENTS.
To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

FAST BLACK
SPOOL COTTON.
Does it Wear? Does it Wash?
When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.
It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.
To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.
Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.
J. & P. Coats' Black
WILL HOLD ITS COLOR AS LONG AS ANY FABRIC ON WHICH IT CAN BE USED.
And the Agents will pay Full Price for any of their Thread which may be spotted or injured by climatic influences.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A.G.Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. The people who say we cant succeed are themselves the greatest obstacle to our success. If every one who desires the devil worship of the dramshop to cease would vote against license and induce others to do so we would be sure of success first time.

Licensing the greatest crime that the world has ever known, makes every one who votes for parties who have been committing the crime all along, a partaker in all the crimes that flow from that license.

The attempt made to harmonize the prohibition convention into a coalition with the Estee—and—Neuman party and the Leag of Free Crime and Beer-garden-Sunday, so that we could all vote as we prey and dwell together in unity—failed of success; so the harmonizers were obliged to bolt and go over in a body to their friends with whom they are wont to prey. It will long be remembered as a remarkable instance of cast-iron obstinacy that the 200 prohibitionists who formed the fag end minority of the convention, in spite of the almost irresistible fascinations offered by the 19 who were the majority of that body, refused to harmonize and vote with the Shaeffer, no Sunday, free beer advocates.

Governor Perkins, in a special message, took strong ground in favor of the valley farmers against the hydraulic miners. He favors Estee, and Estee favors the gravel sluicers against the farmers. The League of Freedom's ex-president, John W. Shaeffer, is in favor of selling whisky in saloons on Sunday. He is one of Mr. Estee's most active and earnest political managers. Mr. Estee is making Sunday-law speeches. The next time Mr. Estee speaks, let some reader of the Argonaut ask the question, and demand a categorical answer, "yes" or "no:" "Are you in favor of a law closing all liquor, beer, and wine saloons on Sunday?" He dare not answer it without equivocation or explanation.—Argonaut.

Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham is now engaged in compounding a Conscience Soother at $1.50 per bottle. There will be a brisk demand after election. Temperance people who vote the Democratic ticket are warranted a cure in six bottles, and those who vote the Estee-Sunday-recreation ticket will be supplied with a dozen at wholesale, price $12 a dozen.

The Leag of Fiendom has made an unusual number of lucky adventures during the past two weeks. Shootings, stabbings, suicides, and accidents have been frequent enough to make the most sour of liquor sellers sing for joy.

Our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Doan of Geyserville, will be glad to hear of the prohibitory ticket. They were among those who have loudly called for it ever since the action of the two no God, no Sunday Conventions,

The Marysville Daily Appeal has a temperance department edited by Bro. Covillaud, and it is a very well got up and interesting part of that journal.

The American Woman Suffrage Association met in far-off Omaha recently, where sixty-eight delegates were present from twelve States and Territories, and the audience was large. Gov. Hoyt and Judge Kingman, of Wyoming Territory, in addressing the convention said that the thirteen years of woman suffrage in that territory was an unqualified success, having proved so beneficial that all parties were united in its support. It was voted to make an active campaign in Nebraska for the passage of a woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution, which is to be voted upon in November.—N. Y. Witness.

"We hope our temperance people will not be so foolish as to take this uncalled for, unwise step of putting up a ticket and lose the credit they are sure to gain through supporting the ticket which recognized their claims for the first time. The Republicans expect the temperance vote, they do not look for the vote of the Leag of Freedom—in fact the Leag has said that they were dissatisfied with the Sunday Law plank in the Republican Platform."

That is kindly advice of the Mission Journal; but we dont want any credit from Messrs. Higgins, Buckley, and Shaeffer. We are so stupid as to have no recollection of any instance of recognition from the ticket aforesaid. First public meeting we have, we will send round the plate and take up a collection of sympathy for the Leag who are dissatisfied with the plank which they had made exactly to order.

The Watchman of Halifax, N. S., a very excellent and efficient temperance journal, by an evident oversight, has credited to the Rescue an article of Dr. J. G. Holland's entitled "Teach the Children," which appeared in this paper some time ago, with proper credit as usual.

The Scott Act Election in St. John N. B. which resulted in a tie, has been submitted to a scrutiny and the result, after errors on both sides are attended to, is a tie still. An appeal is to be taken as the Judge refused to hear evidence of fraud.

Pity people would not always write distinctly for the press; this week a printer set up "unfermentative rum" for "representative men," and it was not the printer who was in fault.

The Bible and Brandy.—In this town, Sidmouth, I noticed a grocer's shop, the window of which was emblazoned with the customary devices of Messrs. Gilbey, soliciting the purchase of their wines and ardent spirits. To my astonishment I saw an inscription over the door proclaiming this shop to be the depot of the British and Foreign Bible Society. On entering the shop and asking if I could buy a Bible the reply was, Yes. And, I added, a bottle of brandy? Again the reply was, Yes. Here, then, we have the dissemination of the Gospel and of ardent spirits beautifully combined. Messrs. Gilbey and the British and Foreign Bible Society working hand in hand! Surely somebody should ventilate this outrageous case in the proper quarter, wherever that may be.

Temperance seems at a very low ebb here. No one seems to dream that there can be any evil in drink, that time-honored and carefully-conserved pestilence.—Yours, &c., R. F. Mushet.—Alliance News.

Mr. A. M. Sullivan, with some members of his family, is leaving in a few days for a two months' tour in the United States, mainly for his health, but he has promised to speak at a few places en route. Our friends in the United States will no doubt be on the alert to hear this splendid orator and noble advocate of the good cause of Temperance and prohibition. Mr. Sullivan is a life-long abstainer, and has rendered great service to the movement in every phase, but especially in that under the special direction of the United Kingdom Alliance. Communications to Mr. Sullivan may be sent to the care of General Neal Dow, Portland, Maine, who will kindly forward the same during the tour.—Alliance News.

England.—After 15 years of battle in the Parliament of England, the Married Women's Property Act has become law quite recently. It does away with the old system which enabled the husband to say to his wife "what's yours is mine, and what's mine is my own." Notice has been given of a motion early next session of parliament, to give women the franchise under the same conditions as men. That looks bad for King rum. This movement was originated 15 years ago by two married and two single ladies. What a silly thing for four people only, and women at that, to attempt to revolutionize ancient customs.

New York: The Republican Convention nominated a Mr. Folger, a Conkling man for Governor; approved Arthur, and the rest of the platform was buncomb like our Sunday law plank. A third party prohibitory ticket is placed also in the field.

Mass.—The politicians there are engaged in silent prayer over legal polygamy in Utah and resolve it must be abolished and the Boston standard of go as you please matrimony adopted. The Republican wire pullers at the Convention were virtuous in the extreme about ship building and Indians and civil service reform and lied about every thing but any real and practicable reform, which the rum interest had bribed them well to say nothing about.

Connecticut.—The Republicans of that State have declared for submission of prohibitory Amendment to the people and endorsed Arthur.

Missouri.—The State Republican Convention declares to restrain the use of liquor and reduce the harmful effect to a minimum, by local option, high license, civil damage—all of which now are solely in the interest of the dramshop.

A PARTY MAN.

O. H. B. TOWNSEND.

That I am a regular temperance man
You surely all must know;
To all the meetings of the lodge,
I'm always sure to go;
And in every spot or place,
Be it parlor, church, or hall,
I always try to do my best
By talking most of all.

That I am a regular party man
You must admit as true;
I never stay at home, but vote
Its ticket thru and thru;
And tho I am a temperance man,
I really can't see why,
To help elect my party men
I should not always try.

That my party is a whisky one,
I know as well as you;
But for me to turn against it now,
It really would not do;
And tho' 'mong its list of candidates
There's not a temperance man,
I think we all should do our best,
And elect them if we can.

That my party is a tricky one
I know as well as you;
To get on every side the fence,
It always tries to do;
And tho' its promised great reforms
And never yet done more,
It is the same old party, and
I love it as of yore.

That my party is a changing one
I know as well as you;
To suit the party to the place
We always try to do;
And tho' its temperance in the east,
And whisky in the west,
To vote its entire ticket "strait,"
I always think is best.

POLITICAL BOSSES.

"Things refuse to be mismanaged long."

* * * * Next to the founding of a government, the making of its laws has been regarded as the highest duty and the greatest responsibility imposed upon man. The past has bequeathed to us who live in the nineteenth century a splendid endowment in this respect; and while much important work in this field remains to be done, and no age will be wholly relieved from it, the great burden of government now lies, and henceforth must lie, in the charge of its administration, and not in the framing of constitutions or laws.

By a process of political evolution, the people in all highly civilized countries have quite largely secured the right to make their own laws. But while they have, by the aid of representative forms of government, so generally dethroned monarchical and aristocratic powers in law-making, they have nowhere instituted and securely established the democratic principle in the execution of laws or in the administration of their own governments; and it is the administration of the law which most directly and seriously affects them. They make laws for their own government, and they are generally required to obey them. Their rulers govern them; the question is: How shall they govern their rulers?

The English speaking people have been seeking the true answer to this question ever since they first had existence as a nation. In strange, devious, tortuous, and mysterious ways; by toil and sweat and blood; by the purse and by the sword; by crusades and conquests and conventicles; by passive obedience and by heroic resistance; by tongue and pen and press; and by other and innumerable conquests in the universe of thought and action, they have produced a wonderful mechanism of administration, which, rightly adjusted and applied, will enthrone and crown public opinion, founded in righteous thought, sovereign over all rulers, and supreme over all forms of government. Many times in their history has this "higher law" of their being had sway. Kings have resisted it; Presidents have disregarded it; ministers and cabinets have rebelled against it, and used factions and parties and patronage and spoils and usurped powers to make void its behests; but in the end they have been compelled to abdicate the exercise of authority, or to submit to its sovereign power. Other and wiser kings, presidents, ministers, and cabinets have recognized and obeyed it, and have ameliorated the condition of mankind, and deserved and received the plaudits of their fellow-men. By such recognition of public opinion, righteous rulers have given it organic life,—that which alone can make it effective in the work of government.

"Public opinion," says Bentham, "may be considered as a system of law emanating from the body of the people. . . . To the pernicious exercise of the power of government, it is the only check; to the beneficial, an indispensable supplement. Able rulers lead it; prudent rulers lead or follow it; foolish rulers disregard it." For ages and ages the world was governed not so much in deference to public opinion and general interests, as in obedience to personal judgment and private ends. Man is a social being, and has social feelings; but he is also a selfish being, and has selfish instincts. As there could be no necessity for government without society, there can be no society without government. But the trouble with both society and government has ever been that man's selfish instincts are stronger than his social feelings. Therefore, when men associate for the accomplishment of a common political object, there is a constant danger that a few who can, will use the power of all, not for the equitable benefit of each, but for the advantage of those who are able to get control. Thus, a faction arises within a party; a contest for control of the faction develops a cabal, and a final struggle for supremacy enthrones the political autocrat over all.

Party government seems to be the best means thus far devised for the enforcement of the general judgment of a nation. If this instrument can be permanently and successfully employed by factions and rings and political bosses to further their special and private interests, in disregard of the general welfare, popular government is a delusion and a snare for the people themselves. Let us hope that the power of public opinion is sufficient to hold in check this aristocratic tendency. Otherwise we should no longer claim with Lincoln, that ours is a "government of the people, by the people and for the people;" but we should frankly confess that it is a government of parties, controled by factions, —factions ruled by cabals,—for the spoils of office bestowed by political bosses. * * *—John L. Mitchell, in North American Review.

PROHIBITION.

BY HON. NEAL DOW.

[Morning and Day of Reform.]

Nothing surprises temperance workers more than the ignorance of men of ability and intelligence as to the purpose and the results of the agitation for the prohibition of the liquor traffic. We say there is no movement, political or otherwise, so important to the interests of the nation, state and people, as this. It touches and affects public interests, as well as private interests, more extensively than all other public policies combined. I am confident that no intelligent man will deny this.

Prohibition proposes to relieve society entirely from the tremendous evils coming inevitably from intemperance. What are these? "Greater and more numerous than those coming from war, pestilence and famine combined, the three great scourges of mankind.'" Mr. Gladstone, present prime minister of England, said this on the floor of the House of Commons. The London Times had said it several months before, and no one has attempted to deny this to be true, or to show that the evils of intemperance were overstated.

To relieve society from these evils, is the purpose of prohibition, and this remedy has been applied in a great many localities in this country and in foreign lands, and has been in operation for many years, with positive results everywhere that it has been tried. The relation of this experiment to the highest interests of society is so important that it seems to me every intelligent men who cares at all for the general welfare, should keep himself informed as to its results. But it is very far from being so. The mass of the public men of the country, as well as those in private life, are in total ignorance of the results of the policy of prohibition, tho they have been published to the world for more than a quarter of a century.

A notable case of this unpardonable ignorance in public men is that of Mr. Thurlow Weed, one of the ablest, sharpest and most intelligent politicians of the country, whose advanced age and high personal character raise him above all suspicion of being in any way influenced by unworthy motives in his position and opinion upon this subject. In a recent article in the New York Tribune he says that "all attempts at prohibition have been abortive, and that prohibition in Maine, especially, the place of its birth, was and is an abortion." I am far from imputing to Mr. Weed any intention to misstate, but there is not one word of that true. Mr. Weed was simply writing upon a matter of which he was profoundly ignorant, as so many other able men have done, and are habitually doing.

Now in every one of the States, localities, and districts where the policy of prohibition has been fairly tried it has proved a great success; in not one of them has it been a failure, much less an "abortion," yet Mr. Weed and many other able men being absolutely ignorant of the subject, venture to pronounce an opinion upon it in total opposition to all the facts.

How is it and why is it, that such men oppose this movement? It is an enigma that I cannot solve. The universal adoption of prohibition would certainly result in this: Every family in the land might have and would have abundant food and raiment and comfortable shelter and enough of all the necessaries and comforts of life. More than five hundred thousand homes where home happiness is now unknown would be prosperous, peaceful and happy. More than half a million intemperate miserable men to whom life is a burden would become sober, good citizens, discharging their full share of public duties, bearing their share of public burdens, useful, honorable members of the community. More than a million wretched, miserable women, the wives, dauters, mothers, of these shocking, shameful wrecks of men, would be the happy wives, mothers, dauters of men reformed from their evil ways and restored to their right minds and to better ways of life. Our alms-houses, prisons, lunatic asylums would be largely depopulated, and their wretched tenants would be self-supporting, respecters of the laws of their country and the rights of their fellow citizens, and restored to reason and to usefulness in the world.

Have I in any way overstated the results that would certainly come from the prohibition and suppression of the liquor traffic? Every intelligent man knows that I have not done so; everybody knows that all this, and more would come to the community from the suppression of a trade the results of which are all bad, and so bad that nothing can be worse, while no good to the value of a dollar comes from it to nation, state, or people. More than a thousand million dollars are annually lost and wasted in this country directly thru the liquor traffic, involving the loss and waste of a large share of the wages of labor and the profits of business. Everybody knows this to be true.

The agitation for prohibition is founded in the belief that there are virtue, intelligence, patriotism, and piety enough in the country to redeem the nation from the frightful evil—far greater than those of war, pestilence and famine combined. How is it possible that good men can object to this movement or be indifferent to it?

JUST SUITED.

We are not disappointed in the action of the Republican Convention. Its platform is the exact opposite of that of the Democratic party on the Sabbath question. The Democratic party proposes to repeal the law protecting the Sabbath, the Republican Convention declares against that policy. Men who pretend to be temperance men, and now threaten to bolt the Republican ticket and to defeat it, are simply tools and agents of the Leag of Freedom. We cannot hope to get everything we want at one time. To form a third party now would be a malicious piece of political insanity which would inevitably result in electing the Democratic ticket and repealing the Sunday law. That would be a most ruinous policy, and we repudiate it in detail and altogether. If any voter knows any candidate of any party to be a dishonest or incompetent man, scratch him off, but let us not decline to vote, nor throw our votes away.—Cal. Christian Advocate.

The Advocate and the temperance advocates see this matter from different standpoints. We dont believe it will pay to continue the annual murder of 3,000 people in this State indefinitely, for the sake of electing either a Republican or a Democratic drunkard maker as Governor; perhaps we are wrong. We dont believe it our duty to vote a ticket and a platform made to suit only the Leag of Freedom even if it suits the Advocate. We dont believe in surrendering the Sunday to a beer garden debauch; perhaps we are out there too. We tried to get the Rep. party to recognize the Christian and temperance sentiment of the State; our present adversaries did not; they did not want any concession made to the temperance people; they wanted it all Sunday law, and the Convention spat upon us all and declared in favor of the worship of the devil.

We promised, if they should so act, to put up a separate ticket, and we keep our word; perhaps that is "malicious insanity." We "must not have all we want at one time." No, some folks poured out upon us two years ago, their choicest gems of abusive epithet, because we wanted to do something then to arrest the tide of human slauter. We got nothing then and are promised a good deal less now; but we should continue right along to do even worse than the man did, who bot a dog and took delivery of the property in instalments of one hair at a time once a year.

We dont believe the Democrats, if elected, will dare to harm the Sunday, because the moral, patriotic and Christian element of that party vehemently denounced their action on that question. And altho the Republicans are bound to make it a day of boisterous riot, the Christian voice of that party is sadly divided—and weak in protest.

Again people who make the removal of the curse of crime and sin and misery from the land, a life study and a life labor, are always said to be wrong; those who dont care a rap about this matter are sure to be right. It is a blessed thing to be always right. A man up in Sonoma county was always right. He made it a rule to go to bed when the hens retired to roost. There was no danger thus of mistaking the time. He could not go wrong. About the last day of Dec. 1879, it grew dark at 2 P. M.; the hens roosted, he undressed and went to bed against the protests of his wife. But in a short time it was discovered to be only an eclipse of the sun and the hens, his infallible guide for 60 years, were out for once.

'THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

PRESIDENT, Miss F. E. Willard, Evanston, Ill.
CORRESPONDING SEC'Y, Mrs. C. B. Buell, 53 Bible House, N. Y.
TREASURER, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

MISS F. E. WILLARD,

PRESIDENT NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

Frances E. Willard is sprung of that strong New England stock that, when transplanted into Western soil, often finds the best conditions of growth. But she, doutless, owes much to the fact that she was educated in an exceptional manner. Her parents, on their way Westward, when she was three years of age, stopped to gather honey at that good old hive—Oberlin College—and five years later went on to Janesville, Wis., where, until she was eighteen, her home was her father's farm. During this time she grew in the free air, with leags of prairie around her, her only companions her brother and sister; her books few, including no novels; her teachers a wise and gifted mother, and a governess to whom she was devotedly attached. Education—not described by text-books and departments—was the daily food and inspiration, and was brot to the children thru a thousand avenues that only a mother, with the divine intuitive gift that Froebel had, could have opened. There were "sermons in stones, books in running brooks." The world's work was reproduced in miniature in the little household, that the children might learn to take part in it. Journalism was carried on, poems were written, a home-republic was formed, and the children trod their little world with the free step and the abandon that helped to conquer it in after-life. One took in life too largely for her early strength, and died at nineteen, and another lately fell in the midst of the the work he began as a boy-journalist. The other, with a strength that is almost miraculous, lives to fulfil the destiny she always saw before her—undefined, yet certain, when she was still a child.

At eighteen years of age, school-life, in the conventional sense, began. After a term at Milwaukee, in the college founded by Catherine Beecher, the family plan was changed, the farm sold, and Evanston, Ill., chosen as the home, for the parents still wisely held to the plan of combining home and school; and as a college could not come to the home, the home must go to the college. In this beautiful suburban town the pretty cottage was built, which to mother and daughter is now sacred as the father's last gift. He died in '67. Here the daughters graduated, and one died, to be shrined by her sister in a memorial volume—"Nineteen Beautiful Years"—and from this point Frances Willard began to take up life with a new earnestness. Some years of teaching followed in Evanston, Pittsburgh, Pa., and Lima, N. Y., and in 1868–70, as the guest of her friend, Miss Jackson, she journeyed thru Europe and the East. In these two years and a half, a year was spent in Paris studying. She gathered much material for literary work, and the experience added breadth to her insight of character and countries. Witnessing the condition of women in the East and in the greater part of Europe led her to a question which has had large answer in her later life: "What can be done to make matters better for women?" From that time she has been a lover of women. She saw that women's state has kept back civilization, as the stream does not rise higher than the spring that feeds it; and she coveted for her countrywomen the "best gifts," to hold and to impart.

After her return to America her ability to speak in public was discovered, and the calls which came to her from all parts of the Northwest proved that her gift was an exceptional one, and she was placed even then in the front rank among speakers.

In 1871 she was elected President of the Woman's College at Evanston, and there developed her plan of self-government, which was watched by many with extreme interest, and is now pursued with success by many educators. On the union of the college with the university, when it became impossible to carry out her plan of government, she resigned her position.

This was in 1874, and in October of the same year a voice that had been thrilling her strangely whenever she heard a sound of it, came to her with a personal appeal. It was from the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and the invitation to work in it was gladly accepted. She saw, with the clear intuition that is peculiar to her, that the little "root out of dry ground" was His promise of that which was to cover the land with a banyan-tree growth. Said she, later: "I was reared on a Western prairie and often have helped to kindle the great fires for which the West used to be famous. A match and a wisp of dry grass were all we needed, and behold the magnificent spectacle of a prairie fire, sweeping across the landscape, swift as a thousand untrained steeds, and no more to be captured than a hurricane! Just so it is with the Crusade. * * * When God lets loose an idea upon this planet, we vainly set limits to its progress; and I believe that Gospel temperance shall yet transform that inmost circle—the human heart—and its widening sweep the circle of home, and then society, and then—pushing its argument to the extreme conclusion—it shall permeate the widest circle of them all—that is, Government."

So closely identified had she become with the womanhood of our country, that the question came very distinctly to her as a representative woman: "Who knoweth if thou be come unto the kingdom for such a time as this?" In 1876–7, on invitation from Mr. Moody, she assisted him ln the Gospel work in Boston for several months. Her hope in undertaking this enterprise was that the temperance work might be united with the Gospel work, and brot with it to the front. This, however, was not fulfilled.

As Corresponding Secretary of the National Union for three years, and as author and organizer of the Home Protection movement in this country, she is practically a leader.

The Home Protection "call" came to her like a revelation in the Spring of the Centennial year, on a Sabbath morning, in Columbus, the capital of the "Crusade State." Her views on "woman suffrage" are well known, but in this she makes clear, definite distinction for the ballot for woman on this question only. She has been laying a foundation in Illinois the past two years, toward which the women of many States look with eager interest. It promises nothing—it only petitions; but there is so much promise—more, of prophecy—in the whole movement, that some of us already see the headstone reared "with shoutings, crying, 'Grace, grace unto it.'"

As an organizer Miss Willard has no equal among women. Her office is not only to plan work, but to be the life and inspiration of the body of workers. Her province is not to work in detail, but she is skilled in utilizing talent of every degree, and adapting the worker to the work.—MARY A. LATHBURY.—Condensed from "Our Union."

HOME PROTECTION IN ARKANSAS.

Last winter the Arkansas Legislature passed a law by which, within three miles of a church or school house, the sale of intoxicating liquors could be prohibited by the will of a majority of the men and women, expressed in the form of their signatures to a petition.

At the Convention of the State Christian Union which was held in the Hall of Representatives at Little Rock, Rev. H. R. Withers said:

"Look over the map of our beloved State, where we and our wives have so long labored and had patience, trace the line from Fort Smith to Little Rock and all along the Iron Mountain road, look over the counties, and from three-fourths of them you will find the liquor-traffic routed, horse, foot, and dragoons. Women did it! We men put the weapon of law in their hands, and they have wielded it like true daughters of the Church, the State, the Home! We welcome you to the first temperance jubilee that Arkansas has ever known, because never before had the sovereign people an opportunity to assert its conviction and to avenge its heartache."

Colonel Porter Grace, one of their leading lawyers, said:

"In my career as a lawyer I have prosecuted or defended one hundred and thirty men for homicide in my part of the State. Fully nine-tenths of all my cases at court have been directly traceable to the liquor traffic. I have seen women suffer so much that I determined to befriend them, if I could. Two facts stood out in bold relief as the result of my experience: 1. Intoxicating liquors are at the bottom of crime; 2. The women, as a class, not only do not drink, but are set against the habit. Then came the question: What can be done to protect the homes?' Our Legislature had not got up, nor down, nor around (just as you please to call it) to the idea of the full ballot for women. So, as I could not put that in their hands, I resolved to do my level best to give them the vote by signature. We asked for this law and secured it by a large majority. Be it said to the everlasting credit of women that withal that, as a class, without regard to color, they stood for the right when we gave them the power."

And Senator Mitchell, who was the chief champion of the measure in the Senate, said:

"I was always opposed to the ballot for women; but they have so nobly vindicated their right to it in our State, and by their quiet and divine action have done so much more to increase the sum of human welfare here than any single force has ever before done, that I am prepared to use my influence to invest them with full sovereigntry pro bono publico.—Morning and Day of Reform.

THE TEMPERANCE WOMEN'S BALLOT.

It is a remarkable fact that two-thirds of the church members in this country are women: while on the other hand nineteen-twentieths of the criminals are men. Ought not the voting power (which is the governing power of a community) to be lodged as much in the hands of the Christian part of the community as in the class which contains almost all the criminals?

A lady, recently, in visiting the Canadian prisons, asked one of the turnkeys in reference to this matter of comparative numbers of the sexes in prison. Here is the conversation as reported by the lady—Sarah M. Perkins. The turnkey answered:

"I have been here eighteen years, and I should say about one woman to forty men."

"How do you account for it that you have so few women?"

He scratched his head, and was silent awhile, then he blurted out, as if the words hurt him.

"Women are better than men."

"You, a man, and say this?"

"Well, it's the truth, but I suppose 'tis woman's rights, to say it."

"It's a man's always to tell the truth; but if this is true, and if women have more moral strength then men, should not this be used for the good of society?—to vote down intemperance and licentiousness, and to see that good men are elected to office?"

The turnkey answered:

"Yes, that's a fact. I really believe the world would be better for it but I never said it before."—Portsmouth Weekly.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE COMING.

A short time ago the Iowa Legislature passed a constitutional amendment for woman suffrage. After this is passed by a second Legislature, it can be voted upon by the people. Let us take courage! the world is progressing. We may not live to see it, but our daughters, methinks, will go as naturally to the polls, and vote against the wrong, as we go now to the man who is only great because he has the ballot, and plead so often in vain, and he will use his might in favor of temperance and right. Ah! the tables will be turned then. These lovers of evil more than good will come to us, instead of our going to them. Liquor dealers will then plead with us, instead of our beseeching them almost on bended knees. I must say, I rather relish the picture. Imagine one of them coming to us and saying, "Mrs. So-and-So, Madame, did I understand you to request me not to sell strong drink to your son? I shall be very happy to comply, and will see to it that no one on the premises gives him anything in future—not even cider; and—ah! that widow's son over the way? No, no! he shall never have a drop from my establishment! Good morning, madame; if I can serve you in any way, I shall be happy!" etc., etc. Look on that picture and then on this: "I shall sell to your son just as long as he has any money to pay for the drinks!" (Fact.) So we will work and pray for the good time coming.—Our Union.

OREGON.—At the present session of the Legislature a petition will be presented with 50,000 signatures tor the formal submission to the vote of the people the following amendment:

Section 1. The manufacture, sale, or the giving away, or the offering to sell or give away, or the keeping for sale of any spirituous, vinous, malt, fermented or intoxicating liquor whatever, is forever prohibited in this State, except for medical, scientific, mechanical, or sacramental purposes.

Sec. 2. The legislative assembly of the State shall without delay, pass all necessary laws with sufficient penalties necessary to enforce said article.

LODGE FURNITURE.

In addition to the above, I will attend to orders for Impression Seals, Blank Books, Special Printing, Regalia or Lodge Furniture. This will be done as an accommodation to Lodges and not as a source of profit either to the Grand Lodge or myself; hence all orders filled will be sent per express by the dealers, with instructions to "collect on delivery," unless the money accompanies the order. PROCEEDINGS OF THE EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE GRAND LODGE I. O. G. T. OF CALIFORNIA.

BALDWIN HOTEL, San Francisco Oct., 7, 1882.

Pursuant to the call of the G. W. C. T. the Executive Committee convened and was called to order at 10;30 o'clock A. M. by Robert Thompson, P. G. W. C. T.

Upon calling the roll of members all were noted present as follows: G. W. C. T. M. C. Winchester of Grafton; G. W. C. Will D. Gould of Los Angeles; G. W. V. T. Mrs, Emily Pitt Stevens and P. G. W. C. T. Robt. Thompson of San Francisco; G. W. T. I. S. Halsey of Vallejo; G. W. S. Geo. B. Katzenstein of Sacramento.

GRAND LECTURERS.

Applications for appointment as Grand Lecturers were received from George Babcock of San Francisco; M. V. Wright of Riverside and F. J. Culver of Oakland. The applications were received and placed on file, and in the same connection all the Grand Lecturers who served the Grand Lodge during the last year were considered as applicants and their applications were filed.

An application from Jno. C. Brown of Los Angeles for appointment as a colporteur and an application from George Bramall for employment in some position where he could make himself useful to the cause and Order, was also received and ordered on file.

The following Grand Lecturers were elected, Emily P. Stevens, Col. C. N. Goulding and Prof. William Crowhurst.

Upon motion Mrs. E. P. Stevens was relieved from active service until November 15th next, her employment and compensation not to commence until after that date.

The compensation to the Grand Lecturers elected was agreed upon and the further elections of Grand Lecturers was deferred until the next or future meeting of the Executive Committee.

The following was unanimously adopted:

That no person shall be permitted to take collections in the name of the Order within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of California, except the elective Grand Lodge Officers, the Grand Lecturer duly commissioned, or persons especially authorized so to do.

That all collections taken in the name of the Order shall become the funds of the Grand Lodge, and must be paid into its Treasury.

Upon motion the foregoing declaration was ordered to be published as a standing notice at the head of the Lecturer's page of the RESCUE.

Upon motion Geo. B. Katzenstein was elected Superintendent of the Lecture force, and his compensation was fixed as recommended by the Grand Lodge.

THE RESCUE.

Matters connected with the RESCUE were fully considered, and, upon motion, Capt. A. D. Wood was unanimously chosen as editor and publisher of the RESCUE for the ensuing year.

Upon motion his salary was fixed at $150.00 per month.

Upon motion the editor and publisher was allowed an additional sum of $25 per month for clerk hire.

Upon motion Jno. C. Brown, of Los Angeles; M. V. Wright, of Riverside; and George Bramall of Haywards, were recommended to the editor and publisher of the RESCUE, for appointment as canvassers, upon commission.

Upon motion the editor and publisher was authorized to appoint a financial agent or business manager, and such further canvassers as may be advisable and available to operate under his direction or commission, and subject to the approval and control of Executive Committee.

Upon motion the editor, G. W. C. T., and G. W. S., were appointed a committee to prepare a scale of prices for the advertising space of the RESCUE, and when adopted to print the same in each issue of the RESCUE.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE.

Upon motion it was decided to continue the mailing of the RESCUE weekly to each Minister of the Gospel in regular work within the State of California, and to each Superior Judge, as recommended by the Grand Lodge.

Upon motion the G. W. S., was directed to procure and distribute immediately, pro rata to each Lodge, five thousand copies of the address of Jno. B. Finch on Good Templary as published by the R. W. G. L.

Upon motion, the G. W. C. T. and G. W. S., were appointed a committee to ascertain the probable expense of the printing and distribution of an edition of the "Wine Tracts," and were given full discretionary powers.

JUVENILE WORK.

Mrs. M. E. Richardson, G. S. J. W., was called before the committee and a full conference was had concerning the work in her department.

Upon motion the matter of procuring a supply of regalias, reward cards and general supplies, to be kept in stock and for sale by her, for the benefit of her department and the Grand Lodge, was referred to the G. S. J. W., and G. W. S. with full power to act.

The matter of printing commissions for District Superintendents and all other printing necessary for the Juvenile Department was referred with full power to act, to the G. S. J. W. and the G. W. S., as a special committee.

Upon motion a page of the RESCUE was assigned to the Juvenile work, to be controlled and edited by the G. S. J. W., in a manner similar to the page now conducted by the G. W. S., and the G. S. J. W., to be held responsible for the management and contents of said department.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The G. W. S., was directed to have printed 1,500 copies of the journal of proceedings of the session of the Grand Lodge just closed and to distribute the same as follows: One copy each to every G. W. C. T., G. W. S., and official organs of the Grand Lodges; to every R. W. G. L. officer and the Grand Lodge officers of this jurisdiction; to every Lodge Deputy within this jurisdiction as the official copy for Lodge use, and to every Grand Lodge Representative who was in actual attendance upon the recent session of the Grand Lodge.

The superintendent of the lecture force was given discretionary power to employ special lecturers as necessity may require and the exigencies of the Grand Lodge funds will admit.

At 5:30 P. M. the committee adjourned to meet again on Monday evening November 13th, at 8 o'clock, then to meet in Vallejo.

GEO. B. KATZENSTEIN, Secretary.

San Francisco, October 6, 1882.

To the Independent Order of Good Templars of California:

My services as your G. W. C. T., have ended. For the past three years, I have been honored with that office and burdened with its cares and responsibilities. While my labors have been great, yet a universal kindness has ever aided me to perform them with greater ease than I otherwise could have done. For this kindship, I return to you my thanks, one and all.

But, I write for another rather than myself.

Our success, in a great measure, depends upon the confidence we impose in our officers, and especially our G. W. C. T., and G. W. S. Of our G. W. S., I do not intend to speak, for you know him to have been tried for these many years, and not found wanting.

We have as Grand Worthy Chief Templar, a new man, not a new Good Templar, or a new worker in the cause of Temperance, only new as G. W. C. T.

Brother M. C. Winchester, ourly elected G. W. C. T. is well known to all the members of tne Grand Lodge, who have attended the sessions for the past few years. He has been an efficient member of the Finance Committes of the G. L., for many years and has had occasion, as such to thoroughly examine all the transaction of our G. L., each year, so he has become familiar with all our plans and modes of work. Thus he has become well fitted for his present position. He is a man of education, integrity and ability, and is in every way eniitled to our entire confidence and respect. I therefore take great pleasure in recommending him to our fraternity, and ask for him a cordial welcome.

R. THOMPSON.
P. G. W. C T.

[To the Rescue.]

Said a mother to her Son, it is vacation next week don't you think you could get a job of work for the week. You know the late severe wind blew off a great many tons of apples, and I should not wonder if Mr. H, would be glad to get some boys to help gather his; suppose you ask him.

What! gather apples for him to make cider with? No! "I cannot cause to be made, furnished in any way, shape or manner, anything that csn intoxicate (repeating the G. T. pledge,)

Said his mother you are right. They are both G. T's, but the mother seemed a little thoughtless, but who can tell what joy filled her heart, to know that the 12 year old boy was so true to the principles which she had tried so earnestly to instill into his mind and heart, praying they may be life enduring. If we can educate our boys in firm temperance principles, our Nation we may save, we seem to heve little to hope for from present parties and rulers. I hope our Prohibition Convention will give us a good clean ticket, men whom all good moral men (and I wish I could say women too,) can vote for, may the Lord speed the day, when we shall trample the monster under our feet, and so crush out all semblance of life that it will be impossible for it ever to revive to menace the lives of our children, or again to cause the intolerable suffering of the wives and mothers of the land.

We have concluded that all the difference between the two nominees (Rep. and Dem.,) for Governor is that the Rep. nominee can go one hundred acres of vineyard more than the Dem. No objection to the vineyard used for proper purposes, but are all the grapes likly to be made into raisins or infermented wine?

Write in letters of fire what you think of G, T., or Home Protectionist voting for a man they know to be a moderate drinker, when they have a choice of a man of firm temperance principles, of good ability and, who all that hafle had dealings with him say to be thoroly honest?

They say we can't elect him, the temperance man, and we must be at the other, or the third man who professed to be a strong temperance man, and who went back on us as our Primary. I think if they do vote for the one who uses liquor, they will be very inconsistent, do say the least even if they do not perjure themselves. PROHIBITIONIST.

IT IS a mistake to suppose that a mania has got adrift among the ministers who have appeared in print recently in defense of a Republican party, which promises that it wont have any Sunday law but one that is worthless, aud will not enforce even that. It is only a case of providential intervention. "God allowed the Democrats to play the fool, so as to defeat their ticket. And altho the Republican delegates would have done the same thing if they thot it would get more votes, yet God did not want the Republican ticket defeated, and he overruled the thing." That is the way they put it up, and it satisfies everybody, of course.

CORVALLIS, October 2.

ED. RESCUE:—As I am now quite at home in this field, I will comply with your request to furnish items of interest as to the work here. When I remember my trip to Portland, and attempt to describe those two days that seemed of endless length, I am reminded of the Penn. farmers exclamation. He was notoriously profane as well as original in his combination of oaths. One day as he went to market with a load of potatoes, loose in the wagon box and had nearly reached the summit of a long hill, the end-gate dropped, allowing the whole load to roll down the hill. A neighbor chanced along, and was surprised to find him watching the bounding rolling potatoes in utter silence, and asked, "why don't you swear?" "I can't think of anything that will do the subject justice," was his answer. For the same reason will I pass in silence my first view of the ocean and experience thereon, I remained a week in Salem, in the meantime visiting Capital Lodge, and attending a session of the Executive Committee of this Grand Lodge. The former is doing a good work, and points with pride to its noble record. I found the Executive Committee alive to needs of the hour, and progressive in spirit. Bro. Jessup is a noble man and will be a power for our cause in the Senate. He has already submitted the bill for a Constitutional amendment, and with it petition containing 52,600 names, asking for its submission. Surely such a unanimous request connot be denied. Can any better evidence of the earnestness of the temperance workers of this new but vigorous state, be found?

On Sat. the 24th inst., I began work at Independence (Polk Co.,) remaining two evenings, where the meetings were well attended. The small lodge is struggling bravely in the face of much opposition and owes much to Sister L. L. Whiteaker's tireless zeal.

The "College City," of Mommouth was found to be a lovely place in point of natural scenery and the people ready to listen, but better yet to work as well.

Hence, at the close of the second meeting, the Lodge began working again with 35 members. The following two days I spent at Buena Vista, and 21 names obtained, but no orginization effected for local reasons. Materially, Socially and in Lodge work this town is decidedly one of the "Used-to-be's." Friday the 29th, I came here, and found a thriving village, the Co. seat with six churches, a College but no temperance organization, except a W. C. T. U, lately established. For a year, grand old Excelsior Lodge, which has still so many living proofs of good accomplished, has been dead. The first meeting was discouraging as to attendance, but there has been improvement until last evening, in spite of rain, (for it really does rain in Oregon;) and darkness, there was a crowded house, and I am to return and organize a lodge.

I must not omit to say that at the Executive meeting, the RESCUE was re-instated as the Organ of this Grand Lodge and the Grand Lecturer instructed to be diligent in his efforts to extend its circulation, the Committee expressing its belief that he would thus materially aid the cause and order. More anon. WILL C. KING.

F. J. CULVER.

I arrived at Bodie at 8 P. M. Could not arrange for a meeting before Friday night, and then the attendance was small. Saturday night the hall was occupied, and I would say there is but one hall in the town. Sunday evening the Methodist minister, Rev. F. M. Warrington, gave me his audience, and as I had done a good deal of advertising, the hall was full, It being engaged for four nights out of the coming week, I concluded to push on to Bridgeport and Coleville, and then return to Bodie. Monday morning I took stage for Bridgeport, twenty miles. On arriving there, found that insufficient notice had been given. I made inquiry as to how I could get to Coleville, learned that a German, living in Antelope Valley, six miles from Coleville, was in town. I secured passage, but our friend didn't come to B. every day, so he must make several city calls, and some of them were long enough to be country calls. Finally we started, yet our coachman said he must stop and have a game of seven-up with his Los Angeles friend. I had the privilege of holding the horses whilst the "seven" was being "uped." I employed the time in advertising myself to all passers, by telling them that they could be on the lookout for my return in one week.

Two miles out of the county seat I called at the house of Bro. W. T. Elliott, saw Mrs. Elliott, who said they would advertise my meeting on our return. On returning to the wagon, the driver said, "Gan you trive?" Yes. "Vel, I peen so zleepy, und I vish you vould trive. Don't it dot young 'orse, but you can lick dot old von all you blease." A great privilege, as the whip was at least six inches too short to hit it. I mounted the seat and took the "ribbons." My companions in the bottom of the wagon and the bottle soon was in the land of nod, rolling round like a beer keg, as o'er the rough and stony road we jogged along.

POLITICS OVER JORDAN.

If the reverend Methodist divine, Doctor Briggs, does not have a little bit of an explanation to make to Saint Peter, when he comes up to the celestial gate, over his temperance politics, we shall be mistaken. The discipline of the Methodist church does not permit its members to make, sell, or drink beer, wine, or whisky, or to rent property to those who do sell. It is very severe, very consistent, very ultra, this church, upon the temperance question, and when Saint Peter opens the wicket and looks out upon the shining face of Doctor Briggs, he will say to him: "Doctor, how about your temperance politics?" "All right, Saint Peter, I will just step in and sit down upon one of your golden stools, and tell you all about it." "You stand where you are, doctor; the music of the golden harps is very confusing inside just now, and I can hear you better from the outside. How did you come to send your whole conference over to the temperance convention in aid of Estee?" "Well, you see, Saint Peter, I was a Republican; Governor Perkins had appointed me Yosemite Commissioner, and Estee would keep me in if he were elected." "Who is this man Estee? His name has never been upon our books." "Estee? Well now, Saint Peter, I don't defend myself for supporting him, except that I had to go against Stoneman—'the least of two evils,' you know, Saint Peter. 'Do evil that good may come.'" "Doctor Briggs, don't wink at me; there is no choice of evil, and to do it under any circumstances is the teaching of the devil, the door to whose abode is just a little farther on and down under the hill." "But Stoneman was a Democrat——" "All right, doctor; there are several Democrats inside, but no Jesuits who practiced your kind of politics. We do not admit parsons or politicians who do evil that good may come." "I have always been a consistent temperance man." "Then how could you vote for Estee?" "Don't the Bible say, 'A little wine for the stomach's sake'?" "That was Saint Paul who made that mistake. I am Peter, and I keep the gate. Estee was a vine-grower and a brandy-maker; drinks gin, and made his fight in Peter Hopkins's barroom, and you, as a Methodist preacher, knew better than to support him." "I have always been an observer of the Sabbath, and you know, Saint Peter, that the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath." "There you go again, doctor. The Sabbath was not made for man to get drunk at a corner grocery, and your man Estee had not the courage to so declare." "Saint Peter, you don't understand politics; you had no primaries in Palestine." "We did have primaries, caucuses, and conventions in Judea and in all the land around about Jordan. If you think the Christian doctrines were promulgated and the church was built up without politics, you don't know." "Then, Saint Peter, you should be indulgent to me, for you know how it is yourself." "Your kind of politics, I know nothing about. The early Christians were honest men. They did not meddle in politics nor hold office; with staff and without scrip they went forth to preach the gospel. The Apostles never endeavored to break up a temperance convention, and never apologized for drunkenness or Sabbath desecration. You may be a very excellent and worthy politician, Doctor Briggs, but as a temperance man and Methodist preacher you will have to pass along. Next gentleman," called out the Saint. The door opened and the editor of the Argonaut passed smilingly in, helped himself to harp and stool, and made himself quite at home. * * * —Argonaut.

CONVENTIONS.

The work of our Convention and of the Session of Grand Lodge, both of which, in a great many instances were attended by the same delegates, has very busily occupied the time and labor of the prohibitionists.

The State Central Committee have been busily employed printing circulars, notices, etc., and sending documents to the various counties, making arrangements for speakers and various other duties. It will be now the duty of friends of prohibition to call early conventions and select candidates for positions that will pledge themselves to work for prohibition, and that will deserve the votes of honest, sober citizens.

In any cases where the other parties have nominated honest temperance men on their tickets, they will, no dout, be endorsed by the prohibitionists, but where it is not so it is hoped they will nominate new candidates, and take active measures for electing them.

The State Central Committee will, in a few days, issue an address upon the subject.

The Marysville Appeal says that the Grand Lodge of the State of California repudiated the admirable anti-debris plank adopted by the Prohibition Home Protection Party. This is an error. Among other resolutions, the following was offered:

Resolved, that this Grand Lodge heartily approves the Prohibition Home Protection Party of California, its platform and nominees, and earnestly recommends the State ticket to the suffrages of the temperance, moral and patriotic citizens of this State.

The point was raised that the word "platform" carried the Grand Lodge into politics. After some discussion, W. D. Gould withdrew the resolution, made the necessary correction, and introduced it anew. The following resolution was offered as a substitute; but was, on motion adopted and added as an amendment:

Resolved, That we heartily endorse as much of the platform of the Prohibition Home Protection Party of California as refers to the temperance question.

The grand lodge as a temperance body, has endorsed, among other things, all of the Prohibition Home Protection Party's platform which refers to the temperance question; it has expressed no opinion on the mere political tenets of the party. Therefore, it cannot be justly said to repudiate or approve the anti-debris plank, or any other plank upon which it has simply refrained from expressing an opinion which it had no right to express, upon subjects with which it had no right to deal. The attempt to create prejudice against the grand lodge for not entering into the discussion of Slickens, etc., is not worthy the labor of the Appeal.

W. G. SWAN.

ED. RESCUE: I was at the so-called "Farmers' Convention," held at Stockton, Oct. 7. The representation was very meager. Whole counties were conspicuously absent; others withdrew as soon as they saw the nature of the job to be done by the Convention. The Committee on Credentials acted with unusual unfairness, rejecting farmers who were duly elected as delegates, and virtually recommending double representation from some favored sections.

It was fixed that the voting should be done orally, and no sensible diminution in "ayes" and "noes" was perceptible when the roll was called, although delegations withdrew during the proceedings. There were enough Grangers present to prevent the name of the Convention being wholly a misnomer, but the men who ran the machine were short hairs, manipulators, etc., some of whom would weigh 300 pounds. After the "boys" had fixed things to suit their managers, the bland expression which played upon the broad features of Cadwallader, White, Foote, et als., was very assuring. By the way, what real character has Mr. W. W. Foote with which to brace up his anti-monopoly letters? It is understood that he can drink whisky with fair ability, and knows the value of three aces in a game of poker.

Flavius Josephus Clark acted as principal fugleman. He was assisted by a Mr. Larned, who presented the draft of a bill, recommended, as he inadvertently stated, by Grove Johnson. Mr. Larned was stamped down for letting the cat out of the meal tub; but he operated with the boys thereafter, just as if nothing unusual had occurred, and voted with the majority. When these "farmers" generously refused to take the responsibility of naming the Supreme Justices, there were about 30 "delegates" present, and the forbearance of the Convention was a subject of commendation. S.

The Examiner says, "of course we must have a day of rest," but they dare not say anything about the Sunday law.—Mission Journal.

But not one of the Republican party organs dares to say one word about a Sunday law that will not permit a legion of grog-shops to be open all day Sunday. The party of great moral ideas.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

A DRINKING POET.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

A very common notion is abroad that wine makes men witty, bright, and successful intellectually. Very likely you have heard of men who primed themselves for writing or speaking with a glass or two of wine, if not with something stronger, and then whatever good or witty things they produced were credited to the wine. Dr. Story in his excellent book on alcohol, which I am sure you would enjoy reading if you only knew about it, tells us that this is only one of the delusions of alcohol, one of the lies it tells us, a fancy that takes its rise, like other crazy notions, in the brain of the drinker. Speaking of a company of drinkers, he says: "One feels musical and undertakes to sing. To him the music is magnificent, and to his tipsy companions delightful. But to a sober, sensible man, the music is flat, discordant, harsh. Others among them say things which are supposed to be witty, and they all laugh heartily at each other's brilliancy. But if they could hear the same stuff read after the poison in their brains had ceased to operate, they would not call it wit or brilliancy. Alcohol dulls the edge and takes away the keenness and clearness of the mind."

So when people tell us that certain great men, poets and wits, were drinkers, we have a right to inquire how much the drink helped them on the road to success. A most noted case was that of Edgar Allan Poe, an American poet of the finest abilities, and one who helped himself to drink immensely, so that the drink had a fair chance to help him if it could. Let us see what it did for him.

He was born in 1811, before the temperance reform had banished the drink from common use, so we have no need to ask how little Edgar learned to drink. Almost everybody drank in those days. He was left an orphan at the age of six, and a Mr. Allan adopted him and gave him gave him good opportunities for schooling, and even sent him to college. He had fine abilities, and he might have done splendidly, but, like many another college boy, he preferred to drink and carouse. The college faculty did not believe in that sort of fuel for the fires of genius, and he was expelled. He started for Greece, in imitation of Byron, but turned up in a police-cell in St. Petersburg, Russia. He then returned to Mr. Allan, who acted a kind, fatherly part by him, and when Edgar expressed a wish to go to West Point, he procured an appointment for him. Here he was soon cashiered for his drunken, disorderly conduct and when he once more returned to Mr. Allan he behaved so badly that even that good man was obliged to cast him off.

He published a little book of poems, which might have been larger and better, if he had drank less and written more; still everybody could see the genius. This sold so well that he concluded to devote himself to literary pursuits. He married a saintly woman, and they loved each other most tenderly. For a while he did well, then he went back again to his cups, and his beautiful wife died in abject misery and destitution, like the wife of any other drunkard. He wrote a touching poem, "Annabel Lee," in which he ascribed her death to the "jealousy of the angels," and sold it for money, which he spent for drink. Sometimes he would stop his drinking long enough to write something fine. His "Eureka" was one of these efforts, and everybody praised it. A most intellectual lady was so won by it that she consented to receive his attentions, and they were engaged to be married. But the very night before the wedding he committed such drunken outrages in her house that the police were summoned.

After this he reformed, as he had done frequently before, joined a temperance society, and did well for some months. But in passing through Baltimore he was waylaid by one of his old drinking companions and induced to drink, and after days of dissipation and madness, he was at last picked up dead drunk out of the gutter and taken to a hospital, where he died at the age of thirty-eight. It is plain enough that the drink killed him, but that very respectable work, "Chambers's Cyclopædia," says that the previous "feeble attempt at teetotalism was indirectly the cause of his death." We must expect to hear and see such mistakes as long as alcohol gets a chance to deceive people by paralyzing nerves and brains, but we must be carefel not to let it deceive us. Poe's genius was such that we have every reason to suppose he might have stood as the equal of Longfellow or Whittier had his moral character been equally good, and especially had his brain been equally free from the fumes of alcohol.

But we would not judge him unkindly. If the truth were known, it is very likely he had inherited his passion for drink from his ancestors, and that he did not know in time, as many of the boys and girls in our temperance schools now know, that the only hope of safety for such an unfortunate is never to waken the slumbering passion by a single taste of the terrible poison.—Banner.

DESTROYED THROUGH TOBACCO.

BY REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE.

An agent of an insurance company says: "One-half our losses come from the spark of the pipe and the cigar." One young man threw away his cigar in one of the cities, and with it he threw away three millions of dollars' worth of the property of others that blazed up from that spark. Harpers' splendid printing establishment years ago was destroyed by a plumber, who, having lighted his pipe, threw the match away, and it fell into a pot of camphene. The whole building was in flames. Five blocks went down. Two thousand employees thrown out of work, and more than a million dollars' worth of property destroyed. But I am speaking of higher values to-day. Better destroy a whole city of stores than destroy one man. O my young friends! if you will excuse the idiom, I will say, Stop before you begin. Here is a serfdom which has a shackle that it is almost impossible to break. Gigantic intellects that could overcome every other bad habit have been flung of this and kept down. Some one was seeking to persuade a man from the habit. The reply was: "Ask me to do anything under the canopy of heaven but this. This I cannot give up, and won't give up, though it takes seven years off my life." O my young friends! steer clear of that Dry Tortugas. —From "The Plagues Alcoholic and Narcotic."

CHICAGO, a city where, in a very special sense, Satan hath his seat, is under the control of liquor-sellers, gamblers, and brothel-keepers. The authorities of the city are merely the mandatories and humble servants of these classes, and it is not, therefore, remarkable that it should be the headquarters of the anti-temperance effort. The leaders in Chicago of the opponents of temperance legislation, are, however, said to be greatly alarmed at the progress of temperance principles in several Western States, and to be devising the best means for retaining the great State of Illinois as a preserve for King Alcohol. If the women of Illinois are true to the principal of Home Protection from dramshops, all the combinations of distillers, brewers, and liquor-sellers will be futile. Miss Willard and her noble coadjutors will rout them all.—N. Y. Witness.

THE MODERN GOOD SAMARITAN.

Rev. A. J. Gordon, D.D., of Boston, thus writes in the Watchword: "And it came to pass as a certain man journeyed from the cradle to the grave, he fell among saloon-keepers, who robbed him of his money, ruined his good name, destroyed his reason, and then kicked him out worse than dead. A moderate drinker came that way, and when he saw him he said: 'He is but a dog; they served him right. Let him die; he is a curse to his family.' And also a license-voter came that way, and when he saw him he said: 'The brute! Put a ball and chain on his leg and work him on the street.' And a fanatic teetotaler came that way, and when he saw him he had compassion on him and raised him up, assisted him to his home, and ministered to his wants and to the wants of his family; got him to sign the pledge, and started him on his journey in comfort and happiness. Who, think you, was the greater friend to humanity—the saloon-keeper, the moderate drinker, the license-voter, or the fanatic teetotaler?"

THE PROHIBITION CONVENTION

Assembled at Y. M. C. A. Hall, San Francisco, Sept. 28, M. C. Winchester presiding. Opened with prayer by Rev. C. A. Bateman of Marysville. There were a large number present, many from great distances, to take part in the important measure of starting a practical movement for Prohibition, while a knot of 20 or 30 persons had come to engineer the Convention into the Estee caravan.

Rev. Mr. Appleton of Oroville, stated that the Republican platform was good enough for any temperance man, and he was opposed to anything but endorsing their ticket. This was greeted with a burst of derisive groans and hisses, while a few employees of the Mint and other Republican emissaries applauded.

Every applicant was admitted save one who had no credentials. Proxies were allowed from Temperance societies, but not as representing unknown ministers or other individuals. The proposed appointment of committees by the chair in place of by the anti-prohibitionists, raised a storm by Rev. Mr. Deal and his faithful Achates, Mr. B. N. Bugbee; to pacify matters, it was moved by W. G. Swan that the committees be appointed by the custom-house, so as to satisfy the kickers.

When it appeared that the Prohibitionists were in a very large majority, the ominous words "we're gone," were heard, and parties began to slip away quietly, but their number was small. At 5, adjourned to meet in Silver Star House in the evening.

At 8 P. M., the Committee on Order of Business reported, recommending nominating of a clean ticket for State officers, congressmen, judges, etc. This was debated during the evening. J. L. Lyon of Oakland, desired the Republican ticket endorsed, for the logical reason that then we could elect it. Mr. Otis Gibson tried to make it clear that the Republican plank and convention mean entirely the reverse of what they say. He also stated that the object of a former prohibitory movement in this State was to gratify the vanity of certain parties, who desired to see their names printed on a ticket. Of course he strongly opposed a similar act of folly now. At the former Convention of July 11, he had declared "if the Republican party does not put up clear men with clear principles, we will kill it, and I will help to bury it face down, so that it will never rise again, or words exactly to that effect.

Rev. Mr. Featherstun of the M. E. Church South, Revs. Cummings, Bateman, Motherall, Gregory, Judges Hotchkiss of San Diego, A. D. Boren and J. L. Coles all advocated a strait ticket, and two or three parties attempted a weak defence of the Estee Schaeffer concern, which rather excited the comic tendencies of the audience, especially when they plaintively declared "the cause of temperance is going to be set back 10 to 20 years."

The question resulted in adoption of the report, and on the second day the following platform was adopted:

THE PLATFORM.

The Prohibition Home Protection party of California, now in State Convention assembled, declares itself in alliance with the great national organization, having temperance for its first organic law and governing motive, is in sympathetic co-operation with all reforms calculated to advance the moral and material welfare of all the American people.

First—We declare that our object, aim and purpose is to build up a political organization that may be safely intrusted with the conduct of national affairs, and to which may be confided, in all the States and Territories of the American Union, the political control of questions involving the moral and material interests of the people.

Second—We invite to this work the intelligent, law-respecting and order-loving men and women of this State; those who own its property, pay its taxes, are interested in the protection and education of its youth, in elevating its moral standards, preserving the union of States, and in developing and perpetuating Christian civilization throughout the world.

Third—We declare that the manufacture, sale and use of alcoholic drinks, is the greatest evil of the country and the age. That the traffic enslaves women and degrades children, debases youth and wrecks manhood, corrupts ballots and injures public service; peoples prisons and fills insane asylums, breeds paupers and criminals and thereby imposes enormous burdens of taxation, destroys capital and ruins labor; degrades, improvishes and destroys our homes, and now threatens, through organized and criminal conspiracies, to subvert law and order. So believing, we declare the cardinal principles of our party to be prohibition, by constitutional amendment, of the manufacture of all alcoholic liquors, not demanded for medicinal, mechanical or scientific use, and the regulation by law, under severe penalties, of the sale of alcoholic liquors for such use, and the absolute and total prohibition of the sale for any other purposes.

Fourth—The defiant resistance to law by the liquor dealers of this State, and their associates; their attempted aggressions for the destruction of our most sacred laws and highest interests, together with the subserviency of the Democratic and Republican parties to these law-breakers and law defiers, have forced upon us an issue of the greatest importance to the State, which should and must be met with determined courage and intense devotion to the best and highest interests of the people. This we are now determined fully and energetically to do.

In this we most earnestly invite the co-operation and assissance of every one who desires the best interests of the State and people.

Fifth—We declare that Sunday is an institution so interwoven into our laws, our customs, our civilization, and the very structure of our Government; so intricately and beneficially connected with our social business and moral life that we cannot dispense with it without sacrificing the very best interests of the country and the highest welfare of the people. And so believing, we demand the enactment and enforcement of an intelligent and rational Sunday Law, and especially do we demand that all saloons or places of business where intoxicating drinks are now licensed to be sold or permitted to be sold on secular days shall be absolutely closed on Sunday.

Sixth—We emphatically protest against all State subsidies or other countenance to encourage the business of making intoxicating drinks from grapes, and against appropriating public funds for horseracing at our State and District Fairs.

Seventh—We are in favor of the universal and enforced education of the youth of our State, including instruction in regard to the effects of alcohol upon the human system, with ample provision for the support of an adequate and efficient system of free public schools, and that the State shall furnish pupils in our public school text books, free of price, to such as are unable to buy them, and to all others at the cost price of their production; and that we are opposed to sectarian education in our free schools, and to the appropriation of the public school moneys to denominational schools.

Eighth—We believe that railroad corporations and companies are subject to the control of general laws, and to such enactments and regulations as may rightfully be demanded by reason of their peculiar relations to the general public as common carriers of passengers and merchandise. We would subject railroad property to the law, giving it the same protection, and none other, that we would give to all others. We would compel it and its owners to bear its and their just proportion of the burdens of government. We would compel them to pay taxes upon their property at the same relative valuation that is placed upon all other property, and, in all respects, we would treat railroad owners and railroads with the same impartiality and justice we would the owners of other property, and the property itself, all being equal, and entitled to the same equal privileges under the law. We are opposed to all unjust discriminations in fares and freights.

Ninth—The hydraulic miner has no right in the pursuit of his important and legitimate industry to injure the property of his agricultural neighbor, or to deposit his detritus in such places that by operation of natural causes it may then, or at some future time, be carried where it will injure land, fill navigable streams, or interfere with the bays and harbors of our coast. It is the duty of the miner engaged in gravel sluicing to so impound his debris—hold it in arrest, that such injuries may not occur, and to this end we insist that proper legislation should be had and the decisions of our courts enforced.

Tenth—We believe that the State should assume control of the water supply for irrigating purposes, and provide at once by suitable legislation, for equitable distribution of the same.

Eleventh—We recognize the noble services of woman in the Temperance reform, and in every elevating, purifying, beneficient work affecting the interest of our race, and we believe that enlightened patriotism and manly courage demand the assertion at this time that American women are entitled of right to the privilege of the elective franchise; and so believing, in the interest of the temperance cause, in the interest of our common humanity, for the safety of our homes, and the protection of our free institutions now threatened, we shall insist upon such amendments to existing laws as shall fully and forever enfranchise the women of our country.

The name of our party was changed to that of the national organization—"Prohibition Home Protection." Here Mr. Warren Oliver of San Jose, rose and said he had 300 votes at his back and had been requested to vote against a third ticket. He was evidently out of place in a prohibitory convention as he had used his influence in Sacramento to prevent any temperance legislation being added to load the Sunday plank, as he called it. Mr. O. withdrew from the convention with some expressions that indicated an intention of using his influence against prohibition on his return.

The Woman Equality plank of the platform was passed with only six dissenting votes. Nominations were made after some desultory warfare upon various subjects. Rev. Mr. Dinsmore nominated Dr. R. H. McDonald for governor who, being sent for made the following reply:

"I have never before in my life been placed under such embarrassing circumstances. Up to this very day I have said to members of this convention that I could not accept any nomination from this convention. But there come times when a man must surrender himself for the good of the community. And this time seems to have come to me. I am ready to sacrifice myself and my interest to do so. It has been said to me time and again that we would have a convention that would amount to nothing, and that we would set back the cause of temperance five or ten years. This is not the case. We demand rights and are going to have them. I do not accept this nomination with the expectation of being beaten. There are voters enough in this State to carry through our ticket and carry it overwhelmingly. Now, friends, I am going to make an assertion. It may look vain and egotistical. Up to this time I have never in my life been engaged in any enterprise that I cared for but I proved successful, and I am going to be successful now. I crossed the Rocky Mountains and the Sierras on a packmule train in 1849. I have been a citizen and business man of the State ever since. I am an observer and have been in many conventions, but I never saw another convention capable of conferring an honor as high as this. I thank you for the honor. I will strike hands with every temperance man in this State, and we will go on to tr umph.."

The following ticket and resolutions were adopted and the convention adjourned after a session of two and a half days. There was a ratification meeting in the evening and after the defeat of the Republican agencies, the utmost harmony and enthusiasm prevailed thruout, and the result was highly satisfactory to all, altho every one did not coincide with every detail of the proceedings. Now the good active services of the good citizenship of California can elect this ticket and defeat the two old Leag of Fiendom owned conspiracies against the people,—the Republican and Democratic parties.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE PROHIBITION HOME PROTECTION CONVENTION.

1. We hail with pleasure the cultivation of the grape in this State, as offering our people a most pleasant, healthful, and remunerative occupation, and an incalculable and inexhaustible mine of wealth for many centuries to come. An unlimited market will always be found for all the raisins, syrups, canned fruit, and fresh grapes that the State can produce. We are assured from our own experience so far, and from the past history and the present condition of the people who have prostituted the luscious grape to the vile uses of drunkenness, that the wine and brandy manufacture is the most degrading, demoralizing, depraving, and pauperizing business which has ever cursed the world. We point for the truth of this to the utter poverty, ignorance, drunkenness, and moral ruin which have enshrouded Spain, Portugal, Sicily, Greece, Hungary, and the wine districts of Switzerland; to the vice, turbulence, drunkenness, insanity and suicides of France; to the rapid degeneration of its people. We point to the fact that only one-half of the young men of France are physically fit for military duty when they arrive at the legal age. We denounce the promises of wealth from the production of wine as entirely baseless and false.

Resolved, That while by the enactment of a Prohibitory Law we will deprive the State of the revenue derived from the production and sale of Liquors, we guarantee the diminution of expense for punishment of crime arising from the production and sale of Liquor, will more than compensate for the loss of revenue or licenses.

2. Resolved, That the Prohibition Home Protection Party of this State, pledges itself and its candidates to an immediate and material reduction in the rate and amounts annually levied for State taxation; that we favor the abolishment of the numerous sinecure offices now drawing large amounts from the State Treasury for salaries, and which have been maintained by both the Democratic and Republican State administrations; that we believe the high valuation of property and the excessive rates so levied have tended and continue to tend to retard the development, growth, and prosperity of the State. We regard it as disgraceful that it should cost annually over three million of dollars, wrung by taxation from 160,000 voters of the State, to maintain the State Government.

3. Resolvea, That the State Central Committee urgently recommend the holding of Prohibitory Conventions, wherever practicable, in all the counties of this State, for the purpose of a thorough organization, to carry into effect the objects of this Convention, to also secure the election of members to both houses of the Legislature, and to fill their various county offices.

4. Resolved. That the State Central Committee of the Prohibition Home Protection Party, shall have no power to fill any vacancy occurring in the ticket presented and nominated by this Convention, by reason of the declination of the proposed candidate or otherwise, by selecting or substituting the name of any person now a candidate for office on the ticket of either the Republican, Democratic, or any other party.

5. Whereas, The Press is the great recognized engine of Reform, speaking hourly to a multitude of readers through the medium of the printed page; and

Whereas, We believe that the RESCUE, the organ of the I. O. G. T., of California, has been largely instrumental in creating and moulding the present healthy sentiment in favor of Prohibition; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Convention heartily endorses the course of said RESCUE, and hereby recommends it to all temperance men, everywhere, and urges them to give it their hearty support, and extend its circulation.

ABOUT SUNDAY.

Col. Stuart Taylor a most sturdy Democrat and gallant soldier of the late war, once Recorder of San Francisco, now a rancher in Wyoming writes to the Argonaut upon the subject of a Veterans Home; the following is an extract:

And just here let me say one other thing, comrade. I had hoped to visit dear old California, where I left my heart long months ago, and say with my voice what I now write, but it seems now impossible for me to leave; but I do want to say just this; I know the Grand Army is not a political order. We taboo politics rightly. Soldiers who are Democrats and Republicans stand touching elbows; but I want to express the hope that every old soldier of George H. Thomas Post—ay, and of every other post in the department—will cast his vote in the coming election for the municipal candidates who favor the Sunday law. I don't care whether these candidates be Republican or Democrats. There is precious little dividing us now. I want to see men elected who believe that one day out of seven should be observed differently from any other. I believe in the Sunday law. Call it a union of church and state, if you will. I don't care what you call it, so long as Sunday is respected. I want to see this loved land of ours a God fearing, Sabbath-respecting land. I am not a religious man; I am not a church-goer; but I respect religion, and I reverence the churches—the sentinels of civilization. I believe one day in seven should be, in a measure, enthroned above the others; and while innocent amusement and recreation should be tolerated, all grogshops and corner gin-mills, where bad alcohol is king, and all gilded palaces of drink, should be shut tight—even as the door of the counting-house is closed, or the shutters of the mechanic's shop are barred. I believe this will work injustice to no man, or set of men. I believe it will be in the interest of the honest toiler, and conduce to the happiness of the laboring man and his family. I believe it is demanded by all good citizens, by all good mothers, by all good wives, by all good sisters, and by all good sweethearts. Respect for the Sabbath was one of the laws thundered from Sinai. Let the voice of women, true women, be heard in the land on the subject. It will be one grand choral throng in unison. I don't care what element, or what set of voters in our midst, demand that this law be set aside. If I were a candidate for office I would not give one fig for their votes if my conscience told me I was right. Who are the men so violentiy opposed to the Sunday law? They are not the men who help to create towns and cities, erect school-houses, and build up states With few exceptions they will be found among the lawless, and the criminal, and communistic classes. They will be the Denis Kearneys of the Sand-lot. They will belong to that element that once festered too long in our midst, and which many of us longed to suppress. The old soldiers who helped to recreate this Union are not of these classes. Neither are a majority of our Irish or German fellow-citizens. My good friend Pixley, of the Argonant, says. "No Democrat dares to favor the Sunday law!" I am a Democrat, and I favor it. Ay, and dare to favor any measure which my conscience tells me is for the good of my fellow-citizens and the welfare of American homes! It is not the first time I have gone against my party when I believed that party wrong, or differed with any disturbing element in its ranks. My country and my American manhood first, my party afterward. And the man who differs honestly with his party, and dares not express his conscientious opinion upon any subject of absorbing public interest, no matter if it deprive him of the presidency, is a craven coward, and unworthy the honor of being an American citizen. Let the old soldiers, in the coming municipal campaign, vote for measures most conducive to the city's moral health and the happiness of thousands of workingmen's homes. With countless good wishes for the Post's welfare, and that of each and every comrade, I am, my dear comrade, always your friend. STUART TAYLOR.

A CLERGYMAN'S $25 KISS.—The Rev. T. Salmon, vicar of New Chapel, was summoned before the magistrates on a charge of assaulting a girl by kissing her. The reverend gentleman having paid the complainant 5 guineas, the charge against him was withdrawn.—London Post.

That item is presented to the Journal of Free etc. to add to his ministerial black list. Would it not be a good plan for the Journal to train a little circus of girls to coax ministers to kiss them, and then get $25 apiece out of them at the police court?

Upon Application we will Mail a 128-page Catalogue to the address of any of your friends. WEINSTOCK & LUBIN, Sacramento.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE DUTY OF THE HOUR.

The time has now come to the lovers of temperance that has been for years desired with earnest patient longing. We have now at last a chance of voting for the prohibition of the liquor curse and we should be turned aside by no wiles of the enemy or of his numerous allies planted with consummate ingenuity in every conceivable position where a foe may be enabled to harass and worry and if possible defeat us. Good Templars and honest temperance men and women should allow no divisions to creep in to distract us; we have enemies enough without, to employ all our resources and we can afford to throw away no power in frivolous bickerings and disputations among ourselves.

At our Grand Lodge Session a resolution was passed commending our Order and its membership to do at the ballot box what we have been, for twenty-three years past, declaring it was our duty to do; to work for the entire prohibition of the liquor traffic in the only way that will ever be at all effective; to cease voting for whisky platforms and whisky men, nominated by whisky men in the whisky interest; to turn over a new leaf and do what we should have done always; vote for honest, clean, sober men nominated by honest, clean, sober men, to serve the interests of the virtue, the morality and the homes of the land.

Strange to say, this resolution, which did not pretend to command, to force or push any one to do anything, aroused violent passionate opposition. Delegates declared they would not be forced into voting against their convictions and talked of the danger of breaking up lodges, hurting the cause and other such absurdities. But there was not a word of compulsion or force in the resolution; nothing at all but a most kindly fraternal recommendation to vote for temperance men and temperance measures and try to get prohibition and protection for our homes. If a lodge or half a lodge or a few members or one member shall choose to vote the Republican or Democratic ticket, neither the resolution nor the Grand Lodge proposed or intended to find fault with the party or parties who may do so; never intended to speak of it or reprove the act: recognizing the fullest liberty of every member of our beloved Order to do as his own conscience dictates.

But it would be strange if a Grand Lodge or a Subordinate Lodge or even a single Good Templar could not have full liberty to send forth an opinion as to the duty of our brethren at the ballot box. Surely when it comes in the form of a kindly modest commendation to act consistently with our professions, no member of our Order will feel unkindly about it whether he follows the advice or not.

It was feared by some of the speakers at the session that the introduction of this topic into our lodges might lead to distraction and disruption and no end of evil consequences. But there seems to be no possible ground of quarrel or hard feeling arising from the mere expression of a kindly opinion as to our duty as voters. Let us all be united for the right and suffer nothing to distract or divide us and strengthen the enemy.

WORK OF THE LEAG OF FIENDOM.

In this free country of churches, colleges, schools, and benevolent and educational institutions of greater influence and in greater numbers than in any other country or people past or present, there is a more complete system of violent crime, a more thoroly drilled and organized army of brigands, thieves, and murderers than in any other country of the world, civilized or savage.

No such condition exists anywhere else, as a weekly train wrecking, a weekly train robbery, a a bank burglary, or the murder of a bank cashier, or the butchery of men and women for their money. But we have it in this foremost country of the world. It was a man of beclouded intellect who said that the moon was more useful than the sun, because the latter shines only in the day time when everybody can see. But those who fail to see clearly and distinctly the great central sun of all this blood and crime and human misery when it is presented to them, are chargeable with equal dimness of perception with those who have not happened to observe that our daylight is due to the sun.

For this unnatural state of affairs in a country of education, equal rights, and a plenteous provision for the needs of all, there must be a manifest productive cause. It cannot be found in our churches, colleges, schools, literature, or in the natural habits, tastes, or traditions of our people. There is nothing in any of these varied interests that has a tendency to generate or foster crime or violence.

Our criminals are Irish, Germans, Swedes, English, Italians, Americans, and of those educated in all the religious and irreligious denominations; so crime is not to be for a moment attributed to any tendency of race, climate, or any peculiarity of moral or religious training.

But there are two divisions into which our people can be classed, that show a remarkable contrast in their relations to crime. The drinkers and the total abstainers. The criminals are found altogether in the ranks of the former with the very rarest exceptions, and these exceptions, it will be found, are some way influenced by the drink system, directly or indirectly.

Again there is probably no authority for presuming that any one has ever been led into crime who only drank a daily glass of beer or wine or brandy and water, and never learned thereby to use a larger quantity. So there is another classification, the always temperate and the intemperate, which entirely divides the lawful citizen and the criminal.

The dramshop, beer den, hotel bar, and beer garden are justly denounced as the central source and origin to which may be charged every bank robbery, every train robbery, every stage robbery, every incendiary fire, every murder. suicide, burglary, and almost every divorce, every petty thievery, every fraud, from the bank forger to the beggars who feign blindness and lameness, to wheedle beer money from the charitable and thotless.

These drink dens from the highest to the lowest are nothing but breeders of crime and hatcheries of criminals. There are adout 250.000 of them of all kinds in the Union; so many traps set and baited with Satanic ingenuity to catch men and boys and women, To turn honest, unsuspicious, innocent men and boys into idlers, swearers, loafers, gamblers, smokers, drinkers, drunkards, paupers. Having got any where into the toils of the dramshop the various degrees above mentioned are taken imperceptibly, just as one drifts silently down with the current of a placid river which flows towards a dangerous rapid or a fatal cascade in its later course.

The man who gets tipsy or drunken and is pauperized and an idler is already booked for crime of the kind which his nature and disposition, cowardly or desperate, cunning or stupid most readily suggests to him.

If there are 250,000 man-traps employed in educating idlers, drunkards, gamblers and paupers in this country—nay, if there were only 10,000, it is absolutely certain that they must annually, monthly, weekly, daily produce a horrible, hideous harvest of human depravity and desperation. The thing to be wondered at is not, that we have so much monstrous crime, but that our good institutions, our good teachers, our good men and women, exercise such a conserving influence in favor of morality and virtue, that the license of crime by our government and people fails to make us all criminals as it is well calculated to do.

He must be simple indeed who can imagine 250,000 crime mills in constant active operation and suppose that this grand manufacturing system of crime does not have on hand an unlimited supply of robbers, assassins, forgers, frauds, thieves etc. fitted for every phase of crime, than can be conceived in the human heart depraved.

There is not, nor ever was in this country any other incitement or inducement to crime, no other factor of pauperism, or other source of human misery in this beautiful country but the dramshop. And it is the most idle waste of time and labor to try to remedy any evil till we get the dramshop removed.

Every good citizen, every Christian will have an opportunity to strike an effective blow at the existence of this greatest crime and curse of the ages by voting the Prohibition ticket on the 7th day of November.

GRAND LODGE SESSION.

Never before has so large a representation attended a session of our G. L. as came together last week. On the evening of the 2nd about 800 Good Templars met at Dashaway Hall, the occasion being a reception of the representatives by the lodges of San Franciso.

After appropriate music and prayer by Rev. J. C. Simmons the address of welcome was given by Bro. F. Storer and responded to by Bros. Gould, Cohenour, the G. W. C. T. and Mrs. E. P. Stevens. After a very exaustive program of refreshments a general good of the Order was enjoyed and speakers and hearers got home late, very late in the evening or perhaps very early in the morning.

On the 3d the roll of new applicants for Grand Lodge degree was called in Shiels Hall 32 O'Farrel St. and 199 were present beside as many more of those already members of the G. L. The quarters in this hall were altogether too narrow and in the afternoon the Grand Lodge met at Dashaway Hall. Mr. F. D. Gipson was received as a visitor from Stetson Me. (Lodge No, 231) who made a short address.

The G. W. C. Ts. report stated that the Order is planted in 50 of the 52 counties of the State. He recommended vigorous prosecution of the lecture work, the juvenile work and the earnest support of the Rescue and use of other temperance literature. The Mutual Aid was commended to be vigorously pushed. The report was very full and contained many valuable suggestions for the future conduct and management of the varied interests and enterprises of the Order.

The report of the G. W. S. gives the present number of lodges 359, an increase of 18, and 18,747 members, an increase of 1,506. It will be remembered, that no lodges are here counted which are at all in arrears, even for one quarter; there are 19 lodges one quarter and 12 two quarters in arrears; these may be still working or may be restored. Full degree members 11,465. Total cash received during the year $37,417. Gross expenditure $39,616. Cash on hand $2,257. Lectures delivered 1334. Numbers of people addressed 160,000.

On the second and third days there were perhaps 50 more candidates invested with the G. L. Degree. Various amendments were proposed to the constitution but fortunately most of them were rejected. All such propositions as have been aimed at a reduction of the fees and dues in this jurisdiction, for the past 15 years have met with a similar fate.

The following resolution was adopted unanimously, by a rising vote:

Resolved, That this Grand Lodge hails with unfeigned satisfaction the intelligence that a visit to this Coast is in contemplation by Miss F. E. Willard, the noble and gifted President of the National W. C. T. U., and Miss Anna Gordon, her gallant and talented assistant, who are expected to be here in March next. Believing that the visit of these consecrated apostles of Christianity, Prohibition and Home Protection will result in a most important accession to the temperance army, the temperance sentiment and the temperance power of the Pacific Coast, we unite most cordially with the invitations extended to Miss Willard and Miss Gordon, and promise them our most earnest support and assistance, and extend them our heartiest good will and sympathy and Godspeed.

Resolved, That the Executive Committee be instructed to contribute $150, to assist in defraying the necessary expenses of these distinguished visitors.

Bro. W. D. Gould introduced the following:

Whereas, The Order of Good Templars aims to reclaim all of the fallen, and to save all others from falling; to unite all moral and social elements of society in an unceasing warfare against the great evil of intemperance, and to hasten the hour when the means of intoxication shall be driven from our land;

And Whereas, the Order for more than twenty years has proclaimed as its cardinal principles the following:

GOOD TEMPLARS' PLATFORM.

[adopted by the R. W. G. L., at the session of 1859.]

1. Total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

2. No license, in any form, or under any circumstances, for the sale of liquors to be used as a beverage.

3. The absolute prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors for such purposes; prohibition by the will of the people, exercised in due form of law, with the penalties deserved for a crime of such enormity.

4. The creation of a healthy public opinion upon the subject, by the active dissemination of truth in all the modes known to an enlightened philanthropy.

5. The election of good, honest men to administer the laws.

6. Persistence in efforts to save individuals and communities from so dreadful a scourge, against all forms of opposition and difficulties, until our success is complete and universal.

Therefore, be it Resolved, That this Grand Lodge heartily approves the Prohibition Home Protection Party of California, its platform and nominees, and earnestly recommends the State Ticket to the suffrages of the temperance, moral and patriotic citizens of this State.

And it further recommends that mass Temperance Conventions be held immediately in all the counties, and active measures be taken to arouse the people to vote as they pray.

After a very animated discussion, Bro. Julius Lyons moved the following amendment.

Resolved, That we heartily indorse so much of the platform of the Prohibition Home Protection Party of California as refers to the temperance question.

On motion of Bro. Gould, the former resolution was amended by the addition of this clause and it so passed by a vote of 126 to 58.

There was a lively public meeting in the evening. Rev. A. C. Bateman, Col. Babcock, W. G. Swan, and Miss M. A. Guthrie were the speakers. Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Souther sang various selections with much applause. The speakers ably advocated active work for the prohibition ticket, and were greeted with a vigorous endorsement. Miss Guthrie's address, so winning in the choiceness of its language and so gracefully and modestly presented, was a matter of pleasant surprise to most of the audience who were unprepared to find a youthful native orator of such rare promise among us.

On Thursday the following officers were elected, the Secretary in each instance casting the ballot. M. C. Winchester of Yolo, G. W. C. T.; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, G. W. V.T.; Mrs. M. E. Richardson, G. S. J. W.; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S.; and I. S. Halsey, G. W. T. Pro. W. D. Gould and J. R. Johns, being nominated, the former was elected G. W. C.

Reps. to R. W. G. L. were Niles Searls, Mrs. Ida Katzenstein, Mrs. Baldwin, and Mrs. Stevens. Alternates, Mrs. Mayhew, H. S. Graves, M. F. Quin, and Mrs. Ballou. Trustees of G. L. R. Thompson, Niles Searls, and I. S. Halsey. Trustees of O. H., I. S. Halsey, S. Kitto, and R. Thompson. Lady managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, Mrs. M. E. Congdon, and Mrs. C. P. Huntoon. Next session of G. L. to be held in San Francisco.

The G. L. Trustees report the value of Home buildings and furniture at $44,900, and the 97 acres of land attached at $8,560. The Home was reported to be in first-class order in every respect. The Rescue was commended to a more vigorous support on the part of all our membership.

Some Amendments to the Constitution presented late, referring to the Mutual Aid and the Rescue, were postponed for consideration at next session.

At the close of business near midnight on Friday evening, the officers were installed, and after a half hour of short speeches the session closed. Bro. Julius Lyons was G. W. A. S., F. Storer G. M., Miss Mayhew, G. D. M., Mrs. J. L. Coles, G. I. G. and Rev. P. Powers, G. O. G.

The Session may be considered the most important of all so far, as the G. L. has declared itself a prohibitory institution in fact as well as on paper. And now we may proceed to elect our ticket and use our powers to banish intemperance effectively.

Josh Billings remarks in his philosophizing. "A reputation once broken may possibly be repaired, but the world will alwuz keep their eyes on the spot were the krack wuz."

THE TEMPERANCE CANDIDATE.

SHORT SKETCH OF THE LIFE OF DR. R. H. MCDONALD.

The history of the causes which led the temperance people of this State to cast loose from the two old political parties and place in the field a Prohibition ticket, is so interwoven with the history of this campaign that it must of necessity be fresh in the memory of all who take any interest in the political affairs of this State. Like all new movements this Prohibition party has not any great numerical strength, but it includes many persons of undoubted zeal and energy, and whose success in the other walks of life indicates that they will not readily accept failure in politics. Of the purity of their motives and their earnestness in the cause of temperance, there can be no doubt, and while it is not likely that this State is prepared to accept their doctrines, it willingly gives them credit for a conscientious belief in their own protestations. The first man to take a firm stand and demand a Prohibition ticket was Dr. Richard Hayes McDonald, the President of the Pacific Bank. His name is familiar to every one in this city and to thousands throughout the State, not only as a banker, but as a philanthropist. In his desire to aid the children of this great city, who have not the full advantages of a parent's proper care he has organized and maintains a large hall on Sansome street near Pacific, where hundreds of little ones are taken care of, taught to mend their clothes, keep themselves neat and are also given instructions in the duties they owe to each other and to the world at large. These and other good works have endeared Dr. McDonald to the hearts of the poor and needy, as his firm, outspoken stand on the temperance issue has gained him the respect of all, not excluding those who, with an indisputable show of right claim that the individual acts of citizens and their choice of refreshments are too cacred to be tampered with by any class of law-makers. When

THE PROHIBITION CONVENTION

Placed Dr. McDonald at the head of their ticket they gave an emphasis to their proceedings and platform stronger than any words. They gave the people who think with them an undeniable pledge that they meant business and had come to stay. They showed that the rumors that had been set afloat about their convention being organized to assist the political aspirations of a few men on one of the other tickets were false for no one could be found foolish enough to believe them. Dr. R. H. McDonald would act no political stool-pigeon for any man. His whole career shows a firm adhereuce to the principle he believes to be right. He was borne in the State of Kentucky on a farm near Mackville. Washington county, on June 20; 1820. His father, Colonel James McDonald, was a son of Major Richard McDonald, a decendant of Bryan McDonald, who in 1691 settled in Newcastle county, Deleware, having lost his Scottish estate through adherence to the cause of James II. Dr. McDonald's early days were spent on the farm at home. Surrounded by slaves and slave-holders, he early became convinced of the sin of slavery and cast his first ballot in favor of Henry Clay. Shortly afterward he joined the Whig and later the Republican party, with whom he has affiliated until their insincerity on the Sunday law question in this campaign drove him from among them. He studied medicine when quite a young man, practicing first in St. Louis in the malarial districts. In the Spring of 1849 in company with Judge C. H. Swift and Louis Sloss, he came to California, and after a short time commenced the practice of his profession in Sacramento. He was at once chosen and it was in that office and from contact with paupers and criminals that he became convinced that much crime was caused by intemperance. With him, to be sure he was right, was the chief mainspring of conduct, and he at once became a zealous advocate of temperance principles. Dr, McDonald was one of the charter members of the first lodge of Masons organized on the Pacific Coast, and the only one of that little band whose name is still on the roll. His first prominence in politics in this State was in drafting the State Constitution and assisting in the election of Governor Peter H. Burnett. In 1850 floods and fire deprived him of all his fortune, but he set to work with a good heart, and in 1851 had so much prospered that he was able to take to himself a wife, Mrs. Sarah M, Steinagal, who died in 1867 after bearing him three children, Frank V. Richard H. and Mattie S. all of whom are strict tetotalers, In 1854 he went into the drug business. He and his brother, James M. McDonald were the principal parties that paid for and built the first overland telegraph company. He was always a strong Union man, and did much to further the good work of the celebrated Sanitary Commission. Upon the resignation of P. H. Burnett as President of the Pacific Bank. Dr. McDonald was unanimously chosen to fill that important position, and the present prosperous state of the bank's affairs are a living monument to his skill and foresight. He is a Director of the Home of the Inebriates, a trustee of the S. F. T. P. O. C. T. C., and also a trustee of the Good Templars Orphan Asylum at Vallejo. No matter how much people may disagree with the principle he represents, all accord to him firm honesty of purpose and unflagging zeal to further the ends of the cause.

Estee and Stoneman have no claim to the support of temperance or christian people. Dr. McDonald can claim the support of every good citizen. He is not inferior to either of the parties in any thing that is required to make a good Governor. He is incomparably their superior in the example he will, if elected, set before the people and equally so in all his previous acts and habits. Not an objection can be offered to his candidature. The fitness of the others may be challenged at every step.

Now is the time to forget all about our old ideas, that voting for prohibition is embarking in party politics. Time now to vote and try to get other people to vote our prohibition ticket.

THE ISSUE.

The Record-Union says regarding the liquor traffic:

And when thinking men and women reflect upon these facts; when they realize that, as the Tribune says, "the entire earnings of the people and all additions to their wealth are not twice as much as the sum expended for liquor, and because of the abuse of liquor;" it is certain that they will feel more and more the need of remedial action. No man can fail to perceive that if by any means this frightful waste can be stopped, and the fund now worse than thrown away be reclaimed for sane and useful purposes, the problem of the extinction of pauperism may be solved. It is clear that the nation produces annually wealth enough to furnish all with a competence. It is clear that even if half the amount now squandered could be saved the most unprecedented strides in civilization would become possible. It is also to be noted that the political features of this question are scarcely less serious than the social features, for that the liquor traffic is not only debauching and impoverishing the people, but at the same time is fastening upon them ths most fatal and intolerable of all abuses; a system, namely, of politics, in which the demoralizing influences of this same traffic are employed to establish everywhere a government of unscrupulous adventurers, whose shameless venality and corruption affront the public intelligence, and whose cunningly-devised methods are excluding more and more effectually from public careers the upright, the capable, the patriotic and the educated among the citizens. Assuredly there are in the temperance question all the requirements of a burning issue, and it is already too late to think of evading or stifling it.

It is re-assuring to observe that the journals of all shades of politics and opinions, when they come to handle this long evaded question, agree in confirming the most advanced utterances that have ever come from the most ultra temperance advocates.

SIZE OF THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

It does no good for men to sneer at the agitaiion in regard to the liquor traffic. The subject is too important to be laughed down. It may be that prohibition is not the right way to settle it, or that taxation is not; these are fair questions upon which a difference of opinion between sincere and candid men is possible. But the subject has become altogether too important to be ignored, or passed over without any serious attempt to settle it. Aside from the law-defying spirit which it has elicited, aside from all its moral and religious aspects, the question considered purely as one of dollars and cents, in its effect npon the National prosperity and wealth, is one of the most important that can be named.

Directly and indirectly, this country spends in the liquor traffic every year a sum exceeding half the National debt. The cost of that traffic to the country, direct and indirect, is greater than the profits of all its capital not invested in real estate. It costs every year more than our whole Civil Service, our Army, our Navy, our Congress, including the River and Harbor and the Pension bills, our wasteful local governments, and all National, State, county and local debts, besides all the schools in the country. In fact, this Nation pays more for liquor than for every function of every kind of government. How is a question of that size to be put aside with a sneer?

As these statements may seem surprising to those who have not looked into the matter, a few figures may be of service. A glass of beer costs the consumer 5 cents, and there are at least twenty in the gallon, and 640 in the barrel, so that beer retails at about $32 a barrel, while ale costs still more. The consumption of beer and ale last year was about 15,000,000 barrels, cost to consumers about $480,000,000. The cheapest kind of liquor used, ordinary whisky, is rarely sold at 5 cents, and averages at least 7 cents a drink; at half a gill to the "horn," this makes $4,48 per gallon. The consumption last year was about 70,000,000 gallons; cost to consumers about $313,000,000. Adding wines, there is certainly spent for drink more than $800,000,000 and the entire sum raised by taxes of all kinds, National, State, county, city, town and school district, is stated on authority of the Census Bureau to be not more than about $700,000,000.

But the cost of the liquor drunk is not by any means the whole cost of the liquor traffic. An official report, prepared with much labor by the Bureau of Statistics of Masssachusetts, under authority from the Legislature, states that 84 per cent of all the crime and criminal expenses in that State comes directly from the abuse of liquor. There are at least one in twenty of the able-bodied men in this country who are rendered idle by their habits or incapacitated for work, and these persons, at the ordinary wages of workmen, would earn, if industrious and fairly employed, over $200,000,000 yearly. The proportion of persons in hospitals who reach them because of excess in drink is very large, but cannot be definitely ascertained.

A traffic that costs in actual payment and in loss of productive labor more than half the National debt every year is not to be ignored by the economist. It may be assumed that the entire wealth of the country has risen from $30,000,000,000 in 1870 to $50,000,000,000 in 1880, about one-half being in real estate. Probably it does not average profits exceeding 4 per cent yearly, taking bad investments with good, but at that rate the yearly interest on all personal property of all kinds is only $1,000,000,000, and the direct or indirect cost of the liquor traffic must be greater.

These comparisons do not constitute reasons for doing any unjust or unwise thing. What ought to be done about the liquor traffic is not to be decided hastily or without due regard for the rights of all classes of citizens. But the time has gone by in this country when a serious discussion of a question that involves such a vast expense to the Nation can be prevented by bullying, intolerance, insolence or ridicule. This very practical people, having begun to think about the matter in earnest, perceives that it is much too important to be put aside at the dictation of saloon-keepers. It is certain that the entire savings of the people and all additions to their wealth are not twice as much as the sum expended for liquor and because of the abuse of liquor. If any just and reasonable proposition can be made that will add one-half to the savings and the prosperity of the Nation, it will not be put down by a sneer, nor defeated by a law-breaking mob.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE GERMANS WAKING UP.

The Germans of the Northwest held a temperance convocation at Lake Bluff, August 6-8. It was not very largely attended, but the spirit of the meeting was excellent and the speeches of a high order.

One incident, told by Mrs. Skelton on that occasion, shows that the hearts of the German people can be reached if they are approached wisely and kindly.

"A German, at the beginning of a week's work for temperance in Iowa, told her he thought it labor wasted. Before the end of the week he wanted some circulars to distribute. At the first he said he would not vote for the Temperance Amendment, nor should any of the men in his employ. When the time came for voting he came forward with a squad of his employes, saying, 'Here I am with fifteen votes behind me.'"

Another German, Ferdinand Schumacher, had a great brewery at Akron, Ohio. God converted his soul, and when he read in the Bible that "no drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of God," he didn't think it looked very consistent for a Christian to be a drunkard-maker. So he turned his brewery into an immense establishment for the preparation of oatmeal, cracked wheat, and other excellent food to make men healthy and happy, in place of poor, miserable, and brutal. The reputation of his cereals has gone all over the land, his purse waxing heavy, and his conscience free and light. Recently he has been nominated by the Ohio Prohibition Reform party as Secretary of State. So God honors the man who dares to do right and trust him.

August 25th, a German temperance mass meeting was held in Chicago, the call for the meeting being signed by many of the ablest German citizens of the country.

In Iowa it is said that five thousand Germans and thirty thousand Scandinavians voted for the Temperance Amendment to the constitution. So the ball is rolling.

Yesterday we were thinking about Mr. Schumacher, so last night we had a dream, "which was not all a dream." We came to the house of one of those immense Germans, over-fat from hogsheads of lager which he had imbibed in past years, but God had made a new man of him a year before. He gave us a kindly greeting, and then said how sorry he was that the hundred subscribers for "The Morning" that he had obtained twelve months ago would not renew. "Never mind," said the big hearted Dutchman, "make out your bill for a hundred copies for a year, and I will pay it myself." We acted upon his wise suggestion, made out our bill, and called again. Handing us his check for $70, he said, "I have concluded to subscribe for 200 copies, and here is your money." We don't know as we ever printed a dream before, but we believe there is a prophecy in this of the "good time coming," when the men and women from faderland shall march shoulder to shoulder with the good and true men and women of America in this great reform.

The Germans have sound heads and tender hearts, and when they get their eyes fairly open to the curse of the adulterated beer of America, and see their boys in danger of growing up drunkards, and their girls led astray (and there are tens of thousands of such victims all over the land), they will flock to the standard of Prohibition.

Deal with them kindly and wisely. Give them statistics, which cannot be disproved, from such scientists as Dr. Richardson, which show that, however pure German beer may be, English and American beer is thick with poisonous drugs. Lend them Eli Johnson's "Drinks from Drugs." * Scatter among them Temperance tracts in their own language. Hold up the hands of German Temperance Evangelists like Mrs. Skelton. And then, as a Michigan politician says, "Win your Germans, and the thing's done."
—Morning and Day of Reform. H. W. A.

PRESIDENT LA RUE gave a sensible address at the opening of the State Fair at Sacramento. He did not laud the State gambling saturnalia, which is the principal feature of it, to which the people's money is devoted. His only allusion to the wine and brandy and pauper manufacture was, that in the near future this State may supply the world with wine. It is quite probable that one of our San Francisco down cellar vineyards makes now as much wine every year as the world will require in 25 years from now. But if this State should ever come to produce as much wine and brandy as Italy, Spain or France, it would also supply the world with a bountiful outfit of organ grinders, beggars, lazzaroni, thieves, pickpockets, professional assassins and other professionals of both sexes which are at present supplied from the wine countries of Europe; the natural and inevitable concomitants of the wine business, just as sawdust is of a sawmill.

HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION.

This association was incorporated Feby. 2, 1882, for the purpose of securing the enforcement of all laws restricting the sale of liquors, particularly the Sunday law and to procure the enactment of such other laws as are or may be necessary for the protection of our homes from the insidious and destructive influences growing out of the liquor traffic.

It is desired to charter auxiliary associations in every town of California. Any 10 or more persons over 16 years of age may apply for a charter. The membership fee is $1,00 a year, and charter, with full set of books and register for 600 names costs $5. Of membership fee one half goes to the State association for the general work. Apply for information and all particulars to the State Secy.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the RESCUE 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

Expenses for Term of Fourteen Weeks.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

IMPRESSIONS.

That the I. O. G. T. of California, have reached a gratifying climax in their history, was forcibly demonstrated at the recent Grand Lodge which convened in this City.

As the four hundred delegates united in that old familiar sentiment so dear to the heart of every Good Templar. "Friends of temperance welcome here," voices from the sunny southland, voices from the far off mountain homes of the north, and from the valley homes of the interior, mingled in perfect harmony, and under the hallowing spell, all hearts were unified, and made to feel that it was truly good to be there.

'Many men of many minds' (and women too,) composed that grand body, yet amid the diversity of opinion that prevailed the proceedings were dignified and in keeping with the charity that thinketh no evil, and which is one of the cardinal principles of our Order.

"I have attended many conventions, but never such an array of fine faces, nor so much earnestness or intelligence as have been displayed on this occasion," was the verdict of a brother present.

The royal tribute paid to woman's part and influence in the great work of uplifting fallen humanity, as manifested in the unanimous adoption of the resolution relating to the proposed visit of Miss Willard and her companion Miss Gordon to this coast, was a most creditable feature of the session. The reports from each department were encouraging and represented the Order as steadily advancing all along the line. At the conclusion of the four days session, the members separated reluctantly, going forth to their different fields of labor, with renewed ardor, and an invincible determination to carry the battle to the triumphant end. "It was the Grandest Grand Lodge ever held in this jurisdiction," said one, " so say we all of us. M. G.

San Francisco, Oct. 9. 1882.

TWO OF THE CANDIDATES.

By "Caleb" of Butte county.

Two candidates started for a pleasure trip into the foothills. They were of the Democratic persuasion. Their hearts beat high with hope. Their breasts swelled with cigars. In their light buggy, half hidden, half disclosed, stood the "Little Brown Jug." They laughed. They sang. They quaffed of their favorite nectar. They flung care to the winds. Every man they met was a friend and a brother. It is always a mystery to the selfish mind how candidates can take so keen and lively an interest in the affairs of others. The anxious inquiries about the crops; the earnest solicitude concerning the health of each member of every family; the lively and animated glow of delight when assured that all is well with you; the cordial grasp of the hand—ah! the sordid, common mind can never appreciate the amplitude and magnificence of that brotherly love which swells the bosom of the candidate. They journeyed on up the long grade towards the pine timber, hailing every man as a dear friend, and offering proofs of sincerest affection in the form of cigars, or a draught from the Little Brown Jug. Presently a scene of great beauty opened before them—the valley of Concow. The home of J. B. Mullen, District Deputy, I. O. G. T., stood revealed on the shore of the lake. The candidates approached with some misgivings, but their hearts yearned over Brother Mullen and they would not pass him by without giving him assurance of their tender regard, and expressing a most delicate hope that he would remember them kindly—on election day. Brother Mullen was courteous, he always is; but he sent them on their way with hopes somewhat depressed. They rode on in silence for several minutes. Another thrifty farm house came in sight. "Ah," sighed Box fondly, "we shall do better here." "Do you know him?" inquired Cox. "O, yes; a nice old fellow, who likes his bottle." "That's better." said Cox, drawing a long breath of relief. The nice old fellow was at his gate. They shook his hand warmly, and kept on shaking it. They praised his cabbage, his hounds, his house, and inquired anxiously after the health of his wife. They then lowered their voices and talked pathetically of the coming election. Box spoke of his numerous family and his urgent needs. Cox pleaded his long and faithful service in public labors. The nice man looked sympathetic and kept nodding in the most encouraging manner. Then they waited for him to assure them of his "most cordial support," etc., at the election. "Well, gentlemen," he said blandly, "I am sorry I cannot tell you just who I shall vote for—you see I haven't heard from our committee yet." "Your committee?" said Box, a little pale about the mouth. "Yes. You see, gentlemen, I have recently joined the Good Templars, and I understand they intend to put a new ticket before the people, and if they do, you may be sure that I will vote it straight!" Box and Cox rode on, exchanging some profane remarks about the woods being full of "peanuts," whatever that meant. On the morrow the twain parted. Cox traveled a rocky way on horseback and came out behind a barn. A man in a blouse was hitching up his team. Cox saluted him with affection, and told his story like a man. The man in the blouse was equally explicit. "Well, Mr. Cox," said he, "I am sorry I cannot help you, but I am a Good Templar, and I certainly cannot vote for any man who stands upon your platform. If the Good Templars put a ticket in the field, and there is only one vote thrown away for it, you will know that was my vote, sir." Cox sadly moved on. But the rural districts of Butte county are full of Good Templars and I fear his way will not be a pleasant one.—Appeal.

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM BUTTE CO.

Many of all parties and sects would vote for Prohibition, were its success assured. The majority of eligible voters know and feel the curse of intemperance. What they lack is nerve and manhood to vote for principle—instead of policy. Thus it is with the greater portion of the secular press. Under circumstances there remains only one sure way to victory. Be loyal to your first love—don't stoop to policy or compromise with any imp or devil to hasten a partial success. If the Prohibition party does, it will from the word go publish at large its readiness to go back on its principles whenever convenient, and thus discourage and disgust every one having faith in the integrity of its hope and motive. No moral reform party ever succeeded by other policy than loyalty to its cause.

The Republican party, or rather its presiding spirits, have succeeded in reaping contempt irrepressible for its prolonged knavery and contemptible policy. The contest will be between the Democrats and Prohibition. J. C. Kastner.

N. B.—It really seems, if mortal had the privilege to work his deliverance from all inherent and acquired cussedness by simply voting for it, he would find a thousand reasons for voting the other way. The first of these would be, "It ain't time yet!" The second, "My neighbor deserves all he suffers!" The third, "It appears to be the will of God!" And so on, infinitely. Let no infidel exclaim, "Our race is entitled to no greater blessedness and mercy than it cannot have by simply asking for it—voting as it prays." Thus with the kingdom of God also. And yet all Christians are pledged by the most sacred vows possible to love their neighbors like themselves, and do unto others as they wish to be done by.

A TEMPERANCE DEMOCRAT.

Monitor-Journal.—I desire to impress upon your many readers, especially the moral, christian element of the state of Indiana, that it is time we were waking up to the dearest interests of our hearts. For a moment let us look at the history of intoxicating liquors. The first account of drunkenness we have, was that of Noah. What was the consequence of this first case of intoxication? Noah's grandson Canaan and this whole posterity were doomed to a life of slavery extending over a period of 209 years. Figures won't lie. Let us then consider for a moment some of the figures in connection with the liquor traffic. Intoxicating liquors have cost this government, as has been proven by statistics, in the last seventeen years, the enormous sum of eleven billion, nine hundred million dollars. It costs the dram drinkers of this country seven hundred millions of dollars every year for their drinks. This is only the money cost and does not include the broken hearted widows, orphan children and the 60,000 drunkards graves every year. Again we have not counted the cost of the alms houses, penitentiaries and jails its victims fill. My dear friends of all parties and creeds harken to the words of an old Democrat, who has lived in this world sixty long years and never voted anything but a Democratic ticket, harken to him when he pleads with you to vote this fall for no man who will not pledge himself to help remove this curse of rum. It ruins our young men; and our old men; makes wives, widows; children, orphans; it damns everything it touches and does harm and not good. Wipe it out Freemen with your votes in November, and no matter what your politics, vote to help strengthen a mighty cause that will redound to the glory of God and your native land. Levi Lockhart.

Tuolumne District Lodge, I. O. G. T., met at Washington Hall, Sonoma, September 23d, at 10:30 A. M. I. T. Holland, D. D., in the chair, who appointed the usual committees, and declared a recess for lunch. In the afternoon session the lodges in the district were well represented by very enthusiastic advocates of temperance. The committee on State of the Order reported ten lodges in the county, with a membership of 447—a gain of eleven during the present quarter, and four bands of hope, with a membership of 213, a gain of one band and seventy members.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Republican party has failed to declare in favor of the enforcement of a judicious Sunday law, and utterly ignored all the essential claims and principles of the temperance people of this State; and,

Whereas, We believe that these claims and principles are more important to the interest, security and happiness of the people than all other issues presented by the Republican and Democratic parties; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we repudiate both the State nominees and platforme of these political parties, and declare in favor of independent nominations upon a platform which shall express the moral and religious convictions of the people of California.

Resolved, That should such nominations be made upon such a platform, we pledge to them and it our hearty and undivided support.

In the evening a public meeting was held in the M. E. church, which was crowded to its utmost seating capacity, and was called to order at 7:40 by D. D. J. L. Coles. A long program was arranged by Bro. C. Hampton, which gave entire satisfaction. Bro. Coles made some very interesting remarks on the temperance subject, and then introduced Bro. R. Guy, who delivered an eloquent speech. Soul-stirring speeches were also delivered by Bros W. H. Barron, W. Penrose, J. F. Bluett, I. T. Holland, followed by a choice literary and musical program. Joseph Oliver,
District Sec.

Hanford, September 25, 1882.

Dear Editor.—Perhaps a short account of what the temperance people in Tulare county are doing would not be uninteresting to the readers of the Rescue. The Good Templars of this county determined last winter when at District Lodge in March to make their influence felt if possible at the polls this year, so they prepared petitions and had them numerously signed by the electors and presented to both the Democratic and Republican conventions, asking them to only nominate temperance men for office; the result was the Democrats held the convention first and this petition was presented to them accompanied with a memorial from the County Christian Alliance, asking the same thing; but as that party has always had a majority in this county, the whisky element captured the primaries and sent a majority of the delegates there pledged in their interest. The result was, they refused to take any notice of the petition or memorial, but many of them declared they would defeat every man that would not declare positively in favor of whisky, and they made their threat good in nearly every office in the county and townships, there not being more than two or three on the whole ticket that could be called temperance men. This only aroused all the better class of citizens belonging to that party for a determined fight. Then the Republican convention met and they being in the minority in the county, took advantage of the situation as they saw that the Good Templars and Christian Alliance now meant business and they nominated the best men as a rule to be found in their party as all the principal ones of them were sound Temperance men with but two or three exceptions. So the District Lodge met in Grangeville on the 7th and 8th. They invited the Christian Alliance to send delegates and meet in convention with delegates from the different Lodges at Visalia on the 23rd inst, for the purpose of selecting a temperance ticket from the different tickets already in the field; as we did not have any intention of creating a new party, but that we may use the balance of power for the good of the cause and the country in general. Altho the notice was very short yet there was a fine delegation, there being 63 delegates present, beside a large number of visitors, there being quite as many Democrats as Republicans and all perfectly agreed as to the need of action in the matter. When it came to selecting candidates, the question was never asked as to his party relations; the only thing to be settled was, is he a sober, honest man and fitted for the position; if so he received the full endorsement of every delegate and there is scarcely a single doubt but the Temperance people will elect the full ticket; and by doing so, we will work one of the greatest reforms in our county politics that has ever been wrought, and we will teach the old parties that if they want to be elected they must respect the Temperance and Christian people in the county, for hereafter we will try to vote as we pray. One of the restrictions on our candidates is that they will not spend any money directly or indirectly in saloons or else where, treating men for electioneering purposes. We have twelve men now lecturing and canvassing the county in the interest of the ticket and the last two weeks will have a force of 20 or 30 at work, beside we will circulate from 1,000 to 1,500 copies of the Alliance Messenger every week until after the election; thus we will educate the people and victory will crown our labors; my brothers and sisters in other counties go and do likewise and we will soon see our cause triumph over every obstacle in the State and Prohibition reign supreme. In F. H. & C.

J. M. Moore.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died—October 1, 1882; at Bloomfield Bro. James Faulkner of Middletoun Lodge No. 350, after severe suffering. The deceased was 29 years and 7 months old at the time of his death. He had been a consistent temperance man for several years, and an active worker in the cause. Of good education, gentlemanly deportment, sterling principle, kind and sympathizing heart, he was loved by all who knew him. He was making a canvass for the office of County Superintendent, for Sonoma County, when he was taken with a hemorrage of the lungs, and gradually grew weaker, lingering from Tuesday to Saturday, when earthly things faded from his sight, to give place to the spiritual beauty, and glory of the life beyond. He left surviving him a devot wife, Sister Susie Faulkner, who has the sympathy of many warm, true and loving friends in her deep sorrow, and she sorrows not as one without hope, but as one who feels assured of a happy re-union with her beloved husband hereafter, at God's right hand, where there is fullness of joy and pleasures forever more.

Thousands of Customers all over the Coast attest the Handsome Saving made in Trading at WEINSTOCK & LUBIN'S Sacramento

AT THE CONVENTION.

Whereas we believe the exercise of the ballot to be the duty of every citizen, and that all reform looking toward the constitutional prohibition of all intoxicating liquors by the nation and the state is to be effected by the free ballot of the citizen. With few exceptions the candidates placed before the people on the Republican ticket are such men as can be endorsed by good temperance men, with the advantage of a fine prospect of an election—and that the organization of a third party for this purpose will defeat the great object of this convention viz., constitutional prohibition.

Therefore resolved, we are opposed to the organization of a third party, and are in favor of casting our ballots for that party which shall assist us best in the accomplishment of this purpose.

Whereas, we believe that this convention has acted unfairly in assuming to be organized before its legal delegates were recognized or permitted to vote, and hence by having the advantage of organization, the minority has been able to rule the majority.

2. That to canvass the state in the interest of one wing of the temperance organizations and the canvasser to cast 12, 15 and in one case 27 votes and at the same time excluding all ministers from being represented by proxy, is unfair and anti-Republican.

3. That when any convention is compelled to resort to unfair means to carry its motions and by slur and noise to cripple the temperance reform and place in the field a ticket in opposition to the best judgment of the majority of the temperance men of this state, it becomes the duty of the delegates of this convention who believe that a third party would be detrimental to the best interests of the temperance reform, to withdraw from this convention and leave the responsibility with these third party men.

Therefore resolved, that all who are opposed to this fourth party now withdraw from this convention and let the responsibility and glory rest where it belongs. (Signed,) A. J. Nelson, Otis Gibson. (There were also 17 other names signed in one handwriting.)

The explanation of the foregoing is as follows: The Convention of July 11, called by prohibitionists, was stocked by men opposed to prohibition, who pretended to be in sympathy with it, and thereby imposed upon innocent parties who participated in the convention to nominate and elect a majority of anti-prohibitionists on the committees appointed.

These parties readily assented to a resolution which pledged the convention to reconvene and nominate a separate ticket in the event of failure to secure in the Republican platform a promise of an efficient Sunday law and a submission to the people of the question of prohibition. The committee of this convention failed to secure such recognition and then declaring themselves satisfied with the Sham Sunday law plank, emphatically refused to recall the convention, until they were assured it would be recalled without them if necessary.

When the convention reassembled Sep. 28, it was found that extensive preparations had been made to pack it with men who invariably declared themselves prohibitionists, but were there to prevent the adoption of any measures in the interest of prohibition. Many of these were ministers of the M. E. Church just from Conference and some other ministers. Four men were there, employed in the mint, who claimed seats as ministers, and were brot there by the managers of the packing enterprise. One of these was heard to say "there is enough of us to keep these temperance fellows level and prevent any third party." One of the obstructives was reported as having 24 proxies of ministers to use against prohibition. A resolution that no absent minister should be represented by proxy, while temperance alliances, lodges and organizations actively in the field, should be represented by regularly delegated proxies—sent consternation into the ranks of the antis. The reader will readily perceive that a proxy representing only a minister and to be used against prohibition had no right in a prohibition convention.

Here the Rev. Mr. Deal, always on hand to oppose Good Templars and prohibitory action, began to use offensive remarks, assisted by Mr. B. N. Bugbee who seemed to be desirous of breaking up the meeting in a row; the latter made about a dozen absurd and offensive motions in the utmost disorder and disregard of decency It is admitted freely that after Mr. Deal had begun to charge the convention with unfairness, he was reminded by the editor of the Rescue, that in a prohibitory convention proxies from prohibitory societies had a standing altogether different from those representing ministers only, and in the hands of men whose only temperance work has been to fight against prohibitory movements.

As soon as it appeared that the convention consisted of about 200 bona-fide prohibitionists and only about 20 opponents, most of the latter went quietly away without having made any disturbance or given the slightest cause of offense or ill will to any one present.

The Rev. Otis Gibson was chairman of the committee on credentials and passed upon every delegate; only one applicant was rejected having no credentials whatever, and there was not a proxy used during the session, tho Mr. Sam Fowler of Tulare Co. had 27 of them from various societies. The Rev. Mr. Nelson was on the committe of Order of Business, served as Secretary and reported its doings. As an instance of his idea of fairness, he protested against Capt. Wood being elected chairman of that committee "because he was on the off side"—which meant a prohibitionist.

On the evening of the first day Mr. Nelson and Mr. Gibson took occasion to make threatening and insulting remarks, seemingly with a view of courting angry retorts, posing as martyrs and creating a rupture between the prohibition party and the M.E. Church and prejudicing the latter against the ticket adopted.

It is believed however that no minister or member of that denomination had any part or lot in any intentional unfairness or hostility, with the exception of a quartette or so, whose entanglements and affiliations with the Republican party promise greater reward than the thankless labor of helping to stay the annual slauter of 3000 citizens of California on the altar of Satan, and trying to stem the tide of iniquity and shame which threatens the overthrow of civilization here.

Why the assembling of a convention of earnest, honest men and women to adopt an honest platform and an honest ticket, to protect their homes and their liberties and their rest day from the Leag of Fiendom and the Hosts of Satan, should excite the intense hostility of three or four ministers of a Church which has been and is a foremost opponent of the dramshop, is a conundrum to be solved by those who can master the other one of how a minority of 200 controlled a majority of 20.

Eugene City, Or., Sept. 26, 1882.

Dear Bro.:—At the meeting of the Ex-Com., the Rescue was adopted as the organ of this Grand Lodge, as I had told you it would be. Send a copy to each lodge, as on your directory.

Nearly eighteen hundred dollars has been raised for an Orphan's Home fund, as per act of last Grand Lodge.

Bro. Jessup offered a resolution for a Constitutional Amendment in the Senate last Saturday accompanied by 52,000 names of citizens praying its submission; we are hopeful it will pass, but everything is absorbed in the Senatorial fight, nine ballots and no choice yet. Bro. King is at work and I think will do us good service. Please assist me a little in urging Mrs. Stevens to give us a few months work, as I have been corresponding with her on that subject for some time.

I hope you will elect a Prohibitionist G. W. C. T., as anything less is far short of our duty. No license man, high license man, or anything else for me but a strait out Prohibitionist. No compromise with crime.

Your Bro.,
J. E. Houston,
Grand Secretary.

It is feared Mrs. Stevens cannot be spared from the all absorbing canvas of this State. But there is abundant need of laborers in the Oregon vineyards, and it is hoped it may be supplied.

A POINTED LETTER.

Rev. Dr. George, pastor of Centenary M. E. church, Chicago, who preached recently one of the ablest sermons on prohibition that has ever been delivered, has written an equally able letter to the Chicago Tribune, concerning its ridiculous position regarding coercive license. In it are such telling paragraphs as the following.

Governor Foster of Ohio complains that the liquor-sellers "take no note of the fact that nine-tenths of the crime, and an equal amount of the pauperism, and one-half of the lunacy and idiocy, and the enormous expense entailed on the people of the State for the support and maintenance of these classes are directly traceable to the liquor traffic."

If these makers of criminals, paupers, lunatics, and idiots own the Republican party, and can use it for their own base purposes, then the "Prohibition Home Protection" organization has not come any too soon, and is likely to secure the support of a large number of Republican voters.

The Tribune, arguing against the policy of a protective tariff, framed to benefit eastern manufacturers, says that if the farmers of Iowa and Michigan had been allowed to possess what they had earned the result would have been visible in solid wealth and substantial comforts. There may be another side to this matter and a satisfactory answer to the argument used. But how is it with the impositions of the liquor traffic? Eighty dollars of every hundred paid for taxes goes to support this bloated monopoly. To this must be added the loss from idleness, dissipation, exhausted energy, destroyed health, and shortened life. Nor can we forget the debased manhood, the blasted homes, the tears, the blood, the shame, the cruel wrongs, the untold misery, and the whole dark catalogue of sin which always follows this accursed business. What a monstrous tariff is this! And if it is proposed to allow the people to say by their ballots whether it shall be continued, those who are gorged with the gains of ungodliness propose to destroy the Republican party in order to maintain "personal liberty."

To assert that "the manufacture and sale of liquor cannot be prevented" is simply to assert that civil government is a failure, that interest and appetite are mightier than law, that the people are incapable of executing their own sovereign will, and that nothing is left us but base submission to the tyranny of the drunkard-making oligarchy, or the relief which comes from the violence of revolution and the strife of arms. Are we prepared to accept this conclusion?

LOS ANGELES PRODUCTIONS.

AN INCREASE IN VINOUS INDUSTRIES—FRUIT PACKING.

Los Angeles, September 8.—The distillers of Los Angeles county are busy preparing for the present season's business. They are filing their bonds and other papers with Deputy Collector Moore in the Internal Revenue office this week. There is an increase in the number, as well as in the capacity, of the distillers in this county. Last year there were thirty-five distilleries in Los Angeles county and two in San Bernardino. This season there is an increase of eight more distilleries in Los Angeles county, and one more in San Bernardino county, making a total of forty-four distilleries in this district. The amount of brandy produced in this county last year, and upon which a Government revenue tax of ninety cents per gallon was paid, was about 200,000 gallons, or a total of $180,000 taxes paid to the Government from Los Angeles county alone. It is estimated upon official authorities that there will be an increase in the amount of brandy produced in this county of not less than 20 per cent over the amount produced last year. This will give a total of 240,000 gallons of grape brandy from this county this season.

The Southern California Packing Company will put up this season 15,000 cases, or 360,000 cans, filled with fruit and vegetables, including green peas, string beans, tomatoes, peaches, nectarines, plums, apples, pears, figs, grapes, apricots and other Southern California productions.

INCONSISTENCY.

It is pleasant to note men's good acts and worthy qualities; unpleasant, painful to meet with the evidence of the meanness of our friends; specially humiliating it is to see professed temperance men whitewashing the Leag of Fiendom plank of the Republican convention and pretending they dont see its treachery to its Sunday observing adherents; to see their willing aliegiance to a Leag of Fiendom Governor, selling out their principles for party possibilities—and meaner still if possible to retail the miserable campane lies which the jackal press are circulating about Stoneman. The Rescue believes that a Good Templar who votes for Stoneman is more inconsistent and unprincipled and does a greater wrong in that act, than he would be to get drunk and turn his family out of the house—because Genl. Stoneman is a wine and brandy maker and stands on a platform of "Free rum and a drunken Sunday." The miserable cowards who peddle lies about his war record and his private character, dare not say a word about these real objections which disqualify him from being Governor of the State. Precisely the same objections exist to the possibility of any temperance man or Christian voting for Estee, the wine-maker and drinker. But now there is a candidate in the field who can be voted for with no violence to any man's claims to a virtuous character. He will not be a champion of devil worship. Estee and Stoneman are both so.

A UNIQUE BANK.

In all the past years of a speculative, gambling era in business, the Pacific Bank has been unique among our business houses for its rigid adherence to legitimate business principles. The consequence has been a success equally unique, gaining it a degree of confidence, which has brought its reward in the largest and best clientage enjoyed by any banking house on the coast. Its volume of business nearly doubled last year, reaching the magnificent total of $160,000,000, and it is apparently but just starting on its highway of success. The Bank, situated on the cornor of Pine and Sansome streets, has unequalled facilities for all branches of legitimate banking business, and is the acknowledged head of the business on the Pacific Coast.

Cetewayo. The Temperance Leag of England had a committee to interview the African exile on the question of keeping English gin out of his kingdom when he returns to it. When the hour arrived he was sitting for his portrait at the command of the Queen of England and declined to meet the committee. The Telegraph and other beer bottom journals set up long colums of rejoicing with copious embellishments of gin and water wit over the disappointment of the teetotalers. But their joy was short-lived for Celewayo was much more civilized than the Telegraph and its congeners; he met the committee a few days after. He said his people drank nothing but a very weak beer of their own make; the use of spirits was strictly forbidden. But as usual English traders were introducing it and as he could not help their pushing it over the lines of his territory he hoped for the assistance of the English people in keeping out the monsters of iniquity whose business is the destruction of human life.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. The Illinois Liquor Dealers' Association has given us a perfect hallelujah of good cheer in their annual report read before the State Association Sept. 18, at Rock Island. "Wherever we look," says their report, "North or South, East or West, we find ourselves fairly encircled by the triumphant and maddened armies of our foes. Illinois is to-day more like the feeble victim of the robber, struggling to relieve herself from the choking iron grasp of his hands, gasping for breath, than like a proud and defiant State, relying upon the constitutional principles of individual liberty for a shield, and using an enlightened public sentiment for a sword." The W. C. T. U. of Illinois answered them a day later with the undaunted resolution to "work right on until our beloved Prairie State ceases to be 'rob-bed' by the liquor traffic, is relieved from its 'iron grasp,' relies on constitutional prohibition, for her shield,' and uses a really 'enlightened public sentiment for a sword.'"—Signal

Lifeboat Lodge had a very pleasant meeting on Monday. Miss Guthrie, Col. Goulding, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, Capt. Apslet of the British Bark Banksfield and others made interesting addresses, besides the ordinary local program.

San Francisco, Oct. 22, 1882.

Rev. George Morris, Sec. Ex Committee, Prohibtion Home Protection Party of California:

My Dear Sir—I write to decline the nomination for Justice of the Supreme Court. I most hearily thank the Convention for the high honor conferred by the nomination, but my time, heretofore, has been so much taken up with temperance work, that my private business will not permit me to give time to either temperance or politics at present. I trust my withdrawal from the ticket will be taken in the same kind spirit in which it is tendered. I wish the party success, as it deserves it, for it is fighting for great and valuable principles.

Yours,
R. Thompson.

Truly Yours
R. H. McDonald.

Last week's Rescue contained a condensed biography of Dr. R. H. McDonald. He is too well known in California in deeds of benevolence and philanthropy to need any additional notice. He will receive the vote of all good people in the State who come to a correct decision as to the duty of a good citizen at the ballot box. There is no other man of large wealth in this State who is or has been doing so much real good for the people of California as Dr. McDonald. And as one more testimony to his worth was necesssary to make for him the keystone of a noble, faithful record, that is most appropriately furnished in the fact that all the little gntter snipe papers that have been hired to blow their editorial penny whistles for the Estee and Whiskee confederation are industriously stewing up little defamatory lies at 25 cents per dozen, about his past history.

A. J. Gregg.—Our friend and brother was nominated by the Prohibition Convention for Congress. His name was dropped however, there, because some delegate assured the Convention that he knew Bro. Gregg well, and that he could not and would not accept the nomination; of that he said he was sure. For that and no other reason Bro. Gregg's name was reluctantly withdrawn—not by the Committee after the Convention, but during the session.

Prohibitonists Attention!—All organizations who favor the principles of the Prohibition Home Protection party, as set forth in their Platform, are requested to send representatives to a County Convention to be held in Santa Rosa the 21st, inst. at 10 o'clock A. M. to organize in the interest of said party, and if thought expedient, to place a County Ticket in the field.

Mass meeting in the evening.

H. Andrews, Dist. Secy.

The Plymouth Reporter is a very ably conducted Prohibition journal.

Rev. John B. Hill does not embark his faith in the equivocal Sunday law plank of the Republican party, nor in the voting down of the amendments which promised to enforce the Sunday law, nor in the utterances of the candidates in the field as to the protection of the brandy interests of the State. For having manfully defined his position over his signature in the Advocate of October 11, he will be honored by the temperance workers of the State.

Last election day, the Morgan County paupers were taken from the poor-house and voted in a body. Yet not an intelligent tax-paying woman, not a lady school-teacher, or a farmer's wife would be trusted to cast a ballot in Morgan county, Ind. Is this a government of the people?—Our Herald.

Mr. William Noble (the founder of the Blue Ribbon Army of England), in giving an account of the work of the Army, said since the inauguration of the movement as many as 470,000 pledge cards had been sent from headquarters to different parts of the country. 1,624 consecutive meetings had been held in Hoxton Hall making a total for the four-and-a-half years that the hall has been opened of 5,500.

Protestant congregations in Mexico have nearly doubled in five years, now numbering 239, with 10,764 members, 19,000 adherents, and 209 native helpers. The Mexican missions report 1,069 new communicants during the past year.

Marysville and Yuba, Sutter and Butte counties are very wide awake on the question of the Prohibitory party. Bro. Covillaud's column in the Appeal does a good work in setting the truth before the people, and exposing the falsehoods circulated by the journals paid to deceive the people into voting for the old parties whose candidates are nominated chiefly in the interest of the Leag of Fiendom.

Forty.—It has gone the rounds of the press that there were 40 miuisters and others, who bolted from the prohibition convention. It is very doutful if there were over 20 or 22. It was represented that 17 consented to have their names used in a protest, to be got up after they left. These, with the two signers, made 19. It is probable then, the other 21 were phantoms of an over sanguine imagination.

Bro. King is reported as doing good work and meeting with good success in Oregon.

IT MAY NOT BE.

It may not be our lot to wield
The sickle in the ripened field;
Nor ours to hear on summer eves
The reaper's song among the sheaves.

Yet where our duty's task is wrought
In unison with God's great thought,
The near and future blend in one,
And whatsoever is willed is done.

And ours the grateful service whence
Comes day by day the recompense;
The hope, the trust, the purpose stayed,
The fountain and the noonday shade.

And were this life the utmost span,
The only end and aim of man,
Better the toils of fields like these
Than walking dreams and slothful ease.

But life, though falling like our grain,
Like that revives and swings again!
And early called, how blest are they
Who wait in heaven their harvest day.

—John G. Whittier.

REPUBLICANS vs. THE SABBATH.

Address by Rev H. Cummings before the Congregational Club, San Francisco, on the so-called Republican Sunday Law Plank.

To vote the Republican ticket is to vote the Sabbath a day of recreation, i. e., a day of amusement, pleasure seeking, picnics, base-ball, cricket, racing, dancing, etc., with accompanying dissipation and whatever vitiated tastes and demoralized habits desire. It is evident that the Convention meant this. Now, can we consistently with our Christian professions, encourage this fearful desecration of God's Holy Sabbath into a day of unbridled recreation by voting candidates into office when their party has, by its Platform, pledged them to this terrible desecration? As Christians, our first and highest allegiance is to God. We cannot be false to God even for the success of our party.

I have been a Republican for over forty years, and having stood by it until now, I do not wish to abandon it for a trivial cause, but when called to vote God's Holy Sabbath a day of Recreation, I am not in doubt as to the path of duty, nor do I hesitate to walk in it. The responsibility of forcing this upon me and all other consistent Christian Republicans, rests not upon us, but upon the Republican party. This party has done a noble work in the past, but now it is evidently under the controlling influence of corrupt men, to whom we can never commit the keeping of our consciences. By its platform the Republican party has crowded us Christians out to make room for recreators. It must take the consequences.

God ordained the Sabbath as a day of rest for man. God "hallowed it," "sanctified it," made it a "sign of covenant," a type of heavenly rest, and commanded that it be kept holy, and that labor cease. He enacted severe penalties for the violation of this law, and firmly inflicted them. He made special promises of blessing to encourage a strict observance of the Sabbath as a Holy day unto the Lord.

Now under our form of government, even we Christians only claim that this Sabbath shall be legally preserved as a rest day. We do not say that men must worship God or go to church, we only say that those who wish to do so shall enjoy their right unmolested. This necessarily implies and requires that at least on the Sunday all that disturbs the public peace, or corrupts the morals of the people, shall be prohibited.

To vote the Republican ticket, would be to vote the Lord's Holy Sabbath, a day of recreation. It would be to endorse, encourage, and legalize every species of vice known and practised among men, under the all comprehending name of recreation. It would be to lose all power to control or reform them. It would be to give up everything to the Godless and God-denying, and when we expostulate to have them respond: "You gave us this liberty. You sanctioned this; in fact, you voted this license and indeed gave us the legal right to recreate as we like on Sunday." In such a case, like Samson, we should be shorn of our strength, we should be dumb and powerless thereafter. Shall we do this? Can we do it? Ought we to do it? Nay. Of course we cannot vote the Democratic ticket, which proposes to repeal the Sunday Law, neither can we vote the Republican ticket, which would make the Sabbath a day of unbridled license and vicious indulgence.

As we are American citizens sharing with others the power to elect officers for the departments of government, and the responsibility of making a good or bad government, we therefore cannot throw away either this power or responsibility, and be guiltless by a voluntary omission of that important duty on election day. Consequently, there remains but one course for us to pursue, that is to unite with the temperance organizations to meet in State Convention, and make our own platform, and unfurl our banner, and stand by it until the needed reform is accomplished.

We must vote as we pray. Having prayed to God for fifty years, "Thy Kingdom Come," I for one, do not propose at this advanced stage in life, to go up to the ballot box on election day and vote all those prayers away, by voting to desecrate God's Holy Day into a day of unbridled recreation. I desire my last vote, as well as my last words and last prayers, to be for the reformation of my country and the salvation of the world.

Never has there been so good an opportunity for effective political work for Prohibition and the Sabbath as now, and if all Christians and temperance men will do their duty, there is no reason why the Temperance and Sunday Law Ticket should not be successful. Vote the Prohibition Ticket, which will be the ticket of pure principles and clean men. Every man and woman should now work industriously to secure the Temperance and Sunday Law triumphant.

BAPTISTS.

Bt the Central Baptist Association, held Ootober 5, at Sacramento, the following resolutions were adopted without a dessenting vote:

Resolved, That it is our deliberate and inflexible conviction that the time has now arrived when duty and interest unite to demand of us prompt and decisive action, as Christians in our capacity of ministry and laity, for the arrest of the tide of wickedness which seriously threatens the foundation of all morals and the security of our civil institutions; and

Resolved, That we deprecate the action of both of the great political parties in their late enunciation of views relative to these two questions—one proposing to destroy the very foundation of our Christian and social fabric, and the other feebly affirming the policy of "masterly inactivity" by allowing the laws to remain inoperative and void, thus continuing to strengthen the position of the former by the assertion of its nonenforcement; and

Resolved, That while disclaiming all dictation of duty at the ballot-box; we believe that the hour has come when a movement should be made by all lovers of our free and religious institutions in the support of existing laws on these subjects, and for securing the speedy enactment and prompt nd speedy enforcement of such additional laws as may be necessary for the protection of Sociбiy from the movement of perance and Sabbath desecration, and we believe it to be the duty of every voter to cast his ballot for men pledged to such legislation and its enforcement; and

Resolved, That we hail with pleasure the triumph of the temperance sentiment in Iowa, by the large majority given in favor of prohibition at the recent submission of that question to the people, and we feel inspired by the rapid spread of the prohipition sentiment in various other States, to renewed effort in that direction here in California, pledging ourselves, as Christian men and citizens, to cast the weight of our influence into the scale against the present iniquitous liquor traffic and the spirit of submission to its dictation by the two great political parties; and

Resolved, That we, as Christians, have occasion to lament the lack of reverence for the Lord's Day or Christian Sabbath on the part of our people, and we here pledge ourseives to more earnest offort for securing a proper observance of the day in our own families and churches.

CONGREGATIONALISTS.

At the meeting of the General Association of Congregational Churches, held in this city on October 6th.

The following resolutions were adopted unanimously:

Resolved, That the observance of Sunday as a Sabbath—a day of rest—is an essential element of our Christian civilization, a heritage from the common law of our mother country, and should be incorporated in the organic structure of our State,

Resolved, That recognizing the antagonistic position of the political parties of this State in respect to our existing State Sunday Law; we consider it the duty of every Christian to cast his free ballot wisely, and for those candidates only who can be trusted to act in their political position to maintain and enforce the present Sunday Law, or similar laws, providing for the suspension of all unnecessary work on Sunday.

Resolved, That the Sabbath is a day for worship as well as a day for rest; that it is a divine institution, not merely a civil regulation; and that one mission of the Christian Church is to educate the conscience of the rising generation to regard the Sabbath as a sacred day, not a mere holiday.

Resolved, That we thankfuliy recognize the hand of Almighty God in the adoption, in some of our sister States, of Constitutional Prohibition, and in the increased strength of the Prohibitory movement in other States; that we consider the ultimate prohibition by constitutional authority of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages the end to be secured in this State, and that the present mainten ance of the law now on our statute books, which prohibits the sale of intoxicating drinks one day in the week, is the immediate duty of the hour.

Resolved, that we shall hail with unfeined delight the speedy triumph of prohibition in this State.

A National Woman Suffrage Society has been established in Paris. Admission fee 60 cents. Suffrage for woman the sole subject of discussion or action.

THE SITUATION.

Plymouth Reporter.

The problem submitted to the Prohibition Convention has been solved and we think wisely. In acting as an independent organization capable of standing alone, it has saved its own self-respect and at the same time secured the respect of the intelligent, thoughtful masses. In the adoption of its platform and statement of principles, it has taken up none but real, living issues, and has so clearly defined its position on those issues that the voters need be in no doubt as to their real intent and meaning. Its candidates, if politicians at all, are such in the best sense, regarding the moral, material and intellectual progress and growth of the people of prime importance, and the aggrandisement and exaltation of self of secondary importance, and only desirable and possible through a faithful discharge of their duties as chosen servants of the people. And now having taken its position before the people as a third great party what are the auguries of the present campaign. Without indulging in over-confident anticipations, we may safely say, that this party firmly believing in itself and its principles, with the vigor, and hope which ever characterize a party when it makes its first appeal for the support of the people, will surpass in the strength which it will develop and make manifest, all the present expectations or fears of its opponents. While both of the other parties are badly demoralized, and dissatisfaction and even disgust finds frequent expression in the utterances of their former followers and suppo. ters, this party commands the confidence and respect of the people in a greater degree than any other party now asking the suffrages of the people. The present numerical strength of the various temperance organizations re-enforced by temperance people outside of all organizations, while it enables this new party to start out with an assured vote of considerable dimensions yet furnishes no accurate measurement or basis for estimating the probable vote for prohibition in this State. The fact is well known to all temperance men who are familiar with the prevailing sentiment, that in every community are scores, and in every county hundreds of voters who never have taken, and cannot be persuaded to take any part in temperance reform in the way of pledges or organizations of temperance societies or lodges, but who voluntarily declare themselve ready, willing and even anxious to vote for prohibition whenever an opportunity occurs, and as a matter of fact it may be asserted that the general feeling of opposition to the present attitude of those engaged in the liquor traffic in their bold defiance of law and public sentiment, is more general and widespread than at any other period in our history. Just how far the desire for party success, the strength of party ties, or the fear of the party lash may restrain intelligent voters from casting a ballot expressive of their real feelings and desires, it is impossible at this early stage of the campaign to foresee. But with an energetic canvass, a wise use of means and methods, and a clear, full and truthful presentation of the issues involved, and the moral, social and material public and private benefits sure to follow the success of the principles enunciated in the platform of this new third party, we see no reason why the Prohibition tickot should not receive a plurality of all the votes cast on the 7th of November next.

SACRAMENTO Y. M. C. A.—SEPTEMBER REPORT, 1882.

ABSTRACT OF WORK.

Meetings etc.	Attendance.
20 Noon Day meetings	110
4 Wednesday evening meetings	64
4 Sumday P. M. meetings	140
3 Street meetings	564
2 Committe and Directors meetings	30
30 Day's Reading Room	433
Total.	1341

The Sacramento vacation season extended far into September, greatly affecting the attendance at meetings, etc. but the regularity of association work was steadily maintained. Jail visitation and the distribution of suitable literature received due attention in the early part of the month. A very excellent interest attended all the street meetings held by the association. The Free Reading Room has continued to prove a great boon to a large number of strangers and poor men visiting in the city. We are under many obligations for free copies of the excellent newspapers regularly sent us.

Our general Secretary, Mr. S. D. Fuller, arrived on the 29th and had a very pleasant reception in the evening of that day. He has entered fully upon the discharge of his dnties, and future reports will be from his pen. New and elegant rooms have been secured for the association on 4th St. and the outlook is very hopeful.

Respectfully submitted.

A. J. Hanson, Pres.

Somewhere in Tuolumne County the Leag of Fiendom called a meeting in the Courthouse. Mr. Fred Freund represented the people of the United States and took the chair. He addressed the people on the Sunday law, which he politely termed a stingkbot law; he wanted freedom to eat what he liked on Sunday, and continued his oration with much profanity. Col. Coles objected, when the United States said; "you don't likes to hear me svear, aint it? Vel den, I dinks you shust petter dake your hat and goes home; I pring dese lamps and hire dese hall; ef you had to pay some dings you vould not coom." After more swearing a motion was put, which had a vigorous responsive aye and one faint no; the United States in the chair declared the no had it, and he proceeded to plo out dem lights and turn out de beeples. He is a friend of liberty.

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentimeut; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

"IT WAS THE DRINK THAT DID IT."

Last January I held a mission in a great drink-troubled town in the North. The last night I was standing at the edge of the platform, when a poor, thinly-dressed woman came up to me and held out her hand, She was trembling for joy, and her care-worn face was lighted up with a beauty that only a great happiness can give. "God bless you!" she said; "I've suffered for thirty years from the drink, Oh, God only knows how much! But look, my husband is signing to-night. He's been here all this week, and he has had nothing to drink. But I know what my poor man is; if he signs the pledge he'll keep it. When I looked at her, and saw how in a moment she had forgotten all the starvation, and cruelty, and neglect that had so darkened and saddened her life I thought to myself that there was nothing in all the world so wonderful as this strange, deep love in a woman's heart—a love that thirty years of drunkenness had never blotted out, but that was ready in a moment to spring forth and cast over that poor drunkard the glory of a faithful woman's love and devotion,

A few weeks before that man had been arrested for ill treating his wife. You can fancy the scene. She stands in the police-court. What for? To condemn him? to show the poor half-broken arm? Oh, no! The tears are slowly trickling down her face. and the eyes of all the Court are fixed upon her as she pleadingly says to the astounded magistrate, "He could hot help it, sir: it was the drink that did it; he is very kind when he is sober." And she makes excuse after excuse, till he is let off with simply a fine. The Bench says it is a mystery. The people declare it a "strange thing that such down-trodden women should so shield their cruel husbands.' But there is no mystery at all; that woman sees a hundred little lovable traits in him, of which no one there can see a gleam, and she knows that were it not for the drink they would all blossom and bud forth.

This is not a fanciful picture I am putting before you—it is a true story; and I am thankful to say that poor woman's faith has been realized and blessed. Last April I saw them both—the man so wonderfully changed that I scarcely knew him; but I shall never forget him when he drew a little behind his wife, and, looking proudly at her, gently touched her dress and said, "I bought this for her last week, and she had it made for you to see. Thank God, we are happy now, and my wife's got her great wish, a pew in church, and we go together every Sunday." For years that man spent the greater part of his handsome wages for drink, and seemed to care nothing at all about his shabbily-dressed wife, but when he became sober all his old tenderness and love returned. I ask you, ladies and gentlemen, whether such a fact as this, which is only one amongst many, is not enough to elevate total abstinence so high that it is no wonder if it seems to us second only in importance to the Gospel itself? Cannot you pardon us if we are a little fanatical and enthusiastic in the cause of temperance? May God hasten the day when every embassador for Christ, every single member of the Church—seeing their brother's need, their sister's danger, their nation's peril—shall come over to our aid. With the whole army of Christians on our side, we should band ourselves into a leag so holy and irresistible that not only drunkenness, but other evils would flee away. Once more we could call our dear old country "Happy England," and on the soft evening air as we listen there would arise from ten times ten thousand happy homes and peaceful hearts a song like this:—"Sing, oh, heavens, and be joyful, oh, earth, and break forth into singing, oh mountains, for the Lord hath comforted His people, and will have mercy upon His afflicted."—Mrs. Joseph Lucas, in Glasgow Good Templar.

LET WOMEN VOTE.

Hon. T. B. Reed, Republican leader of the House of Representatives, says:

"The mother may weep at seeing a saloon opened next door to her. Her heart may bleed to see her husband and sons led to ruin. She is powerless. Her husband can sign the petition to the courts for license; she is not counted as a tax-paying citizen under the dram-shop law, while her husband lives. She may support the family, including her drunken husband, with her needle, and yet his name counts and hers is a blank.

God speed the efforts to secure prohibition; but in my judgment it can only be obtained by letting the women vote.

Give women the right to vote and we will cease to have drunken legislators, and no member can be elected to either branch of the General Assembly who is not pledged to so amend the law that the applicant for dramshop license must present a petition signed by a majority of adult citizens, male and female of the town or township, etc.; where license is applied for."—M. and Day of Reform.

PROHIBITION RANCH, GEYSERVILLE.

ED RESCUE:—We have recently had a public entertainment for the purpose of purchasing an organ for our Blue Ribbon Club, which numbers 115 members. The affair was a success realizing over $100, and we will soon be prepared to have rousing prohibition music, as well as speeches to speed the cause of temperance. Mr. Murrell had drilled the children in their musical program and they sang with special acceptance Ed. Carswells, "Little Bow of Blue." It may be as well to remark too that all our literary and musical exercises were in the line of temperance; it does seem to me there is always in that field, sufficient material to furnish a program without poaching on the territory of the African Minstrel and the banjo theater.

We have been trying to reform a young man whose father has always set him a drinking example and does so still; that renders the labor of reform very arduous. There are numbers of people here, who do not belong to any temperance organization, but are waiting to vote a prohibition ticket whenever an opportunity is offered them.

We have heard that a third party ticket is going to set back the cause of temperance so many years; but that assertion comes from men who pray once for the success of temperance and 49 times for the success of a whisky party ticket. The danger of a setback was that temperance men might be once more fooled into taking the advice of the sharp people who spell pray with an e in it. To follow their advice and stick to old whisky parties would deservedly sink us to the bottom of the pool of public contempt. Don't you print a word of this; it is strictly a private note from yours for temperance and prohibition.

TENPERANCE WORK BMONG THE GERMANS.

A door has been opened in this city that no man shutteth. It is a door to the hearts of our German countrymen and women. God's hand has been upon the German heart, and it has yielded to the Divine pressure. Gentle Mrs. Obenauer, skilled in reaching the hearts and consciences of men, learned in all the learning of the Germans, has been among our German city churches for the past two weeks, and seems to have been sent of God for such a time as this. Armed with Bishop Escher's introduction to all the churches of the Avangelical Association, with the newly formed but vigorous National Total Abstinence Society behind her, planning her work, and the Central W. C. T. U. of Chicago as her hostess and sister beloved, she has found a way to deliver her message in nearly every church belonging to the Association. She finds that pastors co-operate, the people say "Amen," and even the good German housewife, with whom in a quiet hour she urges the duty of temperance work and shows its difficulties, says in an undertone, "Ach, der women will have to elect (vote) dat is so."

The work has been manifestly prospered of God. It will go on until in this beer-beleagured city the German vote will be for prohibition.—Signal.

VITICULTURE AND TEMPERANCE.

In the evening C. A. Wetmore lectured on "Viticulture in its Relation to the Temperance Question." This peculiar and attractive subject drew a large audience. Charles Kohler presided. The lecture was interesting and well delivered. It was an appeal for national temperance. The speaker expressed a desire that representatives of various churches which are prominent champions of temperance, and opponents of viniculture, could be present. The speaker quoted numerous statistics in support of his proposition that the most rational temperance in the matter of drink, existed where the quantity of cheap wine was the greatest. Statistics, prove, beyond the possibility of question, that where wine is supplied to the masses pure and cheap, morality and health average high. It is a conclusion admitted by the most advanced political economists of the day that, the presence of a pure, cheap wine acts as an exclusion of an ascertained quantity of poisonous, destroying spirituous liquors sold under various names. Just in the proportion as California advances as a wine-growing and wine-drinking State, so will its prosperity and rational temperance advance. In the exact proportion that the poor are given a healthful substitute for whisky, in pure wines, will morality and rational temperance extend. The lecturer concluded with a brilliant tribute to the efforts of the enterprising men who are assisting the interest of viticulture in this state.—Chronicle.

Truth is fatal to any and every branch of the alcoholic legion, that tries to commend or palliate the business of drunkard and pauper manufacturing. It is gratifying however, to be able to dig up from the mass of Mr. Wetmore's self-evident nonsense one grain of truth, and give it its true significance. There is no place in the world where wine is supplied to the masses pure and cheap. There is no place where wine is made, that it is not adulterated and its miserable devotees cheated and poisoned. But it is admitted that in some of the rural districts of Spain, Portugal, Italy, Hungary, Sicily, Greece, where everybody uses a little cheap wine daily, believing it in their ignorance to be a necessary food; there is not very much drunkenness; not so much as might be expected.

The reason is that the wine supplied to the masses there does not deserve to be called wine at all. It more resembles what would result from the mixture of one teaspoonful of vinegar with a tumbler full of unclean water. A good deal of it would have to be imbibed to make one tipsy. If no one ever drank anything but that, there would be few drunkards. But the masses of these countries never confined themselves to the use of that kind of wine, except thru necessity. The masses use all the strong wine and brandy they can get. The masses get drunk whenever they can spare the five cents necessary to purchase a good square drunk.

The masses there have been so thoroly pauperized from head to foot by the scathing, blasting, withering, scorching curse of the wine and brandy business, that to possess an unencumbered capital of five cents is with them a rare occurrence, and is therefore generally celebrated by a jamboree. And it is a fact well known to the people of this Republic that these same Italians, etc., who have come here from these highly moral and sober, pure wine countries, almost invariably take advantage of the princely wages they earn here, to invest largely in the low dives where drinks are sold that bear the strongest resemblance to a solution of rusty nails, bluestone and sulphuric acid. These "pure wine rational temperance" people never touch, if they can help it anything less pungent and scorching than benzine. Clear brandy or whisky unfortified is only goats milk for them. And we all know that they spend about all they earn in these luxuries as they used to do in Europe; with the difference that in their wine debauched country a man's labor is only worth 20 cents a day, generally one-half payable in wine, and here it is one to two dollars a day. Men who only get ten cents a day of wages and have to feed and support themselves and families on that sum, are of necessity not given to frequent, long continued sacrifices at the Shrine of Bacchus. When they come to this country where they can get a dollar a day they make up for lost time.

When these eloquent preachers of wine morality pretend that pure wine or pure brandy is going to be at all the rule in this state, they know it is not the truth; and if it were, the red noses, bloated faces and forty to eighty pounds of redundant protuberant "bloat" which so many of them carry round with them, tell better than words what effect the wine and brandy infamy has upon its votaries here already. The cases of drunken wives, drunken husbands, drunken sons and dauters, drunken boys and girls, drunken families that have gone to ruin thru the wine of their own make, give us fair warning of the horrible degradation, brutality and ruin which a permauent and extensive wine business would bring upon this state, as it has invariably done in all other countries that have experimented with it.

[To be read in open Lodge.]

To all Members of the I. O. G. T., greeting:

BROTHRTS AND SISTERS:—The twenty-third annual session of the Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T. of California, which convened in San Francisco, October 3d, concluded its labors at 12:45 A. M. of the 7th inst. As was anticipated, the session was largely attended; in fact, the hall which had been secured for the sessions proved wholly inadequate in capacity, and after the opening session, at which 199 members received the Grand Lodge Degree, the Grand Lodge adjourned to more commodious quarters in Dashaway Hall, and this large hall was filled. Fully 600 Representatives and visitors were in attendence. As promised, a hearty reception was extended to the Grand Lodge in Dashaway Hall on the evening preceding the opening session of the Grand Lodge, at which meeting there was fully 1,000 Good Templars in regalia, making it one of the grandest Lodge meetings ever held. Those who were present were alike surprised and gratified at the large attendance, and those who failed to atttend will ever have cause to regret their absence, and will be sure to attend next year.

STATE OF THE ORDER.—The reports of the officers were very encouraging, showing an increase of 1,506 members during the past year, and a present actual membership of 18,747 members, contained in 359 Lodges.

JOURNAL OF PROCEEDINGS.—The copy for the printed Journal of Proceedings has already been placed in the hands of the printers, and the work will be pushed to a speedy conclusion, in accord with the previous well-earned record of our jurisdiction for promptness.

OFFICERS ELECTED AND INSTALLED.—The following officers have been elected and installed for the current year: P. G. W. C. T., Robert Thompson, of San Francisco; G. W. C. T., M. C. Winchester, of Grafton; G. W. C., Will D. Gould, of Los Angeles; G. W. V. T., Mrs. Emily P. Stevens of San Francisco; G. W. T., Dr. I. S, Halsey, of Vallejo; G. W. Secretary, Geo. B. Katzenstein, of Sacramento, who comprise the Executive Committee; G. W. Mess., E. W. Culver, of Newcastle; G. W. A. S., Julius Lyon, of Los Angeles; G. W. M., Frank Storer, of San Francisco; G. W. D. M., Miss Mary E. Mayhew, of Red Bluff: G. W. Chaplain, Rev. E. A. Wible, of Half Moon Bay; G. W. I. G., Mrs. J. L. Coles, of Sonoma; G. W. O. G,, Rev. Peter Powers, of Chico. Mrs. M. E. Richardson, of Murphy's, was unanimously re-elected General Superintendent of the Juvenile Work.

THE DIME COLLCTION.—The Grand Lodge voted to heartily approve the Dime Collection for the benefit of the Literature Fund of the R. W. G. L. and to urge all Lodges to endeavor to make it as l rge as possible. Wherefore, if your Lodge has not already acted upon the matter, see to it that a canvass and collection is made immediately and the proceeds forwarded to the office of the G. W. Secretary to be credited to the Dime Collection Fund, and have the remitter so designate it.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE.—The circulation of temperance literature was pronounced to be one of the most powerful instruments we can employ for the success of the cause so dear to us all. The Executive Committee have ordered from the R. W. G. L. 5,000 copies of the 32-page pamphlet entitled "The Temperance work, viewed from the Good Templar Picket Line," comprising two addresses by John B. Finch, of Nebraska. These will be distributed pro rata to all our Lodges. A large edition of probably 10,000 will also soon be distributed of the 48-page pamphlet, entitled "The Truth and the Wine Interest! Will Wine-making pay? A matter of Finance," being a series of articles especially adapted for distribution in this State, and especially written for that purpose, by Capt. A. D. Wood, editor of the RESCUE. Other literature will follow for free distribution as soon as the resources of the Grand Lodge will admit.

WORK AMONG THE CHILDREN.—The G. S. J. W. reported a very large gain in the membership of the Bands of Hope. The Grand Lodge gave this department much careful attention, and urged each Lodge to have one or more Bands directly under its patronage and supervision. Each District Lodge will hereafter be reqnired to elect a District Superintendent for the juvenile work at each annual session, the District Superintendent to have supervision of Bands of Hope and all juvenile work in each district. The G. S. J. W. was authorized to and will hereafter keep in stock and for sale a supply of Band of Hope requisites, such as literature, reward cards, etc. A badge or regalia for the officers of Bands of Hope was prescribed as follows; "A red silk ribbon, two inches wide and six inches long, a tri-colored rosette to be affixed to the upper part of the badge, the lower part of the badge to be of fringe—bullion or otherwise." As usual, the entire juvenile work is placed in the hands of the Superintendent, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, of Murphy's.

THE RESCUE.—Every Lodge in the jurisdiction was recommended, through the appointment of the W. V. T., or some other person selected by the Lodge, to act as agent for our official organ, supplementing the work of general agents and endeavoring to increase its circulation to at least 10,000. If this is done, the paper will become self-sustaining without a doubt. Let all exert themselves in this behalf. The RESCUE is published weekly at the very low rate of $1.25 per year. Capt. A. D. Wood was continued as editor and publisher. All remittances or correspondence on account of the RESCUE should be sent to his address as heretofore, viz: Room No. 123, Montgomery Block, San Francisco.

LECTURE FIELD.—The Lecture Work for the year has been placed under the supervision of Bro. Geo. B. Katzenstein, who has been elected Superintendent of the Lecture Force. For the present the Grand Lecturers elected by the Executive Committee are Brothers C. N. Goulding and William Crowhurst and Sister Mrs. Emily P. Stevens, the latter to commence her work directly for the Order, not before on or about the 15th of November. Other Lecturers will hereafter be added to the force from time to time, of which further announcement will be made. It is hoped a cordial welcome will always be accorded our Grand Lecturers in the future as in the past, whenever they shall come among you. Open your hearts and homes to them, with the assurance that none but those worthy of your hospitalities and confidence will be commissioned by the Grand Lodge of California.

Samples and Catalogues, with 800 Illustrations, Free on Application. WEINSTOCK & LUBIN, Sacramento, Cal.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.—A number of Constitutional Amendments were adopted, the full text of which will hereafter be published in the RESCUE, and copies will also be furnished on slips to the L. D. of your Lodge, as space will not permit of their insertion in this general circular. The Grand Lodge also adopted a Code of By-Laws for the government of District Lodges.

PER CAPITA TAX.—The per capita tax was continued as heretofore—25 cents per quarter upon each member whose name appears upon the books of the Lodge at the close of each term. Lodges are hereafter exempt from payment of Grand Lodge Tax upon ministers of the Gospel, in regular standing, their wives and minor children who hold membership in the Lodge, and whose names are to be endorsed upon the back of the returns. To entitle the L. D. to receive the pass-word, the Lodge must have filed proper Quarterly Returns upon the blank furnished and prescribed by the G. W. S. Failing in this, the pass-word will be withheld. Hence it will be seen that the utmost importance attaches to the proper and prompt filing of Quarterly Returns at the close of each term.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.—The Good Templars' Home for Orphans was officially visited by a special committee of five selected and sent by the Grand Lodge to visit and inspect it. The report of the committee was flattering to the management of our Home. As usual, many Lodges pledged themselves to contribute specified amounts, the proceeds of entertainments, etc., the pledges thus made being as numerous and in amount larger than usual. If your Lodge has not already done so, a "pledge" will now be gratefully received and recorded. There are now 150 homeless and parentless children being cared for within our Home. If each will aid a little, or to the extent of their ability, the burden will not be onerous and the satisfaction and pleasure derived from helping so worthy an object will more than compensate for any effort in its behalf.

I have endeavored to give the briefest outlines of the leading topics, and in so doing have extended this circular to an unusual length. Many questions of interest and much important legislation was had, which only a carefnl peruial of the Journal of Proceedings will reveal. The Journal of Proceedings, which will very soon be issued, will therefore prove to be a valuable and interesting one, and as usual, it will be found a full record of all the transactions had.

Having once again been unanimously re-elected to the important position of Grand Worthy Secretary, I tender my grateful acknowledgement for this renewed token of the esteem and confidence reposed in me by my fellow-laborers. As an earnest of the future, I poiut with pleasure to my past record. Hoping for a continuance of the co-operation and sympathy of the great army who compose the Independent Order of Good Templars of this jurisdiction, I again subscribe myself.

Fraternally yours, in F. H. & C.

Lecturers' Department.

Superintendent of the lecture force, Geo. B. Katzenstein, Sacramento, to whom all communications concerning Grand Lecturers and lecture work should be addressed.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of California, are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst and Col. C. N. Goulding.

The Executive Committee have ordered: "That no person be permitted to take collections in the name of the Order within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of California, except the elective Grand Lodge Officers, the Grand Lecturers, duly commissioned thereto, or persons especially authorized so to do.

That all collections taken in the name of the Order shall become the funds of the Grand Lodge, and must be paid into its treasury."

C. N. GOULDING.

It may not be out of place to state that the Executive Committee at their meeting on the 7th, concluded to retain Sister Stevens, Prof. Crowhurst, and myself as Grand Lecturers for the ensuing year, for which we are under many obligations. No doubt we shall be heard from.

The Grand Lodge placed the lecturers in charge of our G. W. S., Bro. G. B. Katzenstein, and he will give us an opportunity of "viewing the landscape o'er." I regret that I was not able to fill my appointments at Bird Landing on the 15, 16, and 17th, owing to sickness, but I wrote to J. B. Clothier, Esq.. that I would be with them on the 22, 23, and 24, and at Rio Vista on the 18, 19, and 20, and then on as may be arranged.

I am not well or strong, but hope to regain my usual health and battle for the cause.

(Concluded.)

Just as the sun was declining, we arrived at the Hot Spring's hotel 12 miles from B., here we hung up for the night. Next morning I took my seat in the bottom of the wagon but e'er a mile away I was called to the honorable position of driver. Now for a drive 15 miles down the Wallar river through a wild and romantic canon, it was grand; at 11 o'clock I was ordered to "holt on, ve is here." I gave up the lines, took satchel in hand and started for a two mile walk to Bro. Taylors, no word had been received of my coming, but I received a hearty welcome, and by a little rustling the everybody in the Valley knew that at last a Good Templar lecturer had come to Coleville. Wednesday and Thursday night lectured, Saturday night met with the Lodge in their neat hall which they own. The Lodge has a membership of 74 in good standing. A happier and more united Lodge, it has not been our lot to meet with, as one Sister said "We all have our faults and know each others so dont say any thing about them, Sunday morning and evening we had good meetings, and the collection amounted to $22, besides a pledge of $15. Now for the Orphans Home the coming year. This Lodge deserves much credit for its noble work, being completely isolated from all other Lodges. I started a list for the RESCUE which I hope will be doubled shortly by our good Sisters C. M. Taylor and Mrs. Col. Richey—my thanks are due to all these people for their welcome. Monday I was furnished a horse to convey me back to Bridgeport. After a hearty good-by I set forth for an all days ride. At 6 o'clock in the evening I arrived at Bro. Elliotts,here I found Bro. O. Parmeter and Sister Miss Rachel Parmeter of Lodi Lodge, arrangements had been made and notice given for two lectures in the bar-room of Mr. Allens Hotel, who treated us in a most genilemanly manner, as his liquors were on what is called a "side-board" they could be shut out of sight which was done, and we had two very pleasant and we hope profitable meetings, 16 names were received for a Lodge but the friends were not willing to undertake the test of attempting to sustain a Lodge with this number just yet. The collection was $12,70. I think that the time will soon come when a good Lodge will exist in this beautiful town of B. Wednesday I took stage to Bodie, visited the Lodge and initiated three candidates. Thursday, Friday and Sunday had good meetings, contribution $15. Judge T. Neuman one of the leaders in the cause and Lodge, deserves much praise for his activity, I met many friends in this place and leave it feeling that the standard of morality is being rapidly raised. I look for good work from the Lodge, the coming winter. On Monday 25th I took passage with a fruit train on its return to Sonora, the four days journey over the monuntains were pleasant ones, as there was a pleasant party. A morning stage ride on Friday of 40 miles from Sonora to Milton let us out of the mountains. My summer trip as a whole was pleasant and I have reason to believe a profitable one, with my hearty thanks to all with whom I had dealings I now bid the cause God speed.

JUNCTION, Oregon, Oct. 11, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—My last was dated at Corvallis. On Monday eve I met a fine audience at Philomath a rural village two miles from the former place. This is the seat of the United Brethren College, so of course I made no effort to organize a lodge. I am surprised at the number of small "colleges" in this (Willamette) valley. While doing much for the educational interests of this state no doubt, it seems a misfortune that the money and energy could not be concentrated in one thriving institution. On Tuesday I returned to Corvallis and had the pleasure of organizing a fine lodge in the evening. Among the thirty charter members were many who will not rest until this lodge has as noble a record as old "Excelsior." Wednesday I started for far away Kings Valley and found abundant opportunity for patience and perseverance, but after two days stay organized with twenty-five charter members. I feel much satisfaction therefor, because it was not only needed, but longed for in the community and was made up of temperance men and others determined to become such. The enthusiasm manifest gave me fresh courage. A long journey brought me to Ind-School house, but the rain detained many which was the case at Simpsons Chapel on Saturday eve. On Monday and Tuesday evenings, at Monroe, there was excellent attendance and the lodge is doing good work. Of the work here more anon.

DR. KALLOCH ON INTEMPERANCE.

At the Metropolitan Temple last night Dr. Kalloch's prelude was upon the subject of Whisky and the Workingmen." He said that to intemperance the penury and misery of the poor people could be attributed, and on this account they bore hardships and sufferings that Divine Providence never intended should be known on earth. And the poor should be better provided for, they should have more time to cultivate their mental faculties and better natures by judicious reading; more, time to devote attention to their families; and more time to derive a little pleasure out of this life. As they must be made better it was time that statesmen cast about for a solution of the question. If something of this kind is not done it will be the worse for all by and by, for when the conflict comes that has threatened here so long it will come under different conditions and results than attended such troubles in many other parts of the world. God has prepared infinite profusion for man's comfort, and that any human being should suffer from cold and hunger is monstrous. That men should go hungry and children should starve is horrible. Instead of ordinary necessities every human being is entitled to the social comforts and decent requirements of an exacting world. And the speaker was glad to note that the signs of the times indicated that one of the main causes—intemperance—was being pointed out as the greatest grievance of labor and the principal direct or indirect cause of the majority of the sufferings of the poor. The money required for the intemperate habits of one man will suffice to take care of a whole family—and one of the old fashioned families, too, not the scrawny two or three of the present day. And it was not only the loss of the money that brought this misery, but the loss of life, character and the degradation brought upon others; the disgrace of evil associations and the consequent ruin of many valuable lives. The entire absence of intoxicating drinks for a very few years would make all comfortable and possessors of luxuries now unknown excepting to the rich. Within three years the money now paid for liquor would pay the national debt. In fifteen years the absence of liquor from this country would make it the richest in the world, while the lives of millions of men would be saved. The money now so spent would give employment to all the idle, educate all the ignorant and supply all the wants of all in the land. The health, morality and respectability of all the degraded would be recovered, and prisons, insane asylums and houses of correction would no longer be needed. Losses of life and valuable property by steamboat and railroad accidents through drunken employes would be rare, and the millions of lives saved in but a few years would alone be sufficient to make this nation rich. In the way of statistics, the speaker claimed that, while the original cost of liquor, as it returned no equivalent, was a total loss, it was large enough to extinguish all the national, state, county and municipal debts, and also pay the expenses of our army, navy, Congress—including the one passing the river and harbor appropriations—and schools, besides save in thousands of ways the present prodigious loss to the nation. A question of such a size, aside from its temperance, religious and moral aspects, is one that cannot be ignored for many years. He estimated the cost of consumers of liquors in this country to be more than double that of all the taxes paid, and claimed from that source eighty-four per cent. of the crime committed emanated. And the subject further broadened into national importance. All of the civilized nations dying in the past went down on account of imbecility caused by intemperance and lust; and our own country at present presents greater liability than any other on the face of the globe to mature those same follies, and, without history falsifies itself, she will experience a similar fate within a century, unless our people become temperate.—Call.

Mr. Kalloch has many enemies and traducers: many invidious critics too among his brethren of the pulpit. But there is good reason to believe that a man who preaches on the great cause of the prevalent sins and miseries of the people, who cries aloud at the impending sword, is doing the best service possible for humanity, most closely following in the steps of the great Teacher of Christianity and most emphatically deserves the thanks and plaudits and Godspeed of all good people.

It is a grand step in advance for a church to declare unequivocally and loudly that every one of its adherents should buckle on the armor of prohibition and fight the worship of Satan at the polls. But in a few years hence men will wonder how a pulpit or any one church in this day could be so blinded by the wiles of the great enemy of mankind as to fail to thunder from the altar, as did Peter the Hermit of Crusade renown, a call to rescue the Holy City from the dominion of anti-christ.

OREGON. The news that Oregon has voted by large majorities in both houses for the submission of a prohibitory ammendment to the people will be received with much joy. A petition with over 50,000 names had asked for this action, and the people of Oregon will doubtless carry the aendment by a towering majority when they get a chance to vote upon it. Just so in California, altho a few politicians fear that any attempt to dethrone the devil and save our homes might endanger the maintenance of the Republican or Democratic parties in their present positions of chief custodians of the beer and whisky interests—the people of the State, if they had a chance this day six months to vote squarely and distinctly on the question of the rumsellers versus the home would bury the whisky demon face down forever.

TULARE CO.—The alliance is moving on the enemy's works grandly, and it is thought that Tulare, Kern and Fresno counties will vote the prohibition ticket by considerable majority.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

HOW DR. GUTHRIE BECAME A TEETOTALER.

In a journey in Ireland in 1840, in an open car the weather was cold, with a lashing rain. "By the time we reached a small inn we were soaking with water outside, and as those days were days not of tea and toast, but of toddy-drinking, we thot the best way was to soak ourselves with whisky inside. Accordingly we rushed into the Inn, ordered warm water, and got our tumblers of toddy. Out of kindness to our car-driver we called him in; he was not very well clothed—indeed, he rather belonged in that respect to the order of my ragged school in Edinburgh. He was soaking with wet, and we offered him a good rummer of toddy. We thot that what was 'sauce for the goose was sauce for the gander,'—but the cardriver was not such a gander as we, like geese, took him for. He would not taste it. "Why?" we asked; "what objection have you?" Said he 'Plase your riv'rence, I am a teetotaler, and won't taste a drop of it.' Well that stuck in my throat, and it went to my heart, and (in another sense than drink, though!) to my head. Here was a humble, uncultivated, uneducated Roman Catholic carman, and I said: If that man can deny himself that indulgence, why should not I, a Christian minister? I remember that; and I have ever remembered it to the honor of Ireland. I have often told the story, and thought of the example set by the poor Irishman for our people to follow. I carried home the remembrance of it with me to Edinburgh. That circumstance, along with the scenes in which I was called to labor daily for years, made me a teetotaler.—Life of the Rev. Dr. Guthrie.

STOP BEFORE YOU BEGIN.—Success depends as much on not doing as upon doing; in other words, "Stop before you begin" has saved many a boy from ruin.

When quite a young lad, I came very near losing my own life and that of my mother by the horse running violently down a steep hill and over a dilapitated bridge at its foot.

As the boards of the old bridge flew up behind us, it seemed almost miraculous that we were not precipitated into the stream and drowned. Arriving home and relating our narrow escape to my father, he sternly said to me.

"Another time hold in your horse before he starts."

How many yonng men would have been saved if early in life they had said, when invited to take the first step in wrong-doing:

"No, I thank you."

If John, at that time a clerk in the store, had only said to one of the older clerks, when invited to spend an evening in a drinking-saloon, "No, I thank you," he would not to-day be the inmate of an inebriate asylum.

If James, a clerk in another store, when invited to spend his next sabbath on a steamboat excursion, had said, "No, I thank you," he would to-day have been perhaps an honored officer in the church instead of occupying a cell in the State prison.

Had William when at school, said when his comrade suggested that he write his own excuse for absence from school and sign his father's name, "No, I thank you, I will not add lying to wrong-doing," he would not to-day be serving out a term of years in prison for having committed forgery.

In my long and large experience as an educator of boys and young men. I have noticed this, that resisting the devil in whatever form he may suggest wrong-doing to us is one sure means of success in life. Tampering with evil is always dangerous."

"Avoid the beginnings of evil" is an excellent motto for every boy starting out in life.

Oh, how many young men have endeavoured, when half-way down the hill of wrong-doing, to stop, but have not been able! Their own passions, appetites, lusts and bad habits had driven them rapidly down the hill to swift and irremediable ruin.

My young friend, stop before you begin to go down the hill, learn now to say to all invitations to wrong-doing, from whatever source they may come, "No, I thank you," and in your old age, glory-crowned, you will thank me for this advice.—Golden Days.

A RUM STORY.

Some forty years ago the ship Governor Endicott arrived at Salem, Mass., from India, and there landed several missionaries, who departed at once for Boston to report their arrival to the Missionary Board, leaving their belongings at the Lafayette Hotel. There they attracted the attention of a custom-house clerk, who, noting the presence of a cask suspected an evasion of duty, and reported the matter to General Miller, the collector of customs. That official at once ordered baggage and cask to be sent to the custom house for examination, and requested that the missionaries would give him a call as soon as they returned to Salem. The suspicious cask was taken into the custom house yard, the bung knocked out, a proof glass inserted to find out what kind of liquor was inside, in order to fix the duty on it. They all tasted—collector, deputy-collector, naval officer, inspector, clerk, and a tribe of hangers-on. They drank it neat, they drank it with water, with sugar, with biscuits, with cheese. but could not agree what kind of liquor it was. Bets were made, and it was finally agreed to leave the knotty question to be decided by two absent inpsectors—Captain Bill L. and Captain Steve R. At last they came. They tasted. Captain L. said he would stake his reputation that it was old London Dock brandy; vowing "he had not tasted such liquor since General Crowningshield launched Cleopatra's barge in 1818." Captain R. declined "to put a name to it;" he said it had a flavor different from any liquor with which he was acquainted. The next day the missionaries arrived at the custom-house to have their baggage passed, all save the cask of liquor. "That must pay duty," said the General. "Would they inform him what spirit the cask contained?" The amused missionaries complied by telling him that when they left India they brought with them a pet orange-outang, which, when dying, after thirty days' experience of sea-life, had been put in a cask of rum for preservation—an explanation accounting for the peculiar flavor that had puzzled so many experienced tasters.

CONSISTENCY.

A little Band of Hope boy living in this city, has earned the right to a special badge of honor. His father is an immoderate smoker, and one evening last week, under the soothing (?) influence of the weed nicotiana fell asleep in his chair, and the cigar slipped from his fingers to the floor.

"Pick up my cigar, Willie," called Mr. P——, as he suddenly aroused to a sense of his loss. Willie approached the smouldering heap reluctantly, paused as if in indecision, and finally withdrew with an expression of intense disgust, leaving the cigar untouched. "Are you not going to obey me," sternly demanded Mr. P——. Whereupon the dear child, with becoming gravity, quietly reached for the tongs, and restored to papa his reeking treasure in appropriate fashion, at arm's length. The lesson to be drawn is obvious. It is to be hoped that Willie will never make a closer acquaintance with the vile poison which is vitiating our American youth, and that his consistent example may not be without its beneficial effects upon the father.

ABOUT THE PROHIBITIONISTS.

If all the best of the mothers of all the children of this great Republic are praying earnestly for the success of prohibition, it is well that the young folks should know what the Prohibition Party means. The saloon and beer shops and breweries have been for a long time deluging our land with crime and misery, and have plunged thousands of once happy families, into the most dire woe and suffering.

Men and women are seen clad in miserable rags, with features bloated and distorted, and their natures turned to savage brutality, because the saloon or beer shop has ensnared them; as a spider does a fly; has exhausted their manbood and substance, and turned out their worthless carcases, upon the street to rot.

Men and women hang or shoot themselves, or murder each other; jump in their despair from wharves and steamboats and drown themselves, because they were once enticed to enter the dramshop, the drunkard factory; the corner grocery or the winery. The son kills the father or mother, brother slays brother, father murders his children, husband beats his wife to death because the beer-kettle or pitcher was sent out to the dramshop at the first by innocent, sober, kindly people, living in a peaceful home.

Two lunatic asylums in this State are full, and crowded with those who have lost their reason and would if left at liberty destroy themselves or others. Three fourths of these are there because of the dramshop and brewery.

Two penitentiaries and numerous county and city prisons in this State are swarmed with criminals, who have killed or robbed or maimed their fellow men; who have stolen or burned or injured property, and committed crimes of various types. All there because of the beershop and winery and the whisky bar.

House of Correction, Industrial School, Police Court, Almshouse, Inebriate Asylum—all swarmed with men and women and children, who have been trapped and robbed and ruined by the saloon keepers, and the beer brewers.

Orphan Asylums and hospitals filled with victims of those whom the Saloonkeepers have murdered or rendered incapable of supporting themselves and families.

Innocent children by many thousands in this beautiful country of plenteous fruits and foods and flowers—suffering daily the keenest agonies of hunger, cold and brutal treatment, because the Saloon men have enticed and drugged and poisoned and crazed their fathers or mothers or both, and made them more cruel and brutal than the beasts.

Thousands of boy drunkards, girl drunkards, woman drunkards, marching down, down, to an awful death: destroyed, and ruined forever, that a few saloon keepers may gain an easy life, by the plunder and butchery of all their fellow creatures, whom they can decoy into their horrid nets of death.

These saloons, breweries, beershops, wineryies never did any good; their only use has been to craze and rob and kill men, women and children, to kill them in a manner vastly more cruel than that in which beasts are slautered. The Prohibition Home Protection party demand of the law makers and politicians that these human butchers and robbers shall cease to ply their muderous crimes, and gain an honest living like other people. The politicians have refused to do anything whatever, to stop the mankillers, and we have set up a new party of good honest men, to outlaw this robbery and slauter, and protect our homes. We have put up Dr. R. H. McDonald for Governor, we hope to elect him, we want all the young folks to ask the voters to vote this time, for the home, for the mothers and the children and help to elect Dr. McDonald the children's friend and the whole Prohibition ticket; all the candidates are friends of the children and of our homes.

The candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties—when we ask them, wont you help us stop this murder of 3,000 people every year in Califor nia?—have answered NO: they say to the Leag- of Freindom, the rumpoisoners; if you will give us your vote and elect us, we shall help you shed the blood of these 3,000 people and starve the thousands of children and mothers, who starve and suffer in this State, you shall rob and kill all you please, Sunday and Saturday, if you will only make Stoneman or Estee Governor.

Young and old, let us do our utmost to prevent the Leag of life destroyers from electing either of these men, whose trade is that of making drunkards and paupers. Let us help to make a clean man, our Governor, whose skirts will not be red with the blood of his murdered fellow citizens.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

Dear Friends of the Juvenile Department.—Having been again placed in charge of the juvenile work my inaugural bow is in order, and my kindest greeting to those, whose aid has been so kindly given, in the year that is now numbered with the past.

With the experience which my former term of office has given me I feel more than ever, the responsibility of my position and the vital importance of work among the young. Let me again remind you, that only with your cooperation can the work be successful. The outlook is hopeful. We have nearly 200 Bands and a membership of about 12000.

Now cannot we all take hold together, and make this year as successful as the last has been? The good seed sown among the children has borne fruit.

Military and Campaign Equipments. WEINSTOCK & LUBIN, 400, 402, 404, 406 and 408 K Street, Sacramento, Cal.

Already many of them are strong in the faith, as the following instance will show.

A little boy in San Francisco was accosted by a workman on one of the cable roads and the following dialogue ensued, which a lady overheard, and reported to me.

"See here. little boy, what's your name?"

"Johny" was the reply.

"Where do you live"

"Up there, on the hill."

"Well, Johny you run to the grocery yonder and get me a glass of beer, won't you?"

"No sir!" said Johny.

"Why not, are you afraid of your mama? I won't tell."

"No sir, I'm a Band of Hope boy, and don't buy beer for any body," said the brave little fellow.

Another little soldier in this grand army, one day went out among his acquaintances and secured 23 names for the Band of Hope. Seeing his mother put her cloak over her Band of Hope badge, he said "Mama, I never cover up my badge! I wear it outside for everybody to see."

And so reports come in from all parts of the State too numerous to report in these colums. Little soldiers well drilled, and clad in the invulnerable armor of truth and virtue, are daily fighting the enemies and gaining victories. Each dear child enlisted in our ranks, is able to bear arms in our great struggle, and the time draws near, when, with all this brave array of warriors, the enemy will be vanquished, and the cry of victory, over a State redeemed from the bitter curse of intemperance will ascend to heaven, from the glad hearts of a free people.

My brothers and sisters will you not work with renewed interest among the children? The work is so easy and so important: The little hearts are open to instruction, and the little feet are willing to tread it the right path.

Mothers, fathers, you of all others, cannot afford to be idle in this cause, your own dear boy must be protected, and in saving others,you may guard him.

"Ere he has learned to follow wrong
Teach him to love the right,
Watch, ere watching is wholly vain.
Where is my boy to-night?

A DEVIL'S ELIXIR.

There grows no wine
By the haunted Rhine,
By the Danube or Guadalquiver,
Nor an island or cape
That bears such a grape
As grows by the Beautiful River.

Drugged is their juice,
For foreign use,
When shipped o'er the reeling Atlantic,
To rack our brains
With the fever pains,
That have driven the Old World frantic.

To the sewers and sinks
With all such drinks,
And after them tumble the mixer,
For a poison malign
Is such Borgia wine,
Or at best, but a Devil's Elixir.

SANTA ANA, Cal., Sept. 23, 1882.

ED, RESCUE:—I wish to say through the RESCUE, to all lodges throughout the State, that here in Santa Ana "our noble cause goes marching on." Five persons initiated at last meeting and six the meeting before. Seventeen in all have been added to our number the present quarter, and it is but little more than half out yet. Many of the best young men of the town are meeting with us. As also many young ladies and some older persons. We have recently purchased of the Odd Fellows and Masons the carpet and furniture of their hall at a cost of $130 Have also very recently bought a new organ, price $150.00.

Our meetings are quite interesting and well attended. The next District Lodge will convene at this place on the 25th Nov. next. We anticipate an interesting and profitable time.

Many of us in this section are anxiously awaiting the result of the Pronibition Convention on the 28th inst. Both the old parties are marshaling their hosts for the coming campaign.

Primaries and stump speeches are the order of the day. In the mean time the "faithful few" of the temperance people look on and silentiy wonder what it will all amount to. We can hope for very little from either party as they now stand. However; we will work and wait.

I see by the RESCUE that our Lodge 151 is reported delinquent. We did not intend to be behind with the Grand Lodge but our Treasurer being absent for nearly half the present quarter, our officers could not correctly make out their reports, hence our delinquency.

The matter has been set right ere this, and we hope that the officers of Lodge 151 will never allow the thing to occur again. We were sorry we could not comply with the slight request of our Hanford friends for our truest sympathies are with them, but we have been putting forth every effort to raise the financial status of our own Lodge. Our Sister Lodge at Orange is struggling to build a hall and we have promised to aid them, So our Hanford Brothers will see that we did not ignore their request without reason.

Will some one suggest a systematic method of scattering Temperance Literature. Speak out. In F. H. and C

MONTECITO, CALA., Oct. 8, 1882.

ED. RESCUE.—Dear Sir.—At a meeting of the Montecito Home Protection Club, on the 7th inst. the platform and ticket of the Prohibition H. P. State Convention was discussed and endorsed fully; also Geo. Steel was endorsed for the State Senate for this District, a staunch temperance man.

Bro. J. W. Webb was endorsed for the assembly by the following resolution.

WHEREAS, J. W. Webb has formaly announced himself an independent candidate for the Assembly for this District and recognizing his great services as a pioneer in the cause of temperance, having full confidence in his integrity, ability and courage, and believing that if elected he will represent the best interests of the people in the struggle with corporate greed, therefore

Resolved, That we hereby declare him the unanimous choice of this Club, pledge him our earnest support at the polls, and call on the voters of Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties, who desire escape from the tyranny of party machinery, to return to purity in political life, and to be represented at Sacramento by patriotic devotion to their best interests, to rally to his support.

Recognizing the value of the RESCUE as a temperance advocate, I was instructed to send you three dollars and ask you to send me a dollars worth of each of the next three issues for campaign purposes. I hope it may be the means of securing you a number of permanent subscribers. I think it one of the best papers published and a necessity to the cause.

I also send for one dollars worth of "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," for the same purpose, please find a post office order enclosed for the amount.

We also endorsed as nominated a full Co. ticket, of the best men regardless of party affiliation; when men will break loose from party control and vote for principle, it will not be long before this whole land will be freed from the curse of intemperance and we will have better laws, and they will be enforced, and a happier and more prosperous poople, hoping the day may soon come I remain J. A. SIMPSON.

THE TRAFFIC'S CHALLENGE.

Senator James F. Wilson, in his now noted speech at Fairfield, Iowa, thus shows how the friends of whisky have raised the black flag and challenged all decent people to mortal combat. He quoted as a basis for this part of his remarks the resolution of the whiskyites in their national Association.

"Resolved, That we will never knowingly support for any office or place of trust, any person who shall vote for this proposed outrage upon our property and rights."

And then he said:

"Now think long enough to get at the true character of this resolution. Think of such a platform in such a country as this. Gather into your minds the appalling responsibility that rests on every man who possesses the right to vote in this republic. Reflect upon the momentous questions of public concern which so often stir our nation to its profoundest depths. What ever of issues of finance, currency, tariff, free trade, commerce, foreign and interstate public improvements, civil rights, domestic questions, foreign politics, life, liberty, property, and whatever can be involved in the illimitable range of the possibilities of our people and country, all sink into utter nothingness in the estimation of the occupants of this platform, when weighed against the right to make and sell intoxicating liquors in Iowa. No man, however true to every other interest, who may vote for the adoption of the prohibitory amendment, is to be supported for any office or place of trust as against a candidate, however false to every other interest who shall vote against such amendment! Was ever such a challenge as this thrown at the feet of a free people before? No matter what your convictions may be, you must not assume to exercise the right of private judgment concerning this amendment. Or if you do, and conclude that it ought to be adopted you must not let your vote follow your judgment and your conscience; for if you do the entire array of voters standing on this free liquor-traffic platform is pledged against you for all time. The issue here involved rises to the full stature of the supremest political right a man can have in this country. No mere sentiment comes in here. The highest form of the citizens responsibility for right personal action and the greatest good of the state is what we meet at this point. And the man who can be intimidated by such a threat has a very poor appreciation of the character and proper use af an American ballot. A man who would not prefer absolute personal independence in the exercise of his own right of suffrage to having all the votes of all other men cast for him for some office or place of trust or profit, has yet to learn what constitutes the highest duty of the citizen. In an unintimidated ballot lies the safety of our free institutions. I do not believe that the people of Iowa will be unmindful of this doctrine on the 27th of June;but do expect that then and there they will resent this threat to ostracise every person who will not surrender his right to vote as he pleases,and subordinate all things present and future in the public affairs of his country to the demands of the promoters of an unrestrained traffic in intoxicating liquors. I use the term unrestrained traffic advisedly. There never has been a law of restraint or regulation of the traffic proposed or enacted which has not met with the same kind of opposition that confronts the prohibitory amendment in this State. The keepers of the saloons are the authoritative interpreters of the men who oppose such laws. There has been no law from Maine to Kansas imposing restraint on the liquor traffic that they have not opposed and resolutely and continuously violated. They are organized violators of the law. —Lever.

MOCKING GOD.

To pray for deliverance from evil,and vote for its continuance. seems to be a favorite pastime with many professed or would-be Christians. It really appears as though they trust their own salvation and that of the rest of mankiud from the most glaring curse of the land to efficacy of mocking God—for prayer is always such without earnest effort on our part to make straight the way of the Lord.

No really intelligent being denies this day the evils of intemperance. None of these but know that to withhold temptation from the weak as far as possible by legislative enactments, is and remains about the only effectual way to reform those that have little or no respect for milder persuasive influence than the rod of the law.

And their name is Legion—in spite of our vaunted civilization.

Those that vote for a party simply because its success promises to be assured always comprise the great body of those not worthy the franchise of American citizenship. He that votes for a party because its victory will defeat another more objectionable, when it is self-evident that neither is the exponent of a moral principle or vital issue, nor is worthy of confidence, always throws away his vote. More, does his ablest to encourage the elements of political knavery and corruption, evermore the normal inheritance of victorious but effete party organizations.

Professional political rats may be pardonable for being governed by pleas emanating from professed Disciples, of One who gave His life blood for the sealing of a testimony pure of all compromise with evil; never man or Chritian. As far as the latter claims by law, protection of his rights, he is in duty bound to do his utmost to insure just enactments and sustain them, If he fails in this and petitions God to save him or his from evils that can be met by the arm of the law, he does mock God.

The most radical measures against beastliness in any form, are always the most effective and salutary. What brings a law into disrespect and contempt is eve its injustice or partiality, never its stringency or unpopularity with the vicious and ignorant. All enactments must live or die on their individual reformatory work. Nor is it often within our reach to vote for a live issue promising purer and bettee results than Prohibition of the traffice or manufacture of the most brutalizing intoxicants. J. C. K.

LIQUOR DEALERS IN CONVENTION.

ROCK ISLAND, September 20th.—In the Liquor Dealers' Convention to-day, the Committee on By-laws' report was adopted. It provides for new apportionment to the Senatorial districts, both as to territory and numbers, except Cook county, which forms a single district, and the Chicago and Milwaukee Brewers' Association, making that district without the territory. The name was changed to the Liquor Dealers' Protective Association. The Committee on Agitation reported the following, and it was adopted:

WHEREAS, It can be easily demonstrated that prohibitory legislation is not conducive to true temperance, but, on the contrary, has always been the cause of an increase of drunkenness and crime; and whereas, it is necessary that this fact should be brought to the knowledge of those people who erroneously believe that the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of liquors will stop the use and abuse of alcoholic beverages; therefore be it

Resolved, That it is the duty of the Board of Trustees to see that proper information as to the true effect of prohibitory and sumptuary legislation be disseminated as widely as possibe by lecturers, speeches, newspapers, pamphlets, statistics, etc.

The resolution, which endorses the Democratic platform of the State ticket, caused a warm debate. The fact was developed that the members propose to support the Democratic party in the present campaign. The resolution was opposed only for policy, as it was inexpedient to alienate Republicans and provoke the hostility of the Republican press. The resolution was finally withdrawn, also a substitute denouncing Stratton, Republican candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, for alleged prohibition views.

Quincy will be the next annual place of meeting. Delegates were appointed to the National Convention at Milwaukee, October 4th.—Chronicle.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—WE AIM FOR NOTHING SHORT OF A SWEEPING NATIONAL PROHIBITORY LAW ENDORSED BY EVERY STATE AND TERRITORY OF THE UNION, IN THE YEAR 1885, AND AS MUCH SOONER AS THE CHRISTIAN AND TEMPERANCE MEN AND GOOD CITIZENS OF THE COUNTRY MAY DESIRE TO ACCOMPLISH IT.

WIN OR LOSE.

Some people fear to vote the prohibition ticket, lest it may not win this time. They therefore feel tempted to vote the whisky tickets, which murder 3,000 people a year in California, and curse the State with paupers, robbers, and desperadoes, so that life and property are everywhere and at all times insecure. Some people fear it is too soon to vote for prohibition, and they are tempted to think it is not too late to vote for whisky and murder and suicide. There are some who profess to be leaders and teachers of the people, called of God, who tell us the best way to get rid of the whisky and beer cause, is to vote into office the candidates whose nominations have been purchased by or from the Leag of Fiendom and the Sunday smashers, whose God is Bacchus.

Some there are who, with well feigned regret, lament our mistake in beginning to legislate against rum, till the people are educated—educated by the 12,000 doggeries of this State, educated out of all regard for God or man, country or race, Sunday or good government or law—educated more thoroly to see rampant crime go unpunished and undisturbed.

And there are good people who would be better and more useful citizens and happier too, if they would do more of their own home made thinking, in place of takiug it all in, as they do their groceries and vegetables. These ask us what we are going to gain by this prohibitory movement. This it is intended to answer.

For years past the temperance vote and interest and political power in this State have been completely bottled up and rendered entirely, absolutely idle and useless, so far as they might have been of service in procuring any temperance legislation. The whole temperance army of this State for eight years past has not exercised as much political power as one dramshop, nor has it been deemed worthy of as much respect by politicians and legislators. The same parties who have at election times smothered the temperance sentiment of the State and hooked the temperance car on to the tail of the Republican bosses and the Leag of Fiendom, to vote for more license to the Sunday beer garden, had every preparation to repeat the old political tactics this year, but they failed to complete the contract. The RESCUE and a few friends of prohibition cut the towline, and the prohibitory vote and voice are now unshakled and at large, prepared for business.

CAN WE WIN?

We have rendered failure impossible already; the only way a failure could be produced would be for us all to drop it here and rejoin the old parties; that will not be done. We have already won, by our recent action, two years of the three or five or seven which may be required to abolish the dramshop. But for the movement made, we should have been not a whit further ahead, not a day nearer prohibition than we were two months ago or two years ago. It must be evident to the dullest comprehension that while slaves of the rum sellers, voting their ticket, electing their nominees, worshiping their platform, wearing the iron collar of a party whose principal business for a dozen years has been to make the liquor traffic comfortable and respectable—we never could have exacted or deserved a pin's worth of recognition or countenance.

But now because of the action of our Convention, the temperance vote is a power in the State, and the Republican and Democratic parties recognize it. They would have done so months ago, had they not believed we would be whipped or sold into the old traces and made to pull the old car of Juggernaut over the mangled bodies of our murdered citizens as in the past.

Should our ticket get only twenty thousand, ten, five, or one thousand votes, we shall have gained two years time and just that many votes and will have two years less labor and expense to incur. So it would be if we only had one hundred votes.

It is said sometimes that we will make such an impression upon the Republican party this year, that when next election is at hand, it will accede to our demands. That is not possible. It is not at all necessary to the welfare of California that the Republican party should ever carry another election here; but it is eminently essential that the Prohibition party should, and it has come to stay. There is only one way that a Republican success could ever be other than a calamity to the State, that is, provided that party should take to the water and and drown all its parasites and scrape off all the barnacles and leeches that have so long preyed upon its life.

If this is done, and that party, well washed and with good clothes on, should in 1884 ask the privilege of adopting our name and platform, endorsing our ticket, and helping to elect our candidates, their success in that line of action would do no harm. But in its present condition the Republican party of this State (if we remain true to ourselves) has had its last overtures from the temperance men.

No more will the Republican leaders bid for the joint support of the legions of rum and the legions of prohibition with success, as heretofore. They will no more have their agents manipulating prohibition conventions.

OHIO.

The press despatches have not given us a fair or truthful statement of the recent Ohio medley. It has been stated that the Republicans championed or favored temperance and were beaten because they did so. That is not true. They were beaten because they championed whisky, while they were pretending to temperance men to favor them.

Last winter when prohibition was desired, the Republican legislature licensed the sale of liquor, in violation of the constitution and it was so declared by the courts. While they pretended taxing liquor was a temperance measure, they made the law in the interest of the dram-shop and it was an affront to all true temperance people. They also passed a Sunday law to reconcile the professors of Christianity to the sale of liquor during the week. And of course when the saloon is open six days of the week, a Sunday law is the thinnest and most contemptible of all shams and farces—except in a country settlement here and there when the temperance sentiment is in a majority of 10 to 1.

Last year a good many temperance people were fooled into voting the Republican ticket on account of lying promises made by the party. But this year the lesson was a little better learned, and when we get reliable intelligence it will be found that the Republicans owed their defeat entirely to their hugging the beer and whisky vote to their bosom, whereas they could have triumphed in every northern state, had they nailed prohibition to the masthead.

Much stress is laid by some talkers on the entire delusion that the Republican party has ever passed prohibitory laws or favored temperance. It has done neither in any case, but it has repealed prohibitory laws in a great many instances and persistently thwarted every temperance measure brot before its legislatures. In Maine it has favored prohibition in its platform for many years and every time prevented its enforcement in the larger cities whenever it could. In Kansas it passed no prohibitory law, but the legislature, Republican and Democratic, submitted an amendment to the people which was carried by 8,000 majority and 20,000 of those who voted for it were Democrats. In Iowa they fooled with temperance, repealed the prohibitory law so far as it related to beer and wine, and rendered it a farce for near 20 years till a third party forced the Republicans to let the people vote on a prohibitory amendment which the people not the party carried this year.

In Maine, Vermont and various other states a third party is being organized to destroy the Republican or bring it to terms. It was stated by one of the antis at the late convention here, that no prohibition had ever been gained by a third party. It would have been nearer the truth to say none had ever been gained without a third party. The Maine law was carried after its repeal by a third party and nothing has ever been accomplished in prohibition worth a cent by any "balance of power" nonsense. We can get Sunday beer garden recreation laws and respectable dram-shop license laws that way; but the race of temperance men who used to hanker after such baby rattles have mostly gone over to the enemy's camp or have become nearly extinct, like the Modoc Indians.

FOOTPRINTS OF THE LEAG OF FIENDOM.

The Sacramento Bee tells of an honest girl who was allured by a villain named Lowell Payne to go from her home at Vacaville, and and serve as a help to Mrs. Chadwick, who keeps a saloon in Sacramento. Here he visited her, and after trying to persuade her to steal the watch and jewelry of Mrs. Chadwick, he attempted to force her by threats, to go to a house of ill-fame with a mistress of his, and help to support him. His violence affrighted her into seeking protection, and the ruffian was arrested.

We know not how many thousands of these miscreants we have in California, but they are as natural and certain a product of the beer shop and the Leag of Fiendom, as the ripened stack of wheat is of the kernels which the farmer has strewed upon the ground.

A Frenchman half crazy at his best, was supplied by the infernal dramshops of New York with liquor a few days ago, and set out to stab all the women he met, with a savage, sharp instrument; but good people, pious people, people of the churches want us to vote the Republican ticket, so as to protect the open sale of rum on Sunday and every day, and continue the atrocious traffic which murders and debauches men, women, and children here by thousands every year, and makes the shriek of the dying victim of rum almost continuous. Murder, torture, misery everywhere and always; but let us vote for the Leag of Fiendom as usual.

STOCKTON, October 13.—Thomas Enright was today sentenced to San Quentin for five and one-half years for arson in burning seven buildings in Lockeford on June 4th.

That is the way the whisky business pays in Lodi. A whisky thug sold liquor to a young fellow on Sunday who went and burned up seven buildings, and now the people of the State have to pay the expenses of trying the victim whom the rum seller crazed, and they must board him five and one-half years. It pays to have such a saloon in Lodi, don't it? If a shoemaker sold a pair of shoes that made the wearer set fire to seven houses and stores, he would be hung to a lamp post.

A few days ago a drunken man entered a neighbor's house in this city, and cruelly beat a woman who was about to become a mother, and also pounded her nurse black and blue. He should have a medal from the Leag, and the Journal of the Leag should give us his portrait next week.

The papers are full this week of shootings and stabbings all over the Union, by men who have taken a little something from the members of the Leag of Fiendom. It seems as if the Leag has invented a new patent "murder inspirer" to put in their drinks. Murder and rapine and assaults on women have never been so brisk as the past week. The officers of the Leag and the Journal of Free, &c., ot to fire 100 guns from Telegraph Hill. The wife-beaters Club, an auxiliary branch of the Leag, is to be organized shortly. No members admitted whose wives have any front teeth left. A fund is to be raised to defend members of the Leag whose "recreations" are interfered with by a puritanical and fanatical police and judiciary.

F. H. C.

That stands for Faith, Hope, Charity, sometimes. It stands for Folly, Hypocrisy, Crookedness in the signature of a communication in the Record-Union of Oct. 12. That sweet production reasserts the miserable sham that the Republican Convention promised a Sunday law. This, is so obviously false as to be provoking, when we know, all of us, that the proposition to make the Sunday law effective and enforce it, was promptly voted down with only one vote in its favor in that great Convention; and we know too that not one of the candidates or speakers of that party have once said that it intends to shut a single grog-shop on that day.

It is provoking, inasmuch as it is taking for granted that the christian and temperance voters of this state are only on a par of intelligence with a maternally disposed hen that attempts to hatch out a couple of white door knobs—to tell us that the Republican party, when they made a plank that was entirely acceptable to the Leag of Fiendom, ever intended to stop the sale of liquor on Sunday, or meant to make that plank lie to their friends—as it certainly would, if they should ever attempt to interfere with the beer garden or beer dive or dramshop as necessary adjuncts of Sunday recreation.

We all know thoroly that not one of the Republican candidates or leaders has ever yet professed or pretended that the party will try to shut a dive on Sunday or that it ever promised or intended to do so. Therefore, it is impudent and insolent to the last degree for any one to pose as F. H. C., or a christian or a temperance man and declare that the Republican leaders, candidates or politicians intend to change their skins when elected; to be elected as wolves and immediately evolute into lambs and turtle doves, as soon as they get into office by the whisky vote.

To ask us to believe that people are sincere and honest who promise that the election of the Republican candidates will miraculously confer sainthood upon rumsellers and set them to making Sunday observance laws and laying a foundation for prohibition, is too refreshingly verdant. We dont like to swallow a tame joke; if sold, let us be well sold. The bogus prohibitionists should have told us that their prayers will have such a sanctifying effect upon Estee, Conklin & Co., that the moment they are elected they will sell all they have and give it to the Veterans Home and the Garfield monument; put on a monk's robe and sandals, head the Salvation Army all day Sunday and spend the remainder of their lives in the exercises of the Y. M. C. A., and the Band of Hope.

Hear the blasphemy of this wretched caricaturist:

"The sacred observance of Sunday as a day sanctified and hallowed by the command of God can be established only by keeping the Republican party steadily on its present course. The arrest of wine-making and drinking, now almost universal in California, can only be accomplished by keeping the Republican party on in its present course. Party success in its present course will do this. Hence it becomes plain that the beginning of legal prohibition in California will date with the success of the Republican party in 1882."

That means God can only be glorified by making the Sunday a drunken debauch, electing rumsellers and moral outlaws to office, and turning over the State Government to the entire management of Buckley, Higgins and the Leag of Fiendom who are all represented by the Booth and Estee and Neumann faction.

JUDGE YE.

There are people who tell us that because so many temperance men have always been in the Republican party, it has been the party most favorable to temperance. But how much that party or its leaders, who absolutely controlled the party, and still do so, value and love the cause of temperance, is indicated by the manner in which it is now assaulted by the Republicrn journals, which dance when the leaders pipe, and sing the song they are paid to sing.

They are saying the cause of Sunday observance, and temperance will be put back ten and fifteen and twenty years because our party is enlisted for Home Protection, which is merely an expression of their hope and wish and intention that it shall be so. Not a man ever has said so, but when the wish was the own father to the thot. No man ever said that who cared two cents for temperance, or ever will take any part in it but to fight it down. It never was anything but a threat made by the miserable obstructive, who have inch by inch resisted every step of progress made by the temperance cause.

When the Democratic convention declared against Sunday and temperance at San Jose, men who represented thousands of Democratic votes, declared themselves run out of their party; but they did not ask for a new party, they asked the Republican party to give a Sunday law utterance and declared they would vote their ticket if they would do so. They desired to come into the Republican fold and rebuke and forsake their old party management. But the Republicans gave them a savage and peremptory repulse; gave them not one atom of promise which they had not in their own party. And now the Republican Bedouins of the campaign are declaring we are a Demoeratic camp, just because any Democrat can vote our ticket without sasrificing his honor and self respect as he would have to if he voted with the Estee-Newman and Shafer League of Fiedom concern. Is that our fault ? Are we to blame ?

Again, the temperance convention of July 11, implored the Republican party to save us from the unpleasant alternative of a third party, to grant us a most modest request: A promise to accede to the popular demand for a Sunday law, and to let the people vote on the question of dramshop yes or dramshop no; their acceptance would have enabled every prohibitionist in the State, and every disaffected Democrat to vote the Republican ticket and elect it by a sweeping majority. But they loved the Leag of Fiendom, called in the priests and solemly wedded the Leag in public, on the housetop, and hissed the temperance and Christian people and the mothers and homes of California to scorn—spat upon the honest, faithful, conscientious people by putting whisky to preside over the convention, whisky at both ends and in the middle of their ticket, whisky at their headquarters to make the young men and boys of Sacramento drunken; and they celebrated their wedding with the legions of rum and their hoped-for triumph over the temperance hosts, in a feu-de-joie of champagne corks and a general drunken whisky-mill carousal.

We have not lied, we have not prevaricated, we have deceived no one; we begged to be permitted to vote the Republicans into power; they declared we should not do so without swallowing lies of our own and their lies and stultifying ourselves and enlisting ourselves under the flag of the Leag of Fiendom. There is not a plank of our platform nor a candidate on our ticket they can truthfully assail; not an act or doctrine or motive they can find fault with; while they have nothing of their own that is not alive with rotten motives and rotten records. And they assail us vindictively and untruthfully and venomously. Let the people judge.

THE TIME HAS COME.

Twenty, thirty, forty years ago there were people saying occasionally, "the time has come to do right," but many more have always met them with the solem asseveration, "the time has not come," to put away the worship of Baal, and stay the outpouring of innocent blood, and the daily sacrifice of helpless human lives and souls.

John the Baptist, St. Paul and others, declared the time had come to repent and do right eighteen centuries ago; further back when the commandments were given from Mount Sinai, their immediate observance was enjoined. It is a doctrine peculiar to this generation that a time has to come for men to begin to do right; or that a time has not come when every man is bound by every obligation that can bind humanity, to do right in every step that he takes.

The people who said ten years ago, the time had not come for every one to determine never under any circumstances to vote for an advocate or servant of rum, tell us so to-day and would tell us so ten and fifty years hence, could they make the next ten and fifty years history. The same class of men have been the most fatiguing and weakening deadweights upon every reform in church or State or social custom; the most dangerous because they pose as friends of the movements they try to strangle, they proclaim in solemn tearful accents, that they are compelled by conscience to cut the throat of this beloved interest, because it has come too soon, and they make the sacrifice purely from motives of devotion to the cause they slauter. Conscience often means in the above connection a nice little $4,000 office or sinecure under the Republican administration.

It is a pity to hazard the removal of a good man from a political office of $1000 to $5,000 a year, but it is a greater pity by far to continue the annual slauter of 3000 people in this state and the sacrifice of countless thousands of starving suffering women and children, to the dramshop by their saloon-crazed and plundered protectors.

The prohibitionists would rather have one of their own friends lose a post masters billet here and there, than have American institutions overturned, the sons of the people made criminals by thousands and their daughters sold to lives of shame by hundreds, for the sake of electing rumsellers to office, and making them the distributors of the electioneering dodger's spoils.

There are teachers of the people who for years have enjoyed the respect and confidence of a large circle of admiring friends, but who cause intense disappointment and regret by their present open espousal of the cause of whisky against the people, against the church, against the home, against the innocent children, against the helpless little ones of the Sabbath-school.

The time has come when there being two or more parties in the field one for

GOD AND HOME AND NATIVE LAND, and the others headed

FOR WHISKEY AND SATAN, DOWN WITH SUNDAY, CHURCH AND SCHOOL. DOWN WITH THE HOME, UP WITH BEER AND BROTHEL.

—the time has come when all Christian men, all good citizens should choose rightly which side to take. It won't do for ministers and teachers who continue to elect the whisky tickets and curse the rising generation with the plague of drunkenness, —if any such there shall be—to pretend in the future that they love temperance, chastity or Christianity.

Ed. Rescue:—A dancing party, a few nights ago at a place not 50 miles from the fair city of Stockton, was honored by the presence of some of the nominees of both of the great political parties. In close proximity to the dance-hall (as is usually the case) is a liquor saloon; these men nominated by their respective parties to represent the people, played cards, imbibed the ardent and used profane language. Boys of 15 imitating their unworthy example. What can we hope for from either of these parties? The terrible evils resulting from the liquor traffic are rapidly on the increase, and it seems that the time is ripe for prohibition to prevent the wholesale subjugation of body and soul by the demon drink. Not in the spirit of persecution, but in the spirit of true friendship and charity to all our fellow beings, who are victims of intemperance, and in the interest of the rising generation, let us work for the prohibition ticket and pray for its success.

VANITY FAIR ON PROHIBITION.

"The statistics of the last census upon the liquor question are appalling. We have an army of seven hundred thousand habitual drunkards in the United States; one hundred thousand of whom are in the prisons, and three hundred thousand in the alms houses, and a great many of them upon the streets of our city. We can walk from Kearny street to Front on Clay, and count fifty habitual drunkards. Three hundred thousand children of drunkards are dependent on private or public charity for support, in whole or part. Besides this, more money is expended for intoxicating liquors, than for food and clothing. And what is equally bad, carefully prepared statistics prove that our Insane Asylums are filled with victims of intemperance. To support these institutions of charity and crime, the people are burdened with taxes. A free riotous Sabbath has had much to do with increasing the army of drunkards. We pause. Will the Republican party lessen this terrible evil? We will not wait for a reply. Read its Platform. Will the Prohibition party prohibit the sale and manufacture of liquor? They will if they can, but they can't. The liquor question comes to us with awful earnestness. It is freighted with the lives of nearly a million victims. Around it clusters the sad fate of worse than widowed women and orphaned children. It is a question of state, not of sentiment. The railroad question is insignificant by its side; call the railroad's oppression highway robbery if you will; but remember the robber who steals your character and murders your wife and child to complete the deed, is worse than the one who steals only money. The question is one of reason, not of prejudice. * * * The liquor traffic, especially the sale of adulterated drinks, must be discouraged. There is now an opportunity for every one to show his colors upon the question.

Dr. McDonald, a man as well qualified in intelligence, experience, and sterling integrity, to administer the public affairs of this State, as either Estee or Stoneman, has been nominated for Governor. He represents the highest ideal of a temperance and moral candidate. In him is embodied every principle that the people interested in home and public reform advocate. Here we have a man, surpassed by none, in his true earnestness upon all questions of practical and needful reform. He has made a record, not only in public sentiment, but in the very hearts of men that will live, an honor to him, and to the city and State. Now, if there is any Temperance man or Temperance woman, who will refuse to support Dr. McDonald by vote and influence, it will be on account of insincerity. We love the Republican party, its principles, and many of its men. We listened to the praisers of the grand party of freedom, when a mere child around the family fireside, and have been reared in its path, but the Republican party in California to-day does not represent the moral sentiment of the people. Dr. McDonald does. Every moral man, every temperance man, every Christian, yes, every drunkard, should cast his vote for the Prohibition candidate. We do not believe that prohibition is possible now, or will be for many years in this State, but we will not rest satisfied upon the liquor question until the liquor question is settled. The Temperance people must show their strength. Don't be afraid of party ties, the action has been taken, the temperance vote will be put upon record. We dislike to see Estee beaten, we would like to glory in the success of the Republican party, but we do believe that an equal number of Democrats and Republicans will vote for Dr. McDonald, because there are more Democrats dissatisfied with the Democratic platform, than are Republicans with the Republican platform. It is not because that we do not desire the success of the Republican party, it is because we desire the Temperance people to show their full power, that we declare ourselves in favor of the Temperance people casting their vote for the Prohibition ticket. If the Temperance people show that the sentiment of the public is with them, then the more powerful parties must, as a matter of policy in future campaigns, declare themselves in favor of Temperance, a quiet Sabbath, and the general advancement of morality and good government."

Some expressions have been omitted from the article in Vanity Fair, charging the evils of drink to the adulteration of liquors, and exonerating pure alcoholic beverages. That view of the matter is a mistaken one, but for this bold expression of the truth as it seems to the managers of that journal, the friends of good order and sobriety will be thankful, and justly appreciate the honesty and truthfulness displayed in the outspoken declaration for the right and for the decent side in this contest between the cause of temperance and the combined interests of beer and whisky.

EVIL REPORTS.

There was an impression abroad that the defamatory war made upon the lady managers of the Home for Orphans by the Vallejo Chronicle (on the ground that they had refused to let the orphans go to a circus to which they were invited) was instigated or encouraged by parties who desired to get their places. It would be a very sad thing indeed if one Good Templar should ever suffer an evil report of another to go unchallenged, or if one should aid and countenance a false report of any kind. After the matter has been sifted, it seems to be the fact that the whole affair was the hired work of the leag of drunkard-makers, who endeavored to strike a blow at our Order in a quarter where they thot it would have the most damaging effect. The fact that the first article in the Vallejo Chronicle was telegraphed to other papers all over the state, seems to indicate the finger of the Leag. At the same time it may be mentioned that there has never been a lady manager on that Board, who would have objected or ever did object to the children visiting a circus when one comes to town, on the ground of its being an immorality. On the occasion in question the ordinary rule was suspended, because of sickness in the Home and in town. And if the people who have so kindly provided for and cared for all these children during the past 13 years had considered it best to debar them from ever going to a circus, it would be a piece of sublime impertinence for the Vallejo Chronicle or any one else on the outside of our organization to criticize the act. The people who rob and assist and countenance the robbing of the homes of this state and turn out thousands of orphans upon the streets to starve—have no right whatever to criticize the modes or measures of the charity that takes them to its shelter, feeds and clothes and tenderly cares for all their needs. It is an impudent thing indeed for the rumseller and his employees to rob the orphan and then howl at the quality of the sauce which his protector furnishes for his pudding.

PRESENT AND FUTURE.

Mr. Estee's remarks, at the Republican ratification meeting in Platt's Hall last week, on the Sunday plank in the platform, were unsatisfactory to a very respectable part of his audience. He favored a day of rest and recreation, when schools and courts and banks should be closed, but he had not one word about the closing of saloons. He studiously avoided the slightest reference to that subject. He spoke strongly and well against the railroad monopoly, but he said not a word against the terrible whisky monopoly. It is said by many that the Sunday plank is not explicit; that it is calculated to deceive; that it is not what good people have a right to demand of the Republican party, if that party expect their votes. That depends very much upon what candidates are nominated, and how those candidates canduct the canvass. If, as Mr. Estee did in Platt's Hall, they ignore the outrageous efforts of an organized band of law-breakers to defeat the present Sunday law, and express no determination that whisky selling, as well as other selling shall cease on the Sabbath day, they will not secure the support of the large temperance element in this State. This question must be met. If it is not met in a manly, outspoken way during the canvass it will be useless to expect the enforcement of an efficient Sunday law afterward.—K. in Pacific.

NEW FIVE-CENT PAMPHLETS.

The National Temperance Society has just published three new 24-page pamphlets of great interest and importance. The price is fixed at the low price of five cents each to ensure a wide circulation by Woman's Christian Temperance Unions and other organizations.

"The Heredity of Alcohol."

Containing an address by Dr. Norman Kerr, of London, upon the "Heredity of Alcohol"; also, an address by Dr. Nathan Allen, of Massachusetts, upon "The Effects of Alcohol on Offspring." Both addresses present in a striking light the perils involved to the offspring of parents who are addicted to the use of intoxicating beverages. The lesson they teach is profoundly important, and the pamphlet should have the widest possible circulation.

"Stimulants and Narcotics."

A very able address by James Muir Howie, M. D., upon "Stimulants and Narcotics." It is a timely warning in the name of science against the use of alcohol and tobacco as sources of ultimate and inevitable exhaustion and disease. It should be widely circulated.

"Diet for Mothers."

This is a valuable pamphlet by Dr. James Edmunds, of London. It is the emphatic testimony of a distinguished physician against the use of beer, porter, and other intoxicants, often prescribed for, or resorted to, by nursing mothers. Total abstinence is strongly urged for the good of both mothers and children. The pamphlet should be placed in the hands of every mother in the land. Price five cents. Address

Coal Oil.—Continental oil per case of 10 gals. $2.25; Starlight oil $2.65; fair burning oil $2.50 to $2.20—good time to lay in winter supply. Order from cash grocery, 519 Post St., S. F., Cal.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the Rescue 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the Rescue will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.
I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1: 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

SPOOL COTTON.

Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid-like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

J. & P. Coats' Black

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Rob't Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, San Francisco, G. W. V. The Tremendous Boom reported by the Chronicle as taking place in favor of Estee and Morrow is all a mistake. The boom was only a couple of boys going past the Chronicle office with a small donkey cart load of oranges, beating a tin kettle and singing boisterously "Sweet oranges for sale." An influential journal like the Chronicle should be more careful as to the source and character of the news it distributes.

Ratification meeting at Platt's Hall, Thursday evening. Hon. J. McM. Shafter and F. M. Pixley will address the meeting. The only way to secure a seat is to come half an hour early.

The two following items are friend T. I. Sutton's in the Emancipator:

The reason why Republicans and Democrats so generally and bitterly oppose Woman Suffrage, is because they know the bruised and starving mothers and wives of this country can be trusted to shut the whisky off from their brutal tormentors as soon as the ballot is placed in their hands.

I have been taking observations and making estimates recently, and have ascertained that a Democrat may be kept pure in the faith, and holy before his party on about three pints of cockpit whisky a day, while four pints of the same article will be required to keep a Republican in equally good order with his party.

Rev. I. S. Kalloch on Sunday evening in his prelude, alluded to the changes that have recently come to people as to mingling politics and Christianity. Two years ago he said, a minister had lamented the sad fact of his (Mr. K's.) dragging the ministerial garment in the mire of politics, and now a few days ago, the same clergyman, over his own name, appeared in a Republican paper of this city urgently enjoining Christian people to vote for candidates nominated at the behest and in the interests of the grogshops, where their headquarters were maintained, and standing on a platform which promises to degrade the Sabbath. Mr. Kalloch is to speak next Sunday evening on the candidates. Every body should hear him.

Miss F. E. Willard, on a visit to some of the numerous outposts of her victorious army, passing thru Kentucky on the 14th inst., sent a card of greeting to the Good Templars and P. H. P's of this coast on our platform, and our action in moving upon the enemy's works.

Judges Jackson Temple and Anson Bronson are the nominees for Supreme Judges on the State Ticket. The former has declined, but as his name has gone forth stereotyped on our ticket he will have to be elected anyway now. Neither he nor the party can help it, and the party dont want to help it, for Mr. Temple is one of the candidates whom we feel quite sure of electing beyond any peradventure. It is to be hoped that voters who cast a ballot for the judicial nominees of the Leag of Freedom will be few.

Club 13.—An advertisement appears in the Chronicle offering shares in a Chicago swindle called club 13, at $10 each; inviting people to send money there for investment. To advertise such frauds is equivalent in morality to the acts of the street cappers who inveigle unsophisticated country people into the bunko dens, and help to rob them there. A leading daily Journal that can be hired for coin as an accomplice, to aid the devices of professional swindlers, should deal with exceeding lenience with the heathen Chinee, who steals sleeve-buttons and trinkets from his trusting employers.

The rumsellers of Topeka, Kansas, who were in rebellion have all closed up.

HARD TIMES AND WHY?

The above named, 16 page tract has been translated into German, and about November 3rd 10,000 copies will be ready for free distribution among the German population of this State. People who may desire to distribute any of these among their German neighbors, can order them free from this office. As the translation and publication of this tract will cost the editor of the Rescue, personally, over $70, those who order any may send the postage, 15 cents per 100, if they choose. If not they can have them just the same. The Germans will be as good temperance people as any of us as soon as they have seen both sides of the question. Let us give them a chance.

The city dailies are now afraid to mention a word about the Prohibition H. P. Party. A month ago they talked about it a little, as if it was a harmless little plaything. But now it has grown to such astonishing proportions that its very name is taboo to them. It is generally conceded that Mr. Estee's defeat is entirely assured, and the Democratic Examiner is so fearful of General Stoneman's chances, that it refuses to publish the P. H. P. Ticket as an advertisement for coin. When a daily, which advertises any dirty quackery for coin, refuses for coin to publish a decent temperance ticket and a decent platform, it must be very much afraid that its party chances are getting shaky. As the contest is now entirely between Dr. McDonald and Gen. Stoneman, between the representatives of morality on one side, and of free crime and vice on the other, all the Republicans who were recently alarmed lest we should cause the election of the Democrats, can defeat them sure by voting the clear, decent, honest, patriotic, conscientious, P. H. P. ticket.

Complaints are made of inaction on the part of the State P. H. P. Committee. The committee plead guilty of having omitted to do a long list of things which they would have done had everybody interested in their work forwarded them $10 to enable them to push a vigorous campaign. Most of our work has to be done gratuitously, that in other parties is generously paid for out of the party sack. The Leag of Freedom, however generously it may have showered its gold upon its two old nurslings, the Dems. and Reps., dont take kindly to us, and has never contributed a dime to our canvas. Higgins and Buckley don't help us a cent. We have gone as far as possible in making $10 do $500 worth of work.

Estee Withdrawn?—An esteemed correspondent in Rio Vista asks if the Republicans have withdrawn Estee and Conklin, in favor of Dr. McDonald and Sims. It is not certain that they have as yet, but it is their only sensible move. If they fear the election of Stoneman, & Co., and think Democratic rule will not be beneficial to the State, they can act patriotically, withdraw their whisky men from the field and unite to make our respectable ticket successful beyond all chances.

Every Day we hear of new and unexpected additions to the army of prohibition voters. All good citizens are about tired of voting for the maintenance of whisky and beer, as the god and king of this State and Nation.

A circular in the interest of the Republican whisky alliance has been sent thru the mail addressed to the friends of temperance. It is a fraud and its authors were ashamed to give name or address. It is intended to appear as coming from a temperance organization, but if it does it is in the pay or interest of the Leag of F. It reiterates the miserable unsavory odored falsehood that the election of the candidates of the whisky ring means a triumph of temperance. Its argument is trashy and imbecile and the circular itself makes one more of the long list of disreputable intrigues of the Estee Shafer coalition.

The Lodge Directory is broken into this week to make room for ads that came in at the last minute.

OUR LOST.

They never quite leave us, our friends who have passed
Through the shadow of death to the sunlight above;
A thousand sweet memories are holding them fast
To the places they blessed with their presence and love.

The works which they left and the books which they read
Speak mutely, though still, with an eloquence rare,
And the songs that they sang, the dear words that they said,
Yet linger and sigh in the desolate air.

And oft when alone, and as oft in the throng,
Or when evil allures us, or sin draweth nigh,
A whisper comes gently, "Nay, do not do wrong,"
And we feel that our weakness is pitied on high.

In the dew-threaded morn and the opaline eve,
When the children are merry or curtained in sleep,
We are comforted, even as lonely we grieve,
For the thought of their rapture forbids us to weep.

We toil at our tasks in the burden and heat
Of life's passionate noon. They are folded in peace.
It is well. We rejoice that their heaven is sweet,
And one day for us all the bitter will cease.

We, too, will go o'er the river of rest,
As the strong and the lovely before us have gone;
Our sun will go down in the beautiful west,
To rise in the glory that circles the throne.

Until then we are bound by our love and our faith
To the saints who are walking in paradise fair.
They have passed beyond sight, at the touching of death,
But they live, like ourselves, in God's infinite care.

PROHIBITION IN MAINE.

It is a little surprising that any newspaper in the United States should be so recreant to the truth and so false to its duty as an instructor of the people as to repeat any of the self-evident falsehoods which have been circulated claiming that prohibition in Maine has had evil results. About once a month Gen. Neal Dow, and frequently other distinguished and honored public men of Maine come into print with an entire rebuttal of every such lying pretence of the whisky traffic. But with equal regularity another journal shoulders and fathers the old lie that has been exploded hundreds of times and never had a word of authority or confirmation once—and sets it going as something new and fresh.

The following letter from Gen. Neal Dow, in reply to a San Francisco firm is appropriate to this time of prohibitory interest; altho similar letters from Gen. Dow and others have appeared in the RESCUE.

PORTLAND, Oct,, 1882.

DEAR SIR:—Your note of the 2nd is received with the enclosure, a slip from the Oakland Daily Times in which, speaking of the policy of prohibition it says:

"Maine is a fine example of what to avoid in this respect. There thirty years of rigid Sunday laws and successful prohibition, show an increase of only 11 per cent. in population, while pauperism increased 147 per cent. murder 425 per cent. rape 800 per cent. and the whole catalogue of infamous crimes an average of 276 per cent."

The Times had this from a lying article that went the rounds of the anti-temperance press about two years ago, and was killed by an exposition made by Gov. Dingley, in which he gave a table of crime of the several states, showing that Maine has far less in proportion to population than any other; California having one criminal to each 608 of the population, while Maine has but one to each 3,200 of her people. It is scarcely worth while for the anti-temperance press to circulate these falsehoods for they are sure to be exposed sooner or later. The movement against the liquor traffic—"The Gigantic Crime of Crimes"—is sure to go on to a triumphant end, since more mischief, misery and evil come from it than "from war, pestilence and famine combined," as Mr. Gladstone, prime minister of England said, while no good comes from it to nation, state or people.

I suppose it will be admitted by all sensible men that the people of Maine really know what the actual results of prohibition have been in the state. I cannot more clearly show you in what estimation that policy has been and is now held here, than to give you the Resolves passed at the Republican annual state conventions. There has never been any suggestion from any quarter, that these Resolves contained any misrepresentation. For 1878 the Resolve was:

"Temperance among the people may be greatly promoted by wise prohibitory legislation as well as by all those moral agencies which have secured us beneficent results; and it is a source of congratulation that the principle of prohibition which has always been upheld by Republicans, is now concurred in by so large a majority of the people that it is no longer a party question, the Democrats having for several years declined to contest and dispute it."

The Democratic state canventions have repeatedly and emphatically repudiated the policy of license.

1879. "We recognise temperance as a cause which has conferred the greatest benefit on the state, and we sustain the principle of prohibition which in its operation has so largely suppressed liquor selling and added incalculably to the sum of virtue and prosperity among the people."

1880. "Experience has demonstrated the wisdom of the policy of prohibition as an auxiliary of temperance, and as contributing to the material wealth, happiness and prosperity of the State; and we refer with confidence and pride to our undeviating support of the same as one of the cardinal principles of the Republican party of Maine."

There was no election and no convention in 1881. The Resolve for this year was.

"We refer with confidence and pride to the general record of the Republican party in support of the policy of prohibiting the traffic in intoxicating liquors; the wisdom and efficiency of which legislation in promoting the moral and material interests of Maine have been demonstrated through the practical annihilation of that traffic in a large proportion of the State; and we favor such legislation and such enforcement of law as will secure to every portion of our territory freedom from that traffic. We further recommend the submission to the people of a Constitutional Prohibitory Amendment."

The convention of this year was the largest, by far, ever held in Maine by any political party, containing more than 1,300 delegates from every county in the State, and the election, which was a very animated one, gave a triumphant endorsement to the platform containing that affirmation of the wisdom and expediency of the policy of prohibition, and of its beneficent effect upon the interests of the State. Mr. Blaine, in a campaign letter, published just before the election, said:

"The people of Maine are industrious and provident, and wise laws have aided them. They are sober, earnest and thrifty. Intemperance has steadily decreased in the State since the first enactment of the prohibitory law, until now it can be said with truth that there is no equal number of people in the Anglo-Saxon world among whom so small an amount of intoxicating liquor is consumed as among the six hundred and fifty thousand inhabitants of Maine."

Need I say more to show that all statements like those of the Times have no foundation in truth, and that prohibition in Maine is in the highest interests of the people, moral and material. NEAL DOW.

STRAIT TICKET.

Some of us believed that it would be well to endorse two or three of the temperance men on the old party tickets, but the majority decided on putting up a strait ticket. Perhaps the minority were mistaken as to what was our duty in this matter. They certainly will be mistaken now if they do not abide by the decision made. If all our temperance voters or many of them should, in the coming election, scratch our ticket and vote for the other candidates here and there, it will make our labor lost to a great extent. It will say we had no strength to speak of, and discourage the faithful for another trial. It is of supreme importance for us to record our utmost strength as much for the candidates we don't expect to win, as for those we hope to elect.

There is unexpected strength developing for us in various quarters. We have so much better men, so much grander promise for good to the country than the ancient spoil seekers, that hundreds are coming over to us who desire to poll a conscientious, honest vote. Sutter, Yuba, Butte, Fresno, Tulare, Kern counties are heard from very favorably; our ticket will carry in a great many districts; we should make it do its very utmost, and if all who desire to be good citizens will vote as good citizens this time, we shall elect the whole of our candidates. There is nothing worth voting for elsewhere.

A GENUINE TEMPERANCE PARTY.

(Walk into my parlor, said the spider to the fly.)

A gentleman of high standing and a Republican in North Carolina, whose statements are reliable, in a late letter to the Chairman of the National Prohibition Home Protection party says:

"The Prohibitionists in North Carolina probably number 70,000 voters. They cast 48,000 votes last year The Republican party in this State in its platform is pledged against prohibition legislation. This happens because the revenue officers in the South control all the machinery, and they are making war upon the prohibitionists. This movement has all along had the encouragement and assistance of the revenue department in Washington. If the temperance people of the North want to do some good work, let them come down here and try to turn the colored people from their present course of anti-prohibition. The Republican managers argue that the Democrats want to prevent their drinking and that this will be the first step in depriving them of their liberties, etc. This is the way they talk. Every federal office holder in this State is enlisted against prohibition, called here Bourbonism. I am an earnest Republican myself, but I think the Northern temperance people ought to know the true situation. Here is a state where 150,000 people petitioned the Legislature for prohibition, and where 660,000 colored people are being daily taught by Republican leaders, backed at Washington, that free whisky and plenty of it, is the cardinal principle of their liberty."—Living Issue.

Everybody knows that the Abrahams bosom of the Republican party is the only place where prohibitionists can safely buy their cough mixtures and Mrs. Pinkham's pills and get their corns pared. The generous confiding public is informed that this genuine old reform and personal sacrifice party, in its recent matrimonial alliance with the Leag of Fiendom in California, has largely increased its facilities for the manufacture of temperance laws, Sunday laws, moral reforms, Y. M. C. Associations, Bands of Hope, Vinicultural societies, Brandy distilleries, Beer Garden Sunday recreation and refreshment associations for working men, etc.

Thru the admirable management of Mr. Shaeffer of the Leag, the party of self-sacrifice has been enabled to inaugurate a system of universal compromise which without a shadow of dout will unite in one delightfully sympathetic and homogeneous combination the Good Templars and the saloon keepers, the preachers and the gamblers, the churches and the beer gardens, the prayer meeting and the horse race, the Sunday school and San Quentin.

Of course there will be cranks and impracticables and bigots in the churches, temperance organizations and other classes of reformers, who will fail to consent to this beneficent arrangement, who will obstinately remain on the outside as usual. They are so blind they wont see the beauty of harmonizing the liquor sellers and the prohibitionists of this State. The proposed plan is to give the Leag of Beerdom the labor of framing the platform, nominating the candidates and filling the offices for their share of the burden of politics; and to allow the prohibitionists the privilege of making bonfires, holding ratification meetings and brassband processions, voting with the party and praying for reform, as their portion of the entertainment. It is very beautiful, but some of the impracticables will still vote for Dr. McDonald and the strait prohibition ticket.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT MANUAL.

12mo, 100 pages. Price, cloth, 50 cts; paper cover, 25 cts. By MRS. J. ELLEN FOSTER, of Iowa.

THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY has just published a new and very valuable Handbook or Manual for all workers in the line of a Constitutional Amendment for the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage.

This little volume contains the full argument and reasons for the Amendment by States, and also by the National Government, with full and complete answers to popular objections against the same. It also contains suggestions, explanations and directions, form of petitions, memorials, constitutions, formula of amendment, modes of operation in different states, etc.

It also contains a Constitutional Amendment Catechism for Woman's Unions, Bands of Hope, and other Temperance Organizations, presenting the entire question in form of question and answer, which should be in the hands of every person interested in the Temperance work.

Mrs. Foster is so well known as the gifted attorney, whose indefatigable labors contributed so largely to secure Constitutional Prohibition in her own State, that she needs no introduction to the friends of Temperance in America. The book is invaluable to every friend of Constitutional Prohibition. Send for it. Price, only 25 cents in paper cover. Address, J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade street, New York.

This is a work every prohibitionist should send for and thoroly study. (ED. RESCUE.)

BLOOD-MONEY.—Those who have had the good fortune to read various stories and sketches that have appeared in the Argonaut, Californian, etc., from the pen of W. C. Morrow, one of the most popular writers of fiction in California, will be delighted to learn that he has in press, to be issued in a few days, a novel bearing the striking title of BLOOD-MONEY. It is said to be in the author's strongest vein, and to handle without fear the most serious social problem that now confronts the whole people. Mr. Morrow's writings are pervaded by a a grim and powerful realism not met outside the most dramatic French school of fiction. In handling the strongest passions of men he is bold even to daring, and his work displays a knowledge of human nature rarely met with. These who are acquainted with the contents of BLOOD-MONEY predict that it will create a profound sensation.

"THE WOMEN OF AMERICA vs. THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC"

ORIGIN AND OBJECTS.

The Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, with its twenty-four auxiliary State Unions, is the largest Society ever composed exclusively of women, and conducted entirely by them. So far as reported (the returns are very incomplete), there were at the close of last year, 1,654 local auxiliaries, with a membership of 34,317, and 494 juvenile organizations. It is the lineal descendant of the great Temperance crusade in 1873–74, and is a union of Christian women of all churches for the purpose of educating the young; forming a better public sentiment; reforming the drinking classes; transforming, by the power of Divine grace, those who are enslaved by alcohol; and removing the dram-shop from our streets by law.

A YANKEE HOME PROTECTION CATECHISM.

Miss Frances E. Willard writes: "If you like, please publish my "Yankee Catechism," (one question answered by asking another), prepared for Mr. D. C. Cook's Home Protection Monthly. I would be glad to know what objections are felt by your readers to the positions here taken."

Question.—Is work for woman's full ballot a "side issue" in temperance reform?

Answer.—Do the brewers so regard it?

Q.—Would men who never voted prohibition themselves, give us women the power so to vote?

A.—Have they done so in Arkansas?

Q.—Is not the subject of prohibition less unpopular than that of woman's ballot?

A.—Is the superior popularity of prohibition indicated by the fact that four States have the suffrage amendment now pending, and two have the prohibition, and that in twelve States the woman's ballot is a part of the State government? Or by the fact that while neither branch of Congress has a temperance, both have a suffrage committee now in full blast? Or by the further fact that, while in the House of Representatives they would not so much as grant a commission to investigate the results of the liquor traffic, they have granted the woman's suffrage committee aforesaid?

Q.—Is not the home protection movement less popular than it was years ago?

A.—Do you rely for proof of this upon the fact that the S. S. workers of Illinois, at their recent temperance meeting, and the Congregational ministers at their annual association resolved to stand by the W. C. T. U., which is thoroughly pronounced for woman's full ballot? Or upon the fact that our leading temperance women are freely invited to speak in Presbyterian churches on Sabbath evening when their utterances about the ballot are sure to have no uncertain sound? Or upon the fact that at the District Conventions held this Spring, our "women of the churches," confessedly conservative, have stood up so unanimously for the ballot, when the question was called, that it has been declared "positively cruel" to put the negative?

Q.—Is it not easier to get prohibition than the ballot for women?

A.—Do the foregoing facts (not fine spun theories) point in that direction? Is it easier for a legislator to go to his whisky constituents and say: "I voted to submit a prohibition amendment," or "I voted to submit an equal franchise amendment"? Which sounds the worst in the distiller's ears? Did you know that a large element among the "liberals"—Germans and others—believe it an act of natural justice to let all the adult population share directly in making the laws by which they are governed? Had you heard that the editor of a leading German beer paper said to one of our workers, "I hate to have the women vote, because they will vote against beer; but I shall cast my ballot on their side because I believe in your American Declaration of Independence?"

Q.—Will not the majority of foreigners vote against temperance?

A.—Then has not temperance something to gain from letting women vote, since two foreign men come to us for one foreign woman, and the proportion of native born women to native born men is in our favor?

Q.—Did not Kansas go prohibition without women's help?

A.—Is it not true that for fifteen years previous to carrying the Amendment, Kansas had allowed the signature of a woman to count just as much as that of a man against license—thus giving to women the "vote by signature?" Did not that, according to the admission of Kansas people, help mightily in building public sentiment for prohibition? And does not Gov. St. John declare they must give women the ballot that they may help elect such officers in the largest cities of Kansas as will make the law something more than a rusty sword in a still more rusty scabbard?

Q.—Will not the ballot come to women in due season without the special efforts of temperance women?

A.—Is it not true, as Garfield said, that things don't turn up in this world, but somebody must go to work and turn them up? If the "ballot by signature" in women's hands closed the grog shops in three-fourths of the counties of Arkansas, is it not in harmony with temperance for the W. C. T. U. to hasten its advent to the utmost?

Q.—Have not the woman suffragists come into the W. C. T. U. for the purpose of using its forces in the interest of their cause?

A.—Will you please furnish a list of those who have so entered our work? Is there a general officer of the National W. C. T. U. who has ever been affiliated with the suffrage movement, except as a W. C. T. U. worker? Is there a State President except Mary A. Livermore and Mary T. Lathrop (now a conservative) who ever spoke in a suffrage meeting? Let us have facts.

Q.—Have not those W. C. T. Unions that have included work for the ballot among their methods become hobbyists and laid down the Gospel to take up the ballot?

A.—Which has most auxiliaries and the greatest number of temperance schools, evangelistic meetings, etc.,—the Home Protection States or the conservatives? (Look in the annual reports of the National W. C. T. U. and see). Which State furnishes the National Superintendent of Evangelistic Work? (Illinois—and a more fervent Christian worker or a more pronounced Home Protectionist is not to be found in America than Mrs. Henry.) Which furnishes the Superintendent of Sunday-school work? Illinois. Of "unfermented wine at the sacrament?" Illinois. On which side have the veterans of the crusade ranged themselves? By their fruits ye shall know them."

Q.—Is not the Bible opposed to woman's ballot?

A.—Do you refer to the place where it says "male and female created he them and called their name Adam?" or to where it gives an account of Miriam and Deborah, Huldah and Esther, Anna and Elizabeth, and the Marys? or to the Apostle's declaration—"There is neither male or female, but ye are all one in Christ Jesus?" Nay, as the outcome of our Christian civilization let us have

> "Two heads in counsel,' two beside the hearth;
> Two in the tangled business of the world;
> Two in the liberal offices of life;
> Two plummets dropped to sound the abyss of science,
> And the secret of the mind.

BRIBERY OF VOTERS IN IOWA.

There is a great complaint against the women of Iowa for the part they took in the recent prohibitory election in that State. It is charged that they corrupted the unsophisticated voter by bribing him with coffee, buttered biscuits, and cookies at the polls. They did not stuff the ballot boxes, but they did stuff the ballot boxer. This is intolerable. Its influence is demoralizing in every way. In the first place it destroys the independent expression of the voter. How can a man be expected to have full mastery of his convictions when he holds a handful of cookies in one hand and a prohibitory ballot in the other. It does not stand to reason that he can be a freeman in such circumstances. Again, the course of the women of Iowa is a violation of time-honored custom and precedent. That custom and precedent was to fill the independent voter with whisky or beer before sending him to the polls. The voter conscientiously voted the ticket of the party which supplied him with the last drink. This policy made trade lively, and kept up the price of corn and barley. More than that, it interfered with a very pretty game of tactics between the two political parties. The free-handed Democrats supplied the first four or five drinks. The shrewd Republican tried to catch the voter at that point and give him the last drink he could hold without losing his perpendicular, and then run him in, thus stealing the opposition thunder. This pretty contest was often reversed, the Republicans losing their investments in whisky. What is to become of all these time-honored institutions if the women are to invade the polls with seductive coffee and cookies? The daughters of Eve are true chips of the old block. Look out for them!—Interior

SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS.

A most important change in the management of public schools is now called for in Brooklyn, namely, the appointment of a competent and experienced lady as assistant superintendent. When it is remembered that a great majority of the teachers are ladies, mostly young, and a considerable majority of the scholars are girls, and that a large proportion of all the scholars are under ten years of age, it does appear as if an experienced female teacher, who had brought up a family, would be exceedingly useful in looking after the welfare of the teachers and children of the public schools. Politicians, many or most of whom are unscrupulous, dissolute men, should have nothing to do with the control of public schools, which should be wholly divorced from public politics and political patronage or control.—N. Y. Witness.

The doom approaches of the blessed and beautiful system of giving such offices to incompetent, unworthy, dissipated, immoral men, solely because they have been unscrupulous, cunning, tricky camp-followers of a political party. In its place is coming a better order of things, in which those public duties which can be best performed by intelligent, capable, upright, virtuous, patriotic women will be handed over to good women in preference to the politicians of the whisky factions.

When women's equal rights shall be established in the near future, the opponents of that reform who live in terror of its approach, will please not lay the blame on the RESCUE. When Daniel read the handwriting on the wall, it was no fault of his; he did not hasten the destruction of Babylon by one hour. We see thousands of new recruits coming over every year to the belief that our mothers and sisters have souls and equal rights with us. But not one recruit has ever deserted or gone back into barbarism. How is that going to end?

WAYSIDE NOTES.

BY ANNA GORDON.

In one of the leading towns in Texas, where a Local Option campaign is in progress, Mis Willard told the children that they could help the Temperance people by persuading their fathers and brothers to vote the right way at the coming election. A lady told me afterward that as soon as her little girl reached home she rushed into her father's arms, saying, "Oh, papa! I want you to vote the way Miss Willard wants you to!" The mother explained the child's meaning, and the father seemed deeply moved. Surely "a little child shall lead them."

From the same town another lady writes: "We had real Temperance lecture last week. A dear, refined little woman in our church, whose babe is just two weeks old, sent for my phaeton and went to——'s saloon after her husband, who had been there drunk for two days and nights. The lady who went with her told me that when she went in the men parted and stood back aghast. All she said was, "Where is my husband?" They pointed to him sitting with bowed head at a desk. She walked up to him, and, raising the poor drunken head, kissed his bloated face and said, "Dear husband, I want you to come home with me!" Mrs. —— told me she saw the tears run down the face of a man who stood near. They drove my dear old horse, who has done so many good turns, round to the back door, and the patient, loving wife took her wretched husband to their home. I can only cry, "How long, oh, Lord, how long?"—Our Union.

THE GERMANS of the northwestern States are waking up to the question of prohibition, and considering it. The German M. E. Conferences are taking active measures. Their religious papers are giving place to temperance articles. As usual, devoted Christian women (Germans) are coming to the front and addressing and enlightening their countrymen. Mrs. Obenauer and Mrs. Skelton are very prominent and successful workers. We are apt to judge harshly of the persistent opposition of the Germans to temperance, but perhaps they are not a whit more so than the Americans were when they had only given as many years attention to the matter as the Germans have. It is quite probable, too, that when they have had the same amount of instruction and experience that we have on this subject, they will be as radical advocates of prohibition as can be found. In other words, a similar education will produce similar effects upon them and our other people.

THERE have been various reports concerning the removal of the picture of Mrs. Hayes from its place in the White House. It is now in the Green Parlor, and Miss Willard and other ladies of the W. C. T. U. who went recently to see it are perfectly satisfied with its location, where it appears to the best advantage, and is much admired.

COMMISSIONS ISSUED.—During the last and the preceding week four hundred and thirteen (413) commissions were issued and mailed to the address of Lodge, District and State Deputy G. W. C. T.'s from the G. W. S. office. So far as recommended, all Lodge Deputies have now been commissioned, and these should all be in possession of their authority to act. It is particularly requested that the Deputies carefully read their commissions, and the authority delegated to them, and act in strict accordance therewith. Should any name, or the name and number of any lodge be improperly written, notice of the fact should at once be forwarded to the G. W. S. office that the official record may be corrected.

OFFICIAL CIRCULARS.—During last week the official quarterly circulars containing the passwords for the term commencing November 1st were mailed to each Lodge Deputy entitled to receive them. Circulars to be read in open Lodge were also enclosed from the G. W. C. T. and G. W. S., and it is hoped these were read in every Lodge. A blank form of quarterly returns to be used in reporting for the term ending October 31st was also enclosed, and a supply of envelopes (four large and eight small) with the address of the G. W. S. printed thereon, was likewise mailed to the address of each Lodge Deputy. The addressed envelopes are intended to cover all official communications and reports to the G. W. S. office, and more will be supplied free of charge when required, upon requisition therefor. Should any Lodge Deputy not receive the documents above referred to, they will be duplicated upon application to the G. W. S. office.

SONG LEAFLETS.—The Grand Lodge publishes song leaflets with the words of appropriate songs set to popular airs, to be used at public, private or temperance meetings, or gatherings of any description, and will be glad to furnish them in any required number, free of expense. They will be sent to any address, postage prepaid, upon application to the G. W. S. They are intended for free distribution, and it is hoped will be freely used at all temperance meetings.

SUPPLIES.—The Grand Lodge has now a full stock of Lodge supplies and requisites, any and all of which will be forwarded to Lodges upon their order under seal of the Lodge. All supplies are sold for the benefit of the Grand Lodge and no individual profits thereby.

CHANGED.—The members of the Boards of Trustees and Lady Managers of the Good Templars' Home for Orphans should remember that the quarterly (joint) meetings of the Board here have been changed from the first to the second Tuesday in the respective months, and that the next and first meetings of the current year will be held at the Home building on Tuesday, November 14th, at 10 o'clock A. M.

PRESENTATIONS.—The last session of the Grand Lodge was pre-eminently one of presentations. The G. W. C. T., Judge Robert Thompson was presented with a massive and elegant gold-headed cane just prior to the close of his term of office. Bro. Samuel Kitto, retiring member of the Board of Trustees of the Good Templars' Home for Orphans, was presented with a silver pitcher and salver upon his re election to succeed himself. Mother Elvira Baldwin the first G. W. V. T. who was installed at the first session of the Grand Lodge, twenty-two years ago, and who remains a faithful ond constant attendant and mem ber of the order still, was presented with a handsomely embroidered and expensive regalia. Sister Mrs. M. E. Richardson, the efficient and capable Superintendent of the juvenile work, was likewise presented with a handsome regalia. If these tokens of appreciation and esteem do not constitute a visible manifestation of the good feeling and true-hearted generous fraternity, which ought always, and does ever exist in the I. O. G. T. it would be difficult indeed to indicate where to look for it. Thanks to the ability of the G. W. A. S., Bro. Julius Lyons of Los Angeles, some of the presentation speeches and responses were phonographically reported, and will appear in full in the journal of proceedings of the Grand Lodge now being printed.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

Hereunder will be found the full text of all Constitutional Amendments adopted at the last session of the Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T. of California, recently held in San Francisco, and they are hereby officially promulgated. Only the sections amended are given, and these are produced as they should now read. For convenience they are arranged under their proper articles and headings:

CONSTITUTION OF SUBORINATE LODGES.

ARTICLE IV.—CARDS.

"SEC. 2. The possession of a Clearance Card shall retain to the holder thereof, all honors and rank credited upon the face of the Card, and due the holder at the time the Card was granted."

ARTICLE V—FEES AND DUES.

SEC. 1. The initiation fee into this Lodge shall be: For males (except to ministers of the Gospel, engaged as such, their wives, and minor children), not less than two dollars; for females, not less than fifty cents. The payment of which shall be considered as in full for initiation fees and dues to the end of the term or quarter in which the candidate is initiated.

SEC. 2. The fee for each degree shall be: For males (except ministers of the Gospel, engaged as such, their wives, and minor children), not less than one dollar; for females, not less than twenty-five cents.

SEC. 4. The fee for a Traveling or Clearance Card shall not be less than fifty cents, except those granted to ministers of the Gospel engaged as such, their wives, and minor children.

SEC. 5. Subordinate Lodges shall have power to fix the dues of their own members; provided, that the dues of adult male members shall not be less than one dollar and fifty cents per quarter, except that lodges may exempt ministers of the Gospel, engaged as such, their wives, and minor children from quarterly dues.

SEC. 7. Lodges having in membership ministers of the Gospel in regular standing, are exempt from the payment of per capita tax to the Grand Lodge on such minister members, their wives, and children who have not attained their majority, provided the officers of the Lodge report to the G. W. S. the name and denomination of each minister held in the Lodge. Such list of ministers, and their denomination, is to be appended to and made a part of the Quarterly Returns sent to the G. W. S at the close of each quarter; and a failure to so report the name and denomination of each minister member, as hereinbefore provided, will forfeit the right of the Lodgeto claim any exemption from per capita tax for such members.

ARTICLE VI—DEGREES.

SEC. 1. A charter member, or one who has been in membership one month, shall be eligible to the two higher degrees.

SEC. 3. All applications for degrees must be balloted for when the Lodge or Degree Temple is open in the particular degree applied for, and the proceedings of the Lodge when balloting for degrees or conferring the same, are to be recorded in a separate record book kept for that purpose.

ARTICLE VII—OFFICERS.

SEC. 8. Any officer absenting himself from the Lodge for three successive meetings, his office may be declared vacant by a vote of two thirds of the members present, after one week's previous notice has been given in open Lodge.

SEC. 9. In case the chair of the W. C. T. becomes vacant, the W. V. T. shall preside until such vacancy shall be filled; and any member elected and installed into such office, and who serves to the close of the quarter, shall be entitled to the full honors of the term.

ARTICLE IX.—TERMS.

SEC. 1. The regular quarterly terms of this Lodge shall commence on the first meeting nights of November, February, May and August.

SEC. 2. In case this Lodge refuses or neglects to make its quarterly returns to the Grand Lodge for nine months, it shall forfeit its charter,

ARTICLE XI.—OFFENSES AND TRIALS.

SEC. 1. If any member of this Lodge shall violate the laws of the order, or be guilty of unworthy conduct, it shall be the duty of any member knowing the same, to immediately communicate it in writing to the W. C. T., who, concealing the name of the informant, shall read the same in open Lodge, and immediately refer the communication, or a copy thereof, to a special committee of three, whose duty it shall be to summon the witnesses and accused before them, and investigate the accusation; and if, in their opinion, there are just grounds for the accusation, they shall forthwith prefer charges against the accused, based upon the testimony which the committee are to collate, and produce to the Lodge in writing. The W. S. shall then furnish the accused with a copy of these charges, and cite him to appear before the Lodge at its next stated meeting, at which time trial shall take place, unless for good reason postponed. The testimony furnished by the committee shall be read on trial, and no other testimony shall be introduced unless it is new in its character. The accused, after being allowed a hearing, shall then retire, and the Lodge proceed to vote upon the charge; and if sustained in whole or in part by a vote of two thirds of the members voting, the W. C. T. shall, without motion, put the question on expulsion, and, if lost, on suspension, and so continue until some order of punishment is agreed to by a vote of two thirds of the members voting, except in case of violation of Article II of the Constitution, when reprimand shall follow by force of the law, if the vote is lost on suspension. When the accused pleads guilty, either to the committee or in open Lodge, the Lodge may forthwith proceed to act upon the charges. But should the accused member refuse to appear, or fail to appear, thereby treating the authority of the Order with contempt, the W. C. T. shall at once declare said member expelled.

SEC. 3. If the Lodge shall decide to punish by fine, the same course shall be adopted in determining the amount thereof as is above provided in fixing the time of suspension; and in either case of determining the amount of a fine or fixing the time of suspension a majority of members voting shall decide. When the Lodge has determined upon the order of the punishment, and, in case of suspension or fine, fixed the fine (provided there shall be no fine for violation of Article II of the Constitution), or the amount thereof, the accused member shall be brought in, and the decision communicated to him by the W. C. T.

SEC. 18. A member suspended from this Lodge for non-payment of dues, may return to the Lodge by paying all arrearages; and shall then be declared by the W. C. T. again in good standing.

ARTICLE XV—PASSWORD.

SEC. 1. No member shall be permitted to sit in the Lodge unless in possession of or entitled to the P. W., and no member shall be entitled to the P. W. unless his dues shall be paid for the quarter in which the P. W. is current.

CONSTITUTION OF GRAND LODGE.

ARTICLE XIX—HOME FOR ORPHANS.

SEC. 9. The Board of Trustees shall have power to elect its own officers, and shall hold its regular meeting on the second Tuesday in the months of November, February, May and August, and special meetings when, in the judgment of the Board of Trustees, it may be deemed necessary.

SEC. 15. The Board of Lady managers shall hold regular meetings on the Second Tuesday in the months of November, February, May and August, and special meetings when, in the judgment of a majority of the Lady managers, it may be deemed necessary.

RESOLUTIONS.

That this Grand Lodge hereafter permit the Subordinate Lodges under its jurisdiction, to establish by by-law the ceremony of rising to the feet and responding to the question put by the W. C. T.: "Have any members violated their obligation?" Observance of such by-laws and ceremonies not to be binding on visitors.

That in all cases of the administration of the obligation of our Order, it shall be the imperative duty of the officer officiating, to require the person assuming the same to repeat in audible voice, the full text of the obligation so given, and the W. C. T's shall enforce this resolution to its full extent and meaning.

The new Code of By-Laws for District Lodges will be presented next week.

The following question having been propounded by several L. D's, and as it may be by many more, I will answer it through the columns of the RESCUE Ques. "Can Prohibition be discussed in the lodges, apart from candidates and platforms?"

ANS. Yes. The Grand Lodge, 20th Session, decided that while it was not proper to discuss the merits of rival candidates, there was nothing in the Constitution or By-laws to prevent the discussion of Prohibition, in all its phases.

Lecturers' Department.

Superintendent of the lecture force, Geo. B. Katzenstein, Sacramento, to whom all communications concerning Grand Lecturers and lecture work should be addressed.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of California, are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst and Col. C. N. Goulding.

The Executive Committee have ordered: "That no person be permitted to take collections in the name of the Order within the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of California, except the elective Grand Lodge Officers, the Grand Lecturers, duly commissioned thereto, or persons especially authorized so to do.

That all collections taken in the name of the Order shall become the funds of the Grand Lodge, and must be paid into its treasury."

The labors of the yearhave commenced. Monday, 16th, visited Life Boat Lodge; made a few remarks, knowing the time would be muchbetter occupied by Sisters Guthrie and Stevens. Tuesday, 17th, left for Rio Vista at 4 P. M., and arrived at the miserable hour of 2 A. M.; found that "Pride of the River" Lodge was holding its own and would live. No danger of a lodge surrendering its charter that has such members as Bros. Carter, Baker, Chase and Williams, and it is pleasant to know that the Champions and Good Templars are working together in harmony (at present building a hall for their use).

——I lectured Wednesday and Friday evenings, giving up the time Thursday evening to Bro. Dinsmore, for Prohibition. The last meeting (Friday) was the largest of the three, and will, I think, be of benefit to the order. A drunken saloon-keeper endeavored to break up the meetings on Thursday and Friday, but failed to do so. His presence and actions at the meeting, disgusted all lovers of good order and decency, and was denounced by the more respectable saloon-keepers of Rio Vista.

I trust the Lodge may receive additions to its members, and if it can be arranged; I will lecture in Rio Vista on the 6th of November: I go to Bird's Landing, then Bro. Frazer takes charge of me until election.

WHEATLAND, Yuba Co., Oct. 21.

A visit to the Modesto Band of Hope, found it doing well under the Presidency of Sister Love, formerly of Pictou, Ontario. At night a large meeting was held in the M. E. Church, and much euthusiasm manifested. Many there are ripe for Prohibition.

At Pleasant Grove, we found the old workers, Brother and Sister Ewing, and Brother and Sister Pearce, still unwilling to "give up the ship," and organized them with others into a Lodge of thirty-two charter members. New Defiance Lodge starts out bidding defiance to the traffic, and all its influences, and contains many who are strong supporters of the entire prohibition of the Liquor Traffic.

The new W. V. T., Sister Annabel Gilkey, principal of the Public School, will prove a valuable acquisition to our glorious cause and noble Order. She is doing good work in her School. We should like to mention many names, but space will not permit. We are under many obligations to several, and hope hereafter they will receive an exceeding rich reward, beside nothing but pleasure and real enjoyment on this earth, while fighting so nobly for the good of mankind in their community, and wherever else they find opportunity.

A Prohibition Mass meeting for ratification, was held here by Wm. G. Murphy, of Marysville a few nights ago—Wheatland, much euthusiasm existed, and many were pleased to see that our State is being aroused on this question.

Many members of the various churches, and of the Lodge at this place, and other temperance people turned out in their individual capacity, and showed their thorough earnestness in the temperance work. An euthusiastic worker is found in this community, in the person of Brother Logan, pastor of the "Christian Church" in Wheatland.

The Republicans of this (Yuba) County, have nominated our old and faithful P. W. C. T., Bro. John Landis, as candidate for the Assembly.

To-night, I go to Elizabeth.

HAYWARDS. Rev. Mr. Cummings and Judge Russell made excellent addresses before the Temperance Union on Sunday evening. Much enthusiasm was manifested in favor of the P. H. P. ticket. Judge Russell made a splendid address and contrary to the custom of prophets in their own homes, he was tremendously applauded. That Dr. Cummings made a deep impression upon his hearers was a matter of course.

SALINAS. Mrs. Stevens and Judge Russell found Pacific Hall crowded with a band in full play awaiting their arrival on Friday evening last. Dr. E. K. Abbott presided with his usual ability, and introduced the speakers in a few most appropriate remarks. Judge Russell opened with a history of our efforts to enlist the Republican party in the interests of morality and of the chain of circumstances which drove us into a third party. He eloquently described from his own observation the results of prohibition in his native Maine and other places where it prevails, contrasted the proceedings of the Republican and the Prohibition Conventions, the former deriving their inspiration from the whisky bottle and the latter from prayer, at the opening and closing of their sessions. His remarks were warmly applauded.

Mrs. Stevens was rapturously welcomed and as soon as permitted, strongly presented the necessity of immediate action and of adopting the Methodist doctrine of "now is the accepted time" to make vigorous head against the daring assaults of the iniquitous liquor traffic upon our homes and lives. Her allusion to the fraction of professors of religion who tell us now is not the accepted time to put a stop to the ravages of rum, and an appeal to all lovers of right and country and home to rise superior to the fallacies used to divert them from the path of duty, and vote our ticket, was received with vociferous applause. Dr. McDonald's career as a benefactor and helper of the children and of the cause of temperance was pleasantly alluded to. The mothers, fathers, and all good citizens were warmly invited to vote our ticket. A show of hands being asked in favor of each of the parties, brot a large number for the Prohibitionist, two or three for the Republicans and a few for the Democrats. Three rousing cheers for Dr. McDonald and the ticket closed a most enthusiastic meeting of the best citizens of Salinas.

WATSONVILLE. Col. Geo. Babcock addressed a Prohibition Home Protection meeting at Watsonville on Friday evening last. The meeting was well attended, Col. Babcock, aroused the utmost enthusiasm in one of his able and masterly indictments of the Leag of Freedom arraining it before the Grand Jury of history and presenting the Prohibition platform and ticket for their thoughtful investigation and endorsement.

Att'y. Gen. Hart and Col. Gregg held a Republican ratification meeting in the same hall a few evenings previously. The former spoke about an hour and a half to a small audience, one-half of them leaving before he closed. Col. Gregg followed and talked one-half the remainder out and concluded his address thus: "I hope to visit you again and talk to you, when the subject and the audience have not been talked to death." (Evidently there were moving speakers on hand.) The audience addressed by Col. Babcock was larger in numbers and continued to increase to the last during his oration of one and a half hours.

FATHER WAUGH.—I have been to Two Rocks, Bloomfield, Valley Ford, Bodega, and Healdsburg, quietly among the better and influential citizens, and I tell you the great prohibition tide is rising, even in old Sonoma.

At the P. H. P. convention on Saturday, perfect harmony prevailed, but time being so short it was agreed that no county ticket would now be properly put into the field. But as there are some good men on all the other tickets, judicious selections will be voted for.

In the evening in Santa Rosa, the demonstration was most lively and encouraging.

At the Ridgeway hall the scene was lively—the citizens crowding up for seats as the band discoursed inviting music; the coming speakers being a little late with the train, Rev. Mr. Dinsmore interested the waiting audience by first reading the platform, and then in a most eaanest and telling speech.

Col Babcock then aroused and startled the audience by his incontrovertible, statistical and practical facts, connected with the liquor traffic. But under Mrs. Stevens' heart-felt, tender, powerful appeals for the needed prohibition help in rescuing our people and especially the youth of the land from the curse of strong drinks. The audience became wonderfully enthusiastic, and when three cheers were called for Dr. R. H. McDonald and the ticket, it seemed that the entire assemblage were on their feet, Democrats and Republicans, women and children, and the cheers went up for Dr. R. H. McDonald and the ticket in a whoop and a call for a tiger.

Let all good people take courage, and God speed the right.

LORENZO WAUGH.

SANTA ROSA, Oct. 23rd, 1882.

P. S. It seems the Southern Methodists are really going not to "scratch," but to drop the Terry platform and ticket, as tho they were burning coals. L. W.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO.—Col. Babcock spoke at Myrtle Hall on Monday evening, at a well attended meeting, composed of an excellent class of citizens. Audience composed of nearly equal proportions of ladies and gentlemen. The Colonel's speech occupied nearly an hour, was well received, created much enthusiasm, and was greeted with a rising vote of cordial thanks. Many of those present stated, at the conclusion of the meeting, their determination to vote and work for the strait prohibition ticket. Col. Babcock speaks again at Haywards on Sunday evening, and Judge Russell and Mrs. Stevens will same evening address the citizens of San Leandro.

SPEAKERS.—There are 12 speakers now engaged by the P. H. P. Committee in the field every evening. In addition there are five in the southern extreme of the State, and 13 in Tulare and Kern counties engaged there by the Christian Alliance and Good Templars.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died in Lorenzo, Santa Cruz county, Cal., October 9th, 1882, Mrs. Emily W. Kelly, aged 50 years, 11 months, 28 days. She was a member of Pacific Lodge, No. 392, and an earnest and truthful worker in the cause of temperance.

The Lodge passed resolutions expressing the deepest sorrow in the loss of its devoted member and tendering its sympathies to the bereaved husband and sons of the deceased.

Died, October 7, 1882. Near Prairie School-house Yuba Co., Sister Alice Nellis, after long and severe suffering, aged 22 years 11 months, and 24 days. Sister Alice, daughter of G. Cuddeback, and wife of William Nellis, was a member of Prairie Lodge No 423. An active temperance worker, and an earnest and devoted christian, her loss is deeply felt by all. Of gentle manner, and sympathizing heart, she was loved by all who knew her.

We borrow not as those without hope, for we know she now wears a starry crown, and a "beautiful white robe;" that when our earthly life is ended, we will meet her among the shining throng, just over the dark, rolling river, where parting never comes.

"Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When the day of life is fled,
Then, in heaven, with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, in this jurisdiction, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

THE PERSONAL LIBERTY LEAG.

"MILWAUKEE, October 19.—The Executive Committee of the National Liquor Dealers' and Brewers' Association, now known as the Personal Liberty League of America, has elected the following officers: President, Emil Shandier of Milwaukee; Vice-President, Guido Hansen of Milwaukee; Treasurer, Leobold Ballenberg of Peoria; Secretary, Paul Schuster of Chicago; Attorney, Harry Ruben of Chicago. A plan for the organization of the Leag was adopted. An agitator is to be sent to each State to organize local district leagues, which will be governed by the central State organizatlon, and the latter to appoint delegates which will compose the National Association. This body will be the executive. The Executive Committee of the League to-night substituted N. Faulk of Milwaukee as President, vice Schandier, who resigned on account of poor health. The brewers of this city each pledged $1,000 toward an active campaign fund, a total of $14,000 being guaranteed."—Press.

That Liberty leag is an association of heartless, wicked villains, who are engaged in manufacturing good citizens into idlers, loafers, gamblers, drunkards, thieves, ruffians, murderers. Teaching little boys to smoke, drink, swear, gamble, lie, steal. Their business, as they call it, destroys homes; makes men beat their wives and rob and starve their children; turns out ragged children on the street to beg and steal; sends men and women and boys and girls to jail; keeps two penitentiaries and two State insane asylums, numerous county and city jails, poorhouses and hospitals in this State crowded with the wrecks of men, women and children whom they have ruined and blasted and robbed and crazed with the accursed poisons which they have dealt out to them.

And these most cruel and bloody pirates and most relentless murderers the world has ever known call themselves "The Personal Liberty Leag." They want liberty to be thieves and murderers and woman-beaters and children-robbers by law. They want to be licensed and pay the Government $20 or $30 a year for doing a damage of more than $1,000 each to hundreds of people, for ruining hundreds of families.

They want liberty to coax the smartest and best of the boys to drink and then to become vile and wicked criminals: to train them to be loafers, cheats, thieves and fit them for the penitentiary: to fill our morning papers with a horrid string of crimes, murders, suicides and sudden whisky deaths: to fill the land with mourning and to make our lives and homes all the time insecure.

The crimes, cruelties, murders, suicides, fights, cuttings, which we hear of every day, are the work of these scoundrels that have come here from Europe to deluge our land with blood. When their own decent, respectable countrymen came here, they followed with them. What for? to help them and us to build up happy homes in this beautiful land of the new world? Not at all. They came with their honest countrymen, to rob them and us: to steal their earnings and ours, day by day: to make bad citizens and paupers of all their own countrymen and ours whom they could entice and entrap in their dens of infamy and nastiness.

But their race is now going to be short. They are going to agitate in all the States for liberty to rob and kill. They are going to make a national fight to crown beer and whisky and drunkenness as the gods of this nation. And they will be beaten terribly. When they are destroyed our prison doors will soon be wide open, for we dont need prisons for anything but to store the manufactured products of the dramshop and brewery. Our police and criminal courts will be idle, as soon as the fruits of the beer shop are reformed from their evil lives.

Then we shall have peace. No more drunken fathers and drunken mothers. No more hungry, shivering, pale, haggard children starved by the rum fiends. No more homes turned into hells by the beer jug. No more crimes and murders in the newspapers. No more woe and starvation and raggedness in this most bountiful and plenteous of all lands. All these things which are the fruit of the dramshop will be buried forever with it, when we vote to outlaw and destroy this most devilish of all the crimes that have ever defaced the earth. Then we shall have "personal liberty" to be happy, and our people will be ready and willing to set out one and all, to fulfil the grand purpose of our existence, to make this world the Kingdom of our God.

What a glorious country this will be when the devil and his angels, which deceive the whole world, shall be cast out. Meantime, while we should treat every one of our fellow men with utmost kindness and charity, let us all pray to be able, so long as we live, to abhor, despise and hate wrong, crime, cruelty, injustice, and hypocrisy a little more in the evening than we did in the morning, and a little more in the morning than we did last evening. And let us pray to hate rum and beer and wine and this devil in all its shapes, a little more heartily every morning and evening, till we shall see it utterly and forever destroyed and buried, to be only remembered as the vilest of all the monstrous horrors of evil history.

A PLEA FOR THE CHILDREN.

"Do you hear the children weeping O, my brothers;
Weeping ere the sorrow comes with years?
They are leaning their young heads against their mothers,
And that cannot stop their tears.

The young lambs are bleating in the meadows,
The young birds are chirping in their nests,
The young fawns are playing with the shadows,
The young flowers are blowing toward the west;

But the young, young children, O my brothers,
They are weeping bitterly!
They are weeping in the playtime of the others,
In the country of the free."

One of the most deplorable phases of the drink evil is its blighting effect on helpless childhood. It has often been said that drink will not hurt those who let it alone. How utterly false! A careful estimation has shown that four innocent lives are made wretched thru the intemperance of each drunkard. Half of this number are children. Could we but summon together the small victims of the unholy traffic in this country alone—"the country of the free," what a mournful army would present itself. Two million of God's little people hollow eyed and gaunt with hunger,—Many bearing within them germs of drunkenness, and criminal propensities inherited from vicious parents—some showing hideous bruises inflicted by the inhuman father or mother, while in the frenzy of the drink madness—others leering in hopeless idiocy induced by the same causes, and all miserable alike. Truly the good angels might draw near and weep over this sad spectacle. It was only the other morning in passing along the street, I saw a woman sitting upon a door-step—intoxicated. The hurrying crowd went by, but she sat in dull leaden-eyed indifference, and in her arms a little babe,—a blighted bud, which the destroyer had already marked for his own. Another little life was ushered in at the City Receiving Hospital last week, while the mother who had been but a few hours before taken from the gutter in an insensible condition, was yet too drunk to heed its first pitiful cries.

These are not isolated cases—not tragic inventions employed to point a moral; they are pitiable truths. Every where the children "are leaning their young heads against their mothers, and that cannot stop their tears."

"Of such are the kingdom of Heaven," said the Divine Friend of Children long ago. Daily from thousands of Christian homes goes up the prayer, "Thy Kingdom Come," and lo! God's beautiful Kingdom is around us always.

But the trail of the serpent is over all; each year the kingdom is ravaged and its beautiful places laid waste, and Our Father which is in Heaven is displeased because of the destruction of His little ones.

Their blood has become a stench in his nostrils, and he has hidden his face in anger. Vainly do his ministers cry "How long O Lord, how long." From down the ringing corridors of time there come the echoes of a voice saying, "why cry ye unto me; speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." Will His people heed the voice. Let the Church array itself boldly against the deadliest enemy of childhood, the dram-shop,—and moving forward in mighty phalanx, bearing the banner of the Cross inwoven with the banner of Prohibition, strike at the root of childhoods miseries, and the pall will drop from many a darkened life, and his little ones shall be led forth with joy into the undimmed sunshine of His perfect love.

SAN FRANCISCO Oct. 17.

PREPARING THE VICTIMS.

THE CHRISTIAN AND TEMPERANCE QUESTION, BY PROF. GEO. E. FOSTER.

The saddest thing in the legalized liquor traffic is this: that it prepares its own victims. If the saloon found men who demanded drink, and supplied these only, it would not be so terrible. But it knows well that if it did only this, its patronage would cease, as it sets itself with cool and bloodless cunning to prepare men to like liquor and demand it. How?

1. By transmitting to unborn children, through the medium of drunken parents, a passion and appetite for strong drink. Science to-day utters no more awful warning than when it asserts that the craving for alcoholic liquors is handed down in innumerable instances from parent to child. So the child is mortgaged in advance to the traffic.

2. By schooling children who have no appetite for drink and teaching them to have a desire for it. This is done by flaunting temptation before the eyes of the child from his early infancy. As he toddles along the streets his eyes catch the gaudy saloons, tempting bottles and eager throngs. As he goes to and from school he is challenged at every turn by the attractions of the saloon. Ball, billiards, lights and music are all brought in to entice and allure the children. Light drinks are offered, and these, it is well known, contain the alcohol which will set the appetite. Cards and companions are always at the saloons to keep and bring again those once attracted. And so out of the sober babe, the tippling boy and the drunken youth are surely made.

6. By stripping, through drunken parents, home of all its restraints and love and attractions and then throwing the young children inevitably into the toils of the saloons.

4. By fostering and producing ignorance which, combined with idleness, gives the traffic its most chosen field.

How can we best prevent this educating power of the saloon?

A CHILD'S QUESTIONS.

BY PAUL PROX.

"Papa, what is a Prohibitionist?"

"A person who tries to make the people drink more whisky."

"How do Prohibitionists make men drink more whisky?"

"By passing a senseless law against making and selling intoxicating drinks."

"How does this law lead men to drink?"

"Because they will not obey it, my son."

"Is it good to drink intoxicating liquors, papa?"

"No, my son. I hope you will never drink them."

"What do men make them for?"

"Well chiefly for drinking."

"If it is bad to drink them is it right to make them?"

"My son you do not understand these things.

"No, I do not. But papa, would not good people obey the law?"

Oh! yes, but there are very many bad people."

"Do the bad people obey any law?"

"Well, no; I am afraid they do not willingly."

"Is there a law against stealing?"

"Certainly, my son."

"Does it make men steal?"

"My son, I think it is time for you to go to bed."

IS THERE DANGER? You are thinkiug like silly idiots, when you say there is no danger in the cup. I know from the blood of five generations of cider-drinking ancestors in my veins, the danger there is in this thing. There is not a scent of liquor that is not pleasant to me, that would not be a precious drop on my tongue. Look at me? Do I look like a man easy to be overcome by temptation? Do you know my life? Go back and learn it, and see what I have suffered, and yet I say to you, with this background of evidence I declare to you, as I value my manhood, and my standing, and my soul, I would not dare to drink for three weeks a glass of liquor a day. That chasm yawns at your feet, at my feet. Those who say there is no danger in the first glass of liquor, do not recognize the perils of hereditary weakness.—W. H. H. Murray.

OUT IN THE COLD.

Out of a rum-shop on a dreary night,
Reeled a husband and father in pitiful plight;
His face was haggard, his garments were thin,
And his soul was scorched with the fires of sin;
Weary and hungry his children sat down
To wait his return from the distant town;
In helpless silence, in grief untold,
They wait for father out in the cold,
Out in the cold.

Out of the bar-room into the cold,
Money all gone and manhood sold,
The poor man, wasted and worn with sin,
Breasted the storm with quivering chin,
Only the storm, with its spectres, was out,
And the eddying snow that went whirling about;
Thousands were happy in the home-fold,
Nor thought of the drunkard out in the cold,
Out in the cold.

The rumseller sat by his fire that night,
Smoking his pipe by his warm firelight,
And he clapped his hands in rolicking glee;
"The wind and the storm are nothing to me;
I've plenty of coal in my cellar," said he;
"My children are hearty, and warm, and well fed;"
But his children were warmed by the poor man's gold—
Only the winds heard those moans in the cold,
Out in the cold.

And when the morn broke, in the twilight gray,
In a white sheet of snow the poor man lay,
And this was the verdict the coroner gave:
"Frozen to death, and no one to save."
The wife and the children wept alone,
But the traffic is king and sits on a throne,
And who are the young and who are the old,
That next may go forth to die in the cold?
Out in the cold.

A STORY FROM THE PULPIT.

One of the clergymen of this city yesterday gained the undivided attention of his congregation by the relation of a little story with a temperance moral. He said that on Saturday night he was called to visit a sick person. On his way, at a very public corner, he encountered a woman whose appearance was familiar. She was drunk—at least her behavior led him to that conclusion. To test his suspicion he paused and observed her as she staggered down a side street. At the same moment a man came out of a corner saloon and started in pursuit of her. The minister, now convinced of the identity of the woman, determined to watch and, if need be, protect her. Before one of the low-grade streets was reached the man had overtaken the woman and was walking by her side. The clergyman soon overtook them, and, stopping the couple, asked where they were going. The man replied that he was taking the woman home. "I know this lady," said the preacher, "and I will escort her." The stranger, with evident embarrasment, muttered an apology and turned away. The clergyman took the intoxicated woman home, who was met at her door by her mother, and the assistance of both were needed to help her to her room, where one of her children lay suffering in a severe sickness. "That woman," said the preacher, "was once an honored member of this church." He deemed it his duty to speak to her husband, painful as it might be, and asked for him. He was told that he was in a lower room. Proceeding there, to his astonishment he found the husband and father sitting at a table, even more beastly drunk than his wife. Completely disgusted and shocked beyond measure, the clergyman left the house. "That man," said he "not long since was an honored member of this church."—Sacramento Record Union.

The question is asked in all kindness of that minister, did he when those two estrays from the fold were in membership with his church, warn his congregation with due frequency and earnestness against the great enemy, which a thousand times more than any other, lies in wait around our churches and our homes to decoy the unwary to sin and shame and death. If he did, the sequel serves to indicate the tremendous power of that enemy of souls, that makes captures even in the midst of a well-guarded fold—and it calls for redoubled vigilance to resist the destroyer. If he did not sound the alarm, when he daily saw the sword, not coming, but here all around, above, beneath, in the midst of his people, the call is now loud for him to redeem the time and see that no future instance of a similar nature shall upbraid him with a failure to comprehend his responsibilities or to fulfil the duties of a faithful shepherd. Surely he will not vote in future with the parties that have declared for free rum and free Sunday desecration; who proclaim that Bacchus not God, shall be the God of this state.

THE Examiner thinks the open honest course of the prohibitionists is in marked contrast with the sneaking course of the Republicans in the matter of the Sunday law.

BIBLE WINES.

John Ellis, M. D., of New York, in his book on the Wine Question, quotes Dr. S. M. Isaacs, an eminent Jewish rabbi of this city, as saying: "In the Holy Land they do not commonly use fermented wines. The best wines are preserved sweet and unfermented."

In refererence to their customs at their religious festivals, he repeatedly and emphatically says: "The Jews do not, in their feasts for sacred purposes, including the marriage feast, ever use any kind of fermented drinks. In their oblations and libations, both private and public, they employ the fruit of the vine—that is, fresh grapes—unfermented grape juice, and raisins, as the symbol of benediction. Fermentation is to them always a symbol of corruption, as in nature and science, it is itself decay, rottenness."

Mr. Ellis also says: "We have abundant evidence that the wine of the Passover was unfermented. First: This is seen in the name which our Savior gave to the contents of the Passover cup. Neither he nor his apostles, in speaking of this element in the sacramental emblems, call it wine at all. Our Saviour forsaw how, in after ages, the term wine would generally be understood to mean that which was fermented and intoxicating, and, therefore, wholly inappropriate as a symbol of his precious blood. and to guard the church against this danger, he employs a term which, in all ages, and languages could not be misunderstood'—'the fruit of the vine.' This term truly describes the new sweet unfermented wine which God himself creates in a cluster, and which he pronounces a blessing (Isa. 65;8), like the oil and the bread with which it is associated as an article of diet. This was, indeed, a good creature of God, and to be received with thanksgiving. But when God's wine has been, by man's invention, subjected to a chemical process, and becomes fermented, it is no longer the fruit of the vine, but another substance altogether; it has been changed in its essential principles, and is now a poisonous compound of alcohol and carbonic acid. Its sugar and gluten which were in the fruit of the vine, both of which are nutritious and help to build up and repair the waste of our bodies, are now, by fermentation, converted into alcoholic poison.—S. S. Worker.

FRANCE.

The French Government have been publishing a report on the increase of crime in France. The facts concerning that evil are causing grave alarm to the friends of morality and social order in that country. The increase is strikingly apparent in crimes of violence, and the circumstances that 75 per cent of the criminals are fairly educated (in the popular sense), is giving the death-blow to the theory that education, of an intellectual kind, will quickly diminish crime, as long as direct provocatives to it are permitted to exist. In the Times article, dealing with this important document, no reference is made to the great increase in the consumption of alcoholic liquors as a cause of this development of crime; but it is a cause, and a leading cause, of this dangerous social condition. Cheap Wines are not making France sober, and laws against drunkenness are not able to counteract the effects of what is virtually free trade in intoxicating drinks. Alcohol in many guises—even in the green dress of the terrible absinthe is omnipresent in all the great centres of population in France; and to suppose that Frenchmen are less susceptible to its deceptive and deadly influence that Englishmen is a fallacy which the fact is grinding to powder. That life in the communes or rural districts is becoming more vitiated by the alcoholic miasma, is a fact of dire significance. If France is to be saved from still severer sufferings from this source, she must carry out the principles of the Temperance reform at once. Nothing else will suffice —Alliance News.

France is surely following in the footsteps of the other wine countries; they had not the industry, energy and economy which has been a distinguishing characteristic of the French people. Consequently wine and the drunkenness, profligacy, crime and pauperism which has always come with wine, and are its natural co-partners, found it an easy task to beggar and barbarize them.

As has been several times shown in the RESCUE, France has presented a stubborn resistance to the ruinous, pauperizing influences of that miserable business. Its people more than any other in the world have been trained to economise and hoard for ages past. Their habits of industry are unexcelled, perhaps unequaled in the whole world. They are an active and capable people in every respect. Their manufactures are in most cases the best, and most reliable of any, their frauds of course, in wine and brandy excepted. There are no other people so intensely patriotic; none who so constantly use their means and conduct their commerce in all things, from a cent to a million, so as to give France and the French people the benefit at all times.

Such people are able to withstand terrible assaults upon their finances. France has had wars and military and naval disasters enough in the last century, to have utterly ruined any other country of Europe, but it exists in spite of these misfortunes, and the assaults of the curse of drunkenness. But in the last 50 years there has been a terrible increase of drunkenness, crime, insanity, pauperism, a shortening of life, a reduction of physical stature and a sad deterioration of physical health and stamina. And further moral decadence is scarcely possible.

And this ruin of one of the finest of earth's races is entirely due to the prostitution of its grapes and fruits to the creation of drunkenness. The consumption of all of its own wine and brandy, save a most insignificant portion of beet and potato, and turnip juice compounds exported, is of necessity a tremendous pauperizer. If these drinks were entirely harmless, they would be entirely pauperizing, because they are of no more use than firecrackers and all the land and labor expended on them is wasted utterly.

The wine apostles of this State argued most conclusively the pauperizing effect of the wine business, when they proclaimed that France would buy from us now if we could supply it, 100 million gallons of wine a year, after having been so long engaged in the traffic, that a thousand million gallons of her own make, is not enough for home consumption.

They were very blind to hold out to this State the prospect of importing wine and brandy and rum by the 100 million gallons, after having devoted all our own vineyards to the wine vat, and filled the State with drunkards. The people of France too are excessive drinkers of the most fiery brandy and of absinthe, the most crazing and deadly of all the satanic alcoholic mixtures.

The wine and brandy interest of California has already produced a harvest of intemperance, demoralization, vice, corruption, insanity, ruin and untimely death, more than enough to condem it forever, were it a financially enriching business. Much more so when to the moral and physical ruin it has wrot, wherever it has made its poisonous trail, it has been the pauperizer and destroyer of nations beyond any other curse or plague that has ever visited the earth.

THE TEMPLAR ADVOCATE, official Organ of the G. L. of South Africa, an 8 page monthly, with advertising cover is published at Dutoitspan S. A. A copy that of August 1 1882 has been received and the visitor from afar is kindly welcomed. There are two features of it unusual; one-half the paper is Dutch and altho there is a prejudice among that class to be overcome, it appears that the Good Templars are capturing them pretty fast. The price of the paper is $1.50 a year; at the same rate the RESCUE would be about $12 a year which at its present circulation would be a living business. Bands of Hope are being organized and the Lodges are reported as in active conflict with the great common enemy of mankind.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR is reported as having a superstitious impression that he will not live to the end of his term. If he would abjure the mocker, alcohol, keep good hours, and live temperately in all respects, he would not only increase his chances for outliving his term, but he would absolutely assure an important addition to the years of his life, unless accident or violence should anticipate the course of nature.

A CAMPAIGN SONG.

BY J. A. OF OROVILLE.

Tune, "Shall we gather at the River?"

Let us rally round the Standard,
Of the Prohibitionists;
With its principles of safeguard,
And our country's interests.

CHORUS.—
Yes! we'll gather round the Standard,
And each on the voting day,
Will see that our country's guarded
From the drinks destructive sway.

On the Platform of this Party,
Rally for the coming fray;
Be courageous, strong and hearty,
Then you're sure to win the day.
Yes, etc.

Ere we reach the final vict'ry,
We shall have some work to do;
Buckle on your armor sprightly,
With a willing heart and true.
Yes, etc.

Soon the battle will be over.
Right and justice must succeed;
For the Lord's our present helper,
Giving strength in time of need.
Yes, etc.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

TWO KINDS OF WAR.

John Bright, the honored champion of peace, liberty, good morals, temperance, justice, the philanthropist, the friend of all good and righteous reforms, recently resigned from the cabinet ministry of his country, because he could not consent under any conditions to sit in a cabinet that would go to war with the Egyptians for any cause.

It is not proposed to find any fault with him for this action, but it does seem that he was inconsistent in sitting for years as a member of a government that has licensed all along a class of cruel and unscrupulous men to carry on a savage and bloody war against its own people, torturing, plundering, slaying men, women, and children; carrying fire and sword and pestilence, not only into the ranks of the living, but sending down into the life currents of future generations, a blasting leprous taint of insanity, depraved appetite, tendency to crime and violence and physical diseases without number.

The war waged by the English government upon its own English people and especially upon its own helpless women and children, exceeds in atrocity and cruelty and wickedness the war against Arabi Bey. The torture and slauter of 120,000 of their own people every year and the recruiting from the ranks of the innocent every year an equal number to enlist them in a life of sin and shame and misery, to take their places in turn in the ranks of the slain—is a very different thing from fitting out a fleet and mercifully shooting or sabring a thousand or two of ignorant, degraded, enslaved Egyptians.

The war of the dram-shop waged by England against her own children is therefore as much more destructive to life than the Egyptian war, as 120,000 multiplied by a long series of years, is greater than 1,000 or 2,000 not multiplied at all.

It is as much more cruel as a five to ten years torture preceding a horrible death, is more cruel than an instantaneous and comparatively painless murder. The motive of the one, being a few pieces of silver blood money, for the sale of the victims for human sacrifice, so far transcends in meanness and criminality the motives of the other, that our language furnishes no mode of expression that could accurately frame a comparison.

Mr. Bright has calmly seen at his own door this murderous war upon his own people; has never raised any clamor about it, beyond addressing a good deal of kindly moral suasion to the enchained captives of the kidnappers, advising them to break their chains just before they reach the goal of the doom to which they are being helplessly dragged. But when other advocates of temperance advised the withdrawal of Government protection from the marauding privates, he for many years resisted prohibition as an unwarranted restriction of men's liberty (to rob and murder.)

He has never, since his conversion to the doctrine of prohibition, taken any active steps to stop this horrible war, when his active help would have been of the most supreme importance to the welfare of the nation, and when such help as he could have rendered to Sir Wilfrid Lawson, England's greatest hero and greatest prophet of this generation, has been so much needed.

In this thing if we condem Mr. Bright as inconsistent, we must affix an equal stigma to the great mass of the worthiest and best men everywhere, with but a few rare exceptions. Men are so much the helpless creatures of habit and fashion, that only a rare few can be persuaded that anything is wrong which they have always done or seen others do. And only a few of that latter few can be persuaded to aid an effort to remove an established or tolerated wrong or crime.

All honor to Mr. Bright for his earnest, honest convictions so conscientiously declared as to the monstrous crime and cruelty and brutality of war. All honor to him for the good and virtuous example he has set thru his long and useful life, and for all that he has said and done in defence of human liberty and human rights. But now that the Egyptian conflict is ended, and in the interim that may precede another of England's very frequent foreign wars, it is to be hoped that Mr. Bright may raise his his voice against this thousand times more savage, cruel, sinful, and entirely unprovoked and inexcusable war, which is waged against the innocent and helpless of his own people by their own Government.

ADVICE FROM THE ENEMY.

The Marysville Appeal, San Jose Mercury and many other journalistic attorneys of the Republican Beer, whisky and Machine boss Party, are taking a great deal of pains to make the Temperance people believe, that because they may not elect a prohibition ticket this time, the safest and most proper thing is to cast their unanimous ballot for the Leag of Fiendom candidates and "not" throw away their "vote."

These papers to be consistent, should tell the anti-debris people that they cannot expect to carry their ticket this time, so the very best thing they can do to protect their homes from being buried under six feet of stones and sand—is to vote into office, the heaviest gravel mining capitalists they can find in the State. They are the only hope for anti-debris legislation; if you don't go for them, you throw away your vote!!!

Anti-monopoly and anti-railroad men cannot win this time, till public opinion is educated, and the way to educate it is to vote for the most pronounced servants of monoply and railroad, don't throw away your vote trying to advocate your own cause. Give it to your enemies. That saves your vote!!!

Also the best way for the Estee, Neumann faction, as they are sure to be a total dead failure in the election of their ticket, should save their vote by casting it for Stoneman & Co., or the Prohibition Candidates, who are by no means sure to be defeated in this campaign.

The Appeal is anxious also to create the erronous impression that the Good Templars failed to endorse the anti-debris plank of the Prohibition Convention. This is not creditable to the Appeal. It is a fact that two or three delegates to the Grand Lodge were on the miners side, and offered an active resistance to any action with regard to voting our principles, but they were in a very small minority.

The Temperance voters, and sympathizers with prohibition have an idea that they themselves in their own Sober councils, if not in their own sober homes, can devise and formulate as good a code of political procedure, as wise a method of seeking the success of their great object, as could be evolved for their benefit by a conclave of a thousand whisky inspired politicians or by the most labored studies of a thousand editorial Solomons, whose wisdom fount receives its daily supplies from the reservoirs of intellect of the whisky leag that runs the two old parties.

Mr. English, one of the leading Whiskymocrats of Indiana, in a recent speech, warned the farmers that prohibition would ruin the market for the grain used to manufacture beer and whisky; and then passed to the next point of his discourse, in which, with the usual mendacious effrontery of the whisky advocates, he declared that wherever tried, prohibition had largely increased the use of intoxicating drinks.

M. M. ESTEE.

The Rescue has never descended to the meanness of defaming the private character or record of the candidates of the old parties, as the journals of those parties are constantly doing for each other. It is an act of special moral turpitude to try to injure the canvas of Gen. Stoneman by assailing his war record, when he was a brave and gallant defender of the Union—and accusing him of having had sometime a railroad pass—while the maligners are entirely silent as to the real and valid objections, which disqualify him for being Governor of the State—his being a brandy-maker and a declared enemy of Sunday observance and temperance; the most formidable and conclusive disabilities.

It is equally mean to assault Mr. Estee on his record as for or against railroads, Chinese and the New Constitution. A man might be an excellent governor who, five or ten years ago, was wrong on one or more of these points. It is miserable to do this and make no allusion to Mr. Estee's being a brandy maker, a patron of the saloons on Sunday, a trusted ally of the Leag of Fiendom and entirely committed to their interests.

But it is due to Mr. Estee to acquit him of the contemptible hypocrisy and double facedness, which some of his professed temperance allies claim for him. They have played the scurviest of all tricks in picturing him as a Sunday law apostle and such a champion of morality and good order as to have an incontestible vested right in the votes of all temperance men and good citizens.

A regard for the honest truth at all times and in all circumstances, compels a defence of Mr. Estee from a charge of hypocrisy or complicity with the hypocrisy and falsehood which have made these pretensions for him. Mr. Estee has never in any of his speeches made a statemant or used an expression that at all indicated that he is not a thoroly consistent and reliable ally of the Leag of Fiendom; never has said one word to indicate that he has the slightest intention or desire to arrest or prevent the sale of liquor on Sunday or any other day, nor have any of the Republican candidates done so.

Mr. Estee has been manly in this thing; he has never pretended any respect for consistent Sunday observance or temperance; he made his headquarters in this city at a grog-shop; same at Sacramento; in Marysville he aired his Sunday sentiments honestly by visiting the saloons on Sunday, with a crowd of his worshipers whose only idea of Heaven here or hereafter is that it is something to be taken in frequent stiff doses out of a bottle. Mr. Estee's tactics have all been in perfect accord with the whisky business, with which he bargained for his nomination with the Leag of Free beer and the people who intend Sunday to be used as the special opportunity of the liquor-sellers to sympathize with the workingmen and take charge of their week's wages.

The prohibitionists dont want to blacken Mr. Estee; it is to be hoped not a member of our new party will ever disgrace himself or tarnish his party or our great and honorable cause, by bringing an accusation against an opponent that is not strictly true. Let us never descend to the despicable level of the old party politicians who have all but legalized the traffic of inventing and circulating campane lies and infamies about each other. Let us at the start expel the first one we ever catch guilty of such an act, if we do ever find one.

We shall all be perfectly satisfied to accord to Messrs. Estee and Stoneman, the private virtues that are possible to men who manufacture brandy and wine; who drink these things and furnish them to others; who visit and patronize the dram-shops the greatest crime and curse of the age; and who are equally pledged to support the Leag of rumsellers in their warfare against the Homes of America—in their annual slauter of 3,000 people of this state—in their heartless, cruel robbery of the workingmen and the consignment of their wives and children to starvation, brutality and beggary—in their villainous trade of training the boys of this state to crime and the girls to shame and suicide.

We hold that the men of whom this is true, tho they in all other respects possess the wisdom of Solomon and all the virtues that could be allied with such a faith and practice, are entirely unfit to hold any official position whatever; that to vote for them, especially when a worthy and unobjectionable man is their opposing candidate, is an act, not only inconsistent with the profession of a Christian or an advocate of temperance, but in active hostility to patriotism and good citizenship.

Letters from Bro. Bateman and A. Baker came to hand just as the paper was made up. The former reports the liveliest successes in Butte, Sutter and Yuba Counties. The latter makes good promises for Rio Vista.

WHAT THE ARGONAUT SAYS.

The strength of the McDonald vote is variously estimated at from ten to thirty thousand. No one thinks it will be less than ten, while many enthusiastic temperance people place it beyond the larger figure. The reasons for this confidence are thus stated: There are twenty-two thousand Good Templars, of whom ten thousand seven hundred and fifty are adult male voters; in the other temperance organizations—"Home Protectionists," "Bands of Hope," "Christian Alliances, etc.—there are large numbers of earnest temperance men; the religious organizations, Protestant and Catholic, will contribute votes from conscientious convictions of religious duty; many who are not teetotalers or prohibitionists will encourage a movement which will, in their judgment, reduce their taxes; many who are tipplers unable to resist appetite for intoxicating drink, will vote for prohibition as an aid to reform; while many temperate drinkers are willing to aid a movement which will end in some rational mode of regulating and controlling the manufacture, sale, and use of alcoholic drink. There are large numbers of Republicans who are indifferent to the success of Mr. Estee because of his questionable relations toward the corporations, the debris, and Sunday-law questions; many who resent his former defections from the Republican party, and many who resent his questionable practices in securing his nomination, and are indignant toward him for his alliance with the Irish ward bosses who ran the machine in San Francisco from Peter Hopkins's barroom and the Mint Saloon. The temperance people, like all enthusiasts, have entered with zeal upon their first political campaign. They are perfecting local organizations in all counties of the State. They are calling mass meetings in every direction. They are establishing organs, sending out speakers, and scattering documents on every side. Money is abundant—abundant, because the class of people composing the temperance party demand no compensation for votes, and do not have to be rallied around a beer-barrel and whisky-keg. Doctor McDonald expects to get more votes than Mr. Estee, and James McM. Shafter will give Paul Neumann a lively contest in this district for Congress. * * * The defeat of Mr. Estee is now conceded by all intelligent politicians; and, while it may not be possible to elect McDonald, each vote cast for him is the expression at the ballo-box of an individual opinion in favor of substantial reform, and is a protest against the methods which Mr. Estee has used in advancing his political interests. Every vote cast for McDonald goes to lay the solid foundation of a new American party, that shall have the courage to make itself felt in the future. Thirty thousand votes cast for the temperance candidate this year will bring both parties to them. Both parties will ask their support, and both parties will bid for their votes the promise of healthful and needed legislation upon the alcoholic traffic.

Prayers don't win political victories. Providence is always with the heavy artillery and the quick-flying batteries. No gun kills that is not shotted. God helps those who help themselves. We write this in hopes to inspire Doctor McDonald, and every man on the Prohibition ticket, and every man who believes in the regulation of the alcoholic traffic, to put forth their best exertions. A national convention of alcoholic traffickers has just been held in Chicago. The League of Freedom in California is fighting like a black cat in a dark corner for the last of its nine worthless lives. The temperance people are fighting against organization, money, and party intrigue. They are fighting for the law under the banner of the law, for the valley farmer and his home against the gravel-sluicer, for the poor man's Sabbath and the Christian's day of worship against the greed of capital and the plottings of the alcoholic fiend, for property and its rights against the agrarian and communistic robber who would interfere with what he does not own, and the political adventurer who would steal that which he has not the genius or industry to honestly acquire. Let no man be ashamed of his candidacy or his cause, or for a moment indulge the idle thought that in voting for McDonald he is throwing away his vote. Let no temperance man undertake to set up his opinion that there is another and a better way, or a later and a better day, to strike this blow than now. Every vote is an added stone to the barricade over which the whisky army must fight its way. Let no preacher attempt to pray around his duty, for he can't fool St Peter with his quaker guns. If every temperance man will vote, he will be surprised at the result in November.

The time has come when the politician standing at the bar to drink his morning dram, the gentleman over his after-dinner wine, the property-owner who pays the taxes, and the farmer who grows grain to malt, corn to distill, and grapes to press, must consider all these things as politico-economical ones that well-ordered governments can no longer ignore. Another reason why "temperance" must be carried into politics is the fact that "whisky" is already in politics. The whisky-dealer, the saloon-keeper, the lager-vendes, and the distiller and brewer, have combined together under the inapt name of "League of Freedom" to rule the politics of this State. They run primaries, control conventions, dictate platforms, elect law-makers, choose judges and executive officers, and keep the industrious tax-paying and property-owning portion of the community at work to support them in idleness, and to maintain in prisons, asylums, poor-houses and hospitals, the criminals, paupers, and unfortunates whom by their infamous and criminal business they create. This is a good year to lay the foundations of a temperance party in California. It is an off-year in politics. Votes are not lost that are this year thrown away. It is a good year to vote for Doctor McDonald for Governor. It is a good year for a show of hands. When Governor Stanford first ran as a Republican candidate, he received less than twelve-thousand votes. Two years thereafter he was elected Governor by a majority over all other candidates. This is the year of roll-call, and if Doctor McDonald shall not be elected Governor of California, or Jackson Temple and Anson Bronson be made Judges of the Supreme Court, or James McM. Shafter be chosen as member of Congress from San Francisco District, and other most respectable gentlemen who are on the Prohibition ticket be not rewarded with office, no honest man will have to regret that he stood on an honest, manly platform, and by his vote protested against fraudulent and criminal practices at primary elections and in convention, and asserted himself as the champion of temperance reform.

YUBA AND SUTTER.

A convention met Oct 23rd at Marysville, nominated a Prohibition County Ticket, adopted the state P. H. P. platform in its entirety and passed the following;

Resolved, That we emphatically repudiate the assertion made by some professed friends of temperance, that the Prohibition movement is premature and that the general cause will be retarded by placing State and County tickets in the field at this time.

We believe that the time could never be more propitious for breaking loose from the old party affiliations, and repudiating those who have repudiated all the principles that we as Christian and temperance people hold as most sacred, and have evidently sought to conciliate the League of Freedom by nominations and by platform enunciations.

That we regard it as the imperative duty of every good citizen to lay aside all party preferences, and vote and work for our principles until those principles shall win.

The proceedings were harmonious and the convention enthusiastic. A minority were opposed at first to a strait ticket but gracefully yielded like good men to the sense of the majority, and the following excellent ticket is the result: (The Legislative nominations were left blank.)

For Sheriff	STILLMAN GRANT
For Treasurer	MARTIN KNOX
For Clerk	J. H. FLINT
For District Attorney	WM. G. MURPHY
For Recorder	T. J. RUMERY
For Assessor	S. D. WOOD
For Supt. of Schools	DR. S. J. S. ROGERS
For Public Administrator	W. O. ARMSTEAD
For Coroner	A. B. HOPKINS
For Surveyor	HIRAM FOLSOM

The Sutter County Convention endorsed the State platform and ticket, but made no county nominations. There are other gallant and noble workers in these two counties, but give us two men in every county like Bros. Covillaud and Graves and two ministers like Bros. Bateman and Featherstun to organize their voting power to teach temperance patriotism to the people, and to encourage the noble workers who are to be found in all our lodges everywhere in the State; and we can make short work of the Giant Crime of Crimes which threatens the country with ruin and desolation and whose great bulwarks of defence are the old Beerublican and Whiskimocratic parties of trickery and spoils.

THE Greenbacker of the 21st says: "Our office overlooks the backyard of some Italian wine-makers. During the intervals the men are not tramping out the juice with their feet, the small bare-foot fry from the surrounding alleys wash their feet in the mash." That is what they call blending the various flavors necessary to the production of a first class pure California wine. The odors from the feet add a crowning glory to the boquet, which science has hitherto expended the midnight oil in vain attempts to simulate. Those little "bare-foot fry" are benefactors to the lovers of good generous wine.

THE old parties are pledged to continue to license the dramshops to kill and rob and craze our people, to train the boys and girls for jailbirds. If Estee or Stoneman is elected, we shall have a chief of the whisky sellers to be our Governor for four years.

WITNESSES.

NEAL DOWS' letter in this paper should be read attentively. For years he has been kept busy replying to abominable falsehoods knowingly so published by servile, mercenary journals, in pay of the whisky conspirators. Not a single Maine man or resident in Maine, not one of the 650,000 inhabitants of Maine can be found who ever makes a statement that prohibition is a failure there; not one has ever denied or disputed a word of the truths that Neal Dow, J. G. Blaine, Governor Dingley, and all the respectable voices of Maine have all along been solemnly declaring. Another confirmation of these truths has just come to hand; the Liquor Dealers' Conspiracy at Rock Island recently resolved "that prohibitory legislation has always been the cause of an increase of drunkenness and crime." That is the strongest evidence of all; evidence from the enemy. There may be men who would be so extreme in their prejudices as to dout or disbelieve Neal Dow and all the governors, congressmen, ministers, and Christians of the State of Maine; but no one can be found anywhere so innocently credulous and verdant as to believe that a convention of liquor sellers ever yet made a public declaration, respecting their business or the effects of prohibition, which they did not know and intend to be utterly false. Further we know that if they believed prohibition increased drunkenness, they would be trying to bribe every legislature in the Union to pass prohibitory laws, and thus increase their sales and build new penitentiaries and insane asylums everywhere.

A MINISTER writes from Sonoma Co.: "Prohibition is going up higher than the redwoods, deeper down than the saloons, and it spreads like the forest fires. Keep it spreading."

"FALL IN ! !"

ED. RESCUE.—I like the ring of things down that way of late. Can it be possible that the better class of people are at last getting their eyes open and becoming sensible to the mean bondage in which they have been held by those two magic words, Republican and Democratic? And will they really rise in their might, and break the shackles that have so long bound them to those criminal, bloody old parties, and be men, and vote their principles? I believe it. The long-hoped-for time has arrived. The last ray of hope for protection in and by those parties has faded—gone down in blood and tears. The Republican party, at the Sacramento Convention, made a fatal mistake in under-estimating the smouldering fires over which they were so carelessly tossing the inflamable contents of their gin bowls, and the reeking old party is dead, dead, DEAD, and being rapidly consumed by the flames of righteous indignation and true patriotism. Yes, the Republican party is dead, and the fight is now between the Prohibition and Democratic parties; and how can we fail of success, since we are immensely in the majority? Only one thing can defeat us, that is treason—the shots of our own men, Guiteau-like, "to save the Republican party"; weak, timid, selfish ones, who, while their convictions and consciences urge on to the promised land of Prohibition, may still be scenting back for the fleshpots of Republicanism and Democracy. I say we (feeling myself still one of you), are in the large majority, No one doubts that. Then, with that majority, for God, and home, and native land, let's win! LET'S WIN! Reader, my Prohibition brother, will your vote help to defeat the principle that you advocate and know to be the only principle of any moment before the people? The Democratic party has hoisted the banner of the rum God, sounded the battle cry against our cherished American civilization, and the Republican party has meanly died in a fit of cowardly treachery, and now each voter and worker must choose between Democracy and Prohibition. "Choose you this day." Where are you my brother?

T. J. ALLEY.

RIO VISTA, Oct. 15, 1882.

ED. RESCUE.—The time has arrived when every man who has the welfare of this State and the future of his little family at heart to step to the front, disregarding his past political life, and buckle on the armor of prohibition, and take a stand as his own conscience certainly dictates to him; let them only think for a moment what they will help to do; not only help to save a great State from the hands of the devil, but save thousands of men, women, and children from misery and want; would to God they could see as I do. On my return from the Grand Lodge a great many asked me if I thought the temperance people would vote for McDonald. I answered yes, for who among us could be so base hearted to show the coward when it comes to fight the devil with the ammunition of the ballot box. Let one of our citizens be thrown into a foreign prison and you will hear the cry from every corner, Why don't our Government interfere and turn him loose; here we have (70,000) going down to a drunkards' grave every year, and not one of our officers dare say a word; you don't hear the cry, why don't the Government interfere; no, the Government is run by the rum element with rum sellers at the head. How long is this going to last? You hear the cry for reform from every quarter; now they have a chance, let's see how many of these cryers will go to the front with a ticket headed McDonald and Prohibition, for that is the only way we will ever have reform. I see through the columns of the Call that Denis Kearny has picked up the banner of temperance and floats it from the sand-lot; God bless him. May he reap a golden harvest in the end. ALBERT F. BAKER.

SCOTLAND.—Some of the London papers are taking alarm at the increase of profligacy, and attribute it to the disgraceful plays imported from France and played in the English theaters. To this they attribute the lamentable fact that in the small population of Scotland, 10,000 illegitimate children were born in 1881. To attribute such things to French plays is as absurd as to charge them to the comet which appeared that year in the Southern Hemisphere. The people of Scotland are church members in larger proportion than in any other Protestant country; they are immensely rigid in Sabbath observance and in regular attendance at church. They have an unusual reverence for the Bible and daily worship of Scripture reading, sacred song and prayer is common in well regulated, respectable families.

But Scotland drinks an enormous amount of whisky, and the inevitable result in immorality and vice is apparent. The habitual victims of the dramshop abandon church and Sabbath and family teachings. Starving children learn to steal; drunken men and women are seen reeling in the streets on Sunday and every day. A picnic sets out in the morning with hundreds of good-looking young men from the factories with their sweet-hearts and wives, and they return in the evening staggering and drunken, male and female, and go to the theaters and deadfalls, to complete their day's drunken carouse. And until recently no warning voice was heard against the drink curse there.

No wonder that the most devout, most generally educated, most religious people of the Old World, being the largest whisky drinkers, should have the largest harvest of the fruits of drunkenness. And to attribute any but an insignificant fraction of the vice and crime of Scotland to anything but the drink plague, indicates an ignorance of positive self-evident noonday fact, that is so inexcusable as to border closely on the criminal.

STATESMANSHIP.

Whenever the temperance question shall be emancipated from the control of preachers and teetotalers, fanatics and fools, and turned over to statesmen and publicists, and practical, sensible men, who will consider it as the great question of political economy, the sooner it will make progress in a healthful and practical direction. We were more than pleased when the Prohibition Convention turned out its forty half-temperance parsons, and determined to let itself no longer be managed by people who pray one way and vote another, who think temperance a question to be considered at Wednesday evening prayer-meetings and not at the polls, and who prate of it as a moral and not a political question. It is no more a moral question—this one of regulating the alcohol traffic by law—than it is to prohibit crime by law. The man, woman, or parson who says that temperance ought not to be carried into politics, is no friend of the temperance cause. If we carry police and sanitary regulations into politics, why not the regulations of the alcohol traffic? We fear these hair-splitting and praying moralists, and question either their sincerity or their sense. The liquor traffic is the most important and the most serious question that to-day challenges the attention of government. It is the great evil of civilization, and it can be no longer ignored by the great political parties or monopolized by those who profess religion. The wicked outside world that takes a little "for the stomach's sake" offers itself as an ally in this temperance crusade, and if its services are not accepted, it will step to the front, and let the non-combatant moral suasionists retire behind their batteries of Quaker guns.—Argonaut.

There is much very wholesome truth in the above, but the idea of turning over the management of the temperance question to "Statesmen and publicists," not teetotalers, is unsound. There is no parallel elsewhere to the follies committed by statesmen, who have attempted to deal with the evils of the drink traffic. In England great statesmen supported by the press, undertook about fifty years ago to correct the evils of drunkenness. They opened beer houses all over the land, to induce men to drink diluted alcohol, in place of the stronger gin, and thus become sober orderly folks. But they vastly multiplied, and aggravated the evils they sought to mitigate. Altho the statesmen of England have acknowledged that the Beer act was a calamitous mistake, they have never done anything to remedy it.

Mr. Gladstone has said that the drink evil is worse than those of war, pestilence and famine combined, and he has for two years staved off every attempt to take any legislative step to mitigate or remove that giant crime. Whenever our Statesmen, not teetotalers have attempted to deal with this evil they have made such blunders as would have sent the whole temperance army to the Insane Asylums, had they been their authors. It is probably safe to say that not one statesman of 50 of this country not a total abstainer has any rational ideas at all about the evils of the liquor traffic or any desire to remove them.

And it is one of the most simple questions. All attempts to control, to keep under, to diminish drunkenness and crime by partial measures have been worse than useless. The teetotalers are unanimous in their method; they know that a mad dog, a fire, a pestilence, the whisky crime, cannot be controlled by law or kept under by permissive measures. There is only one way to manage any of these things, to extinguish them. Prohibition is the only remedy, anything else is nonsense and worse than waste of time. There is not a particle of reason why the infernal business of making or selling beer, wine or brandy, should be tolerated for a day. No reason why it should not be prohibited tomorrow, except that statesmen (politicians) and voters find liquor useful to buy votes; and they like the taste of it themselves and are therefore entirely disqualified from dealing rationally with it, if they desired to.

The religious people who profess to favor the suppression of drunkenness and crime, thru political parties in close alliance with the Leag of Fiendom and headed by rumsellers and drinkers are no more fitted to undertake temperance management then the politicians. There are just one class of men who are qualified to deal with the question and they are the teetotalers who have been engaged in laboring for prohibition for years; who have protested against every blunder made by politicians and who have narrowly watched the effects of the failures of others.

In fine there never was, never will be, but one rational mode of dealing with this question, and that is to treat the traffic just as we treat a mad dog; exterminate it instantly and absolutely and to that end use every force that is necessary to be effective.

COAL OIL.—Continental oil per case of 10 gals. $2.25; Starlight oil $2.65; fair burning oil $2.50 to $2.20—good time to lay in wintersupply. Order rom cash grocery, 519 Post St., S. F., Cal.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR-ROOM.

This beautiful story, by T. S. Arthur, is now published by D. C. Cook. It used to be $1.25 in ordinary binding. Now it can be had at the office of the RESCUE 40 copies for $1.00. All of it, with the illustrations in paper covers. Cheapest book ever out.

OPEN LODGES AND PUBLIC MEETINGS.

For distribution at public meetings or once a month the RESCUE will be sent to one address at $2.00 per 100, and in packages of 20 to 50 will be sent once a month for a year for 24 cents per copy or $4.80 for 20 copies a year. At this rate there is no paper published anywhere that is cheaper. It is suggested that lodges try this method of introducing temperance literature but the best plan is to get a weekly paper into the family by the year. Orders for lots of 50 or 100 should come a week in advance.

MUTUAL AID ASSOCIATION.

I. O. G. T. OF CAL.

Every Good Templar between ages of 20 and 60 eligible if medical examination passed.

Notice of assessment payable in 30 days.

Benefits payable within 60 days, 1st class, 60c; 2d, 75c; 3d, $1; 4th, $1.25; 5th, $1.60.

For further particulars apply to G. W. S., Sacramento.

No Lodge dues, rents, officers' salaries or banquets to pay for; nothing to pay but bare cost of insuring healthy, sober lives. Consequently, such institutions are the cheapest and safest in the world; ours has the least costly machinery of any. One old insurance company East has received in premiums 218 millions, and paid out for losses 57 millions, which is less than the company's receipts for interest on their customers money.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

UNIVERSITY OF THE PACIFIC,

Located midway between San Jose and Santa Clara, Cal.,

AND ACCESSIBLE BY STREET CARS FROM BOTH CITIES.

There are five regular courses of study, viz: 1. The Classical Course—Four years. 2. The Latin Scientific Course—Three years. 3. The Scientific Course—Three years. 4. The Conservatory of Music Course—Four years. 5 Commercial Course—One year.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC is designed to furnish the best facilities for acquiring a complete and thorough musical education.

A PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT is connected with the School, for the benefit of such as are not qualified to enter the College classes.

The COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT affords ample facilities for acquiring a thorough business education. It is remote from the temptations of a great city, and the course can be pursued in connection with the other branches of the College. In this way the expense is trifling compared with that of institutions devoted exclusively to business training.

WEEKLY LECTURES will be delivered before the entire School, by gentlemen selected for their attainments in Letters, Laws, Medicine, Theology and the different Sciences.

The YOUNG LADIES' BOARDING HALL, under the supervision of the Preceptress and an experienced Matron, offers a safe and pleasant home for young ladies from abroad. The terms to young ladies, by the year, for board, and tuition in all regular classes, are $250, payable semi-annually in advance.

Young gentlemen can obtain board in good, private families at reasonable rates.

A judicious supervision is exercised over the deportment and morals of all the students.

To young gentlemen or ladies desiring to pursue an Academic or Collegiate course, under wholesome moral influences, and to parents who are compelled to send their sons or daughters from home for education, the University of the Pacific offers great inducements.

PIERCE CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

FOR MALES AND FEMALES.

THE NEXT SESSION OF THIS PROSPEROUS AND GROWING INSTITUTION WILL OPEN on MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 4, 1882, and CLOSE on THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1883. This college was founded in 1874, for the co-education of both sexes, upon equal conditions of entrance and graduation, and has had a healthy and steady growth from the beginning. Our aim is to give a good, solid education in the various branches of a College course, upon a Christian Basis.

LOCATION.

The College Buildings stand upon a campus of ten acres in the pleasant village of College City, in the southern part of Colusa County. The town is pleasantly located in a beautiful, retired and healthful spot, in the midst of a moral, cultivated and enterprising community, and is easily accessible from any direction.

COURSE OF STUDY.

Two complete Courses of Study, the Classical and the Scientific, have been arranged, embracing together Mathematics, Ancient and Modern Languages, English, Science, Art, Music, Bible, Book-keeping, Theory and Practice of Teaching, History, etc., and students, by the advice and consent of the Faculty, can pursue those studies shown to be most advantageous to them. After the close of the regular Session, a Normal class will be formed and taught by two of the Professors for the benefit of those who desire to pass examination before some County Board for Teachers' certificates.

INDUCEMENTS.

To those who have sons, daughters or wards to educate, we can offer rare advantages and strong inducements to send to this School, viz.: A quiet and orderly College Town, with NO SALOON, DRINKING-PLACE OR GAMBLING HOUSE WITHIN THREE MILES OF THE BUILDINGS. Your sons are here free from these temptations to crime. An able, experienced and enthusiastic Faculty. Complete Courses of Study, with THOROUGH instruction. The advantage of Normal training. Low Rates of Tuition and Moderate Expenses. Our charges are LOWER than those of any other School of like grade on the Coast, and young men and women who have to educate themselves, will here find rare opportunities to carry out their noble purposes.

Does it Wear? Does it Wash?

When a textile fabric must be dyed a pure, rich deep black, the question that presents itself to the dyer is: "Will these goods be washed in ordinary soap and water, or will they be dipped in some powerful acid, like aqua-fortis, sulphuric, or muriatic acid?" If they must withstand every-day wear and tear, he will not be so foolish as to fix his black by aid of powerful acids, but will treat the goods mildly, and thus secure superior strength and endurance. In like manner, a druggist will not put a rubber stopper in a bottle filled with sugar and water; he will naturally use an ordinary cork, and save the rubber for resisting violent acids.

It is well to look with suspicion on all Acid Tests applied to Spool Cotton.

To resist acids, the dyer must use acids at risk of rotting the thread.

Intelligent people do not wash their clothes in acid baths.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano Co., and in 1870 it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templar's Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under twelve years of age are received and cared for, and over 100 orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the state, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public School System" of the state, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self-imposed duty of sustaining this Home gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.—Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.—All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

TRUSTEES OF ORPHANS HOME.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searles, Nevada City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; R. Thompson, San Francisco; M. C. Winchester, G. W. C. T., Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., ex-officio.

LADY MANAGERS OF ORPHANS HOME.—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson, No. 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco; Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco; Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. M. E. Congdon, Mariposa; Mrs. C. P. Huntoon, Sacramento; Mrs. Capt. Plummer, San Francisco; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stevens, G. W. V. T., ex-officio.
